5 BLUE RIBBONS

for M-G-M's Production

"LET FREEDOM RING"

1 FOR NELSON EDDY!

His performance as "The Wasp" is the most exciting on the screen today!

2 FOR THE ALL-STAR CAST!

Imagine these great personalities in one picture: NELSON EDDY, VIRGINIA BRUCE, VICTOR McLAGLEN, LIONEL BARRYMORE, EDWARD ARNOLD, Guy Kibbee, Charles Butterworth.

3 FOR THE GREAT STORY!

It is the most rousing patriotic musical romance that ever set your pulse beating. The original story and screen play is by Ben Hecht. (He gave you "Viva Villa"!) Directed by JACK CONWAY. Harry Rapf, producer.

4 FOR THE MUSICAL THRILLS!

Crammed with soul-stirring fervor is its music. Never such a wealth of love songs, of patriotic songs as Nelson Eddy pours from his singing heart!

5 FOR THE BIG PRODUCTION!

M-G-M has again given the screen a mighty entertainment. One after another they come, the Big Attractions of the screen, winning the public anew for the hits of the Friendly Company!

Dear Mr. Wobber:-

I deeply appreciate the privilege given the RKO Keith Memorial Theatre in having the world premiere of THE LITTLE PRINCESS here.

I was particularly impressed by the large numbers of young men and women which formed the bulk of our audience at the evening shows.

THE LITTLE PRINCESS is not only one of the greatest pictures in the history of this industry, but it should prove everywhere - as it is proving here - a terrific shot in the arm for business.

Congratulations and best wishes.

Sincerely,

Benj. Domingo.

POLITICS .01, LOVE 8.6

THE novice pundits who are bleating about the "escape" quality of the motion picture and pleading that life is earnest, life is real and that we must have "realism" and come to grips with social problems on the screen, might with profit examine the findings of Dr. Pitirim A. Sorokin and Dr. Clarence Q. Berger of Harvard in a certain recent research.

These scholarly gentlemen went prying into the motivations of 103 WPA white collar workers, who kept a detailed daily record of what they did and why.

When the totals were added it was found that twenty-three out of forty-nine activities listed were addressed precisely at the achievement of personal comfort. The average spent not more than a tenth of a minute a day on civic and political activity. Lovemaking seems to have taken an average of 8.6 minutes.

To be sure it is not to be assumed that 103 WPA white collar folk are perfectly representative of the whole people. However, they are likely to be nearer the norm than the professional and amateur hellraisers who clamour in the name of the commonweal for a revolution for the screen which has grown up on the nourishment of the box office support of the masses.

WHEN the shouting is all over the answer will be the box office answer. The motion picture industry will be fortunate if it is not led by the clamouring to invest in unprofitable experimentation in the seeking of special significances and social imports. In the large that is not so likely to happen and obtain for any important period, but meanwhile damage to the amusement status of the institution of the motion picture and many of its screens can be incurred even by the efforts of militant minorities. The course of motion picture history is dotted with the skulls and bones of those who for their little hour were ready to sacrifice the larger interests to a transient self-advantage.

The preponderance of a level-eyed view is indicated in Motion Picture Herald's presentation in this issue of a symposium of expressions, from Hollywood, New York and preponderantly the exhibitors of the land, on the issue of propaganda and the argumentative film as opposed to entertainment.

Meanwhile, once again, it may be pointed out that there is no occasion for so much protesting on the part of the exponents of the controversial school of screen production. There is nothing in their way to prevent their engagement now, today, in the making of pictures as poignant as they care to produce. "The Code" and "censorship" so heatedly, directly and indirectly, mentioned inhibits no decent expression, regardless of its import or bias. There are no provisions in the industry's self-regulative measures set down in the Production Code which bear at all on issues political or economic. In the news pages of this issue there will be found an expression on that aspect of the Code from Mr. George Schaefer in the nature of a response to Mr. Walter Wanger's contention that it needs to be made over to give him elbow room.

There has long been, and continues, a dumb, and often purposeful, confusion between the compulsions of moral decency and those other decisions that production makes for sheer commercial expediency.

Exhibitor expression is rather emphatic in saying that experiments in new fields of material are not to be made at the expense of the theatre screen.

ABOUT BUSINESS

STORM beaten grey February passes, mostly a month of controversy, issues, and strife, ending with a dismaying array of unsolved problems, involving fundamental policies of distribution, questionings in production and the waning foreign markets in the usual turmoils.

So it is with a certain cheer that one comes to observe a swift rise of enterprising enthusiasm from the sector of Columbia Pictures Corporation, still very much on its way in the progress of evolution out of the modest beginnings of "C-B-C," not so many years ago.

The exhibitor has already heard more from Columbia in the two months just ended in terms of announcement and discussion of product than through all of the year before. It is made clear from the considerable number of important players acquired, materials bought, that Columbia is committed to a large increase in picture efforts of first rank.

There seems a pleasant presumption that the motion picture business, whatever trade practices and court decisions may be, will go on doing business and that the exhibitor needs to know about it. Perhaps special opportunity is to be discovered in the very uncertainties of the period.

The other day Mr. Sidney Kent wrote a memorandum which became a trade announcement, when he said to his advertising department: "The exhibitor is a salesman, selling our pictures to the public. Consequently he should be given all the information possible about our product."

The biggest news in the picture business is pictures, information about product.

BACK in 1875 over in Philadelphia the late John Wanamaker acquired the old freight sheds of the Pennsylvania railroad at 13th and Market streets. The property was known as the Grand Depot. He leased it to Moody and Sankey for a revival, for a rental of one dollar. When the revival committee ordered 8,900 chairs on the floor and 1,300 on the platform, Mr. Wanamaker demanded the installation of eight more. "Round numbers sound like guessing, exact numbers will be believed," he ruled. He knew his publicity.

This Week

Storm Warnings

Rapidly gathering storm clouds, in court and legislature, had attorneys, executives and sales managers of the organized industry peering toward the horizon this week, and finding everything but rainbows.

Some attorneys held that the United States supreme court decision in the Interstate circuit case did not mean that other clearance systems need be abandoned unless the court decides in any cases to come that the line of reasoning in the Dallas situation follows into other situations. But other attorneys frankly conceded that they didn't know.

The Department of Justice was moving along several fronts. It was considering the filing of more anti-trust suits the while it was winding up its monopoly investigation in the Los Angeles sector. It also saw in what it called"funny business" in the abrupt repeal of the theatre divorcement law in North Dakota a reason that the industry should come under the eyes of the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee studying monopolies in "big business."

As for divorcement, a bill to bar distributors from exhibition was introduced in Washington State, the Kansas House passed a similar measure, but a like proposal was killed in committee in the Nebraska legislature.

Both the organized industry and the sponsors of the pending Neely bill to prohibit block selling and blind buying were massing their arguments.

Then there was the trade practice program. At press time the draft was almost ready to go direct to exhibitor organizations, just as Allied States Association announced it was disbanding its committee.

The details of all these developments are in an article starting on page 27.

Buying Pool

Formation of a product and equipment buying pool by independent exhibitors in Oklahoma to meet the purchasing power of the large theatre chains in the state is under way, a Motion Picture Herald representative learned this week.

Rumors have circulated in Oklahoma film circles for the past year that dissatisfied independent exhibitors were planning an organization along the lines of Allied as an independent group in opposition to the Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

Dissatisfaction has been expressed by several exhibitors on the subject of varying prices for product and equipment.

It was also learned that a Department of Justice representative at Washington has agreed to come to Oklahoma City during the next month if an audience of at least 50 aggrieved exhibitors bearing complaints can be brought together in Oklahoma City.

Censorship Resolution

The Independent Theatre Owners of New York City, in session at the Hotel Astor Wednesday, unanimously approved a resolution to seek the support of every exhibitor in the state and for its legislative committee to confer with the organization's attorneys, in order to draw up a bill to rid the state of censorship as now constituted. Harry Brandt, president, attacked the censor board as a "one man organization," as responsible for 752 deletions in films during the past year costing about $350,000; as acting only because it has "to show something" to justify its existence; as having been under fire by former Governor Alfred E. Smith, who condemned it by implication when he once asserted that the state should not attack fundamental liberties—"and the exhibition of motion pictures is not far removed from those fundamental liberties."

Paramount Earnings

Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimates its earnings after interest and all charges for the fourth quarter ended December 31, 1938, at $2,220,000, including $340,000 representing net capital non-recurring income and $87,000 profit on purchase of debentures of Paramount. Estimated earnings for the year ended December 31st are put at $4,096,000.

"Professor Mamlock"

For the first time under the Code Administration a Russian film may be shown in the circuit theatres as a result of a Hays office seal granted to "Professor Mamlock," Soviet film of Nazi persecution. Application for a seal was due to the attitude of circuits that cannot book the film without a seal.

This was the first time that Amkino, American distributor of Soviet films, had applied for a Production Code seal. It was granted after Amkino made two minor deletions, according to A. Napoli, Amkino manager. One included a scene involving a girl and the other a third degree scene.

In confirming that a seal had been given the picture, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said this indicated merely that "Professor Mamlock" conformed with all the standards of the Production Code and that it has nothing to do with approval or disapproval with the theme of the picture."

The film was screened for Hays office officials in the east.

Television Trailers

The production of special trailers for the exploitation of its product by means of television is under consideration by Paramount, according to Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Utilizing the sepia tint film which Paramount believes to be better adapted to television purposes than the standard black and white, the trailers would be produced as entertainment vehicles as well as sales media, it was said. First experiments with the trailers may be made within the next few weeks on the Allen DuMont Television Company's transmitter at Montclair, New Jersey. Paramount is financially interested in the company. Transmitters in other sections of the country may be employed later, according to the Paramount statement.

"Abe Lincoln" Bought

Film rights to the Playwrights Company production of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" have been purchased for $275,000 by Max Gordon, who will produce it at the RKO studios in Hollywood. The show will close at the end of June, and Raymond Massey, the star, and Robert Sherwood, the author, will go to the coast to act in and write the screenplay, respectively. RKO will release it.

The sale of the film rights will cut the gross of the play, as it will close earlier than otherwise, and will not go on a countrywide tour.

The purchase price was one of the highest amounts ever paid for a stage vehicle bought for filming.

Open Battle

The simmering controversy over the Federal Communication Commission's administration of the affairs of radio flared into open battle this week with publication of majority and minority reports of a subcommittee on procedure regarding complaints. Commissioner T. A. M. Craven raised a minority voice in a Commission session for a complete change of procedure and a definite new policy which would insure freedom of speech before the microphone. He urged elimination of what he said were implied threats resulting in censorship of a variety which may be either official, at the hands of the Commission, or private, at the hands of the station licensees, fearful of punishment from Washington. Ignoring Mr. Craven's requests, the Commission approved the subcommittee's majority report, which confined itself to procedural matters in the Commission's law department and set forth no new policy to be followed.

A new Federal Communications Commission of 11 members, with a division of five commissioners in complete charge of the regulation of broadcasting, has been proposed by U. S. Senator Wallace White of Maine as a substitute for the Wheeler-McNinch bill to establish a three-man commission with authority centralized in the chairman.

Ten commissioners, the chairman excluded, would be assigned to one of two divisions, while the chairman would serve as ex officio member of both divisions.

One division is designated to regulate all public communications facilities, chiefly broadcasting, while the other is to govern all "private" or point-to-point communications carriers, such as wire and wireless and telephone industries. Actions of the division would be final, except for the right of review by the United States court of appeals.

Tax Collections

Admission tax collections in January of $1,564,134 have been reported by the Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington.

Although the month's receipts were $456,000 under the $2,020,376 reported for December, the bureau announced they were some $210,000 above the January, 1938, revenue of $1,353,415.

January was the first month since last March in which collections exceeded those of the corresponding period of the preceding year. For the first seven months of the current fiscal year, the bureau reported, collections amounted to $11,878,708, a loss of $928,724 compared with the $12,807,432 collected in the corresponding period a year ago.

Collections in the Third New York (Broadway) district totaled $447,840, compared with $617,721 in December.

Differing Principles

Expressions of opinion on the desirability of mixing controversy and propaganda with what has been the entertainment formula of theatrical motion picture productions came from several quarters this week. Walter Wanger, continuing a campaign upon which he embarked some time ago, told an invited audience of newspaper and magazine writers in New York that in his opinion the Production Code should be changed or abrogated. George J. Schaefer, commenting at length on Mr. Wanger's opinion, said in effect there was nothing in the Code to prevent anyone making patriotic pictures and that, although the motion picture producer should have the right to make controversial pictures, if he wanted to, he should make them with his own money and show them in his own theatres.

Also, opinions representing a cross section of the industry with particular emphasis on exhibition, expressed in letters to MOTION PICTURE HERALD following publication on January 21st of Martin Quigley's "Reply to Walter Wanger's plea for Propaganda on the Screen," showed overwhelmingly that exhibitors are sure their customers want entertainment, not controversy.

Mr. Wanger's expressions and Mr. Schaefer's reply are quoted, starting on page 12, and the letters from exhibitors start on page 14.

Goldwyn Sues UA

Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., and Samuel Goldwyn late Wednesday launched an action for a declaratory judgment against the United Artists Corporation by the service of a summons and complaint on Edward C. Raftery, secretary of United Artists.

A statement by the United Artists home office in New York on Thursday quoted Murray Silverstone, head of UA, and "speaking for the company and for four of its five owners, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and Alexander Korda," as follows:

"Mr. Goldwyn has brought an action against us, asking the Court to cancel his present exclusive contract and to reinstate his previous non-exclusive contract.

"Mr. Goldwyn bases his claim upon three grounds: first, that we have breached our contract with him by consenting to the formation by Mr. Korda and Mr. Fairbanks of separate producing companies to facilitate the production of pictures by them for release through us. Mr. Goldwyn claims that this consent, given to two of our stockholders, constitutes a breach of his contract since such consent was given over his objection.

"The second ground is that under Mr. Korda's contract with our company, Mr. Korda must render his services exclusively to us. Mr. Goldwyn claims that Mr. Korda has become interested in other pictures in England with our acquiescence and that this constitutes a breach of Mr. Goldwyn's contract.

"The third ground is the claim of Mr. Goldwyn that this company permitted Mr. Korda to dispose of certain of his pictures in war-stricken Spain directly, instead of through our company.

"There is no foundation whatsoever in any of Mr. Goldwyn's contentions.

"At the last meeting of our stockholders, Mr. Goldwyn demanded a voting trust of which he or his designee would be the sole trustee, thereby giving him control of the company.

"The remaining stockholders of the company considered this demand ridiculous and they unanimously and promptly turned down Mr. Goldwyn's proposal.

"The stockholders thereupon offered to cancel Mr. Goldwyn's contract and to release him from all further obligations thereunder, if he would turn back to the company his stock interest therein for which he had made no monetary payment. This proposal Mr. Goldwyn turned down.

"In the opinion of the company the suit has no merit whatsoever and will be vigorously resisted.

"The suit will not have the slightest effect on the company or its operations, or on the important program of pictures which it is now releasing and will release in the coming 1939-40 season.

"The company will adhere to its established policy of keeping its doors wide open to all producers of merit whose pictures will be given the same effort and opportunity as given to its present producers. Such pictures will be distributed on the merit plan of distribution now in effect."

This Week In Pictures

ARRIVING in Cairo, Egypt, for the opening of "Snow White," Reginald Armour, center, RKO European manager, is greeted by Gregory E. Georgoussy, left, Near East general manager, and his assistant A. S. Moscanas. The Disney picture, exploited by the first neon sign to grace an Egyptian house, broke all records and inspired a widely noticed political cartoon caricaturing cabinet officers as the Seven Dwarfs.

WINNERS OF THE ACADEMY Awards for the best single performances of 1938: Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis—Mr. Tracy for "Boys Town," Miss Davis for "Julie" in "Jezebel"—which puts Hollywood's artistic choice in considerable contrast with the exhibitors' entirely practical evaluations designating Shirley Temple and Clark Gable topmost among the moneymakers of '38 in the Motion Picture Herald and Fame polls. In those polls, Mr. Tracy was fifth among the moneymakers, and Miss Davis was in the third group of Honor Stars. Oscar is for art, exhibitors for grosses.

"CHANGE CODE"—WANGER; "HIRE HALL"—SCHAEFER

Has Right to Make Controversial Films but Not with Stockholders' Money, Says RKO Radio President

Walter Wanger, Hollywood producer, called newspaper and magazine writers to New York's Ritz Carlton hotel last Thursday to say he expressed "the views of a large group in Hollywood," besides his own opinion, in asking for changes in the Production Code, to permit the filming of subjects that will "face and deal with the modern world"—"controversial" subjects.

Leaving the Ritz, Mr. Wanger departed for Hollywood, and on a stopover in Chicago said that films of "a political, medical and religious nature" represented the type of subjects he believed would find a "vast audience" which is currently not supporting motion pictures. "Fifty millions" was mentioned as the potential additional market, which, with the 85,000,0000 persons now attending, would mean that the entire population of the United States would be going to the movies.

Mr. Wanger's latest remarks to the New York press did not go unchallenged, for George J. Schaefer, president of RKO Radio Pictures, in answering Mr. Wanger directly, declared, "By all means Mr. Wanger or any other producer should be permitted to make all the controversial films he wants, but he should produce them with his own money (not the stockholders') and exhibit them in his own theatres. It is the privilege of any American to 'hire a hall'."

"Blockade" Met Obstacles

Mr. Wanger has been arguing for the "controversial" in motion pictures, as against entertainment, ever since his "Blockade," concerning the Spanish Civil War, met with obstacles in patronage and otherwise, because of its political nature, on its release, and subsequently, last June.

Mr. Schaefer, at the time of the release of "Blockade," was general sales manager of United Artists, which distributed the film.

Since "Blockade," Mr. Wanger has frequently appeared in press and on the air, from both public and private functions, on the matter of "controversial" subjects versus entertainment for the screens of America.

Because Mr. Wanger saw fit to limit his audience of last week at the Ritz to news writers outside of the business, and because his representatives in New York did not make transcriptions of his remarks available to the motion picture trade press, his observations are quoted herewith as they appeared Friday morning in the New York Times, under Mr. Wanger's name:

"I feel I am expressing the views of a large group in Hollywood and not only my personal opinions. This group I am speaking of is proud of the position the motion picture has achieved throughout the world. They are proud and anxious to assume the responsibilities of this position.

"A new Hollywood is appearing on the horizon. The nickelodeon days are over. The motion picture occupies a new estate. We concede that our industry has been built on the escapist film. The industry grew up in an age influenced by the ideas of the nineteenth century. There was seemingly no responsibility for Hollywood beyond turning out this brand of entertainment and making money. To relieve the individual producers of even the slightest trace of responsibility, the Hays code was set up—a code of production geared to that secure and stable world.

"But slowly this world was disintegrating. For a long time Hollywood ignored the fact. Nevertheless the stability of the old world was going down in chaos and a new world was facing us—a modern world in which the preservation of human life and liberty had become the problem of every one. The old American dream was no longer sufficient. Yet the production code, created to avoid responsibility, was still maintained as if nothing had happened. And under this code it is almost impossible to face and deal with the modern world.

"Chained by Code"

"Hollywood found itself controlling the greatest medium of expression the world has known, and yet it was unable to face the responsibility that power carried with it, simply because it was chained to the past by its production code, its traditions, its habits of thinking.

"The industry no doubt felt uneasy about this. To justify itself it formulated the theory of pure entertainment.

"Now I certainly have no quarrel with pictures designed for pure entertainment. They are the backbone of the industry. The most profitable function of the industry is to entertain. There is a great deal to be said for a production code. The production code functions very well in the case of escapist pictures, for which it was designed. But when it comes to the occasional picture which attempts to deal with actuality—with the problems that afflict our modern world—all is confusion. And it can become, and has become, only too frequently an evil, making impossible the honest handling of important truths and ideas.

"Democracy depends upon the easy and prompt dissemination of ideas and opinions. The motion picture is potentially one of the greatest weapons for the safeguarding of democracy. But if it is hobbled and haltered—if it cannot speak truthfully and freely where great issues are involved—then it can be a weapon turned against democracy. Democracies, unwisely fearing the power of the medium, have not allowed it to speak for democratic principles, whereas the totalitarian States, more shrewdly realizing the power of the films, have

"Daughter" and "Blackwell" Approved; Warners Withdraw "Devil's Island"

Censorship and regulation issues, outside the industry and within, this week covered a wide range, highlighting the following developments:

Warners' "Yes, My Darling Daughter," first feature carrying a Production Code Seal to be banned by a censor board, two weeks ago in New York, was finally approved in revised form last Friday by the Board of Regents, on an appeal by Warners.

Chief Censor Irwin Esmond had banned the original on the grounds it "would tend to corrupt morals." The picture had been taken from the Broadway stage play.

Riding into the Broadway Strand last Saturday on the wings of two weeks of newspaper headline attention, "Yes, My Darling Daughter" grossed $36,495 in four days.

Legion Approves "Revised Version"

The National Legion of Decency Thursday issued the following statement on the picture:

"The many and important cuts which were made in the original version of 'Yes, My Darling Daughter' have been deemed sufficient to warrant a change in classification from 'C', or condemned, to 'B', or partly objectionable. The cut version of the film has been rated as partly objectionable because it still contains indications of a light treatment of marriage and parental authority, and allusions that fundamental moral standards are changeable.

"Inasmuch as Legion classifications are national, it was necessary that the Legion be sure that the revised version would be the version exhibited throughout the United States. This assurance was given in a spirit of cooperation by Mr. Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers, in a signed letter to the Legion under date of February 28."

Although it was to open at the Chicago, in Chicago, on Friday, "Daughters" was replaced on the theatre's schedule by "Cafe Society." City officials and exchange men were evasive on the exact status of the picture.

The Omaha Welfare Board on Wednesday voted to ban the film.

Complications On Broadway

Warners this week withdrew from exhibition "Devil's Island," after the French Embassy at Washington warned that Warner used them to the nth degree to spread their doctrines. What we who believe in our democracy would like to do is to make films that would counteract these totalitarian ideologies, and make ours more effective by using the truth that is on our side. I do not call this propaganda. I call this a necessary patriotic service.

"These are responsibilities we have come to recognize for ourselves in Hollywood. . . . Not only do we accept our responsibility in ordinary productions, but we must also do our part increasingly to develop the use of the film in education, science and government.

"New Responsibilities"

"We have a large group of able, talented people in the industry today who are eager to take their full share of these new responsibilities. They are bitterly criticized by the old order, by the traditionalists, by people in high places who, unlike the public, are afraid of ideas. This group is attacked by various publications and outside elements, simply for being good citizens as well as artists, writers, directors, producers, technicians. I think no single fact is more promising for the future of the motion picture than the emergence of these first-class citizens who are no longer vagrant, strolling players, but freemen in a democracy, conscious of their social duties—and any one who snipes at them for taking their citizenship seriously invades the basic rights of the American individual in a viciously un-American way.

"We are not afraid to make real sacrifices. We don't want money out of Germany or Italy. In order to keep those markets we had to distort our productions to conform with their tribal taboos. Now that we have withdrawn from those markets, we have automatically freed ourselves from the narrowest censorship with which we had to deal. The result is that we can expand the screen and more than make up our losses by the increased revenues of a more vital product in the home market.

"As an instance of the kind of criticism we are faced with I should like to quote from an important trade paper which denounced Hollywood efforts to make pictures dealing with world problems by accusing us of "turning the motion picture theatre into a house of controversy." Yet the motion picture is a dramatic medium, and what is the essence of drama if it isn't controversy?

"Already Italy and Germany are officially attacking the American motion picture industry and will do everything in their power to undermine this tremendous medium, because they know how vital it could be in support of democracy. The new Hollywood appreciates this situation clearly and pledges itself to fight every individual and group that attempts to keep us from fulfilling our rightful destiny."

Wanger in Chicago

In Chicago, Mr. Wanger elaborated, thus: "It is imperative that we experiment until we find another type of pictures. Pictures that will bring to theatres another audience. This new type of picture would help to bring back the 50,000,000 people who are now staying away from movies. These people will come back if they can have the kind of screen fare that will interest them.

"The one type of picture which we are making successfully today cannot be made in sufficient quantities to guarantee the attendance we require.

"It should be the joint problem of the producer, distributor and exhibitor to cooperate and help solve this problem. Hollywood is ready. Now we want the cooperation of the distributor and the exhibitor."

New Problems of Censorship

pictures would be prohibited in France for two months if the picture continued to be shown.

Withdrawal by Warners caused complications on Broadway, where "Devil's Island," playing at the Globe, was replaced by the company's "Blackwell's Island." This, in turn, was replaced by "Darling Daughter," after New York censors withheld a license for "Blackwell's" in the absence of their chief, Irwin Esmond. Upon return of Mr. Esmond the next morning, however, a license was granted. "Blackwell's Island" finally reopened Wednesday. The story deals with corruption unearthed at Welfare Island (formerly called Blackwell's) in New York.

Regents Reject "Puritan" Appeal

After granting Warners' a license for "Darling Daughter," New York's Regents Board last Friday sustained Censor Esmond in rejecting the French-made "The Puritan," presented by Lenauer-International Films, New York. They agreed that the film was "indecent," "immoral," "inhuman" and "would tend to corrupt morals."

Gordon Knox Bell and George J. Ryan, for the Regents, said that "the film depicts solicitation on the streets, lewd dance halls, indecent acts of prostitution," and other objections.

Arthur Garfield Hays, anti-censor attorney and counsel for Lenauer, charged censorship of the picture was not justified.

Grand National Also Appeals

No sooner had the New York board disposed of "The Puritan," than a new argument appeared on the horizon in the form of a Grand National picture in which Sally Rand, the dancer, is featured. Originally called "The Sunset Strip Case," and made last summer by the "old" Grand National, the title was changed to "The Sunset Murder Case" when the "new" Grand National under E. W. Hammons took over a few months ago.

It appears that the appearance of Miss Rand in a dance was the cause of the censors' refusal of a license, and Grand National appeals on the grounds that the board was "influenced and prejudiced" by nationwide publicity from time to time in connection with Miss Rand's "fan dance."

Another Censor Bill Introduced

A state censorship bill was introduced this week in Arkansas, adding to the bills submitted last week, in Delaware, Iowa, Michigan, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Not on Stockholders' Money, Says Schaefer

The home office press department of RKO in New York on Saturday morning issued the following anent Mr. Schaefer's response to Mr. Wanger's remarks to reporters at his Ritz Carlton gathering:

"George J. Schaefer, president of RKO Radio Pictures, in commenting on the reported statements of Walter Wanger, motion picture producer, that the present production code discouraged the honest handling of modern social and political problems, pointed out that there is nothing in the code which denies anyone the opportunity to make a patriotic film, but that when propaganda or controversial themes are disseminated under the guise of patriotic films, the problem becomes a different one.

"The motion picture code, Mr. Schaefer emphasized, was adopted by the industry as a measure of self-regulation and Joseph I. Breen is employed to administer the code as adopted.

" 'The motion picture producer,' he stated, 'should have the right to make politically controversial pictures if he chooses to do so, but he should make them with his own money and show them in his own theatres. If he chooses to be a propagandist for any cause he has that right but he has no right to use his stockholders' money for that purpose, unless they are aware of and in accord with his ideas; but they or he have no right to foist personal opinions upon the paying public under the guise of entertainment.'

" 'That the motion picture could be a tremendous instrument for propaganda no one can deny,' conceded Mr. Schaefer, 'but that it has kept itself practically free from misuse and has stuck to its primary job of furnishing entertainment is a tribute to the common sense and integrity of the industry as a whole.

" 'The right of free speech and a free press is a fundamental of our democracy and this constitutional right can and should be interpreted to include a free screen. But the privilege of a free screen carries with it the responsibility of preserving it. If a producer chooses to use the motion picture instead of the newspaper, the pamphlet or other media for the expression of his ideas, that is his right and I would be the last to deny it, but this privilege does not include the right to smuggle propaganda to those who have paid their admission price for entertainment.'

"Furthermore, the use of stockholders' money, invested for creating entertainment, for any other purpose constitutes an improper use of funds, maintains Mr. Schaefer.

" 'By all means Mr. Wanger, or any other producer, should be permitted to make all the controversial films he wants but he should produce them with his own money and exhibit them in his own theatres. It is the privilege of any American to 'hire a hall'."

A Cross-Section of the Industry Declares Against Propaganda on Screen

THAT the motion picture industry would prefer to attend to its own ordained business of purveying entertainment at the box office is indicated in an array of expressions that have come in sequel to MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S presentation in the issue of January 21 of Martin Quigley's "Reply to Walter Wanger's Plea for Propaganda on the Screen".

Preponderantly in high degree exhibitors express the opinion that their customers are seeking entertainment, not controversy.

The accompanying letters constitute a cross section of the industry representing both distribution and exhibition, especially exhibition. These are expressions of the buying power, the authority of the customers.

It does seem that so many people these days are delighted to attack someone or something, and I recognize that the screen might be a fine place to air these things out before the public eye, but I agree with Mr. Quigley; that we should fully realize the after effect, and the medium we are using for such a controversy.

Perhaps the producer loses sight of the fact that little or no attention is paid to who wrote the article or produced the picture, but when an exhibitor plays the picture, his public assumes that he sanctions its showing, and he more or less is on the spot.

Frankly, I fear that unless some of this agitation is kept out of circulation we are going to be parties to another conflict and I most certainly have no desire to assist it in any way, and I hope Hollywood will keep out of it, too.

I concur most heartily with Mr. Quigley's reply and am happy that at last someone has shown courage to protest an evil which might easily engulf the entire motion picture business.

Theatre screens can be dedicated to but one purpose—that of entertaining the masses. And that entertainment must remain untouched by the stigma of "isms" in any form or other elements which might serve to cause controversy among patrons. Any deviation from such an avowed purpose can bring only destruction of the principles upon which the whole structure of this business has been built.

With keen interest, I have read about the different opinions, on the use of theatre screens, between Mr. Walter Wanger and Mr. Martin Quigley.

Personally, I must concur with Mr. Quigley, on the stand he is taking, on this particular issue against political propaganda in the entertainment film. I, too, do not want to see made any picture of a partisan, political character which must be sold to the general public as entertainment.

I do not question the wisdom of an "Americanism" educational program. If produced, let them be made . . . sold . . . advertised and shown as such subjects.

E. W. SAVAGE,

There is no doubt in my mind but that the one and only purpose of the movie should be to entertain. When any patron digs down into his pocket and pulls out a hard-earned quarter he does it in order that he may spend a few hours away from his daily cares and troubles. If he wants to learn the present status of Communism, Fascism, or Nazism all he has to do is to buy a daily paper for a nickel, thereby saving twenty cents besides getting his information in a much more understandable form. Or better still, he can merely turn on his radio and listen by the hour to the dire predictions and pathetic pleas of the "isms" propagandist.

My customers come into my house for entertainment—and entertainment alone. If any movie producer has any doubts as to the truth of this statement let him compare the box-office receipts of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" with those of "Blockade." For this reason, then, I cannot see why the moving picture industry should enter into competition with newspapers and radio as a medium for spreading political propaganda. However, if Mr. Wanger cannot profit by his first experience with a propaganda picture, then let him try again; for there is no law, not even the Production Code, which prevents him from putting what he likes in a picture. He must be guided only by the forces of an outspoken movie public which insists that it wants—and will only accept—entertainment in its movies. And this great body has a way of getting what it wants—very often at the expense of us, the small town exhibitors.

In my opinion, Mr. Quigley is on the right track. With all the "isms" extant there is a decided inclination on the part of many to use every means to fight out their own prejudices, which attitude is but natural. However, the further the screen can be kept from the bias of either viewpoint the healthier its business will be.

I am not opposed to definite reporting of fact and believe that in this way the public can benefit from its informative value and be able to understand to a conclusive understanding of many problems. In other words, the screens can excuse reportorial more than editorial attitudes.

There is such a short step from propagandizing to subsidization that it is dangerous to contemplate the surrender of rights that might follow any error in judgment producers might make, however honest their feelings might be.

May I congratulate Mr. Quigley on his fine straightforward reply to Mr. Wanger, which I read in the January 21st issue of the HERALD?

I am a hundred percent in accord with his views on the matter of propaganda. We not only suffer from diminishing returns on pictures of this type, but get considerable criticism also, and that is bad for a business that caters to the general public.

"Blockade" did no business and it also caused some very, very adverse comment in my small town. I believe propaganda is pernicious and should be stopped before it creeps into pictures ever so slowly.

Mr. Wanger does not look at the exhibitor's side a particle and the exhibitors have to account to the public, not Mr. Wanger.

I am in full accord with the ideas and ideals embodied in your reply to Walter Wanger.

There is not and there should not be any doubt in anyone's mind that pictures embracing the support of any of the isms (and that applies equally to the three of them) will tend to destroy the industry.

I read the letter Mr. Quigley addressed to Mr. Wanger with considerable interest and agree with it 100%. I don't know just what sort of propaganda Mr. Wanger has in mind but I do know that the screen is the last place to try it. I try to run my theatre just the way I would like to have it run were I a patron. We not only refuse to run films of a propaganda nature but also advertising films. I hold the opinion that a customer pays his or her admission to the theatre to be entertained, and just because you can compel them to look at an ad after they are inside is no reason they will come back and be bored by watching 30 minutes advertising in which they are not interested. You may believe you are helping to pay the overhead by running these films but I think the people staying away from the theatre as a result of these ads would more than make up the difference.

Any propaganda that touches on politics, race or religion, whether open or subtle, through medium of the screen incurs the danger of disturbing harmonious conditions and inciting ill feeling and misunderstanding. While it is true that we are immeasurably better informed today than we were twenty-five years ago on what is going on in the world, thanks to both screen and radio, relatively speaking, only a small number are competent to evaluate true causes and effects without being influenced by certain traditions which concern them in some way or another and it is almost impossible to wage propaganda on these subjects without hurting somebody.

Let us concentrate in an effort to have our people better understand the bases of democratic government; let us awaken in our adults a proper and thorough realization of our Constitution, the rights and fredom we enjoy and the obligations it imposes. This is education for those who need it and it is not propaganda.

Mr. Quigley's article is a masterpiece and is but one of many services he has rendered the motion picture industry. It is to be hoped that Mr. Wanger will continue to rant, thus bringing out more and more his own inconsistencies.

I read and appreciated the answer which you made to Walter Wanger's suggestion of propaganda on the screen.

I had a personal experience with this problem. During the Fall of 1936 the Pathe News contained so much "news" concerning Pres. Roosevelt and his activity that I had considerable complaint and two regular customers absolutely quit coming to the theatre because they felt that they were being mistreated. They thought they were being fed propaganda to re-elect the President rather than just being given "news."

It is very difficult to draw a line on propaganda when it deals with a form of government. I think that today, while we are being fed propaganda from Germany and Italy and Russia, every film which shows in America from these countries should have a rider attached to definitely inform the children and others who might not know of the governmental controls under which the picture was made, that the picture was governmental propaganda. And on the other hand, I do not think it would be propaganda to have a few pictures made in Hollywood portraying life in these countries as being less romantic and "sunshiny." We certainly have been feeding the American public an unbalanced diet of "beauty in Europe." Show a few more scenes of the poverty of the average citizen there and the comparative luxury of the average citizen here. I think there can be a line drawn between patriotism and propaganda, and I think we could have a lot more "pride of nation" instilled into Hollywood and the entire industry benefit.

Martin Quigley's recent editorial answering Walter Wanger's plea for propaganda was very remarkable in the fact that I believe it voiced the opinion of the entire movie going public and the exhibitors I believe as a whole. Propaganda has its place—but I honestly feel that we are in this business for the sole purpose of furnishing entertainment and not for any enlightenment or taking sides on any political or economic issue.

The editorials in the HERALD are very interesting and enlightening and keep us up on the affairs of this mad but interesting business.

That letter from Martin Quigley to Walter Wanger being printed in the HERALD was quite naturally read by me.

I liked the letter. I liked Mr. Quigley's statement that exhibitors had come to look upon his publication for honest and intelligent interpretation of industry problems.

I liked his realization that it is the exhibitor who is responsible to the public in a given community for what is shown, block booking arguments to the contrary notwithstanding.

In particular I liked the common-sense statement that when the motion picture becomes propaganda it drives from the theatre those people who do not agree with the theories advanced in pictures. I don't read The Daily Worker and our local president of IATSE probably doesn't read Fortune. We probably both read the Post and unquestionably both read the local dailies.

Of one thing I am sure: Mr. Wanger and the other advocates of motion picture propaganda are doing more to bring about anti-block booking sentiment than even Allied. If he even has almost his way, then I'm for it!

Certainly I want no part of the presentation of political and social arguments in dramatic form or with emotional appeal. God knows, we have had too much of that in the past three years.

Martin Quigley is a solid citizen who keeps his feet on the ground, and no matter how high and wide his outlook, never loses his head in the clouds. To agree with the editorial tone of his publications or his personal expressions of opinion has become as much a matter of custom as to sanction the dictum that two plus two is equivalent to four. So when Martin Quigley says that motion pictures are a form of entertainment, and that the purpose of entertainment is to entertain, we assent to this self-evident proposition and wonder what all the argument is about, until we note that Walter Wanger is one of many who profess to believe that the motion picture screens of the country are a proper channel for the dissemination of political propaganda.

We have listened with strained patience for many years to self-constituted guardians of the public weal who have insisted that the screen teach this, that or the other ism, ignoring the fact that the motion picure theatre is not a classroom, that attendance there is not enforced by the truant officer, and that the moment the hoi polloi begin to think that the theatre is trying to teach them something, they will enthusiastically leave the theatre for the other diversions that are offered them. These would-be mentors are sincere, and we can kid them along without actually telling them to take their good intentions where they can be used for paving bricks, just as we do the other outsiders who daily proffer impracticable suggestions about running our business.

But now comes Walter Wanger, not an impractical theorist, but a real producer of real pictures, and seriously suggests the use of a screen drama as a sugar-coating for political proselyting. Martin Quigley very properly takes issue with Mr. Wanger, and outlines the function of the screen and its responsibility to the public so thoroughly that there is only one thing left to mention, the one thing which the exhibitor never forgets, and which Mr. Wanger will do well to remember—the cancellation clause in the standard picture contract.

To a small town exhibitor, far from the dizzy heights of Rockefeller Center, it has often seemed in the past that many of the topics which excite the denizens of New York to vehement discussion are matters from another world, never touching in any way his life or interests. Not so long ago Communism, for instance, was tagged as a crazy cult of whiskered devotees in Russia, as far removed from the daily round of life in the Middle West, and as unreal and fantastic, as the tales of the Arabian Nights. But when the seed of Communism burgeoned in the sit-down strikes which paralyzed Michigan industry two years ago, and when a mob practicing its principles seized the capital city and the Capitol building itself, while the governor of the state stood on the Capitol steps and gave them his blessing, Communism became at once a very real danger.

We wonder how much weight political or other propaganda really carries in this country, and whether response to its influence is not a symptom of mob hysteria that is more prevalent in crowded centers of population than it is, say, in the rural districts, where opinions and prejudices are tougher and harder to change. As an example of radio's influence over the public mind in our part of the country, Orson Welles and his celebrated faux pas aroused some amused incredulity and considerable irritation, but no panic here. Volumes of clever propaganda and a powerful and well-oiled political machine failed utterly here last fall when the voters, harking back to the distasteful memory of the sitdown strikes, and of two years of million-dollar extravagance at the state capital, romped gleefully to the polls and booted Michigan's Little New Deal and its leaders into outer darkness.

When I first read Martin Quigley's reply to Walter Wanger in the issue of January 21st of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, I was struck by Mr. Quigley's forceful expression of the exhibitors' true attitude toward various propaganda as it has filtered on our screen.

It is unfortunate that some producers have so completely lost contact with the exhibitors that some of their pictures, hidden under the mask of art, are merely a warped expression of un-American political theories. In my humble opinion, when art ceases to be entertainment it is valueless to the exhibitors. I note that Mr. Wanger recently made the observation and I quote, "We must make more important pictures; more pictures based on modern thoughts, moods and standards. We must support experimental pictures which advance our art." I agree with Mr. Wanger wholeheartedly in the first part of this statement. I disagree with him just as wholeheartedly in the latter part of this statement.

It is fortunate indeed to the industry, and the exhibitors are indeed grateful, that Martin Quigley was one of the first men to note the influx of propaganda and the danger of un-American ideas creeping on our screen.

I trust Martin Quigley will continue his fight to keep the exhibitors' screen free from any political propaganda and do all in his power toward holding wayward producers in line with true Americanism.

GEORGE W. TRENDLE,

The lack of popularity for propaganda or partisan material of any kind speaks for itself and any producer who attempts it is doomed to oblivion with exhibitors and the public as a source of profitable box-office values.

The industry is supported by the public. Theatre patrons purchase entertainment—not preachment. "Americanism" is the only "ism" that should ever appear in any production, and then only in broad general terms, without regard to parties, creeds or sects. No production could present specific propaganda without being partisan and that means the presentation of only one side of a question or controversy. That is not the function of entertainment.

We have enough difficulty with natural competition to screen entertainment without deliberately creating more and of a kind which definitely and promptly would alienate that portion of the public which is opposed to whatever the screen might foster of a controversial nature.

I must, of course, agree that the screen should not be made the battleground for issues controversial in nature. I do not believe that Mr. Wanger has any thought of bringing discredit on the screen. A number of pictures can be construed as propaganda. Fascist nations will consider Warners' Americanism films as propaganda. But from our point of view, because they espouse a just cause, we rightfully applaud.

Hard work and common sense is the path to happiness and economic stability. Too many people of the world, floundering in despair, look to a colored shirt and the outstretched arm as the way to a glorified Utopia that does not exist.

The isms of Europe is the straw which a drowning man clings to in despair and hopeless futility. The duty of the screen is not to glorify these anti-democratic ideologies but to destroy them if possible.

Mr. Quigley's article is very well written and presents the one side of the subject clearly and convincingly.

I think it would be advisable if a committee was formed, representing the producers and the theatres, to thrash this subject out, or to go into the matter more thoroughly, instead of having various views published. Martin Quigley's able and forceful reply to Walter Wanger's plea for opening the screen to political propaganda is a fearless document, refreshingly sincere with obvious truth.

It affirms again Mr. Quigley's life-long concept of the proper and competent function of the free screen and clarifies with a certain finality the fact that the screen is for entertainment and education only.

Mr. Quigley says—

"No propaganda, no politics. . . ."

"Keep it free from restrictions."

"Preserve its freedom. . . ."

"Don't plunge it into the forum of political debate. . . ."

Under no conditions should the entertainment screen be used for propaganda. The best security for our industry as well as our country is to mind our own business. The only "ism" that the screen should be concerned with is "Americanism," and we should shout it loud and long. We all know how powerful the motion picture screen can be, in formulating public opinion, therefore anything that we do to embed this one "ism" in the public's mind will be the most sensible move the industry ever made. With the vividness the screen can present its subject matter, there is no question that it would be the most powerful weapon anyone with dictatorial aspirations could control. Of one thing we can be certain—if "Americanism" ever did collapse, this great industry of ours would be the first to crumble.

Just as we carried the slogan "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" in the recent Movie Quiz Contest, so we should carry some similar slogan at this time pertaining to "Americanism" as the only "ism" of security. If producer and exhibitor got behind such a drive with all they had, we would nip at the bud all the other "isms" that are trying to become rooted in our country.

It is my belief that there is no possible way of giving the public an objective picture of the different "isms." Our uncensored press in this country plays up the sensational, so that our people regard the dictators as egotistical monsters, who don't consider others. Of course, this is not true. On the other hand, their censored press regards us as selfish, money hungry, ignorant people with no regard for the rest of the world. Therefore, in any problem where an understanding is so far apart, the industry is leading with its chin if it allows itself to become involved. I again say that the screen should be used for entertainment only. At any time that we deviate from this course and get mixed up in any political propaganda we can rest assured that we will get in a helluva mess.

I regard Mr. Quigley's letter as a masterpiece in rhetoric and more revelations of this sort will make the producing end of the industry think twice before making any radical moves.

I have read your article very carefully regarding propaganda on the theatre screen and I am in favor of everything you say. There is no place for it in the theatre where people go for amusement. If we were at war with another nation then it might be a different matter.

I am a World War veteran, lived in New York with all races of people as friendly neighbors, spent thirty years of my life playing vaudeville all over the world, so I feel as though I am a fair judge of human nature.

Surely the producers want to get business for their pictures, so I think the picture screen should be free of all propaganda at all times.

We are quite in accord with Mr. Quigley's article and for our part think that propaganda on the screen for political or any other selfish motive should be nipped in the bud, therefore we do not hesitate in commending the article. In the future Wanger productions will be watched carefully for the slightest trace of propaganda (isms), and for our part will not get playing time. We feel we live in a democratic country and until something has proven better to take its place we are satisfied with it and I do not think that any of the (isms) have come even near approaching the point.

MRS. ANN STONE,

I have been following with interest the pros and cons for "Films for Democracy." I read with interest Mr. Quigley's reply to Walter Wanger. I disagree with the stand the MOTION PICTURE HERALD has taken and also Mr. Quigley's reply to Walter Wanger does not satisfy me.

I disagree with Mr. Quigley's stand that motion pictures are for entertainment only. Films I think have always to a certain extent been measures of propaganda of one type or another. For instance the type of film that shows the evils of gangsterism, for example "Racket Busters," "Angels with Dirty Faces," Edward G. Robinson films, etc. You might say these are constructive examples of propaganda. But for a more glaring example of film propaganda you have 9 out of 10 British films, which are constantly extolling the virtues of British imperialism. From a very enlightening article in Esquire (Spring issue) the author went so far as to say that unless pictures produced in Britain were not definitely imperialistic propaganda the films would not be produced. I understand that is the reason Paul Robeson is making his pictures independently.

That is why I contend there is plenty of room for democracy in films. Why not extol the virtues of democracy? Why not sink the idea into the millions of theatregoers that we have a system to be proud of, contrasted with the fascist countries? I see on page 17 of Jan. 28th issue of the HERALD of the further squeeze fascist countries are putting on Hollywood films. Surely under conditions like these there should be some counter attack, or are you people going to wait until the squeeze is put on in our own country?

I also wish to state how much I disagree with Mr. Quigley's viewpoint regarding Walter Wanger's "Blockade." May I say I think it was a grand attempt to bring to the screen the horrors of the Spanish war. I don't think it went quite far enough. My hat's off to Walter Wanger for making the attempt. I would like to see more attempts of the same sort. As far as being a successful picture, perhaps as far as B.O. it wasn't a success, but most of the better films are not B.O. hits.

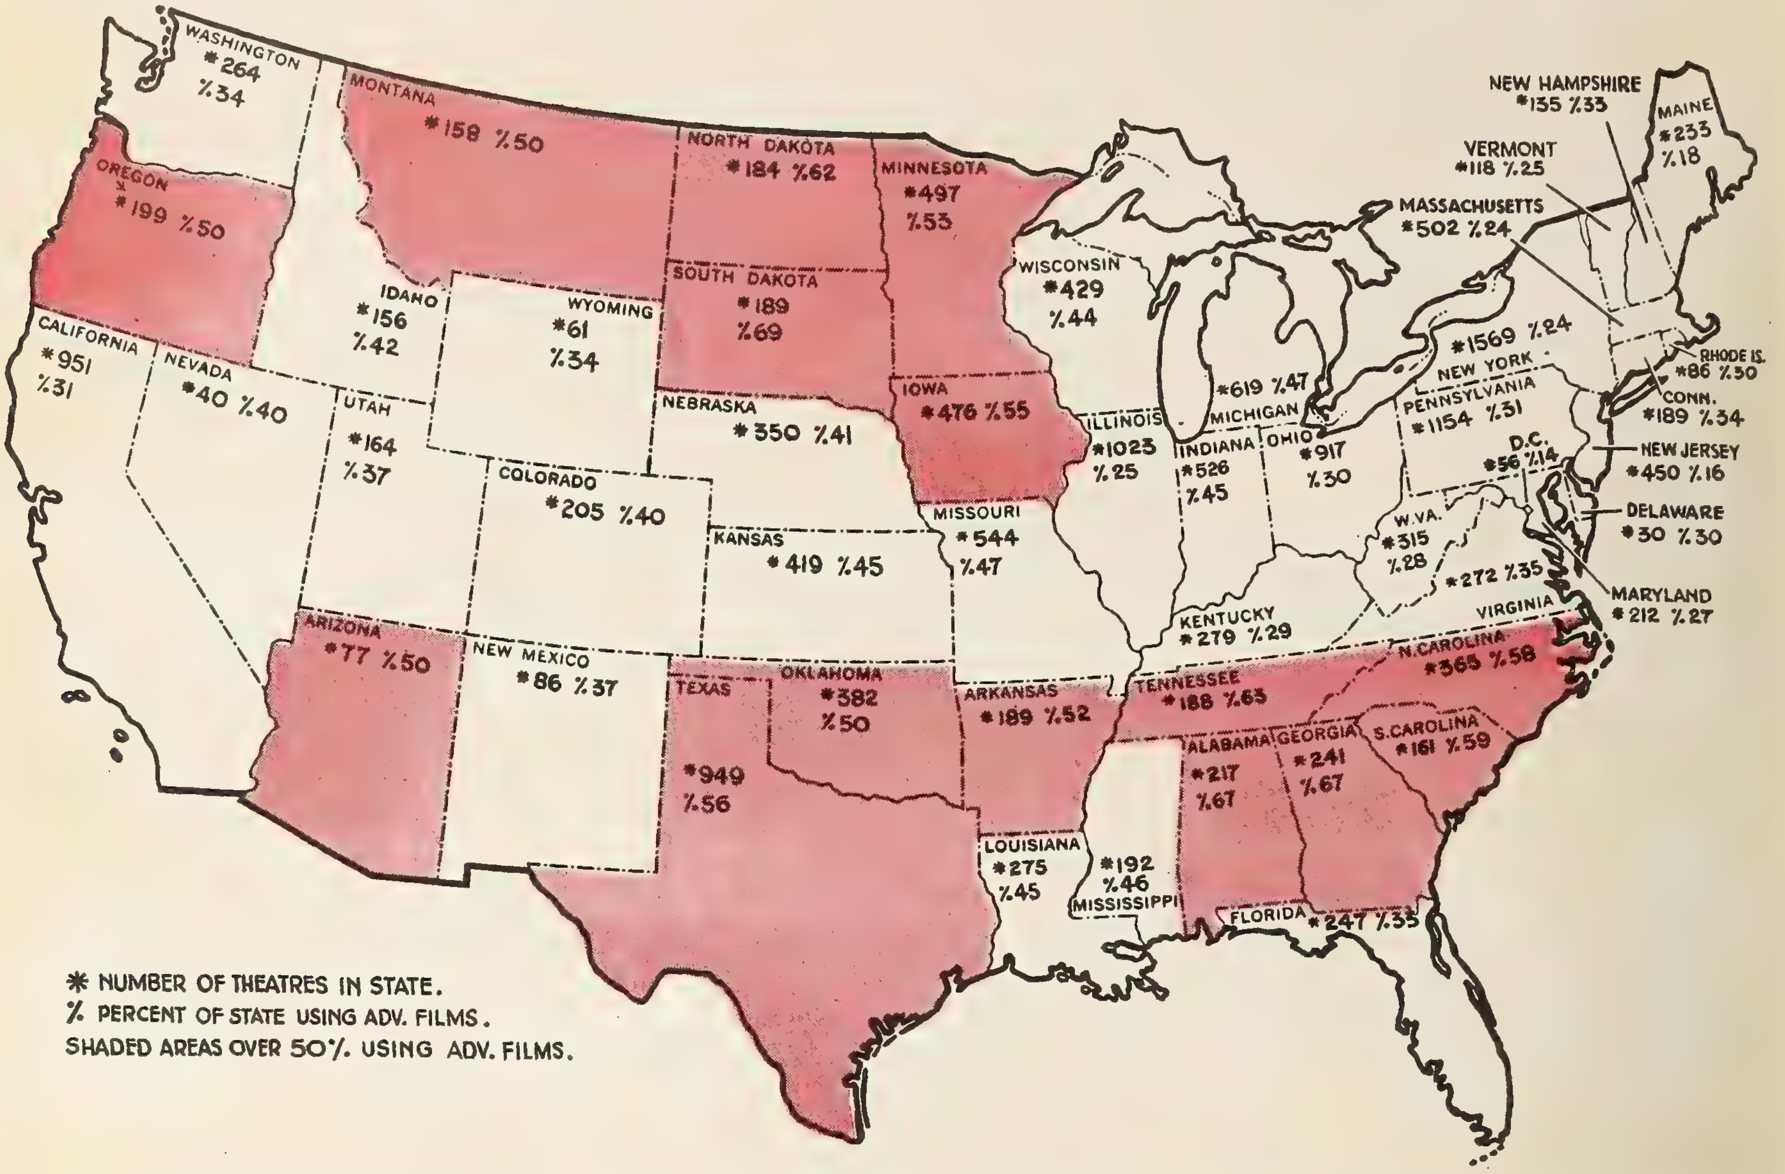
I heartily concur in what Mr. Quigley has said in reply to Mr. Wanger. The newspapers, radio, motion pictures, and the debate platform and church are all mediums for the expression of the beliefs by the American people. However, the motion picture differs from the others in that the audience has no opportunity for rebuttal or argumentation, therefore, it is my opinion that the motion picture can only rest upon a purely entertainment basis. In political beliefs of the present day we can find many interesting stories, experiences, trends, etc., which are of vital concern to all people; but the people concerned should have a voice in expressing the pros and cons of these facts.

The motion picture exhibitor is the responsible publisher of entertainment alone; if he should endeavor to educate, to control or to influence his patrons by the screen, he would immediately find his audience divided into groups. The exhibitor is in business to entertain the masses only, and must continue to do so if his business remains a profitable one.

I do believe the motion picture is the greatest educational medium yet devised: it can be used in schools, colleges, forums, lectures, etc., to excellent advantage. The arts, sciences, can be taught, but politics and government should remain a function of the newspaper.

I do not believe that the picture "Blockade" failed because of the political issue involved—the reaction of the patrons in our theatre was disinterested. The voice of the American people can more easily be heard in the legislatures of the various states.

6,787 SCREENS SHOW ADS



Graphically shown above are statistics indicating that 6,787, or 38.6 per cent, of the 17,541 theatres operating in the United States present advertising films and that in 15 states 50 per cent or more of the theatres display them. South Dakota appears as the leader with 69 per cent of its houses using advertising films, but Texas is credited with the greatest number, 534. Use of the films is most general in the South and Middle West, while the East appears least susceptible.

Renewed reports of extensive plans being discussed by national advertisers and their agencies for production and theatrical distribution of motion pictures, and reiteration by S. Charles Einfeld of Warner Brothers of affiliated circuit opposition to the use of the screens for advertising, again have focussed the attention of the industry on advertising and sponsored films.

Occasional Users Boost Total

The statistics on the map above, taken from the lists currently carried by field agents of a major advertising film distributor, are said to number only those houses which use advertising films, either minute movies or longer, regularly. Other distributors claim occasional access to additional theatres so that the total could be expanded, it is estimated, to 8,000.

The Alexander Film Company, distributors of minute movies, puts its total disbursements to theatre owners over a period of 20 years at $12,000,000. Average annual payments at present are said to be $1,000,000.

Calls Films "Menace"

Mr. Einfeld, in a statement to the press in Hollywood and in an interview with MOTION PICTURE HERALD, attacked the growing use of advertising films in theatres as a menace which, he said, if developed to its logical goal would stifle exhibition.

Loss of Effectiveness Feared

Urging that the screen cannot go into the advertising business without limiting its effectiveness as an entertainment medium and eventually as an advertising medium, Mr. Einfeld said: "The theatre patron buys a ticket with the implied understanding that he is to receive an evening's amusement. If we sandwich in a film advertising what to take for his next hangover . . . he will resent it. If the practice continues the day will come when he will decide he can get just as good advertising on his radio for nothing."

Control Threat Seen

The Warner advertising executive pointed out that the screen as an advertising medium differed from radio in that exhibitors must maintain a certain weekly revenue to operate their theatres. If a major proportion of this revenue comes from advertisers, as it must if the use of these films progresses to a point where the public refuses to pay present admission prices to look at advertising, he argued that the exhibitor eventually would be under the complete control of the advertisers.

"Within reasonable limits," he said, "the screen today is free to present any subject it wishes. We can foresee that possibly an exhibitor who has taken on say one commercial a week, which may bring him $15 extra revenue, might eventually increase the footage until his income from this source would be $150 or more. Then along comes a feature picture which may tread on the toes of his heaviest advertiser. The advertiser need only suggest 'I wish you wouldn't' and the chances are the exhibitor would turn down the picture.

Request to Command

"Another time it might be pointed out to the exhibitor that he is giving too much time to newsreels and short subjects for the import of the screen advertising to register well.

"From handcuffs to straitjacket is not far."

Seal To Be Required

Characterized by a spokesman for the MPPDA as a step to prevent the palming off of advertising films as entertainment, a ruling was approved by the directors of the organization last week ordering possession of a seal to be issued by the Advertising Advisory Council and insertion in the main title of the words "This is an advertisement" as requisites for the showing of any advertising films of 200 feet or greater length in the theatres of circuits affiliated with MPPDA distributors. Affiliated circuits control about 2,500 houses.

DECISION:

"Warner Bros. are so far ahead it's hard to tell who's second!"

ATTORNEYS "IN AIR" OVER FATE OF CLEARANCE; MORE SUITS AHEAD

Some motion picture lawyers hold that other existing clearance systems in exhibition need not be abandoned as a result of the United States supreme court decision in the Interstate Dallas case, unless and until the court rules in some future case that the line of reasoning taken in the Dallas situation holds in corresponding situations slsewhere. Other attorneys of the majors frankly admit they are "up in the air" over the possible effect of the decision on clearance.

Reputedly determined to intensify its "campaign" against the organized industry, the Department of Justice is considering the filing of still more anti-trust suits against the majors, adding to its civil action now pending in New York and its criminal action in Chicago.

The Department of Justice is bringing to a close its two-year investigation into monopolistic practices attributed to the majors in and around Los Angeles.

Court procedure continues in at least two anti-trust suits instigated by independents against the majors. A score of such suits are pending.

"Funny business" charged by the Department of Justice in the abrupt repeal of the North Dakota divorcement law is seen in Washington as bringing the motion picture business within the scrutiny of the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee investigating monopolies in "big business." The Department has membership on the Committee.

The majors this week lost two points and gained one in state divorcement legislation: A divorcement bill was introduced in the State of Washington; the House in Kansas passed a divorce bill and sent it on to the Senate; Nebraska killed a divorcement proposal in legislative committee.

The organized industry and Congressional sponsors are both working quietly on the arguments they will present shortly before a Senate subcommittee considering the pending Neely bill to prohibit block selling and blind buying of motion pictures.

More immediately involving the operations of exhibitors is the trade practice program for self-regulation of distribution-exhibition, upon which both lawyers and sales managers of the majors have been working for weeks. At press time, the draft was nearly completed, final forms going direct to exhibitor organizations in the field without any further meetings in New York between the distributor-exhibitor negotiators.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied, Wednesday night was invited by Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins to attend conferences March 14th–15th for consideration of improvements in the "census of distribution", which is to be made next year.

Three conferences are to be held, each dealing with different phases of the 1940 census, at which industrial representatives will be asked to submit recommendations as to what information should be collected. The census will cover the film industry, of which Mr. Myers was the only representative invited to the conference.

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The organized industry that is represented by executive management and sales supervision in New York stands today in a state of concern and confusion unlike any seen in two decades over problems of the day. And there still are more problems on the horizon.

Day and Night Conferences

Times Square hotel suites, board rooms of Broadway home offices, lawyers' private chambers and the 21st floor headquarters of the MPPDA at 28 West 44th Street in New York are the scenes of day-and-night conferences between corporate executives and their sales managers, company and outside lawyers, over one or another of the many pending legal, legislative and other matters that seem to point to pronounced changes in the present system of selling motion pictures to exhibitor customers.

On Monday, February 13th, the United States supreme court at Washington ruled that admission prices cannot be controlled or double bills prohibited at subsequent-run theatres when such restrictions are by the concerted action of distributors or by the collusion of distributors with prior runs. The decision, a sweeping one, was the first by the highest tribunal in the land affecting motion picture distribution-exhibition practice, and immediately presented threats of some extraordinary disturbances to the status quo, not the least of which was the potential effect on clearance systems that are based on admissions charged.

Still Studying Significance

Now nearly three weeks on the books of the court, the lawyers of the distributors still are trying to determine the actual significance of the decision on clearance other than in the Interstate Dallas situation, where, the lawyers concede without argument, the contracts involved are illegal. Possibilities of the court agreeing to a rehearing are very remote, Irving Kohn, of Paramount's legal staff, for one, pointing out that "a rehearing is granted in only one of 1,000 cases." A petition for rehearing must be filed by March 13th.

The immediate reaction to the decision within the trade was that it would mean the end of clearance—"protection"—as presently constituted in a dozen or more cities where admissions charged govern the clearance given.

In this, however, both the lawyers of the companies and their outside advisory counsel disagree.

One group frankly admit that they "wish they knew" the general effect of the specific decision on clearance. Again expressing typical opinion, Paramount's Mr. Kohn said, "There are as many different opinions as there are lawyers," and from RKO's legal staff came the opinion that not only have they been unable to establish the full significance of the decision in its relation to other territories, but that "no one else knows, either."

The main group of lawyers, however, holds that, while the opinion accompanying the decision sets forth clearly the views of the court in this particular instance, and infers what the court's reasoning will be on similar cases in the future, there can be no final interpretation at this time until another such case is decided by the court to show that this line of reasoning will continue.

The subject was entirely new, in a field new to the court, the lawyers hold.

Regardless, both groups of lawyers still are arguing over the definite meaning of the decision and over how far the court will go in future decisions, both admitting that, in the final analysis, the opinion accompanying the present decision can be altered with other circumstances in other cases.

If and when the court establishes that it will continue its present line of reasoning, it is certain that existing clearance systems based on admissions charged will have to be abandoned, including those in Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis and some other territories.

The majors' home offices privately admit that they expect to receive many requests from independents for adjustments in clearance schedules as a result of the Interstate decision.

Allied, Too, Studying Effect on Clearance

Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, last Friday urged Allied members to study the possible application of the supreme court's reasoning in the Interstate Case to existing restrictions on independents. He indicated that clearance generally may be affected by the decision.

"Regional associations of Allied should review carefully all complaints made by members during the last several years relative to restrictions of all kinds written into their contracts or imposed upon them by distributors at the behest of the chains or other prior run exhibitors," Mr. Myers said in a bulletin from Washington headquarters.

"The commonest restriction imposed on independent exhibitors is that of clearance or protection."

Mr. Myers said he believed the Interstate decision recognizes the principle of clearance in agreements between an individual distributor and exhibitor as to the time of his run, while barring concerted action.

FINISHING MONOPOLY SPADE WORK

He continued: "The decision also seems to preclude agreements or conspiracies between individual distributors and individual prior run exhibitors to impose protection on subsequent run exhibitors. The majority opinion does not say so in so many words, but it would be hard to distinguish such a restriction in principle from the restrictions involved in the Interstate case."

New Trust Suits Are Threatened

The Department of Justice at Washington is about to intensify its monopoly drive against the motion picture industry and in the near future may initiate as many as ten more trust suits against the major distributors, it was disclosed in Washington Tuesday.

Officials of the Department admitted they had had such action in mind for a considerable time.

In informed Washington circles it was the consensus that the Government will make further moves against the film industry within a few weeks. At the Department it was said a large number of new complaints recently had been received with reference to exhibition.

Determination of Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, to proceed with "unabated vigor" against the distributors is said at Washington to be due to two factors: one, the "run around" which Department officials declare the majors are attempting to give the Government in its New York trust suit by a continued effort to delay trial and, two, the repeal of the North Dakota theatre divorcement law, which repeal the Department feels was actuated by the distributors in an effort to avoid a supreme court test.

The general feeling at the Department is said to be that certain leading figures in the film industry are "flouting" the authority of the Federal Government, and there is a rapidly crystallizing determination within the Department to bring about a "show down." To achieve that end, the Department will continue its campaign of prosecution and, if necessary, will appeal to Congress for legislation giving it a prohibition against block booking and integration.

The suits to be brought against distributors by the Department will interfere with neither the pending New York case nor with the program of Harry Hopkins, secretary of commerce, for improved Government-industry relations, it was said in Washington.

Department of Justice officials while refusing to discuss their plans in detail, indicated that new prosecutions will deal specifically with situations in particular territories, and will involve infringement of anti-trust statutes each violation of which may be made the subject of a separate prosecution.

In New York it was said Wednesday that another reason the Department was considering a series of several anti-trust suits might be the Department's desire to use this means of attack against the majors' demands for lengthy bills of particulars in the "main" trust suit pending in New York.

Department's Coast Report Almost Ready

A two-year-old investigation by the Department of Justice into complaints of monopolistic practices by Fox West Coast in Los Angeles and thereabouts will be concluded within two weeks, according to Harold Collins, special U. S. assistant attorney general, who with Albert J. Law has been conducting the inquiry into the circuit's activities since the issuance of a consent decree eight years ago.

Mr. Collins said that the "finishing touches" are now being put on the report of the investigation's results, which included a study of the records of all major film exchanges. The report will be sent to Washington.

SPECIAL LICENSE FOR STAGE SHOWS

Paul Moss, New York City license commissioner, this week said that film theatres in New York cannot have stage shows without obtaining a special license.

He suspended the license of the Granada, a Skouras theatre in Corona, Long Island, for 24 hours because of an unlicensed stage show. The theatre had scheduled a "jitterbug" dance team, then canceled it for a 12-scene Italian play. Mr. Moss ruled this a violation.

He said that under the law motion picture theatres can only present a band, vocal music and lectures and recitations by performers in street clothes. If performers wear costume, a stage license must be obtained. The purpose is to comply with fire prevention requirements, among others.

Next Step Pends in New York Case

Federal Judge William Bondy, in district court, New York, is studying the petition of the major company defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust suit for bills of particulars from the Department of Justice. A requested two weeks ago by Attorney General Frank Murphy, Judge Bondy is giving precedence to this case. There is no indication, however, when he will decide on the petition.

If he orders the Department to submit bills of particulars, the case will be delayed for months, as required to prepare the bills. If the petition is rejected, the defendants will have 60 days to submit their answers to the original complaint.

Meanwhile the possibility of a "consent decree" is more remote than ever.

On February 4th, at Washington, the Department disclosed the text of an agreement with the defendant distributor-circuits pertaining to theatre expansion pending disposition of the suit. The five circuit defendants did not accede to the original demand of the Department for an absolute status quo agreement on circuit expansion, but they did agree to inform the Department regularly of any new circuit activity.

At the same time, Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, informed reporters that absolute divorcement of production and distribution from exhibition is the primary ambition of the Government in the prosecution of its suit against the organized industry in the New York case.

Majors Win a Point In Chicago Action

In Chicago, the quashing of subpoenas served on major film companies and major theatre executives ordering them to appear and bring certain documents with them was considered a severe blow to the federal court case of the Government against Balaban and Katz and the majors.

Without access to the documents the Government prosecutors probably will be unable to get the material they wish upon which to base their case. The court last week ordered the Government to supply a bill of particulars within 60 days and gave the defense counsel 20 days in which to file an answer.

The likelihood that the Government will try to get federal grand jury indictments charging Sherman anti-trust violations is growing fainter, it is understood.

Action on Three Suits By Independents

The civil trust suit of V. U. Young, of Gary, Ind., against Balaban & Katz, Warner Bros. Theatres and the major companies will be given a "pre-trial" hearing before Federal Judge Holly, in Chicago on Monday. Plans for continuance of the case will be made at that time. This conference is a new procedure in anti-trust cases.

Federal Judge Edward Conger has directed Isaac Miller, Philip Sherry, Mrs. F. Sussman, Conrad Fontaine, officers of Orange County Theatres, Inc., and Miller and Sherry Enterprises, to appear for examination before trial on application of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., Paramount Pictures, Joseph Lee, George Walsh, Eugene Levy and Netco Theatres Corp. Applicants, with RKO Radio Pictures and United Artists, are defendants in a $225,000 Sherman anti-trust suit brought by Orange County Theatres, which charges restraint of trade in distribution of films in Newburgh, N. Y.

Federal Judge Holland on Wednesday heard defense motions to dismiss the anti-trust suit brought against the majors, Paramount and Wometco by the Cameo, Surf and Drive-in Theatres, in Miami. Decision was reserved.

TNEC, Too, May Look Into Motion Pictures

The manner and method of the abrupt repeal by state legislators of the North Dakota theatre divorcement law, ten days ago, "practically assures" that the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee will investigate the motion picture industry. The Department of Justice has membership on the committee.

Motion pictures were generally conceded in Washington to be a subject in which the TNEC had no investigating interest, in view of the Department of Justice's New York trust suit, and other Governmental "studies" of films. The North Dakota incident, however, now appears to have changed the situation.

The Economic Committee has for months been holding hearings into the "monopolistic" aspects of "big business," in practice and patents, with a view to recommending to Congress changes in the Federal trust suits. To date the Committee has held hearings on automobiles, on glass, insurance, et al. Next month it will take up oil. Washington opinion is that films will follow.

Following the supreme court decision in the Interstate Circuit case, repeal of the North Dakota statute brought upon Washington a flood of complaints of "funny business," as the Department of Justice termed it, in the manuvers which led up to the state legislature's action.

The Department of Justice immediately initiated an investigation of the North Dakota matter, later extending it to cover also the events incident to enactment of the law in 1937 and since there is nothing the Government can do unless it can develop evidence of a violation of Federal law—difficult in the case of a situation entirely within a single state—it is now evident that Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is heading toward a TNEC inquiry.

Since the activities of the reported integrated companies is expected to be a feature of the oil investigation, it is pointed out that logically motion pictures, where integrated operations also are a dominant factor, would follow.

In a series of hearings started before the TNEC this week, the Federal Trade Commission began the presentation of evidence to get which it went back into its files for seven years. In the insurance company study concluded last month, the Securities and Exchange Commission went back to 1906; in the oil investigation which is to come in April, the FTC and Department of Justice are expected to go back to the old Standard Oil dissolution case of 1911, so Washington observers feel that it will not be far-fetched if the Trade Commission digs up its material on the old Famous Players case of a decade ago and the Department of Justice goes back equally far to relate what has been done and left undone in the film industry.

Major features of the motion picture investigation, it is expected, will be block booking, theatre divorcement, the North Dakota situation and the New York U. S. trust suit.

Three New Moves in State Divorcement

Originally inspired by Allied States Association, state laws to divorce production-distribution from exhibition now occupy no little attention of the organized industry.

With the repeal of the North Dakota divorcement law—a law that has been passed but was not enacted pending a supreme court test on constitutionality—spread upon the statute books, other state legislators this week turned to same subject.

The State of Washington this week was the latest to receive such a proposal, House Bill No. 506, introduced by Representative Cecil A. Gholson, Republican, of Yakima, prohibiting producers or distributors from owning, operating or having any interest in theatres within the state. Prospects of the bill are uncertain, due to an unusual "jam" of legislation in the limited session.

In Kansas, a theatre divorcement bill (HB. No. 226), introduced by Blake Williamson, of Kansas City, was passed last Friday by a vote of 79 to 13, and sent to the Senate for consideration.

Passage came after Representative Williamson, on the floor, declared: "Under the present dictator-like regime promulgated by motion picture men, an independent operator hasn't a chance. Producer-owned theatres get all the good pictures, get them first, and the independents are forced to take whatever is allocated to them."

He told his colleagues that the Kansas bill would do for Kansas what the federal Government's suit against producers is expected to do for the nation—divorce all producers from theatre operation.

The only circuit which Williamson's bill would affect in Kansas is Fox Midwest, which operates about 50 houses in the state.

Opponents of state divorcement won a complete victory in Nebraska Tuesday when a dual divorcement and film-sales regulation measure was killed in committee.

Farley Young, deputy county attorney, attacking the proposal, declared that sales regulation would put distribution under the supervision of the state railway commission and would require each exchange to pay $1,000 tax annually and $1 per reel, which would be passed on to local exhibitors.

SHUTINS WOULD SHUT OUT FILMS

Ben Murray, a New York advertising man, who has been an invalid since 1936, is organizing a movement for movie-less Thursdays as a protest against Hollywood producers' withdrawal of its stars from radio. He calls his organization the Shutin Radio Fans' Guild.

The guild represents about 500 hospitalized or home bedridden invalids who derive most of their entertainment from broadcasts. Members are to ask their friends, their friends' friends and the public at large to refrain from attending film shows on Thursdays until the "producers are brought to their collective senses."

He said that exhibitors in the state do not want divorcement, feeling that they can best deal with the companies when the distributors have exhibition interests in the state.

Oklahoma, Arkansas, Illinois, Massachusetts, Minnesota and Indiana still present possibilities of divorcement legislation.

The Program on Trade Practices

Sales department executives of every major distributor and their attorneys were in session on the eighth floor of the New York Astor hotel from early Monday finishing the draft of the program which they were about to present to all exhibitors for self-regulating distribution-exhibition differences.

"Something definite is due before the weekend," answered a sales manager to a question as to the when and where of the draft. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, and S. R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, the two leaders in assembling the program, leave New York Friday for Hollywood and 1939-40 production conferences at their companies' studios, to be gone one month.

Submission by Abram Myers, for Allied States, of suggestions for a trade practice program, and the possible effect of the U. S. supreme court decision in the Interstate case, and the court's interpretation of contractual limitations, have been the cause of no little argument between the conferees as to the nature of the program to be presented.

One executive came out of the Yacht Room in the Hotel Astor, where the majors were conferring on Wednesday, and canceled a reservation he had that evening to attend the New York Metropolitan opera (Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior were singing "Tristan and Isolde").

"They are trying very hard," the executive confided, "to get all the companies to agree on all points. They are still arguing but an agreement is in sight."

Whether the adjudication of distributor-exhibitor disputes should be by arbitration or conciliation was the subject of most of the arguments.

Taking an unexpected course, the distributors in all probability will send the completed draft direct to the various exhibitor organizations instead of meeting with them to negotiate.

The MPTOA, which differed but slightly with the first and "tentative" draft, is expected to agree to the final pact. Allied States, after presenting more suggestions for changes, decided that on midnight of Wednesday its negotiating committee should cease to exist—according to previous instructions of the directors—and in the absence of any invitation from the distributors to negotiate further, announced that "the distributors are free to submit any further proposals to the general counsel (Mr. Myers) for such action as the Allied directors may see fit to take." Allied intends to take a telegraphic or mail poll of directors on the acceptance of the majors' program.

Exhibitors Back Philippine Bill

Philippine exhibitors are supporting a measure that would put film distribution in the public utility class with the administration of sales operations under a national commission.

The support of the measure by exhibitors follows their dissatification with the proposal that they contribute 60 per cent of the gross receipts derived from showing first-run native pictures produced by the Motion Picture Producers Association of the Philippines to that organization.

The Philippine MPPA group was organized last fall. At that time the proposed increase in rentals, from 50 to 60 per cent of gross receipts from showing native product, was attributed by the MPPA to the "fast increasing costs of the local Filipino talking picture production and the desire for all members to constantly improve the quality of their respective productions."

The proposal also calls for a fine of 1,000 pesos to be paid to the MPPA if "any association member is found deliberately violating the terms of an approved uniform contract with an exhibitor."

In anticipation that some circuit operator might disagree with the association's resolution a paragraph says: "Association members have agreed to reserve the right to play in the best box office record theatre in any town, although an opposition theatre is operated by a circuit in the same town. In case any member exercises this right and a circuit attempts to penalize said member by not playing this member's pictures in any of his other circuit houses on account thereof, the other members shall withhold serving pictures to all theatres of said circuit, aside from those contracts already made previous to the report of the incident."

The new measure before the Philippine National Assembly, which would void the MPPA proposal, calls for a scale of rentals that would reduce the average charge of 50 per cent of the gross to 30 per cent. Additionally, the measure would compel the importation of three or more prints of each subject, of which a minimum of two would contain superimposed titles in Spanish.

Regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock was declared Wednesday by directors of Loew's, Inc., payable March 31st to holders of record March 14th.

NLRB SUSPENDS COAST FILM LABOR ARBITER

Nylander Dropped for "Expressions Damaging to Board's Work"; Other Union Moves

The many-sided controversies waged for weeks among union and guild talent and technical groups of the large studios in Hollywood were interrupted this week when the National Labor Relations Board at Washington abruptly suspended Dr. Towne Nylander, NLRB regional director in Los Angeles, who has been in charge of hearing the studio labor arguments.

The Washington office of the NLRB announced Dr. Nylander's suspension with the cryptic observation that he has been "expressing views which obviously are in no sense the views of the Board, and the expression of which by an agent of the Board is damaging to its work." The NLRB will investigate further. Meanwhile it has placed Aaron Warner, NLRB regional director of Denver, in charge of the film cases in California.

Newspaper Article a Factor

Dr. Nylander was suspended because of a newspaper's account of one of his speeches, according to Los Angeles press dispatches, which quoted him as saying he had tried to correct what he termed "the garbled nature of the story."

Dr. Nylander's address was delivered February 6th in suburban Inglewood. A report of it in the Inglewood News by Roy Rosenberg, managing editor, was placed in the Congressional Record last Friday by Representative Ford (Rep., Cal.).

Mr. Rosenberg said that the official had not questioned his quotations of the speech, which included one to the effect that "when we go into a hearing, the employer hasn't got a chance."

Dr. Nylander, however, produced a carbon copy of a letter he said that he had written February 9th, protesting to the managing editor against "flagrant violations of journalistic ethics."

Company Unionism Charged

Mr. Warner has before him charges of company unionism leveled at the producers and the IATSE, by Jeff Kibre, chairman of the motion picture technicians' committee, member of Local 37, and head of the minority group fighting the IATSE ascendancy. The charges are opposed by the producers and by Locals 695 and 659. Discussed Tuesday were Mr. Kibre's charges and proposals for "settlement" which would involve the return of $3,000,000 reported to have been assessed against the local IATSE members by the international officers; recognition of the local units as collective bargaining agents; admission by the producers that they violated the Wagner Act.

However, even Mr. Kibre's "front" is not without dissension. Last Saturday James E. Shaw, a minority leader of Technicians Local 37, obtained a temporary injunction restraining officers of the local from spending organization money, except for expenses. He also charged the officers were illegally elected. Mr. Shaw further asked for a receiver, and charged money had been illegally spent.

The Screen Writers Guild battle tiff with the producers, which resulted in the filing of complaints before the Board, charging coercion and refusal to recognize the guild as the sole bargaining agent, this week took a new turn, Paul Price being hired by the Guild to handle its "publicity," which will stress the ill pay of script writers, compared with that of technicians.

The Guild already has been certified by the NLRB as the bargaining agent, but a proposed contract failed of signature when producers would not rescind their bargaining contract signed two years ago with the Screen Playrights, Inc., which the Guild claims is a company union.

Meeting Actors' Group

This week also, a committee of producers is meeting a committee from the Screen Actors Guild, to talk over the Guild's demand that pay for unit managers and directors, and time for directors to cut and prepare scripts, be increased. These demands were backed with the threat of a strike, by the Guild membership. The producers have a tentative "three weeks" in which to meet the Guild proposals, or submit to a strike. They last week granted recognition to the Guild.

On the producers' committee are Y. Frank Freeman, chairman; Pandro Berman and E. J. Mannix. On the directors' committee are Frank Capra, president; W. S. Van Dyke, Rouben Mamoulian, Roland Lee, Howard Hawks and John Ford.

Also meeting on the coast this week will be Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors Guild, and representative of the Artists Managers Guild, the sole point of argument hampering the signing of a contract put forward by the Actors being disagreement over a one-year limitation of individual contracts. The actors board of directors met Monday night, smoothed out the remaining 18 points in their plan.

Hearings at St. Louis

St. Louis hearings were scheduled this week in circuit court in the case in which 19 members of the St. Louis motion picture projectionists' union, Local 143, of the IATSE, seek to oust from office John Nick, president of the organization and a vice-president of the IATSE; George E. Browne, the IATSE president, and Clyde Weston, the local union's business agent. Hearings had been delayed by the defendants' application for a writ to prohibit the court from proceeding on the grounds that the complainants had not exhausted their means of redress within the union.

In New York, a meeting was held Sunday between representatives of the major circuits and Local 30, stationary engineers, on a new contract. Signatures of both sides were expected soon.

In Ohio, the legislature is considering a bill which would exempt from the state unemployment compensation law any one employing less than eight persons. This would relieve many small houses from paying the present two and seven-tenths per cent tax on persons employing three or more.

Although the motion picture business has been notably free of sit-down strikes, the United States Supreme Court decision last week applies to it, as well as to any other business.

The court ruled that the National Labor Relations Board has not the power to reinstate employees discharged because of involvement in a "sit-down" strike, and that the "sit-down" is "illegal in its inception and prosecution." The cases which resulted in the rulings were those of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation, the Columbian Enameling and Stamping Corporation and the Sands Manufacturing Company.

ASCAP Bills In Three States; Other Legislation

Measures designed to outlaw the American Society of Composers,, Authors and Publishers have been introduced in three more states, Ohio, North Dakota and Kansas. The Kansas bill, similar to other anti-ASCAP measures, would require filing with the secretary of state a description of each musical composition for which performing rights are to be sold or licensed within the state. The list would give prospective users of such copyrighted material information regarding rights of copyright holders in order to "avoid committing innocent infringements."

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio has not yet determined whether to support the anti-ASCAP bill introduced in that state. "We want to be absolutely certain that the cure is not worse than the disease," Pete J. Wood, organization leader, said.

The United States supreme court did not deliver the past-due decisions this week on the constitutionality of the Florida and Washington anti-ASCAP laws.

Governor Prentice Cooper of Tennessee has signed a bill which will permit Sunday motion pictures in municipalities by a mere major vote of the city council. The Nashville council, meeting a few hours after the bill was signed, passed the ordinance providing for films on Sunday. Chattanooga and Memphis has previously enacted laws which got around the state law.

A bill in the Iowa House which would legalize the showing of prizefight pictures in theatres has been placed on the Senate calendar with a recommendation for passage.

A bill has been introduced in the New York legislature for the licensing of contractors engaged in the construction, installation, alteration, maintenance and repair of air conditioning systems.

Wolcott, Brown, Join March of Time Staff

The appointment of James L. Wolcott and Alan Brown to the staff of The March of Time was announced Tuesday by Louis de Rochemont, producer and publisher of the newsreel.

Mr. Wolcott was with Twentieth Century-Fox, for four years in Hollywood with Darryl Zanuck in West Coast production. In joining March of Time, Mr. Wolcott and Mr. de Rochemont renew a one-time association, as five years ago both worked together when Mr. de Rochemont was producer of Movietone short-subjects in New York.

Alan Brown formerly was in the Hollywood studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was for several years West Coast editorial representative of Time and Life magazines before going with MGM.

An agreement under which Paramount-Publix Corporation settled two claims totaling $1,388,368 filed against it by the City Bank Farmers Trust Company, was approved Tuesday by Federal Judge Alfred Coxe.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Midwest Spokesman

"People in our territory want action pictures. They don't have much time for anything else. They want to see their moving pictures move. Only a few of them evince any desire to be educated via the screen. Most of them don't even want to think. When they feel they will be amused they come to the shows."

The speaker was Howard E. Jameyson, division manager of Fox West Coast Theatres out of Wichita, Kansas.

"For instance," said Mr. Jameyson, as he prodded his curried shrimp in the Twentieth Century-Fox Cafe de Paris, "our folks know all about Jesse James. He did considerable operating in our country, but 'Jesse James' broke all records in the Wichita division, even those set by 'Snow White.' Many of them knew that there were lots of inaccuracies in the story. But they didn't care. They saw the kind of action picture they liked to see and the box office figures are emphatic demonstration of their approval.

"Good as the business was on 'Jesse James,' I have a feeling that 'Dodge City' will top it.

"The smart or sophisticated shows that do heavy business in the big cities don't do so well in our farm communities, in comparison. Recent experiences with a couple of this type have been disappointing. But there are exceptions. 'The Citadel' didn't do so well in its first engagements, but we sent it around the circuit a second time and it came back to gross fair returns. Nevertheless, if producers insist on making class pictures, I think special houses, in country territories particularly should be established in which to show them. Probably these theatres wouldn't be profitable, but they could be subsidized somewhat in the manner in which grand opera and symphonic orchestras are subsidized. At least the people would know the kind of picture they were going to see in this kind of theatre."

On Film-Radio Competition

News that Darryl F. Zanuck had bought up Alice Faye's radio broadcasting contract brought this comment from the showman:

"That's good. They all should do it. Everybody seems to have a solution to this problem and mine is just as impracticable as the next man's. It would be fine if pictures and picture personalities were discussed in the right way over the air. That's good advertising. But picture performers should stay off the air. I don't know whether the same condition exists all over, but we have found that grosses have been slipping on pictures in which regularly broadcasting picture stars are featured. Radio has many bad effects on theatre business. The Sunday radio carnival has just about cut our business in half on that day. But the worst effect is the manner in which radio commentators have shattered all illusions about Hollywood and its stars.

REPORTS ADVANCES IN AIR-CONDITIONING

The more recent developments in air-conditioning methods and equipment that have special bearing upon the costs of plant operation in summer, are reported in an article by Carl F. Boester, air-conditioning engineer, in Better Theatres, with this issue of Motion Picture Herald.

Included in Mr. Boester's survey of the field is a method of arched wall and roof construction which reduces the area of an auditorium substantially with corresponding reduction of required air-conditioning plant capacity.

The Interstate circuit's new Lakewood theatre in Dallas, Texas, with its many modern lighting devices, is also featured in this issue of Better Theatres.

Among other special and departmental features is the story of how the Glen Dickinson circuit developed its profitable lobby confection business.

In the Modern Projection department final sound trouble-shooting charts are presented to conclude this series of handy maintenance guides.

Exclusively Action

Action is the keynote of the 10 pictures started and the five finished during the Washington's Birthday holiday week. Love stories, fables, a legend, melodramas, westerns and comedies are included, but all have action.

Republic started two productions. Charles Bickford, Harry Carey, Mabel Todd and Guinn Williams will be the principals in the melodrama, "Street of Missing Men." "Frontier Express" is a western, in which Roy Rogers, Mary Hart and Raymond Hatton will be seen.

Two pictures also went into work at Universal. "The Family Next Door," a comedy, will feature Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Joy Hodges and Eddie Quillan. As the title denotes, "Big Town Czar" will be a melodrama. Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Frank Jenks and the newspaper correspondent, Ed Sullivan, are the top name personalities.

The leading players in Columbia's "Missing Daughters," a melodramatic romance, are Richard Arlen, Rochelle Hudson and Isabel Jewell.

For Grand National distribution, Arcadia Productions started "Everything Happens to Annie." A comedy romance in which many amusing situations are evolved, it will present Heather Angel, John King, Emma Dunn, Constance Collier and Tom Dugan.

Monogram started "Undercover Agent," the character of which is explained in the title. The romantic leads of the "Jones Family" series, Shirley Deane and Russell Gleason, will be featured. J. M. Kerrigan and Maude Eburne head the supporting cast.

Baxter to Old Favorite

Twentieth Century-Fox launched "The Return of the Cisco Kid." Warner Baxter, who created the Cisco Kid role in 1932, is the star. He will be supported by Lynn Bari, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, Cesar Romero and Robert Barratt.

A comedy romance, "It's a Wonderful World," is Paramount's contribution to the new work. Claudette Colbert and James Stewart will be starred, with Ernest Truex, Edgar Kennedy and Nat Pendleton featured.

After considerable research, Edward Small Productions started the cameras turning on "The Man in the Iron Mask," one of Alexandre Dumas' most famous stories. It will feature Joan Bennett, Louis Hayward, Warren William, Alan Hale, Joseph Schildkraut and Miles Mander. Many more names will be added.

Completed Product

Two of the five completed pictures are credited to Twentieth Century-Fox. "News is Made at Night," an action melodrama, will present Preston Foster, Lynn Bari, George Barbier, Minor Watson and Russell Gleason. "Charlie Chan in Reno," second of the new series, again will feature Sidney Toler, with Sen Yung, Phyllis Brooks, Ricardo Cortez, Kane Richmond, Slim Summerville, Pauline Moore, Robert Lowery, Kay Linaker, Louis Henry and Iris Wong.

Automobile racing is the thrill action background of Warners' "The Roaring Road," in which Pat O'Brien, John Payne, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Frank McHugh and Granville Bates are the principals.

MGM finished "Tarzan in Exile." Johnny Weissmuller will be in the title role and Maureen O'Sullivan will be seen for the last time as his mate. The role of "The Boy," or "Tarzan, Jr.," will be assumed by Johnny Sheffield. The supporting cast lists Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescourt, Henry Wilcoxon, Henry Stephenson and the ape, Cheeta.

"Fixer Dugan," RKO-Radio, a circus story, formerly titled "What's a Fixer For?", will return Lee Tracy to the screen in the company of Peggy Shannon, Virginia Weidler, Rita LaRoy, William Edmunds, Bradley Page, Jack Arnold, Ed Gargan and Edythe Elliott.

Loew's Is Sued In Formation of 20th-Fox, Selznick

A bill of complaint, charging Loew's, Inc., and its officers and directors with conspiracy and fraud in the formation of 20th Century Pictures, Inc., which is now the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and of Selznick International, Inc., at the expense of stockholders of Loew's, was filed in Wilmington chancery court on Tuesday, by Arnold Hermann, New York stockholder, on behalf of himself and all other stockholders "who may desire to join in this action."

Defendants named in the bill, in addition to Loew's, Inc., are David Bernstein, Isadore Frey, Leopold Friedman, William A. Phillips, J. Robert Rubin, Nicholas M. Schenck, David Warfield, David Loew, Arthur Loew, Louis B. Mayer, Darryl F. Zanuck, Joseph M. Schenck, William F. Goetz, J. E. Searle, J. R. Hazel, George N. Armsby, and William A. Parker.

Establishing Competitor Charged

It is charged in the bill that the defendants willfully violated their duties, and "acted fraudulently and in bad faith" in forming, promoting, and aiding in the successful establishment of a competitor in Twentieth Century; in using their best efforts and services to induce Mr. Zanuck and actor George Arliss and others to enter the employ of Loew's; in advancing, directly or indirectly, and in causing to be advanced, millions of dollars which were necessary for the formation of Twentieth Century; in using their influence and position in the industry to get it such producing and other facilities as needed; in causing Loew's, for "grossly inadequate considerations," to depart from well established policy and to lend its featured stars, directors, and writers to 20th Century; and in other ways using efforts to build up this competitor of Loew's.

Seeks Injunction

The plaintiff asks (1) a preliminary injunction restraining the defendants from disposing of stock of Twentieth Century-Fox until further notice of the chancellor;

(2) That a writ of sequestration be issued, sequestering and seizing all stock of Loew's, in the names of the defendants, until the final determination of the suit;

(3) That all stock of Twentieth Century-Fox in the names of the defendants be impressed with trust, in favor of Loew's, and be decreed to be Loew's property;

(4) That the defendants be decreed to transfer back to Loew's all stock of Twentieth Century in the defendants' names;

(5) That they be directed to account to Loew's for all sums of money misappropriated by them in connection with the transactions charged;

(6) That they account for all damages by virtue of lending stars and other facilities, for inadequate considerations, and also for all profits made by Twentieth Century as a result;

FATHER FLANAGAN GETS FILM AWARD

Father Edward J. Flanagan—"Father Flanagan" to the boys in his famous home, Boys Town, Neb.—opened a package from Hollywood this week and found Spencer Tracy's Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences' award.

The statuette, awarded to Mr. Tracy for his enactment of the role of Father Flanagan in the film "Boys Town" had been sent to the priest by the actor and carried this inscription:

"To Father Flanagan, whose great human qualities, timely simplicity and inspiring courage were strong enough to shine through my humble efforts."

W. Virginia, Jersey Allied Meet; Syracuse Prices Set

Allied organization news this week includes the general meeting Tuesday, at the Waldo Hotel, Clarksburg, of the Independent Theatre Owners of West Virginia; the meeting and subsequent steak dinner on Thursday at the Tavern, Newark, of the New Jersey Allied; and the restoration of harmony in the Syracuse territory between the Schine circuit and independent interests.

Colonel H. A. Cole, newly elected president of the national Allied States Association, was scheduled to address the West Virginia meeting. R. J. Hiehle, president of the ITO of West Virginia, presided. Many exhibitors from western Pennsylvania attended, as well as representatives of film and supply companies. Discussed were legislative problems, those imperative being the projects before the legislature or to be introduced, for the licensing of projectionists, for two-men-in-a-booth, against giveaways, on blue laws, censorship, admission taxes, and so on.

The Syracuse squabble developed from the breakage by certain theatres of a minimum price agreement, the Syracuse unit of the New York Allied last week returning to a Syracuse theatreman his check for dues, with a request that he withdraw from the Allied. The RKO-Schine "downtown" houses have a 15-cent minimum for children, and a 10-cent minimum in the neighborhoods. The independents enforce the 10-cent minimum among themselves. Last week the New York Allied discussed legislative bills, shortage of prints in Buffalo exchanges, and appearance of film personalities on the radio. They elected as a grievance committee the following: Frank Allen, of the Allen Theatre, Solvay; Jack Karp, of the Cameo, Syracuse; N. Pearlman, of the Cameo, Binghamton.

Forty-seven theatre projects, including new buildings and extensive remodeling, were undertaken in January, with a total expenditure of $811,000, according to the Dodge Reports Division of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York. The projects covered a floor area of 152,000 square feet.

In January, 1938, there were 43 projects, covering 153,000 square feet, and valued at $1,187,000, while in December, 1938, the 41 projects involved 164,000 square feet, and and an expenditure of $1,279,000.

Monogram Plans 30 Features and 16 Western Films

Monogram's production program for 1939-40 was discussed during the meeting Wednesday, in New York, of the company's stockholding and board of directors. Final decision will wait until the sales meeting in New Orleans May 1st, according to Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production. Mr. Dunlap and W. Ray Johnston, president, leave New York Friday for the coast.

Monogram probably will make 30 features and 16 westerns, Mr. Dunlap said, adding that he did not think Monogram would produce in England next season, though urged to do so, nor would the company change the present quota arrangements.

At the company's stockholders and board of directors meeting Wednesday in New York Mr. Johnston was reelected president, George W. Weeks was elected a vice-president in charge of sales, Mr. Dunlap retained his post as production head and vice-president, and Edward Golden was named vice-president in charge of exchanges.

Other officers elected were Leon Fromkoess, treasurer; Hugh G. Davis, assistant treasurer, and Ben S. Agren, comptroller.

An amendment to the company's by-laws was passed changing the business year of the corporation from a calendar year to a fiscal year ending June 30th and the date of the annual stockholders meeting was changed to the first Wednesday in October.

Mr. Dunlap addressed trade press representatives Tuesday and passed upon a variety of subjects affecting production, Monogram's program and the industry generally.

"Murder in the Big House," Monogram's "biggest," or "one of the biggest," productions, starts in May, he said. It is based upon a story by Father Patrick O'Neill.

Labor, according to Mr. Dunlap, is in constant unrest on the coast. "A new guild is being formed every minute."

Mr. Dunlap said the "trade press" and its writers of critiques had "done a lot for picture companies," but that the newspaper critics should be merely "emissaries of the public, not egoists; constructive, not merely clever."

The future of motion pictures, he declared, "rests upon entertainment, only on entertainment." He paid tribute to those who had succeeded in retaining entertainment value in patriotic pictures.

Monogram will emphasize star names. He said Marcia Mae Jones and Jackie Moran, in "Barefoot Boy," had been signed as potential box-office personalities. Jackie Cooper and Boris Karloff will be used considerably for next season, as will John Trent, the aviator protege of B. P. Schulberg.

National Starts Film Buying This Month

Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, who arrived in New York last Friday from the coast, said that the circuit's film buying will get underway this month. While on the coast Mr. Skouras had indorsed Darryl Zanuck's action in withdrawing Tyrone Power and Alice Faye from radio.

J. J. Sullivan, Fox West Coast film buyer, is due March 7th for his annual session with William Powers, chief buyer.

HOLLYWOOD'S WORLD DOMINATION REDUCED FROM 70 TO 65 PER CENT

Intensification of Obstacles Analyzed; Studios Are Urged to Stick to Quality to Maintain Their Present Position

by N. D. GOLDEN
Chief, Motion Picture Division,
U. S. Department of Commerce

American motion pictures continue to enjoy widespread popularity in almost every region of the world, but there was a decrease in the quantity and value of our film exports in 1938. The intensification of difficulties abroad has resulted in a falling off, from 70 per cent to 65 per cent, in America's domination of the world's motion picture screens.

Local Businesses Demoralized

The diverse obstacles at the same time have more or less demoralized the local amusement businesses in the regions affected. Transfers of territories have involved drastic changes. Apprehension has had an appreciable effect. In many cases the spirit of nationalism has been heightened, to the disadvantage of American films and advancement of the domestic industry, usually with government support, in production and play dates.

Quota systems show a tendency to spread. Taxes are usually high, and the trend is unmistakably upward. "Racial" theories and campaigns continue to bring difficulties. Foreign exchange controls and censorship are continuing problems.

Certain foreign governments have been resorting more vigorously to diplomatic intervention with neutral governments in order to prevent the local showing of American features which authoritarian states choose to regard as objectionable.

Legislative Restrictions

Restrictive measures enforced in Europe included a new 10-year quota system in Great Britain to compel distributors and exhibitors to utilize a proportion of British-made films, and to force foreign companies to produce in British studios quality films for both domestic and world distribution.

Italy on Jan. 1, 1939, placed the distribution of all films under a Government monopoly, the Ente Nazionale Industria Cinematografica. On that date all American companies having their own distribution branches in Italy, and those distributing films through Italian agents, ceased doing business in Italy. This is the first time a government has gone into the business of distributing motion pictures for the outward purpose of profit. Italian exhibitors unquestionably will feel the pinch of the lack of an assured supply of films. At best, the receipts from Italian films average about half those from American films.

Germany's Moves

Germany widened its influence by absorbing Austria and the Sudeten territory of Czechoslovakia. Not only did the Anschluss of Austria and the partition of Czecho-slovakia bring some 1,100 additional motion picture theatres under the German Swastika but the quota laws of Germany were applied—virtually shutting out American films. "Compensation" agreements between Germany and other countries also materially decreased the showing of our American pictures. This restrictive tendency is spreading over those countries that look to Germany for economic assistance.

NATHAN D. GOLDEN

Switzerland

On Oct. 12, 1938, a federal decree went into effect in Switzerland making the importation of motion pictures subject to an import permit to be issued by the Federal Department of Interior, which has also been empowered to fix import contingents.

Czechoslovakia

A new agreement effective June 1, 1938, in Czechoslovakia permits of greater facility of American film distribution. It has removed certain threatening restrictions, decreased the cost of introducing features and dubbed versions, and established the right of American companies to establish their own distribution organizations.

Denmark

The Danish Parliament on April 13, 1938, created the Film Central to distribute Danish films not rented by the producer or by independent Danish distributors. The law prohibits the distribution of domestic films by foreign companies' branches.

Countries such as England and France (even with their legislative barriers), Belgium, Denmark, the Netherlands, Finland, Norway, Poland, and Sweden still remain important outlets for our American pictures.

Japan

The ban on American imports into Japan was lifted in October, 1938. The new plan permits the entry of 200 American films into Japan during 1939, and the transfer of Yen 3,000,000 of frozen funds in Japan to the United States through the Yokohama Specie Bank at San Francisco, where such funds are held without interest for three years. It provides for importation of $30,000 worth of films on a fixed valuation of 1.5 cents per foot. It allows distributors to remit these funds on a monthly basis, on the same basis as for the frozen assets.

At the same time there was uncertainty over expected passage of a measure this month for rigid control over all phases of the industry.

New South Wales

On Dec. 22, 1938, the Governor of New South Wales approved an amendment to the Cinematograph Bill of 1938, providing for a theatre and films commission to supplant the Film Advisory Committee, and providing for a 15% quota on exhibitors for British quota films, and a 2½% quota on exhibitors for Australian pictures. Exhibitors have a maximum rejection right of 25% plus 2½% for Australian films, a total of 27½%.

Latin-America

Latin America appears to be the market American distributors are seeking to offset the restrictions elsewhere, with its 5,239 potential theatre outlets, and with new construction increasing. American companies are beginning to produce in Hollywood Spanish-dialogue films employing stage favorites brought from South America. The decline of showing of American films in Peru from 70% in 1937 to 49% in 1938 was attributed to the augmented number of Spanish-dialogue pictures from Mexico, Argentina, and Peru itself.

Argentina

The one important market in Latin America which may become beset with difficulties is Argentina. A bill introduced late in 1938 would give regulation and control to the Instituto Cinematografico Argentino, would encourage a national industry, establish a central censorship board, with Argentine films exempt from censorship taxes; would exempt import duties on raw film and equipment accessories in the production of Argentine films; would encourage the future establishment of a Government studio. American companies now must print their posters and lithograph material in Argentina.

Guatemala

A new tax was levied against American distributors in Guatemala, amounting to 10% of the distributors' share of entry receipts, minus 25% of the distributors' share to cover expenses.

Cuba

Cuba attempted to pass an exhibitors' quota providing that for seven imported films one Cuban picture must be shown. The House failed to pass this quota. Only two Cuban films were produced in 1938.

American Film Exports

American film exports to all countries for the 12 months declined 13,000,000 feet in positive and negative sound and silent films. A total of 202,526,821 feet with a declared value of $4,519,594 was exported, compared with 215,721,956 feet of film, $4,797,641, in 1937. This is a decrease of 6.1%.

The valuation of these exports merely represents the declared value of the raw film cost at 2 to 3 cents per foot and does not represent the true value in dollars received by American distributors for rentals.

The foreign exchange situation has not changed perceptibly. In 57 out of 94 countries up to Dec. 31, 1938, foreign exchange was liberal and easy, ranging from prompt to retarded payment. In the remaining 37 countries, foreign exchange is "tight and normal" in 9 countries, "tight and slow" in 15 and "restricted" in 13 countries.

Production Rises In Latin America; Drops In Europe

Censorship

Censorship abroad was not unusually troublesome during 1938. In certain instances, though, the literal terms may be regarded as unduly stringent. For example, films were banned occasionally on such grounds as mere "banality" or "the conveying of prejudicial illusions." In one country of southeastern Europe, pictures portraying stories of the French Revolution are taboo. One great nation forbids all films that it considers "horrific." In another region, one is forbidden to show pictures of "organized knuckle fights" or "profuse bleeding."

Foreign Film Production

Foreign production approximated 1,706 features, as against 1,809 features in 1937. The countries of the Far and Near East led in production, with 967 as compared with 959 in 1937. Japan with 575 was followed by India with 200.

Production in Europe fell off sharply, to 609 features, primarily as a result of England's decline in production. The following countries produced features: Germany 137, France 122, England 85, Russia 51, Italy 47, Czechoslovakia 41, Sweden 30, Hungary 26, Poland 25, Finland 20, Denmark 9, Norway 4, Turkey, Belgium, and Portugal 3 each, Netherlands 2, and Switzerland 1.

Latin American feature production took an upward jump of 40 films, to 130. Mexico turned out 60, Argentina 50, Brazil, Cuba and Uruguay 2 each, and Venezuela 1.

Plainly American companies must emphasize to the utmost the contrast in quality between our good American pictures and the typical product of local producing industries abroad.

Enrollments Rise In Rogers Drive

With circuit cooperation assured, enrollments of independent theatres for the Will Rogers National Memorial Week are ahead of the same period last year, according to Major L. E. Thompson, chairman. In 1938 the total enrollment was 6,019 theatres, of which 3,548 were independents and 2,741 circuit theatres, as follows:

Independent theatres enrolled last year, by territories, were: Albany, 80; Atlanta, 75; Boston, 178; Buffalo, 133; Charlotte, 68; Chicago, 120; Cincinnati, 92; Cleveland, 158; Columbus, 12; Dallas, 137; Denver, 84; Des Moines, 24; Detroit, 56; Indianapolis, 78; Jacksonville, 17; Kansas City, 121; Los Angeles, 151; Memphis, 90; Milwaukee, 56; Minneapolis, 60; New Haven, 61; New Orleans, 158; New York, 538; Oklahoma City, 68; Omaha, 25; Philadelphia, 264; Pittsburgh, 171; Portland, 32; St. Louis, 70; Salt Lake City, 35; San Antonio, 20; San Francisco, 159; Seattle, 44; Sioux Falls, two, and Washington, 111.

New York Supreme Court Justice Samuel Roseman has denied the request of John D. and Eugene T. Tippett for a dismissal of the complaint against them by Universal Pictures Co. The suit claims profits were made on contracts for the sale of raw film stock awarded to the defendants on which, it is charged, Carl Laemmle, former president of Universal, split commissions with the defendants.

Unions to Act On 'Vode-Vision'

The New York Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, was to act this week upon the contract submitted to it on Monday by the backers of Vode-Vision, a vaudeville project using "live" talent and "canned" music. Possible rejection of the contract by the musicians' local and by Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, is expected to bring about a court battle similar to that which terminated four weeks ago in New York, in a victory for the Opera on Tour, Inc., another similar project using "canned" music, against the AFM and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees.

The Vode-Vision company had put out a road show last summer; this was successful in a tour of Pennsylvania cities; but drew the wrath of the AFM because of its recorded music. The AFM interdicted its members from making further recordings for the company; Vode-Vision found itself unable to produce further units. Rather than incur further action by the AFM, Vode-Vision stopped functioning. Its backers filed a complaint with the Department of Justice, charging undue "interference" with their business; but the complaint has not been acted upon.

In late January, New York Supreme Court Justice Kenneth O'Brien, ruling on the appeal for an injunction by the Opera on Tour company against the AFM and the IATSE to restrain the latter from interfering with its shows, declared that the AFM had no right to ask the IATSE to order its stagehand members not to work for the opera company; and further, that he saw no "legitimate labor dispute" between the AFM, IATSE, and the opera company. The ruling, widely quoted by the press as a deterrent to "sympathy" strikes, and subject to an appeal by the two unions' lawyers, has been taken by Vode-Vision proponents as a basis upon which they may proceed, if the reaction of the New York musicians' local, and of Mr. Weber, makes it necessary to go to court.

A suit, filed by Vode-Vision, would ask for an injunction to prevent the local 802 officials, or Mr. Weber, from ordering musicians not to make recordings for Vode-Vision.

The Vode-Vision contract, for the employment of musicians for recording, may be acted upon this week by the local 802. If it is rejected, Vode-Vision will then hand it to Mr. Webber, with five days' notice, after which they will sue.

SHOWMEN ARE BECOMING SHAWMEN!

HERE ARE A FEW QUICK HINTS ON HOW TO HANDLE THE HOTTEST HIT OF YEARS!

● "PYGMALION"—30 Days In Advance ●

In the first ten test engagements on "Pygmalion"—theaters unleashed their first blast 30 days in advance. In the lobby and on the screen they used a teaser like this: "IT'S FUN TO BE A PYGOMANIAC! WATCH! WAIT! 'PYGMALION'S ON THE WAY!'"

● "PYGMALION"—20 Days In Advance ●

By now—inner lobbies bloomed with "Pygmalion" art posters, stills and set-pieces! Jumbo easel cards shouted: "FLASH! EIGHT OUT OF NINE NEW YORK CRITICS HAVE JUST VOTED 'PYGMALION' ONE OF THE '10 BEST PICTURES OF 1939!' WATCH FOR ITS OPENING DATE HERE—SOON!"

● "PYGMALION"—15 Days In Advance ●

On to the air waves! Spot announcements—from 5 to 15 times a day—often promoted with passes and promotional screen credits for the station. Copy was largely inspired by the million dollar critical raves already accessible. Theaters didn't have to toot "Pygmalion's" horn. Outstanding authorities did it for them. For example: "Don't miss it!" shouted Louella Parsons, top syndicate writer and radio personality; "Not only good—but practically perfect," said famed Time Magazine; "'Pygmalion' is one of the swellest pictures ever made!" cheered Damon Runyon; "Drop everything and rush to see it! A first rate entertainment—high among the achievements of the year!" voted Wm. Boehnel of the important New York World Telegram. These and a score of other available critical hurrahs were pounded into the minds of the huge radio audience in every city.

BOYS, YOU'LL HAVE A GRAY BEARD 3 FEET LONGER THAN MINE— BEFORE YOU FIND AN EASIER FILM TO SELL THAN "PYGMALION"!

14 Days In Advance

Heading for the home stretch! Advance trailers on every test engagement screen! Changes of lobby material–with emphasis on "story" poster or still layouts—hitting at the human, modern appeal of "Pygmalion"—the comedy of a man who undertook to transform a street girl into a society beauty in 90 days and then fell in love with her. Most art layouts adopted the "Before And After" angle on Wendy Hiller as depicted on the last ad page of M-G-M "Pygmalion" press book which is headlined "Crash Society!"

● "PYGMALION" ●

13 Days In Advance

Teaser underlines in all ads! Rafts of stories planted on a wide variety of angles: About Shaw's first authorized film; how he had refused huge checks from almost every Hollywood studio and capitulated to an utter stranger whose principal possession was an idea and a grand personality; Shaw's own signed statement on his first picture (which was gobbled by every first-line paper in the country!); yarns on Leslie Howard; yarns on the brilliant new star, Wendy Hiller; scores of stories available in the press sheet.

● "PYGMALION" ●

12 Days In Advance

Larger newspaper teasers. Some took the "IT'S FUN TO BE A PYGOMANIAC" theme. Others adopted another press book suggestion in which thumb nail caricatures of Shaw were used with copy such as: "This Guy Wrote: 'It's A Woman's Business To Get Married As Soon As She Can—And A Man's Business To Keep Single As Long As Possible.' See 'Pygmalion'!" (A variety of Shaw caricatures and Shaw sayings are in the "Pygmalion" press book).

Now the big exploitation guns were set up for action. The drive for contests was on! And "Pygmalion" is a contest picture!

Topping them all is the "Miss Peg Maleon" stunt, first done by Manager M. C. Burnett of Dayton, O. Taking his cue from the picture's theme in which a street waif is made over into a beauty in 90 days—Burnett sold the strong Dayton Journal-Herald on duplicating the idea loc The search for a "Miss Peg Maleon' gan on January 12 with art of W Hiller "before and after" her transfo tion. For the next 10 days "Miss Maleon" and her adventures were tered all over the paper. Shopping t Beauty parlor yarns! Front page — smart art—when Dayton's Mayor inv "Peg Maleon" to be his guest at the miere! Bigger and better space as the made her debut at the opening! M publicity when "Peg Maleon" was a tioned as s singer at Dayton's Biltm Hotel Kittyhawk Room! And a final sp when "Peg" was given a contract to tinue with the hotel's orchestra. This only one phase of Dayton's 30 ring ci campaign—but it was a ticket-sell dramatic human-interest highlight. M it for yourself as an "XXX" special.

Chicago, Atlanta, Pittsburgh also can testify to the box-office appeal of the intriguing "Miss Peg Maleon" promotion.

Recommended, too, is Manager Ward Farrar's Indianapolis contest. Here a Bachelor's Club (of 10 prominent Society men) sponsored a newspaper search for a Wendy Hiller type of "street girl" whom they could adopt as their "Cinderella." And wham! Down came the newspaper breaks! The Indianapolis Wendy Hiller Cinderella was groomed and dressed to within an inch of her happy young life, with a climactic debut at a Cinderella Ball set for the night of the Indianapolis "Pygmalion" premiere.

Contest twist No. 3 originated in Houston, Tex., with Manager Francis Deering. Again bearing down on the Wendy Hiller 'poor girl to riches" approach, the Houston Post went to town to discover the city's Six Most Popular Working Girls. Up popped columns of space, culminating again on the night of the "Pygmalion" premiere when the "Pygmalion Working Girls" were feted at a hotel dinner dance—and, of course at the opening. Take your pick of contests. They're all swell—and can be done in any town!

Philadelphia: Staged a contest for a better title explaining "Pygmalion". If you're doing the "Peg Maleon" contest—sell your motion picture critic to do a story on this angle.

Also, out came the mailing lists! Women's Clubs, Schools, Library Book Marks, Junior League, Garden Clubs, College Groups, Merchants and Manufacturers Association. Dayton, for example, issued 2500 personalized invitations together with return requests for seats for the reserved seat premiere. They got more than 900 reservations!

The big push for window displays, tieup ads and special sections. Again the transformation of Wendy Hiller theme! And gobs of results—thanks to the practicality of the approach. And to the undoubted above the average prestige of Bernard Shaw and Leslie Howard. Houston wrote: "We got commercial tieups with 'Pygmalion' from advertisers who won't normally cooperate on anything. We attribute it all to the dignity of the Shaw-Howard combination!"

● "PYGMALION" 5 Days In Advance ●

The first large-sized display ad! Suggested: the long two column press book ad, 839-A60, captioned: "Bernard Shaw—A Picture Of Success" and featuring a group of marvelous critical reviews!

And this is the day to check on your plans for your reserved seat preview premiere! Have you lined up bands for your parade? Ordered lights? Cleaned the red carpet? Got a permit for flares and bombs? Arranged for a radio broadcast from the lobby?

Preview for Critics!

You know that 8 out of 9 New York critics voted "Pygmalion" "One Of The Ten Best Pictures Of 1939!" This is a critics' picture for all of the tea in China. Every test run previewed this film for their local gentlemen of the press. Here's an authentic breakdown of the resultant reviews: Raves: 97%. Fair notices: 3%. Bad reviews: None! It's no gamble to show "Pygmalion"! It's like betting on War Admiral against a livery stable nag!

Society Smugglers

(Universal)

Crime Melodrama

With a background of Treasury Department operatives attempting to break an elusive smuggling ring, Universal's "Society Smugglers" is melodramatic screen fare competent in its budgetary niche. Preston Foster, Irene Hervey, Walter Woolf King, Frank Jenks, Fred Keating and Regis Toomey head the cast.

The smuggling ring operates a luggage shop and stages a contest, with five prizes, trips to Europe. Foster as "Sully," Treasury Department agent, manages to substitute an aide for one of the voyagers. The aide discovers how diamonds are being smuggled into the United States and is killed. "Sully" unmasks the ring finally, but not without personal danger to "Joan Martin."

The screenplay was written by Arthur T. Horman and Earl Felton. Joe May directed, under the guidance of associate producer Ken Goldsmith.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., to a mildly enthusiastic audience.—V. K.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Associate producer, Ken Goldsmith. Directed by Joe May. Screenplay by Arthur T. Horman and Earl Felton. Photographed by John Doyler. The Flying Irishman

(RKO-Radio)

Biography of Douglas Corrigan

The life of Douglas Corrigan, or a reasonably accurate facsimile, is acted out here by the young man himself and a supporting cast of professional actors, in a unique and practical manner. The technique employed is that of the March of Time, an off-screen narrator picking up the story and telling it crisply whenever the histrionic burden becomes too heavy for the aviator's modest talent, and a matter-of-fact cameraman pointing a level lens straight at the subject matter a la newsreel. These devices are wholly congenial to the production task in hand and impart to the picture a singularly realistic quality.

Mr. Corrigan is, of course, no actor, so director Leigh Jason has not sought to deceive anybody on that point. He has him playing himself, by name and deed, which is doubtlessly what the paying public will be paying to see. The principal acting chore falls to Paul Kelly, who feelingly plays a shell-shocked aviator, and to Dorothy Peterson and J. M. Kerrigan, who start the picture off soundly before death takes them out of it. Robert Armstrong and Donald MacBride have some good moments.

The screen play by Ernest Pagano and Dalton Trumbo opens with Corrigan as a boy interested in airplanes and takes him along through years of hard work and personal privation to the start of his trans-Atlantic flight, from which point forward the story is as of the front pages. There is no incidental romance and there are no minor melodramatics. There is a measure of quiet humor.

Quite frankly an attraction built for the box office, the film is a business-like effort, unpretentious and unstrained. It offers a headline personality as himself, doing the thing that made him a headline figure. Since he happens to be Irish, St. Patrick's Day has been chosen for release date. Reasoning throughout is as direct as that.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where occasional titterings from the gallery gave way to cheers as the flier brought his crate down in Ireland.—William R. Weaver.

My Wife's Relatives

(Republic)

Domestic Comedy

Second in the "Higgins Family" series, "My Wife's Relatives" is good amusement capable of livening up any family theatre program. Fun, down-to-earth, sometimes semi-pathetic, sometimes pure hokum, is its entertainment and exploitation merit. While telling a story of home life and business misadventures, the picture makes use of several correlated situations and episodes to build its comedy. All that happened set the preview audience smiling, tittering and laughing heartily.

While the "Higgins" family are preparing to celebrate their parents' wedding anniversary, "Joe" loses his job. The diamond ring which he bought on the installment plan as a present for "Lil" is to become the item that drives the family frantic when it is believed lost. Then, as the romance between "Jean" and "Bill Ellis" is menaced, "Widow Jones" threatens to ensnare "Grandpa." Meanwhile Joe has set himself up in the candy business as a rival of Ex-boss "Ellis." Relations between families having been further strained by "Sid's" antics with the plumbing "Joe" is in real hot water when the ring is lost and the installment collector hollers. "Sid" offers a big reward for the gem, believed hidden in a candy bar. Business booms as patrons buy bars in carload lots, but even though the ring is found, "Grandpa" would make the great sacrifice of marrying the rich "Widow Jones" in order to get funds to rescue "Joe" from his predicament. Now the family turns its attention to rescuing "Grandpa" from the "widow's" clutches.

Fast moving, full of laughs in characterizations, situations and dialogue, the film is a collection of those elements which ordinary folk look for when they want to be amused. The gag of the missing diamond believed hidden in a candy bar should prove good exploitation material.

While the cast is not overly impressive in name value, it makes available the worthy personalities of James, Lucille and Russell Gleason, along with Harry Davenport, Purnell Pratt, Maude Eburne, and Republic's promising young player, Mary Hart.

Previewed at the Forum theatre in Los Angeles. The patrons of this house, which ordinarily have attention for little else than the regular Tuesday cash prize night festivities, seemed to forget their desire for sudden wealth while the preview was on the screen.—G. M.

Spirit of Culver

(Universal)

Legion Contact Show

Because of the laudatory manner in which "Spirit of Culver" treats American Legion philanthropic activities, the picture affords opportunities for cooperative tieups.

This production practically repeats the "Brown of Culver" story. Its noticeable departure is the way in which Legion influence is emphasized. With the exception of one woman, who is in for a brief bit, the cast is made up of many boys and four or five men. There is no love interest other than father-and-son affection. Hence the appeal substantially is to boys. Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew are the stars. Andy Devine, Tim Holt and Henry Hull head the support.

Basically "Spirit of Culver" is an inspirational story. It preaches the moral that fortunate boys should be appreciative and unfortunate lads should feel that they have a chance. Picked off a bread line, "Tom," whose father is believed to have died a war hero, is given a job in a Legion soup kitchen and later awarded a Culver Military Academy scholarship. At first the lad has little respect for the institution's traditions (all of which are graphically pictured), but learns to know and love them, the hard way.

Then it turns out that the father, "Doc Allen," is alive, a shell-shock victim who believes he is a deserter. "Tom" would desert school, but is dissuaded by an upper classman, "Wilson," a roommate, "Bob," and "Tubby," who has War Department papers which prove "Doc" is a real hero.

The martial spirit, parading pageantry, music, school life episodes, instances of character regeneration which are set against the background of Culver, are of the stirring type that arouse youngsters. Although somewhat heavily handled the melodramatic episodes concerning the boy and his dad also have a quality that appeals to minors.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The unusually large number of kids in the audience, all the scores of extras, their families and chums and quite a few of the adults evinced considerable interest.—G. M.

Murder in Soho

(Associated British)

Nightclub Murder Story

The first perplexity to face audiences, on both sides of the Atlantic, will be to decide why Associated British, with a purlieu so rich in murders as Soho, had to pick upon an American gangster for the slaughter in this. Early in its development, however, the film becomes a deliberate and derivative essay in the manner and mood of the Chicago gangster drama, complete with a night club boss awed in homage to "class," two trusties, guns and pearls. The casting of Jack La Rue dubbed in this film with the familiarly ringing name of Steve Marco is a straw in the wind.

There is little about the film, however, to suggest Soho beyond some library shots of Shaftsbury Avenue and a closeup of a Greek Street sign. Even the club is called "Cotton Club," though the immaculately garbed Inspector does sport a black derby and an unrolled umbrella. Comparison thus inevitably is provoked with the elder Hollywood model with the probable conclusion that Hollywood does not come off second best.

Norman Lee shows a maturer hand than heretofore and makes his dramatic best of this story of the selfmade "class"-idolizing gangster who kills his partner and offers the stolen string of pearls to his new cutie. Later passages reveal the girl's willing work as a stool pigeon for the Yard, the ruthless intervention of the two distressingly anemic yesmen, the jaunty manipulation of a penurious reporter, and the final slaying of Steve by a jealous "moll."

Sandra Storme's pale and uninspired portrayal probably helps into relief the quaint and refreshing work of Googie Withers as a dumb vaudeville performer. Martin Walker's "Inspector Hammond" is probably more original than photographic, while Bernard Lee's personality makes an attractive morsel of "Roy Barnes," down at heel newspaperman who only gets a crack on the head for his trouble in plumbing the deeps of crime.

Technically "Murder in Soho" is a capable production, its settings and photography being especially effective. F. McGrew Willis wrote the screenplay.

Shown to an all-trade audience in London, the film was the subject of critical comparison with the innumerable Hollywood originals, but was never accused of provoking boredom. Most criticized of elements was the casting.—Aubrey Flanagan.

Champs Elysees

(Tri-National)

History of a Street

In recording cinematically the history of the famous Parisian avenue, Champs Elysees, from its inception in 1617 up to now, Sacha Guitry, the author of the screenplay, the director, the narrator and interpreter of at least five separate roles, is his usual droll self, cautioning the audience in a foreword that much of the photoplay is yet another figment of the versatile and prolific Guitry's imagination.

Monsieur Guitry appears first as a teacher of small boys. When they demur over an unimportant mathematical problem, he accepts their decision and proceeds to instruct them anent Les Champs Elysees.

When not referring to his family, Guitry continues his dissertation on the Champs Elysees as the historical figures come and go. He seldom strays long from the love affairs of his characters and this is especially true of King Louis XV.

Portrayed more or less briefly are such figures of French court intrigue as Madame de Pompadour, Madame DuBarry, Marie Antoinette and Josephine.

The film is strictly adult fare and is presented with the same tongue-in-the-cheek manner as Guitry's previous "The Story of a Cheat," which had a long run in New York. The Guitry humor is always in evidence.

Reviewed at the intimate Little Carnegie Playhouse, New York. The film was well received by an opening day audience. A large number were conversant with the French tongue and chuckles were frequent. The English titles are also lively.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

Distributed by Tri-National Films. Produced at Studios Pathe-Cinema, Joinville, France. Written and directed by Sacha Guitry. Music by Adolphe Borchard. English titles by Forrest Izard. Running time, 89 minutes. Release date, February 27, 1939. Adult audience classification.

Mechanix Illustrated (No. 3)

(Vitaphone)

Color Parade

The manufacture of shotgun shells, production of artificial flowers from wood pulp and processing of gold leaf are the three scientific items of this newest of the Mechanix Illustrated offerings from the Color Parade classification. The theatre-wise patron should be particularly interested in the initial sequence, in which champion skeetshooters, including Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warners and president of Vitagraph, Inc., offer examples of marksmanship. The middle portion illustrating the posy production has much for the feminine fanciers of flowers. The concluding portion, on gold leaf development, is given the most interesting and detailed study. Color makes the subject eye appealing, while the informative and matter of fact commentary simplifies the complex nature of the scientific matters.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Champagne Music of Lawrence Welk

(Paramount)

Headliner

Tunes as gay and as bubbly as the title of this orchestra number in the Headliner category are shaken into pleasing musical cocktail. The program includes "Ain't She Sweet," "Kinda Lonesome," "I Go for That" and "When Paw Was Courtin' Maw." An accordion and an electric organ dress up the renditions. Lois Best and Parnell Grina offer the vocals in clear diction. Background mountings and camera angles polish off the short into a well turned musical interlude.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction (No. 59)

(Universal)

Oddities

Seven items from points scattered over the globe contribute to this number of the series. They are a demonstration of the lightness of Balsa wood, which hails from Ecuador; a mystic who greets ships arriving in Hamilton, Bermuda; peach picking in California to the accompaniment of a piano; a miniature railroad in Central Europe; a doll house shrine in Alabama; a new type pipe, and a de-froster airplane used to protect fruit trees in Ohio.—Running time, 9¼ minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction (No. 60)

(Universal)

Oddities

The oddities here compiled consist of model and minature motor construction, a hobby of a crippled boy in Ohio; a female mail carrier, who for 20 years has delivered the mail to 800 patrons in Osborne, Kan.; the moulding of animals and statues in cement, a hobby and a business of a man in Miami; a cat walk; New York's narrowest house, found in Greenwich Village; and paintings in salt by a Buffalo artist. Running time, 9 minutes.

That's Africa

(Paramount)

Paragraphic

A welcome change from the usual gun and camera expedition into Africa's jungles is presented in this screen record of the adventuresome trek of two explorers, Margaret and Lawrence Thaw. Without once offering a glimpse of dense veldt country or the sound of a howling beast, the subject travels across a section of the African continent just as characteristic and exciting as the underbrush lands, visiting lonely oases, walled cities and the strange barbaric people. Among the items are the frying of an egg in the great heat, the ferrying of the autos and the military spectacle in honor of the visitors by picturesque desert chieftains, with Negro soldiers in fighting regalia modeled after the style worn by the warriors of the Middle Ages. New Roadways

(MGM)

Passing Parade

Not roadway construction, but some of the latest pathways of research scouted by men of science is the subject. First is a study of some of the synthetic products developed from coal, glass, wood and corn. Most interesting, however, is the laboratory work in the field of dietary evaluation. White mice are subjected to experimentation, to interest the non-scientifically inclined spectator. The final division deals with the physical and psychological benefit derived from plastic surgery. The three items add up to an instructive and entertaining reel.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Russ Morgan and His Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Melody Master

Orchestrations labeled as "Music in the Morgan Manner" are offered in this latest Melody Master turn. Besides the ensemble renditions there are vocal interludes by Gloria Whitney and Carolyn Clarke. Concluding the sequences is a gala girl number presented by the Paradise Girls, who, though decorative, distract the spectator from Maestro Morgan's piano solo. The net result of the recital, however, is smooth syncopation sure to delight the modern tune fanciers.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Sporting Irish

(Paramount)

Grantland Rice Sportlight

Timed for the day of shamrock wearing, March 17th, is this Gaelic Grantland Rice Sportlight study of the sportive ways of the Emerald Isle. Beginning with a road bowling contest, there are the following of the hounds, to grand scenic effect, and the attendance in Dublin at a national contest of hurling, a cross between hockey and lacrosse. The pace of the reporting is swift and exciting. An odd shot or two showing some enthusiastic Hiberian onlookers engaged in what looks like a drunken brawl will not be enthusiastically received by sensitive Celts.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Ancient Egypt

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Travel Talk

The stopoff in the world-wide FitzPatrick travel trek is along the historic shores of the river Nile. Archeological ruins and burial mounds of the ancient Egyptian kings are offered for inspection, and in contrast some evidences of modern living as indicated in trim buildings and beautifully landscaped gardens. The coloring is particularly attractive, especially in scenes of the sun setting behind the waters. Editing and musical background match the pictorial beauty.—Running time, eight minutes.

A Dream of Love

(MGM)

Musical

Titled from the immortal "Liebestraum" of Franz Liszt, this mellow musical, written and directed by James A. FitzPatrick, treats sympathetically an episode in the career of the music master that served as an inspirational background for his romantic composition, his love for his beautiful pupil, Caroline. The girl's aristocratic father objects and the lovers are separated. Each year on the celebration of Liszt's natal day there comes from Caroline a white rose in memory of their love. Besides the orchestral treatment of the melody, there are piano and vocal renditions of the piece. During a gypsy sequence there are strains of "The Second Hungarian Rhapsody." Mr. FitzPatrick has applied the craftsmanship associated with his wellknown travel journeys.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Porky's Movie Mystery

(Vitaphone)

Looney Tune

Porky is cast in the role of Mr. Motto, to apprehend a phantom spectre, the Invisible Man, who has been disrupting the shooting schedules of a motion picture studio. The menace is laid to the stagey resentment of the mystery character because the powers-that-were had failed to utilize his distinctive screen personality. Porky finally foils the fiend by using some of his Oriental training, jiu jitsu. Then, through the use of some mysterious chemical, the incorporeal being blooms into the physical likeness of Hugh Herbert. The sound effects and humorous dialogue help make it a likeable cartoon.—Running time, seven minutes.

Heroes at Leisure

(MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty

Pete Smith's private investigation has unearthed the fact that the professional lifeguards do a "busman's holiday" on a vacation. The camera watches the lads earn a bit of pocket money diving for oversized undersea fish to be sold to yachtsmen. Sub-surface scenes depict the divers spearing evil looking eels and in battle with a giant octopus. The homeward bound trip of the swimmers on their surf boards through some rough looking breakers is another beautifully done piece of thrill stimulation. The high tone of tension through the reel has had a rather subduing effect on Mr. Smith.—Running time, 10 minutes.

High Peril

(Vitaphone)

Gibbons' "True Adventure"

Another chapter from the thrills and chills adventure diary, spun under the direction of Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure," is set forth in a style to present one of the most tension tightened finales ever presented in a short subject. A steeple jack, at work, becomes temporarily deranged from a sun stroke. He teeters dangerously on the high perch and hurls objects to the ground far below while his would-be rescuer attempts in vain to pacify him. The lunatic finally is felled with a well placed blow. The material may be a little too realistic for a young folk's matinee and the women may squirm in fluttery fidgets, but the more robust trade should react most positively and favorably.—Running time, 12 minutes.

Robin Hood Makes Good

(Vitaphone)

Merrie Melody

An effective color translation into Merrie Melody terms has been devised on the Robin Hood and Sherwood Forest theme. Three squirrels are playing out the story of the romantic robber. The tiniest of the "chippies" is assigned the thankless role of the villain. When a wily fox, disguised as the heroine of the fable, Maid Marion, traps the two older squirrels, the under-squirrel proves his right to be the "good guy" by preventing a translation of the two bunnies into a dish of hasenfeffer. The tinting is of the gayest tones, the animation sprightly, the voice dubbing clever. —Running time, seven minutes.

Academy's Report Predicts a Wider Use of 'Process'

So important will the projecting of backgrounds in motion picture production become, and so economical, that "some day, it will be the exception, rather than the rule, to send a cast on a distant location"—this is one of the conclusions drawn in the report on process projection equipment, issued by a committee, headed by Farciot Edouart, of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The "recommendations," appearing in the Council's Technical Bulletin, are distinguished, according to Council members, by "the 2,000 man hours of technical effort" that went into them; by the fact that they represent "the coordinated viewpoint" of a majority of the Hollywood studios; by the study of 50 experts in the field; by the fact that the committee devoted 13 meetings to the subject, since its appointment in March, 1938.

In his preface to the recommendations, Major Nathan Levinson, acting chairman of the Council, outlined the following as reasons for process projection equipment methods' growing importance.

"Economically, they offer opportunities for still greater savings in production costs.

"Technically, developments in equipment and technique continue to expand the possibilities in their field until, some day, it will be the exception, rather than the rule, to send a cast on a distant location.

"Artistically, as this equipment and technique is further developed the extent of its use will be limited only by the imagination of the production personnel; whereas, up to the present time, the equipment has been the limiting factor and only the ingenuity and resourcefulness of the technicians have made its wide use possible."

Hammons Names Edwards, Saphier

E. W. Hammons, president of Grand National, this week appointed Sol Edwards sales manager for all territory east of Chicago and Morris Saphier to handle sales west of Chicago. Mr. Edwards, long associated with Mr. Hammons, will make his headquarters in New York, and Mr. Saphier, formerly in charge of the Los Angeles and San Francisco territory, will have headquarters in Los Angeles and Chicago.

The two appointments follow the resignation of Edward L. Alperson last week as vice-president and general sales manager.

Seeking additional deals for product, Mr. Hammons extended his stay on the coast one week. He said he hoped to straighten out the company's release schedule before his return to New York.

Economy measures, including the layoff of several exchange salesmen, are being enforced to curtail expenses until pictures are delivered, Mr. Hammons said.

The campaign of the Motion Picture Group in the 22nd roll call of the New York chapter of the American Red Cross, has raised $5,910. W. G. Van Schmus, director of Radio City Music Hall, is chairman.

REORGANIZED RKO NAMES OFFICERS; RCA AND ATLAS LIST RKO HOLDINGS

Radio Investment in Film Company Put at $6,614,434; Odlum Company Lists Total Holdings as $3,884,014

The Radio Corporation of America and Floyd Odlum's Atlas Investment Corporation, the two controlling interests in Radio-Keith-Orpheum and its film and theatre companies, this week showed that their holdings in RKO stand as follows: RCA, $6,614,434; Atlas, $3,884,014.

The RKO investment is represented by 55,254 one-tenth shares of common stock and $4,485,550 of ten-year debentures. During 1938, the company received $500,000 from the sale of RKO securities, under the Atlas option agreement. On these sales, according to the RCA annual report to stockholders, there was a loss of $101,312.

The New Plan

Under the new reorganization, the report claims, RCA would receive and hold 44,855 shares of the new RKO preferred, 316,820 shares of the new common, and 555,254 option warrants.

The report also deals with Photophone. This division, it is asserted, has registered a 24 per cent increase over 1937 in the number of houses whose sound equipment it is servicing.

Appertaining only to RCA, the report reveals that the company's gross income was $99,968,109 and its net income $7,412,072. This is equivalent to 30 cents a share on the outstanding common stock. RCA stockholders during 1938 received $5,993,466 in dividends. Its earned surplus at December 31, 1938, was $19,061,504, compared with $16,528,905 the preceding year.

Last week David Sarnoff, president of the RCA, announced that a quarterly dividend on the corporation's outstanding shares of $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock, and a quarterly dividend on the outstanding shares of "B" preferred stock, were declared.

This amounts to 87½ cents per share on the first preferred stock and $1.25 per share on the "B" preferred stock. The payments are for the period from January 1, 1938, to March 31, 1939, and will be paid on April 1, 1939, to those stockholders of record at the close of business March 8, 1939.

A breakdown of the whole RCA situation reveals that the net profits of its manufacturing company were 11 per cent more in 1938 than 1937. Revenues from RCA activities in radio communications and patent licensing decreased during 1938.

Atlas Investment

The Atlas Corporation's financial report, issued annually, declared that its investment in RKO has increased $700,000 since April 30 last, bringing its total investment to the figure already mentioned. Its RKO holdings include $2,169,850: six per cent debentures at a value of $1,594,840 on December 31, 1938; $135,776 of six per cent debentures with a market value of $99,795; 310,412 shares of common, market value of $737,229; 17,400 shares of common, at a market value of $41,325. The increase in the debentures since April was $113,000 in principal, the market value being $85,000. Atlas' holding of common stock remained the same, but depreciated about $92,000 in market value.

WILCOX-RKO UNIT NAMED "IMPERADIO"

Imperadio Pictures, Ltd., will be the name of the new producing company in which Herbert Wilcox, British producer, will work, and which will be under joint British and RKO ownership, it was announced in New York Saturday, before Mr. Wilcox's departure on the Queen Mary, for London.

The company will make several pictures in Hollywood, and about four a year in England. Ana Neagle, Mr. Wilcox's chief starring personality, is scheduled to sail for the United States in two weeks, to be starred in the first production, in Hollywood. The first English picture will be a life of Lord Kitchener, to be made with governmental cooperation.

The board setup for the new producing company follows: RKO and the British financial interests to each have three members. These will include George Schaefer, RKO chief executive, Mr. Wilcox, and Dr. A. H. Giannini, who, as a seventh and neutral member, will act as chairman.

The report continues: upon completion of the reorganization of RKO, it will receive for its present holdings $2,786,600 of new RKO preferred stock; 381,928 shares of the new common, and 327,812 of option warrants for common stock. The report admits that no profit was derived from its RKO holdings, during 1938; but rather a loss incidental to the reorganization, of several hundred thousand dollars. Still on RKO, the report lists holdings of $1,106,000 of RKO past due gold notes, and an unsecured claim against RKO of $1,254,626 principal amount.

Judge Bondy on Monday, is expected to hear the application of the Irving Trust Company, as trustee, for the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, and William Donovan, general counsel for this trustee, for interim allowances of $85,000 and $85,000 for services during the year ending September 30, 1938. Irving Trust has received $155,000, and counsel $245,000 for services from July 1, 1934, to September 30, 1937.

Nuzzo Succeeds Luporini

Oreste Nuzzo has succeeded Mario Luporini as president of Artisti Associati, representing United Artists in Rome. Vincenzo Genesi was named counsellor delegate.

Stewart with Grand National

Si Stewart has been appointed manager for Grand National in Cincinnati, succeeding Nick Shafer, who resigned to devote his time to his theatres.

Lewis Ginsburg, former assistant to Charles Stern, eastern district manager for United Artists, has joined the United Artists sales staff in New Haven under Lou Wechsler. Mr. Ginsburg has been with the company six years.

Schaefer as President, Odlum as Chairman Head Roster of Directors Approved by Court and Voting Stockholders

This week, as expected, finally, the majority of RKO voting stockholders approved the election of George J. Schaefer as president and director of the company now undergoing legal reorganization; the list of directors for the "new company" was submitted in finality on Monday to Federal Judge Bondy; and the Judge himself, in New York City Federal Court, reserved decision on the reorganization plan, submitted to him by the Atlas Company and its adherents, and so long delayed by various groups of minority stockholders, and by the straightening out of legal formalities and the mutually satisfactory re-assignments of stock among the interested parties. The judge also indicated his acceptance, shortly, in the form of a confirmation order. Judge Bondy has already approved the plan.

Objections from Minority

As before, objections by minority stockholders formed the reason for delay in confirmation. The immediate objections under consideration this week are those by John S. Stover, attorney for Ernest Stirn, of Milwaukee, a holder of old Class A shares of RKO, which were not "Converted" in 1931; and by Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassell and Company.

Judge Bondy approved 12 of the 13 names submitted to him as members of the new directorate. He took under consideration the name of Ferdinand Eberstad, chairman of the RKO stockholders' protective committee, and president of F. Eberstadt, investment bankers.

Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, attorneys for the Atlas Company, announced that the RKO voters had also approved the selection of Ned Depinet as vice-president and director of the new company, and that of William Mallard as secretary and treasurer. They approved the following directorate:

Odlum Chairman

Floyd B. Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation and vice-president of Electric Bond and Share, as chairman of the board; Thomas P. Durell, of White, Weld, and Company; Ferdinand Eberstadt, president of F. Eberstadt and Company; Frederick L. Ehrman, of Lehman Brothers; L. Lawrence Green, attorney for the unsecured creditors, who have been allowed claims of $420,000; Major General James G. Harbord, of the Radio Corporation of America Communications, Inc.; Conde Nast, president and chairman of the board of Conde Nast Publications, Inc.; John E. Parsons, attorney; N. Peter Rathvon, president of Peter Rathvon and Company, Inc.; W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall Corporation; Lunsford P. Yandell, assistant treasurer of the RCA.

This is the list that was submitted to Judge Bondy.

Mr. Nast, Mr. Eberstadt, Mr. Durell and Mr. Parsons were added to the board last week, the others having always been regarded as certain members. Mr. Durrell's company represents Time, Inc., the holder of about $1,250,000 in unsecured RKO notes. Mr. Eberstadt, as mentioned above, is representative of the RKO stockholders' protective committee. Mr. Nast is an Atlas representative.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

On the eve of the announcement of the public winners of the "Movie Quiz" contest of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year," came word that India's industry is about to engage in a similar drive—a "silver jubilee." And, in planning the campaign, Bombay's "Moving Picture Monthly" got the idea that the producers over there "can force the newspapers to devote at least one full page" to the occasion—"more or less" on the lines of the "Motion Pictures Are Your Greatest Entertainment" in America—(which cost our producers and exhibitors three-quarters of a million to advertise.)

"For the purpose of the Jubilee," the "Moving Picture Monthly" editorializes, "it is necessary that the right type of people—and not mere bluffers—should be selected."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD the other week disclosed the extent to which Uncle Sam is adopting the more modern method of motion pictures for training his soldiers for warfare. This is now followed by the United States Army's decision to embrace further modernization by abandoning Morse Telegraphy, supplanting it entirely by radio and tape-code systems for Army communication—after using Morse for 80 years.

The Russian accent of Norma Shearer in MGM's "Idiot's Delight" is described by Life Magazine as "thick as canned borscht."

And now that the WPA Federal Writers' Project in New York has finished its bibliography of the motion picture business, they are turning their attention to the writing of a book on the folklore of labor in the metropolis, the songs and sayings of the city's workers—union and non-union, AFL and CIO. This, they say, "will nourish the nation's formal literature"—like that Hill-billy stuff on the air?

That "Hall of Fame" radio program which kids everybody and everything kidded movie trailers the other day, using "Jesse James" trailer "copy" to cite the 20th Century-Fox picture as one with which "You'll be so thrilled that you'll walk right out of the theatre and stick up the box-office!"

Heywood Broun denies that he has ever been introduced thoroughly to Zeppo Marx, now an internationalist by virtue of Mussolini's edict barring Marx Brothers' pictures on grounds of their being "exemplars of the full flower" of anti-Fascistic culture.

Mr. Broun said that, while he has enjoyed Zeppo's dramatic performances on many occasions, and was allowed to stand in the wings and pinch the chorus girls as they went by, he hardly considers that an introduction.

For reasons not apparent, persons and press within and outside the motion picture industry disclosed at the time of last week's awards presentation much more than the usual curiosity in the reason why the Academy of Motion Picture Arts' awards statuettes are called "Oscars". One reason given is that Warners' Bette Davis unconsciously called them "Oscars" when she won in 1935, and that the name stuck at once. However, real identity of the origin of the name is lost in the mazes of Hollywood. One authentic source says that it started in a bit of badinage between Donald Gledhill, Academy executive secretary, and his wife.

According to this story, Mrs. Gledhill and Don would exchange flippant remarks, such as "How's your Uncle Oscar?"

One time, Mrs. Gledhill visited Don at his Academy office, and he asked, "How's your Uncle Oscar?"

Mrs. Gledhill, the story continues, hesitated for a bit, and then pointed to one of the Academy statuettes: "There's Uncle Oscar now. Why don't you ask him?"

An Academy staff member happened to be in the room, and soon the whole staff took up the word. It spread, until now virtually everyone in Hollywood knows the name refers to the statuette.

Occasionally, a free lance or studio publicity man would put out a story claiming the credit of naming the statuettes for one of his clients, but they were all "hoke" stories.

Academy awards officials this year were quite perturbed by the continuance of the use of the word "Oscar" but couldn't do anything about it.

David Selznick has been kidded a lot of late for having everything but Southern atmosphere and everyone but Southerners in his long-pending Southern "Gone With the Wind." All of the chiding, however, is not justified, as witness the Selznick press agent's report on the following "real Southern" incident occurring as the cameras started to turn the other morning:

"Vivien Leigh, of London, in the role of the Southern Scarlett O'Hara, was seated on the front porch. Director Victor Fleming rehearsed with her in the opening scene. Naturally, everyone was nervous and tense. But at last the rehearsal ended, the order was given to turn the camera, and the first scene was on its way"—"Gone With the Wind" had actually started.

"Just as it began, a U. S. Army bomber came buzzing through the clouds overhead, the roar of its motors drowning out the voices of the film players below, and completely spoiling the sound track.

"The director looked up at the plane and muttered:

" 'Damyankees.' "

5,404 Winners of "Quiz" Money in 7,200 Theatres

Names of the 5,404 winners in the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest, part of the industry's million dollar "good will" drive, were announced on Monday evening at nine o'clock throughout the country.

In San Francisco, a housewife, until then entirely ignorant of her good fortune, ascended the stage of the Fox theatre, and was declared the winner of the $50,000 "grand" prize. She was Mrs. Elizabeth C. Benincasa, born in Brooklyn, and living at 2811 Gough Street, San Francisco.

A second prize winner, Mrs. Laura Carpenter, of 573 Hopocan Avenue, Barberton, Ohio, received her $25,000 prize in Loew's Theatre, Akron, Ohio. J. Howell Talley, of 1425, 11th Place South, Birmingham, Alabama, was in the audience at the Alabama Theatre, in Birmingham, when his prize winning was announced. He got $10,000.

In most of the 7,200 houses in which announcements of winners were made more or less elaborate publicity preparations had been made, with advance trailers, posters and lobby boards, and persons, of local and state prominence participated.

Each of the 7,200 theatres received envelopes from a representative of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company; these were opened in view of the audience.

In the New York area a population center generally conceded to have shown greater interest than other sections, possibly due merely to greater congestion, local circuits were more active than elsewhere in promoting the announcement night.

In some localities, newsreel crews, newspaper cameramen, and reporters from local newspapers, and the news services, covered the ceremonies.

Virtually all of the 5,404 winners had gone to the local theatres with the knowledge that they had won something. They had received letters indicating that attendance at the designated theatres would mean the reception by them of "information of interest."

The checks for the amounts won were to be mailed Thursday from the New York offices of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company.

At campaign headquarters, it was estimated that of the 2,158,960 answers received, approximately 30 per cent were correct. This total was narrowed down, by a crew of about 40 readers at contest headquarters in New York, to about 6,000; these were then submitted to the judges, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Hendrik Willem Van Loon, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, Bruce Barton, and Dr. James E. West, who made their final decisions on February 17, at the Hotel Waldorf Astoria, New York.

Johnston Dinner Set for May

A dinner is being arranged for W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, by friends and associates in honor of his 25th anniversary in the industry. The dinner is scheduled to be held early in May at the Hotel Astor in New York.

On Thursday Mr. Johnston was the guest of honor at the bi-monthly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the Hotel Astor. On the dais with him were Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production for Monogram, and Trem Carr, production executive for the company.

MIDNIGHT STAGE PLAY IN FILM THEATRES

The road company of "Tobacco Road" is experimenting with a solution to the long standing films versus legitimate stage problem. Since most of the former legitimate houses are now used for motion pictures, midnight performances of "Tobacco Road" are given in the film houses after the last screening.

There have been several such performances to date. At the Paramount in Toledo, Ohio, the show played to standing room at $1.65 top, and nearly reached a $4,000 gross. The curtain went up at 11:20 p.m.

16mm Interests Organize in N. Y.

Formation on Monday evening of a 16 mm association in New York, membership of which is comprised of persons in the manufacture, distribution, or rental of 16 mm motion picture apparatus or films, was said by sponsors to mark a new period in the growth of this medium. The association's title is temporary. A committee, headed by W. K. Hedwig, of Nu-Art Film Company, will draw up by-laws and papers of incorporation.

A wide sale is claimed for 16 mm projection equipment in the past two years; 16 mm films are being used in newsreel houses; and a corporation was given papers within the last fortnight at Albany, N. Y., to operate a circuit of small theatres using 16 mm newsreels and short subjects.

Harry A. Kapit, president of Walter O. Gutlohn, Inc., distributors and producers of 16 mm sound and silent films, declared projectors sold in 1937 and 1938 totaled 30 per cent above previous years' sales. He listed 10,000 sound projectors and 25,000 silent projectors in constant use. He gave as possible reasons for this increase the use of films by the Civilian Conservation Corps, by hospitals, county, state and city departments.

Mr. Kapit appealed for cooperation between Hollywood producers and 16 mm producers. He cited an inquiry by the New York State Regents, at which it was suggested major studios lend aid, so that educational subjects could be produced with the same care as major productions.

At the Rockefeller Center Newsreel theatre, in New York, the management has inserted shots of local interest, made in Kodachrome, into the regular program. The film is projected from a 16 mm machine in the projection booth. The house screen is 11½ by 14½ feet and this size is declared not too large for 16 mm.

The "16 mm newsreel circuit" is planned by a company known as 5 and 10 Movies, Inc. In its incorporation announcement at Albany, its officers were declared to be Hickman Price, Ruth Maizel, and Ruth M. Stohlberg. Under the plan, the small theatres would charge five cents for children and 10 cents for grown-ups. Mr. Price is in charge of the New York office of the De Vry Corporation, manufacturers of 16 mm recording and projection equipment. The company has under consideration a national 16 mm newsreel, and other subjects for this film width.

Copyright Filing Not Necessary, Rules U.S. Court

The United States Supreme Court, in an opinion delivered by Associate Justice James C. McReynolds, has revised the conception of copyright with respect to the filing of copyright notices. For in this decision, the Supreme Court becomes the first authoritative judicial body to say that a suit for infringement of a copyrighted work could be brought even if the author or copyright owner of that work had not filed copies with the Copyright Office.

The case in point was the Washington Publishing Company vs. Drew Pearson, Robert Allen, et al. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Allen are known as the authors of the syndicated newspaper column "Washington Merry-Go-Round." In 1931, in one of the monthly issues of the "Washingtonian," a magazine, there appeared an article by Pearson and Allen. In August, 1932, Liveright, Inc., published a book written by the two men, which contained material identical with that which had appeared in the "Washingtonian" article. Both the book and the magazine claimed copyright by the printing of the required statutory notice. But the magazine did not deposit copies in the Copyright Office and secure a certificate of registration until March, 1933. The Copyright Act of 1909 says that notice shall be filed "promptly."

The trial court found in favor of the petitioner, the Washingtonian Publishing Company. On an appeal, the Court of Appeals said that as copies of the magazine had not been deposited promptly in the Copyright Office, the action could not be maintained. Appealed again, the Supreme Court rendered its decision that there is no necessity to file, a ruling in which Justices Black, Roberts and Reed dissented.

Although, at the rate of two dollars apiece, the films filed by the motion picture companies over the course of the years amounts to a considerable sum, with films filed in the same manner as books, the likelihood is that filing of copyrights by film companies will be continued until the whole copyright situation is examined more thoroughly, a process now under way in the meetings which are being held in the trial room of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Actually, relying on the Supreme Court decision, they would not have to file unless they wanted to start an infringement action; for an infringement claim cannot be enforced without the existence of copyright notice.

Reaction to the high court decision has already started, with the introduction of a bill in the House of Representatives by Congressman Lanham of Texas. The bill would compel filing within 30 days; and if the 30-day period is passed an infringement suit cannot be maintained if the infringement occurred prior to the filing. Action is not likely to be taken on the Lanham bill until it becomes evident that action will or will not be taken on the copyright act as a whole.

Many theater patrons prefer the back seats. They enjoy the added eye comfort which distance gives when viewing rapid action on the screen. However, they desire sufficient screen illumination for easy vision. They are critical but, for this very reason, are likely to become regular patrons of the theater that provides the type of projection they enjoy.

With old style, low intensity projection there is often insufficient screen light for ease of vision much beyond the center of the auditorium. Patrons in the rear find vision an effort, and may seek their screen entertainment elsewhere in the future. Simplified High Intensity projection provides screen illumination that insures comfortable vision to every patron in the house.

Ask your dealer's salesman to show you how little it costs to satisfy the "back seat patrons."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Within the Law

(MGM)

Melodrama

"Within the Law" first saw the light of day in 1912 when, with Jane Crowl starred, it was the sensation of the New York stage. It has been a moving picture three times previously, the first time in 1917. Then in 1923, when Norma Talmadge played the lead, the title was "Paid." In 1931 Joan Crawford was "Mary Turner." This version will repeat the substance of the Bayard Veiller play, unchanged other than in up-to-date production technique, settings, costumes and photography.

The melodrama is emotion stirring material. Railroaded to jail for a petty crime she did not commit, the shop girl heroine studies law with relentless determination. When released she dedicates her life to making her persecutor suffer for the injustice inflicted upon her. Always she keeps within the law. The story reaches its high point when the son of the man who sent her to jail falls in love with her.

This time Ruth Hussey, remembered for her work in "Rich Man, Poor Girl," will be "Mary Turner." Her prison pal is Rita Johnson. Tom Neal, recruit from the New York Theatre Guild, will be seen as the boy. "Mary's" persecutor is Samuel S. Hinds. The supporting cast includes Paul Cavanagh, Paul Kelly, James Burker, Lynne Carver, Sidney Blackmer and William Gargan.

Gustav Machaty, who made "Ecstasy," starring Hedy Lamarr in Europe, is the director.

The Hound of the Baskervilles

(20th Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

Examination of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" bares several matters of exploitation importance. Its author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, undoubtedly did more than any other writer to precipitate the flood of detective stories in fiction, in stage plays and on the screen. Certainly his hero, Sherlock Holmes, is the direct ancestor of all modern slick sleuths, just as Doctor Watson is the sire of comedy stooges. The book itself is a time proved thriller. Millions have read it.

This is the third time, but first since 1922, that the story comes to screen realism, now through the photoplay writing talents of Ernest Pascal, whose recent credits include "Kidnaped," "Love Under Fire" and "Wee Willie Winkie." "Sing, Baby, Sing," "One in a Million," "Thin Ice" and "Wake Up and Live" are numbered among director Sidney Lanfield's accomplishments.

The English aspect and character of the pet thriller is continued further in cast assignments. Richard Greene (see Hollywood Scene, February 11) will play the role of "Sir Henry Baskerville." Basil Rathbone, outstanding in "If I Were King," "Son of Frankenstein" and "Adventures of Robin Hood," will be "Sherlock Holmes"; Nigel Bruce is "Doctor Watson." The girl whose romance with "Baskerville" looses terror on the bleak moors is Wendy Barrie. Among others having important parts are Lionel Atwill, John Carradine, Barlowe Borland, Beryl Mercer, Morton Lowry, Ralph Photes, E. E. Clive and Eily Malyon.

While there is an element of weird horror in the story, the yarn is not an out and out bloodcurdler. The elements of love interest, comedy and mystery are just as important.

The importance which Darryl Zanuck has attached to production detail is seen in his selection of Richard Day as art director. He designed the settings for many Samuel Goldwyn pictures as well as those which will be seen in "The Little Princess." The battery of camera men is headed by Peverell Marley, who has photographed many of Hollywood's biggest pictures such as "In Old Chicago," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Suez."

The plot and character of "The Hound of the Baskervilles" is familiar. The locale is a fog-drenched, terror-legended moor in England's Devonshire country. Everybody knows about the fierce hound that is the principal instrument of horror. To this eerie background comes a young Canadian to claim his inheritance and find love, but to be made a victim of fear-breeding superstition.

Trouble in Sundown

(RKO Radio)

Western

"Trouble in Sundown" will be George O'Brien's 61st starring or featured vehicle in his fifteen years as a screen actor. That's a record a very few players approach. The production will be the star's 28th western. Evidently he has not grown stale as a riding, fighting, romantic buckaroo. Consistency has further meaning when other production statistics are examined and it is shown that "Trouble in Sundown" is the 20th O'Brien vehicle which David Howard has directed, the sixth for Bert Gilroy and the sixth for which Oliver Drake has prepared the screenplay. The last six were made by this trio.

For story description purposes it is sufficient to write that "Trouble in Sundown" is a western. The time is the early 1900's and the frontier is the locale. Thematically it concerns the efforts made by a cowboy to clear the father of the girl he loves from the unfounded charges of robbery and murder. The thrill climax stems from a situation in which six men are locked in an airtight bank vault.

A featured player in many pictures, Rosalind Keith makes her debut as a western actress and becomes O'Brien's 45th leading woman. The supporting cast will include singing Ray Whitley, who has been in four earlier O'Brien shows, and Chill Wills, the comedian who scored in "Arizona Legion" and "Lawless Valley." Other prominent players are Cy Kendall, Howard Hickman, Ward Bond, Monte Montague, Bob Burns and Otto Yamoaka.

The Story of Alexander Graham Bell

Biography

Pictorial biographies to which "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" may be compared are "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola." Both dealt with the careers of men, their romances, ideals near-tragedies and accomplishments. The dedicatory foreword to the 20th Century-Fox production will read in part: "The story of Alexander Graham Bell and the telephone which in his youth he invented. As true as the telephone itself is the story of his early struggles and of his great love."

The story of the invention of the telephone, of Bell and his partner, Thomas Watson, the great financial battles waged and the unwillingness of a world to accept the invention, is known to many. Bell's personal romance story is familiar to only a few. Keynoted by authenticity, the production will tell the story of both.

The picture will be one of the first to be released under the new 20th Century-Fox Cosmopolitan arrangement. Consequently it can be expected that it will be eagerly exploited in the Hearst newspapers.

The character Bell will be portrayed by Don Ameche. The girl who was first his sweetheart and then inspiring wife is Loretta Young.

Henry Fonda will be seen as Watson. The two leading character roles will be played by the accomplished character actors, Charles Coburn and Gene Lockhart. The favorite mother of the "Jones Family" series, Spring Byington will be seen as the mother of Miss Young and her real sisters, Sally Blane, Polly Ann and Georgiana Young. Scores of other personalities will be seen in important parts, among them Bobs Watson, the youngster in "Kentucky," Russell Hicks, Paul Stanton, Jonathan Hale, Harry Davenport, Elizabeth Patterson, Charles Trowbridge, Jan Dugan and Zeffie Tilbury.

The production, which is receiving Darryl F. Zanuck's personal attention, will come under the supervision of Kenneth Macgowan, whose credits include "Lloyds of London" and "In Old Chicago." Direction was assigned to Irving Cummings. The source of the production is an original story by Ray Harris. The screen play was completed by Lamar Trotti, who did similar jobs on "In Old Chicago," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Kentucky."

Release date: April 14, 1939.

Maiden Voyage

(MGM)

Comedy-Romance

"Maiden Voyage" will not have anything to do with a sea-going pleasure cruise. Near the end the story does take to deep blue water for a bit, but the major setting is the snow-covered Swiss Alps. The story possibly can be classified as a comedy romance, but after spending a few hours watching sequences in the making, it is legitimate to predict that the public will label it a rollicking farce. Thematically the yarn is a series of madcap events in which nothing goes right for anyone. It concerns experiences which befall a young fellow who forgets to show up for his wedding, involves his father and mother, prospective bride and father-in-law, a frantic psychiatrist and a demure Swiss miss in a hilarious series of episodes and winds up on the docks of New York where a father bearing weddings gifts is joyous that his son is finally married, but horrified to discover he has married the wrong girl.

The cast is handpicked for comedy. Robert Young often has demonstrated his talents as a comedian. Annabella made her European reputation as a funster. Comedy is the forte of flittery Billie Burke and blustering Walter Connolly. Reginald Owen returns to comedy after "A Christmas Carol" and his serio-dramatic role in "Fast and Loose." Arthur Treacher's latest comedy opportunity is in "The Little Princess." The only partly serious roles feature Samuel S. Hinds and Virginia Field.

William Thiele, who took a comedy cast through the farcical "Beg, Borrow Or Steal," is the director.

Release date: April 2, 1939.

Captain Fury

(United Artists - Hal Roach)

Australian Adventure

While there is a factual basis, the story to be told in "Captain Fury" primarily is fiction. The locale is Australia, a setting which the writer believes has but rarely if ever before been used for a picture background. The story is one that never before has been the subject of screen treatment. The story concerns English prisoners exiled to the "land down under" when it was a penal colony, land owners who employed them as convict laborers and considered them little more than slaves, the legitimate settlers and the rebellions, recriminations and petty warfares indulged in by the three orders. Naturally there is a love story. This has its culmination in marriage at the time when the government recognizes the inhuman plight of the prisoner-laborers and the system is abolished. Basically, however, the picture promises to be thrill action melodrama.

Brian Aherne, soon to be seen in "Juarez," Victor McLaglen, currently in "Gunga Din" and "Let Freedom Ring,"and Paul Lukas are the principals. All the story's romance and much of its melodrama will rotate about June Lang. The principal supporting players are John Carradine, John Warburton, Claude Allister, Will Stanton, Lumsden Hare, Charles Middleton, Margaret Roach and Virginia Field.

Before they completed the original story, Jack Jevne, Grover Jones and William DeMille devoted considerable time to research.

A Hal Roach production, the picture also is being directed by Mr. Roach, marking the first time that he has taken such responsibility in many years.

Release date: To be determined.

Risky Business

(Universal)

Melodrama

If one will recall "Okay America" he will have a comprehensive idea of the potential merits of "Risky Business." The melodramatic substance and general amplifying substance of William Anthony McGuire's original story as produced by Universal in 1932 has been retained. The present screen play writer, Charles Grayson, however, has made one definite change. In "Okay America," the hero was a newspaper columnist of the Walter Winchell type. In "Risky Business" the hero will be a radio news commentator of the Winchell type.

The story tells how the news broadcaster helps ransom a kidnap victim through his radio reports.

George Murphy, in "Hold That Co-Ed" and "Letter of Introduction," will be in the leading role. The girl is Dorothea Kent, while Eduardo Ciannelli, presently in "Gunga Din," heads the kidnaping mob. Supporting roles have been assigned Leon Ames, El Brendel, Frances Robinson, John Wray and Pierre Watkin.

The production is being directed by Arthur Lubin, who did "Beloved Brat," "Midnight Intruder" and "Secrets of a Nurse."

Release date: To be determined.

Roaring Road

(Warner)

Auto Racing

Sometimes brothers don't get along and occasionally pictures use this dramatic rivalry as a production theme. It will be used as the premise of "Roaring Road (tentative title). Auto racing is the background. The elder brother, a star driver, doesn't want his younger brother to have anything to do with racing, nor does he want him to have much to do with women.

While Pat O'Brien will be the star, three of Warners' younger players, John Payne, Ann Sheridan and Gale Page, will be given an opportunity. The supporting cast will present Frank McHugh, Granville Bates, Edgar Edwards, Charles Halton and Grace Stafford.

Lloyd Bacon, who has handled many of Warners' most exciting action pictures, is the director. Sig Herzig and Wally Klein, who have turned out several picture stories of the same brand, are the authors. They were assisted in developing the screen play by Norman Reilly Raine and Maurice Leo.

Release date: To be determined.

Mystery Melodrama

Slam bang action, double dyed in the wool melodrama, love interest that flowers under the menace of murder, tight suspense and broad comedy are the elements being stirred into "Danger Island," seventh of the Moto pictures. The locale is tropical Porto Rico, where American life rubs elbows with savage native customs and modern crime detecting efficiency collides with weird superstition fostered by the ghosts of the Spanish Main. In this Moto mystery, as baffling and complicated as the writer has come across in a long time, the wily Oriental sleuth is embroiled in a fake diamond smuggling case

This time the Japanese detective created by J. P. Marquand will be seen in the screen version of a crime novel written by John W. Vandercock. The idea was developed by John Reinhardt and George Bricker, and Peter Milne did the screen play. Direction is in the hands of Herbert I. Leeds, who made "Love on a Budget" and "Arizona Wildcat." John Stone, who produced several "Charlie Chans" and "Mr. Motos," is on the job again.

Peter Lorre will be seen as the screen character he created. The supporting cast lists Jean Hersholt, Amanda Duff who was in Shirley Temple's "Just Around the Corner," Warren Hymer, Richard Lane, Leon Ames, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles D. Brown, Paul Harvey, Robert Lowery, Eddie Marr and Harry Woods.

Release date: April 7, 1939.

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS

(Columbia)

Comedy

Move over, you "Hardys" and "Joneses," and make room for the "Bumsteads," because "Blondie," "Dagwood," "Baby Dumpling" and "Daisy" have moved in. Minute for minute and inch for inch this second film fashioned in the format of Chic Young's comic cartoon matches any family series on the market laugh for laugh. It is like none of the others, nor like any other domestic comedy of ready memory, and stands in clear command of its own appeal channel.

Drawing upon its cartoon derivation for the privilege to do things with camera and incident commonly denied directors employing living actors, Frank R. Strayer contrives stunningly amusing effects. He uses slow motion, invisible wires and camera tricks in running sequence with humorous dialogue and comic situation. He blends slapstick and parlor comedy with complete nonchalance. The end result is a houseful of happily and unabashedly laughing customers asking no more credibility than is asked of a cartoon, an extraordinary and exhilarating state of audience receptivity.

Arthur Lake, long an exhibitor favorite, has found his spot as the husband of this lively young family, and Penny Singleton seems to have been born for the wifely assignment. But it is tiny Larry Sims as "Baby Dumpling" who steals this episode in the family annals and, by his unbelievably natural delivery of lines that would stymie a child of twice his years, holds the frankly cartoonish plot together. The dog's deportment is pure cartoon comedy and immensely effective.

Richard Fournoy's screen play, from a story by Kay van Ripper and himself, opens with "Dagwood" quitting his job and "Blondie" going to see the boss about getting it back for him. The boss gives it to her instead. A pair of itterbug champions, a scheme to buy a piece of roperty, a fishing trip in the course of which Dagwood" finds himself embarrassingly justa- sed to a pretty and approachable night club ncer, are among the factors complicating the rried life of the "Bumsteads" before "Dag- od" gets his job back. The routine defies mbnail chronicle.

WARNER SHAPING 1940 SLATE AGAINST DUALS

National Sales Convention Mar. 13 and 14; MGM and 20th-Fox Set Distribution Meetings

Warner-First National will be the first distributor to start new season's activities, cued to a national sales convention, meeting March 13th and 14th, at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, with Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, presiding.

A general advance of annual conventions by distributors this year is attributed in some quarters to (1) the necessity of early company discussions on sales practice and procedure as a result of the impending adoption of a trade program for regulating distribution-exhibition, (2) the recent United States Supreme Court decision make it unlawful to force subsequents to adopt a minimum admission and a non-dual bill policy when such are beneficial to prior runs, and (3) the pending U.S. anti-trust suit against the majors in New York.

More Short Subjects

Sales conventions already set, besides Warners', are the MGM meeting, March 19th to 21st, in Chicago, and that of Twentieth Century-Fox, April 3rd to 5th, in Chicago.

Without referring to the Supreme Court decision in the Interstate Dallas case (the double bill-price fixing decision), Warners this week announced that "the problem of the gradual elimination of duals, which Warner Brothers believe to be inevitable and desirable," will be met in the new season by the production by this company of a substantial number of shorter features, running from 2,000 to 4,000 feet in length.

Warner says its production plans for 1939-40 have already been completed, following the recent conferences on the Coast and in New York. Also, the company's selling and merchandising plans have also been completed. 80 per cent of the production schedule for the present season is fulfilled.

Plans for 1939-40 call for 48 features, of which 36 will be "A" productions, with 12 "B" films. Of the 36 "A" pictures, 24 will be of "top-bracket status," according to Warners.

More Shorts in Color

"The problem of gradual elimination of dual features," is to be met by the production of films along the lines of the color historical subjects now being released by the company, such as "Give Me Liberty," "The Declaration of Independence," "Lincoln in the White House" and "Sons of Liberty," now in production, with Claude Rains in the lead, supported by Montagu Love and with Michael Curtiz directing. At least 12 such short features, and probably more, will be released next season.

"After careful consideration of all phases of the subject, Warner Brothers believe that the day of the double bill in its present form is passing," it was explained.

"This evolution in screen entertainment will be furthered by the provision of the shorter features to accompany main features. Shorter features of the type already issued and now in production, will each entail at least as high a production budget as the average full-length "B" film. They have already demonstrated their value and the public acceptance of them as an accompaniment to "pictures confirms the belief that they will eventually afford the answer to the problem of the double bill.

"This belief," Warners continued, "has met with the concurrence of many exhibitors with whom Warner production, sales and advertising executives have conferred.

UNIVERSAL PRODUCT CONFERENCES SET

Final conferences on Universal's new season production plans will get underway at the studio this weekend with the arrival at the studio from Honolulu of William A. Scully, general sales manager.

F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, arrived on the coast this week to participate in the discussion. Nate J. Blumberg, president, who returned to New York Sunday after a month at the studio and in Palm Springs, will be in touch with the meeting by telephone. Cliff Work and Matthew J. Fox, studio heads, will participate.

The company's "Spirit of Culver" had its world premiere Thursday night, before an audience of high Army, Navy and Government officials, in Washington.

Universal has signed Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., to star in "The Sun Never Sets," which Rowland V. Lee will produce for the new season schedule.

Columbia's district managers were meeting in New York Thursday and Friday for conferences with home office executives on 1939-40 product and the remainder of this season's commitments. All district managers participated, with A. Montague, general sales manager, presiding.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 Pictures

Of 11 Pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage and five were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Little Princess," "Let Freedom Ring," "Nancy Drew, Reporter," "Secret Service of the Air," "Society Smugglers," "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Dark Victory," "King of the Turf," "Saint Strikes Back," "Three Musketeers," "Wife, Husband and Friend."

Booking Radio Film

"Radio Goes to the Fair," a film produced by the special events department of radio station WOW, Omaha, has been booked in 200 midwest theatres. The films were taken at the Iowa and Nebraska state fairs.

The New York office of the Adler Sign Letter Company has moved to new and larger quarters at 33 West 60th Street.

Warner English Budget 3 Million

Warner Brothers' budget for production in England will be approximately $500,000 more for the 1939-40 season than the $2,500,000 spent during 1938-39, according to Sam E. Morris, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. Mr. Morris has been conferring with Jerome Jackson, production executive of Warners' studios at Teddington, who is now in New York. Last year's 11 features will probably be increased to 12 or 13.

Mr. Jackson, who arrived last Tuesday on the Ile de France, said that of the new product at least four properties will be in the big class, and named "Holy Wedlock," "Midas Touch," a history of the Cunard Line and a story about Reuter's, the news agency.

Last year's Warner schedule included two double quota films, and it is planned to increase the number in this classification, and perhaps include triple quota films. Primarily the Warner program has concentrated on single quota films at a minimum expenditure of $75,000 on labor alone, with the least expensive picture costing about $120,000.

1938 Press Comment Was Less Favorable Than 1937

Analysis of charts of press comment anent the industry, kept by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and lately made public by them, discloses that the industry, despite the developments of the past year, did not suffer as much in the estimation of the public press, as expressed in editorial comment, news item bias, and columnar comment, as observers had felt that it might. Comment favorable to the industry averaged 60.9 per cent of all clippings, compared with 66.8 per cent of 1937, and the 58.2 per cent of 1936.

The drop of six per cent, it was felt, came from the publicity given in May of 1938, and lasting through June, to exhibitor statements that certain stars were "boxoffice poison." There was a drop in December's favorable comment, attributed to reports of newsreel censorship in England, and derelictions in personal behavior by certain stars.

The other aspect, favorable comment, showed itself at peak in April, when editorial comment dwelt favorably upon Mr. Will H. Hays' annual report, emphasizing the success of self-regulation in the industry. Other favorable comment followed the government anti-trust actions, and Mr. Hays' statements upon it; his advocacy of advertising as a boost to prosperity; the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Campaign.

Publicity Committee For MPPA Is Named

Kyle Palmer, Tom Pettey and Gabe Yorke of the Motion Picture Producers Association, have been named by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as a committee to coordinate public relations and public information concerning the industry's national affairs.

OBITUARIES

Joe Brandt Services Held in New York

Funeral services for Joe Brandt, first president of Columbia Pictures, who died February 22nd at the home in Beverly Hills, Cal., were held in New York Wednesday at the West End Funeral Chapel. Rabbi Louis I. Newman conducted the services. Interment was in the Westchester Hills Cemetery in Westchester County, New York.

Robert Gleckler Dies

Robert P. Gleckler, 52, actor, died at his home in North Hollywood, Cal., February 26th after a brief illness. Mr. Gleckler began his career on the stage in 1910 and in 1928 entered motion pictures. He had a role in "Gone With the Wind" at the time of his death. Mr. Gleckler is survived by his widow and three children.

Frank Watson

Frank Watson, 72, formerly an orchestra leader in Kansas City, died there February 24th. He had played in almost every large theatre in Kansas City and in the middle west.

Graham on Dufaycolor Board

John Cecil Graham, former managing director for Paramount in Great Britain, has been appointed to the Dufaycolor Company, Inc., board here as a representative of Dufaycolor Chromex of England. Mr. Graham is vice-chairman of the British company, which formerly was the parent of the American corporation. Mr. Graham, arrived in New York last week, from London.

Moore Presented Scroll

A scroll containing the names of industry associates in Oklahoma City was presented to B. H. "Dinty" Moore following his resignation as general manager of Standard Theatres there to accept a Warner Brothers post in Pittsburgh. Mr. Moore was also honored at dinners by Morris Loewenstein, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, and Charles Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox exchange manager in Oklahoma City.

Consolidated Meeting March 23

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., of which H. J. Yates is president, will hold its annual stockholders' meeting March 23rd in New York. The company has declared a dividend of 25 cents on the $2 cumulative preferred stock, payable March 15th to stockholders of record March 1st, leaving arrears of about $7.

Principal Acquires "Flower"

Sunray Films has sold the New York territorial rights of the English talking version of "The Little Flower" to Principal Film Exchange. William Grande of Pittsburgh has acquired the distribution rights for western Pennsylvania, where it has been booked by the Notoupolis, Mannes and Warners circuit.

The tenth annual dance of the Press Photographers' Association of New York will be held at New York's Hotel Astor on April 14th. Motion picture, stage and radio stars will make personal appearances.

Silverman, Nirdlinger Estates Appraised

The estate left by Sime Silverman, publisher of "Variety," who died in 1933, was reduced by debts and mortgage losses from $183,105 to $33,254, according to a transfer tax appraisal filed in Surrogate's Court Tuesday. One thousand shares of "Variety" common stock, valued at $94,436, comprised the principal asset of the estate, but the appraisal papers showed that he owed "Variety" $45,613 through advances made to him. Other debts were $27,568.

Samuel F. Nirdlinger, Philadelphia theatrical man who died in 1918, and father of Frederick Nixon-Nirdlinger, who died in France in 1931, left an estate of $2,539,620, according to an accounting filed Tuesday.

Samuel Rosenman, New York supreme court justice, this week issued a temporary injunction against Ben Blumenthal, restraining him from prosecuting a suit previously brought by him in England against Paramount Pictures, Inc., for alleged failure to remunerate Mr. Blumenthal in the sale of Paramount-controlled theatres here. Early trial on the question of a permanent injunction was ordered.

IN COURTS

File Patent Trust Suit Against RCA

The hearing of a suit seeking an injunction and accounting for alleged infringement of patent rights was started this week in federal court in New York by the International Carrier Call and Television Corporation, Inc., which was organized about two years ago, against the Radio Corporation of America.

The plaintiff also instituted suit against RCA for $500,000 damages, alleging violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, under which treble damages may be collected if the verdict is for the plaintiff.

The complaint sets forth that the defendant violated a patent issued in April, 1938, to Sol J. Levy, inventor of a two-way intercommunicating system for power circuits. As a result of acts violating the anti-trust act, it is alleged, the American Carrier Call Corporation, 50 per cent of the stock of which is owned by the plaintiff, was forced to file a reorganization petition under Section 77B of the national bankruptcy act.

Rudulph Sues Columbia

Gerald K. Rudulph, formerly advertising director of RCA Photophone and now of Buffalo, N. Y., filed suit for $250,000 in federal court in New York this week against Columbia Pictures Corporation charging infringement of scenes, dialogues and action from his play, "Expose," written in 1938. Mr. Rudulph claims that Columbia saw the play in script form in 1935 and rejected it, but that its picture, "I Am the Law," was based on his material.

Levy Files Appeal

Robert S. Levy, Paramount-Publix bondholder, has filed an appeal in the appellate division of the New York supreme court from a dismissal of his complaint against the Chase National Bank, debenture trustee, and Columbia Broadcasting Company and William S. Paley, president of CBS. Mr. Levy, who claims that the sale of CBS stock was improper, brought suit five years ago to set aside the sale. The suit was dismissed when the lower court decided that his complaint failed to state a cause of action.

Raphaelson Suit Revealed

A suit against Robert T. Kane and New World Pictures, Ltd., by Samson Raphaelson was revealed this week in New York supreme court when Justice Bernard L. Shientag vacated service of papers on the ground that no jurisdiction of the defendant could be obtained in the United States. The decision was based on an affidavit of Mr. Kane, who stated that he had been served as an officer of New World in December, 1938, while temporarily in New York, and that he had no knowledge of the basis of the suit.

Damage Suit Filed

Wilhelm Karol has filed a $60,000 damage suit in the New York supreme court against Universal Pictures Company, claiming the company owed this sum for services rendered to it in procuring two contracts. Mr. Karol bases his action on contracts allegedly made between Universal and Giuseppe Domenico of Rome, Italy, which gave Mr. Domenico exclusive rights to distribution and exhibition of Universal pictures in Italy. Universal has obtained an extension to answer to March 13th because J. H. Seidelman, vice-president, who it was stated is the only person familiar with the suit, was at present out of the country.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Express in Replica

A full size replica of the Simplon-Orient Express has been built at the Denham Studios for the new Pinebrook production, "The Silent Battle" (nee "Peace in Our Time"). Cameramen traveled over the route taken by the Express, making a complete record.

Valerie Hobson, John Loder and Rex Harrison play in the film, much of the action of which is held aboard the Express during a mythical European crisis.

Immediately following this, Pinebrook will go into production with "This Man in Paris," in which the Drake family, seen in "This Man Is News," will continue their adventures. Both are for Paramount release.

Laughton Wardrobe

From the tattered jersey of "Beachcomber" and the second hand coat of "St. Martin's Lane," Charles Laughton has in "Jamaica Inn" risen to a wardrobe which he declares is the most expensive he has sported yet in any film. Boots costing twelve pounds a pair, coats and breeches made by a Bond Street expert, shirts of real lace and waistcoats adorned with genuine Wedgwood buttons are among the sartorial equipment sported by him in the new Mayflower production.

Something like a record in top line names has been assembled in the cast of "Jamaica Inn" since it started, and among those playing with Laughton, with of course Maureen O'Hara, his discovery and feminine lead, are Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams, Robert Newton, Jeanne de Casalis, John Longden, Hay Petrie, Basil Radford, Horace Hodges, Marie Ault, Edwin Greenwood, Stephen Haggard, O. B. Clarence, Bromley Davenport, Peter Scott and others.

The film is being produced by Erich Pommer and directed by Alfred Hitchcock.

On Schedule

Bringing in his picture on schedule, in spite of the delay caused by the recent "flu" epidemic, director Walter Forde has completed final scenes on his third picture, "The Four Just Men," for Michael Balcon at the Ealing Studios.

A feature of this adaptation of the Edgar Wallace story is said to be the disguises adopted by one of the four just men, Hugh Sinclair, with seven character changes, from foreign police officer to water-board inspector, to a tramp, to Othello.

Elsewhere at Ealing work has commenced upon the boxing sequences of Michael Balcon's "There Ain't No Justice," being directed by Pen Tennyson, descendant of the poet. Thick ears, broken noses and roll-collar pullovers have been the fashion at the Ealing Studios the last two weeks, with the odor of liniment clinging to the air. Supervising the fight sequences, in which numerous pugilistic stars assist while Jimmy Hanley plays lead, is former heavyweight champion Bombardier Billy Wells. A replica of a famous London boxing ring has been filmed in the studio.

A famous woman racing motorist, Mrs. Roy Eccles, helps Will Hay catch a criminal in a location shot at Brooklands for "Ask a Policeman," new Gainsborough picture being directed by Marcel Varnel.

Televising Race

The university boat race between Oxford and Cambridge, classic rowing event of Britain's sporting year, is to be televised by the British Broadcasting Corporation on April 1st, when cameras will be focused on both the start and the finish. Last year only the finish was televised and the transmission ruined by a workman who accidentally cut a telephone cable with his pick.

Among other subjects to be televised in the forthcoming season are survey of British canals, an interview with the French President, a broadcast of life on a farm, and the Coliseum vaudeville series. Plays to be televised include "The Unquiet Spirit," "The Young Idea," "Rope," "The King of Spain's Daughter" and "Ladies in Waiting."

176 Films at 36

Though not yet thirty-six years of age, producer-director Mario Zampi, now playing a leading role in Paramount's British production plans, starts work shortly on "French Without Tears," which will be his 176th film.

Anthony Asquith will direct.

Zampi, who has been cameraman, cutter, assistant director and producer, threw up the vocation of law to become a film actor in Rome. He more recently has been associated with BIP at Elstree, Warners at Teddington and Two Cities Productions.

Itemized

For future production MGM British has lined up "Busman's Honeymoon," "And So—Victoria," "National Velvet" and "Death on the Table."

Robert Donat's next will be "Ruined City," and it is hoped to repeat the combination of King Vidor, Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell.

Back into the limelight has come the Worton Hall Studio, Isleworth, currently being used by Venture Films on "Trouble for Two." The production is being directed by Walter Tennyson. Mavis Claire, Anthony Julme and C. Denier Warren have leading roles and the film is scheduled on a 10-day basis.

Now back in London, Gabriel Pascal has started preparation of the film version of "The Doctor's Dilemma," due to take the floor shortly with a famous English actor in the lead.

The script has been written by Ian Dalrymple and is to be submitted for approval to George Bernard Shaw.

Victor Saville, the MGM British producer, plans a trip to Hollywood shortly but will not leave until he has completed preparations of R. C. Sherriff's "Journey's End."

The National Fitness Council, parent of Britain's current "keep-fit" movement, has commissioned several films to be made on advanced gymnastics and keep-fit work for men and women. Selected for the work are GB Instructional, whose H. Bruce-Woolfe, Mary Field and Donald Carter are now at work on the series.

Experts chosen by the National Fitness Council to collaborate will start work immediately at the Gaumont British Studios, Shepherds Bush.

Ernest Gartside, who for four years was associated with Fox British Productions, is now in charge of the Wembley Studios. Planning production there are Admiral Films, which announces that "Midnight Mail" will go on to the floor soon. Maurice Elvey will direct from an original story adapted by Victor Greene and Kenneth Horne.

Australia Adopts Device For Preserving Records

New microphotographic recording equipment installed by the Commonwealth Statistician at Canberra, Australia, will save costs in the reproduction of copies of records and will save storage space, according to a report from the office of the American Commercial Attache at Sydney.

The new equipment consists of a special camera which makes photographs on a motion picture film. The page of a book, a diagram, or a sheet of statistical tables can be photographed and, when needed for reference, magnified again in a special projector.

Norman Blackburn has joined the motion picture department of the J. Walter Thompson Company, advertising agency.

BRITONS WANT FILMS ACT CHANGES BUT DISAGREE ON WHAT TO DEMAND

Hopskip from Pleas for Amendment to Increases in Quota, and Incorporating Short Subject Cost and Quality Clause

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the first year of Britain's Films Act drawing sadly to its close, producers are awaiting the dawn of the second of the Act's ten episodes. It shows little indication of being other than a chilly dawn.

Exhibitors Alone

During the last few weeks, activity of all save the exhibitors, who for diplomatic reasons have preferred a more or less Brer Rabbit policy, has concentrated on demands for amendment, for increases in the quota, for no amendment at all, and in one odd instance for the incorporation of a cost and quality clause for short subjects.

Oliver Stanley, dubbed by his critics the Micawber of British trade, has insisted that he is quite satisfied with the first year's working of his foster child. The Films Council, asked to go into the question of the quota for 1940-41 and, it is reported, advised that some amendment must be made in the multiple quota section, have issued only a formal report of its meeting. It meets again in March.

No Foreign Defaults

It would seem certain that foreign distributors here will have met their legal commitments without a single default. In some cases there will be an excess of footage. Having fulfilled their quota in the letter there is for the most part agreement that with pictures like "The Citadel," "The Lady Vanishes," "Sixty Glorious Years," "Q Planes," "Stolen Life" and "Keep Smiling," they also will have done so in the spirit.

That the Act will be amended is considered inevitable. It is certain that following approaches made by certain distributors here, the Board of Trade decided to introduce a bill of clarification on the lines already mentioned in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Now, however, American distributors here seem to have lost enthusiasm for it. There are the inconveniences and dangers of controversy amendment and counter-amendment from other sources, and the washing of dirty Parliamentary linen which inevitably would be associated with a new measure.

Labor Wants Increase

Appeals have been made to the Board of Trade by labor interests, who can be taken as not unrepresentative of the producers viewpoint, for an increase in quota for both renters and exhibitors. This is set in the Act at 22½ per cent for renters, and 17½ per cent for exhibitors. Pleas are that the figure be raised to 30 per cent and 25 per cent respectively. The machinery of the Act is elastic enough for this to be permitted without recourse to further legislation.

Meanwhile, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, which voluntarily observed that the time is too early for criticism of the Act, but that in any case they are opposed to a quota increase, has been virtually rebuked by the Board of Trade.

Opinion is thus divided into two camps, the one producers and labor, for amendment and quota increase, the other, renters and, oddly enough, exhibitors, against either amendment or increase.

ELSTREE IS OFFERED FOR STORAGE PURPOSES

The Amalgamated Studios at Elstree, London, will not be used at present for making films and have been offered to the Government for storage purposes, Ronald Cross, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, has informed the House of Commons, according to a dispatch from London to The New York Times.

It is understood, the dispatch said, that the studios have been acquired by a syndicate headed by Arthur Bank. The syndicate also controls the Pinewood and Denham studios and Mr. Cross said he "assumed it felt Amalgamated Studios were not needed at present. As I understood, the premises have been offered for lease to His Majesty's Office of Works, who are considering the use for official purposes."

One M.P. protested this would hamper British film production, but Mr. Cross insisted there was no reason to suppose "there is sufficient demand to make it worth while to retain the studio as such."

The pro-increase partly contend that an increase of the quota on the lines suggested would lift the annual production figures of British films from the present seven dozen or so to ten dozen or more. An increase, they believe, would compel the Americans to acquire independently produced British films.

There are still some who would not be content until production got back to 200 films a year as in the 1936-37 era.

Exhibitors Divided

The exhibitor attitude is variable. Independents of the Jack Prendergast-Harry Mears school of thought, probably represent an authoritative point of view. They say exhibitors must fight any increase until the industry has shown that it can normally turn out reasonable films, that the bigger films produced under the quota have had nothing else on the market to beat and have been getting exaggerated attention.

Meanwhile, shorts producers here have split explosively into two groups. The Association of Short Film Producers, with which are associated documentarians H. Bruce Woolfe, Donald Taylor, Paul Rotha and John Grierson demand a cost clause for short films. Against this a body of self-termed entertainment shorts producers have leaped into the arena, contending that if shorts are not getting a break it is because of their lack of entertainment. A cost clause, they insist, would so put up the American distributor's expenditure that he would even withhold his Hollywood shorts.

Francis L. Harley managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox in England, said in London this week that his company has rejoined the Kinematograph Renters' Society.

Arbitration Cases Decline in Canada

Cases filed before the motion picture industry's arbitration boards in Canada have declined more than half since 1930. In that year, at peak, there were 553 cases filed, against 238 for 1938.

The decline was general, all zones except Montreal and one other showing a reduction in complaints for 1938. In Montreal 36 more cases were filed last year than were entered in 1937.

The value of the 238 claims filed in 1938 was $92,158.46 for the whole Canadian trade. The number of cases settled before arbitration was 71, having a total value of $18,330.06. The number of awards after arbitration was 121 and the total value of awards was $42,941.21. Four claims, having a value of $1,833.50, were dismissed while the number of claims pending at the end of 1938 was 42, with an aggregate value of $28,103.85.

Ontario theatres constituted more than one-quarter of all film theatres in the Dominion and the number of claims filed at Toronto last year was 64, or slightly more than one-quarter of the 238 total. The 170 theatres in the Montreal zone accounted for 101 complaints.

Both arbitration and conciliation have been in regular use by the Canadian Film Boards of Trade. One of the reasons cited for the success is that arbitration is used for contract differences while conciliation is employed for other individual problems. An important conciliation committee has been set up in Toronto on which all groups have representatives There are arbitration boards in each of the six key cities across the Dominion. The film board of trade was established in Canada in 1925.

N. A. Taylor, who heads the Exhibitor Booking Association and is vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association, said at the last meeting of the Toronto Conciliation that Canadian exhibitors will seek the reforms embodied in the proposed fair trade practice draft if such a plan is put into effect in the United States. He said that the major distributors in New York should be advised that Canadian exhibitors desired to benefit by the provisions of any trade practice plan which may be adopted.

Reforms specifically mentioned were those dealing with license agreement revisions, elimination of score charges and extended cancellation privileges. The obtaining of such concessions, if granted to United States exhibitors, will again be discussed at the March meeting.

Canada acquired 102 new theatres at the turn of the year, while change of ownership was registered in the case of 75 houses, according to trade records for the calendar year 1938.

In the year 49 theatres were opened in the Prairie provinces, with 16 new houses listed in Ontario, 15 in the province of Quebec, 18 in the Maritime Provinces, and four in British Columbia. The number of theatres in Canada at the end of December was 1,351.

All theatres in the Bailey-Starr Circuit, with headquarters in Nashville, contributed the entire receipts of $3,606 February 2nd to the fund for German refugees.

Sam Stern, former art director of Warner Brothers theatres in Pittsburgh, who has been with Twentieth Century-Fox since last June, has contributed several paintings to the Motion Picture Refugee Fund.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADVENTURE IN SAHARA: Paul Kelly, Lorna Gray—Sorry, Columbia, but this is trite stuff. Running time, 58 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Very interesting comedy that pleased although the draw wasn't any too good. Without a doubt the second of this series will more than make up for the poorer business on the first. This is a series that should prove very popular here and in towns of this size and larger. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

CALL OF THE ROCKIES: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Good western and the "Sons of the Pioneers" do their part in making it so. Running time, 52 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barrie, Otto Kruger, Barbara O'Neill, John Beal—Here is an absorbing crook drama with Robinson in the role of law and order that holds the audience spellbound. An excellent picture that is considered by all the best of the Robinsons to date. Played it mid-week to excellent audience satisfaction. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUVENILE COURT: Paul Kelly, Rita Hayworth, Frankie Darro—A fairly good picture. Frankie Darro and his gang try to start a new "Dead End" gang but cannot equal the original "Dead End Kids." You may do a fairly good business. Book this one in as the second feature naturally. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 1.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SMASHING THE SPY RING: Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy—Very weak; nothing to recommend it.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STRANGE CASE OF DR. MEADE, THE: Jack Holt, Beverly Roberts, Noah Beery, Jr.—This boy Jack Holt has a habit of putting his pictures over always, and this picture pleases well. Good story and good action.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STRANGE CASE OF DR. MEADE, THE: Jack Hole, Beverly Roberts, Noah Beery, Jr.—A fairly good co-feature picture. In some spots it may even hold its own. Our hat's off to you, Columbia, for a good job well done. Running time, 67 minutes. Played January 29-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce—Went over very good but not financially, due probably to weather. In the opinion of my patrons Miss Blondell was much better in the role taken by Miss Bruce this time, who was good but didn't quite register like Blondell did. We like this series also and hope the roads and weather are more favorable for the next one. Running time, 74 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer, Spring Byington, Ann Miller—Perfect comedy entertainment. Any audience will roll in the aisles, as the saying goes, at this human and hilarious picture. Capra's genius is evidenced throughout. We find small reason why it disappointed at the box office. Certainly, no fault of the picture. Played January 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Crime School Kids"—The best box office attraction we've received from this company in some time. It's wonderful dramatic entertainment with an expert cast doing their best. It's sure fire! Played January 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien—This might be a production of great cost, but it is fully entitled to the high allocation given it. A powerful drama with grand performances by Cagney, O'Brien and the "Dead End Kids." Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

BROADWAY MUSKETEERS: Margaret Lindsay, Marie Wilson, Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Janet Chapman—A pretty good "B" picture. Take your own chances with it. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

BROADWAY MUSKETEERS: Margaret Lindsay, Ann Sheridan, Marie Wilson—Very nice program picture which should stand up alone on a midweek date. We played it during a storm and business was way off. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MUSKETEERS: Margaret Lindsay, Marie Wilson, Ann Sheridan, John Litel, Janet Chapman—Good B product. Pleased generally; was surprised 'cause I was afraid of it. And remember I am a hard critic.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert—Swell entertainment enjoyed by all. "Brother Rat," "The Valley of the Giants" and "Four Daughters," all three are great. Warner Bros. sure know how to make good pictures. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert—This was just fair. Something wrong. Just did not click. Done a nice business on it, however, Sunday night. Fell off Monday.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—Good picture to average business. Plenty of laughs, although Priscilla Lane fans were very much disappointed as her part is so unimportant it doesn't give her much opportunity to display her talents and personality. We believe this girl has what it takes, if care is taken in casting her. Played February 12-14.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Priscilla Lane, Eddie Albert—Very good comedy. In spots it is absolute comedy tops. Eddie Albert stands out in this above all the others. He should reap rewards in future films for his natural mannerisms. A rather small part for Priscilla but she's okay. Played January 27-28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran, Patricia Walthall—A good western in which Dick scores several good vocal knockouts. His singing makes his pictures different. And Dick sings, does not merely croon. The action and story are also okay in this one. Played January 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne, Johnnie Davis—Very good. Pat O'Brien turns in a good performance and Fidler is excellent. I personally believe Jimmie Fidler to be tops and at this time wish to extend a bouquet, yes, a carload of orchids to you, Jimmie Fidler. Incidentally, how many bells did you give this picture, Jimmie? Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne, Johnnie Davis—Good program picture. John Payne and Margaret Lindsay both are comers, especially Margaret Lindsay. She is good in any part. Why not give her more of a break. Running time, 86 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne, Johnnie Davis—Good picture, well done. Pleased nicely. Not big but pleased all. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan—A good title; draws them in and pleases after they are in. A good little show.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

GOING PLACES: Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Allen Jenkins—Good B product. Nothing big but pleases and slides by nicely. Running time, 89 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—In a 60% French Catholic town and a picture like this, ask us another. A natural.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—This is definitely a triumph in motion picture productions. Spencer Tracy is better than his best; Mickey Rooney good as ever and Henry Hull excellent. A little late booking reduced our box office possibilities. Played January 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BURN 'EM UP O'CONNOR: Dennis O'Keefe, Cecilia Parker, Harry Carey, Nat Pendleton—Good enough action picture which failed to draw. O'Keefe is not known. Contains some thrilling automobile racing scenes. Played February 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, A: Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockhart, Lynne Carver, Ann Rutherford—A splendid production. None who came to see it were disappointed in its unreeling. Casting was perfect for the job at hand. It is unfortunate bad weather came hand in hand with this picture for it hurt business. Played January 25-26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHRISTMAS CAROL, A: Reginald Owen, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockhart—A very fine picture for the purpose for which it was made. And it was thoroughly enjoyed by the few who saw it. But the draw was very poor. We don't want any more definitely seasonal pictures out of season. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL: Luise Rainer, Paulette Goddard, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—Entertaining story; pleased generally. Good B product. Star will draw.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo, Beverly Roberts—Not much of a Joe E. Brown picture. Have seen much better. You're slipping, Joe. Running time, 70 minuts.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus—Great music, lavish production, but it won't make money in a small town. Running time, 104 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Miliza Korjus—It is a melting pot of about all Europe and we are like the mountaineers, "We'uns don't like furriners." The music is wonderful, settings and photography good, but I cannot get them in for this class show. Fernand Gravet is very good and speaks distinctly, but Luise Rainer needs an interpreter. She must be good or she would not have won the Academy Award twice, but I hope it will be a long, long time before I see her again. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Gladys George —A wonderful production. Perfect cast, lavish settings, good photography and recording. It is not the type of picture to appeal to the small town audience, but it brings in a class that very seldom comes and it adds prestige to your theatre. Norma Shearer as Marie Antoinette is wonderful and she is very ably supported by Robert Morley, who give a fine performance as King Louis XVI. John Barrymore and Gladys George are outstanding in a cast that is just about perfect. Will please if you can get them in. Running time, 157 minutes. Played February 3-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—We thought a very fine picture with the performance of Sullavan and Crawford standing out. But what we thought didn't have any effect on the box office, which was terrible. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SPRING MADNESS: Lew Ayres, Burgess Meredith, Maureen O'Sullivan—Passable program picture. Running time, 67 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane, Clinton Rosemond—An answer to a showman's prayer. A natural for a small town if there ever was one. Excellent in all respects. We wish to call attention to "Enoch," played by Rosemond. This small part played by this Negro star caused more comment than all the balance of the efforts of the stars. It clearly illustrates that audiences can pick talent when they see it. This picture is good for any day of the week. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

MURDER BY TELEVISION: Bela Lugosi, June Collyer—I wouldn't recommend it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 11.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Paramount

ARKANSAS TRAVELER, THE: Bob Burns, Jean Parker, Fay Bainter, Irvin S. Coob, John Beal—A perfect part for Bob Burns and he played it perfectly. Good supporting cast. You can't go wrong on this one if you played it on Sunday morning. Played February 3-4.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS ABROAD: Jack Benny, Joan Bennett, Yacht Club Boys, Mary Boland—All I can say is that Benny should stick by his broadcasting. Shakespeare has been gone a long time but his "Much Ado About Nothing" would adequately describe "Artists and Models Abroad." Very, very poor. The exhibitor that described it as a "turkey" was not far wrong. It's a whole flock of them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CAMPUS CONFESSIONS: Hank Luisetti, Eleanore Whitney, Betty Grable—We played this on a Saturday as the feature picture to a very nice business. It's a college picture and while nothing wonderful my audiences enjoyed it. Running time, 66 minutes, Played February 4.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

FRONTIERSMAN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Typical western that got by; not much variety in this series. They seem to run along in the same way. I have to double every one.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

KING OF ALCATRAZ: Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, J. Carroll Naish—Good program action picture. Running time, 71 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Ann Gillis, Robert Kent—Good for Bank Nite or double bill. Running time, 58 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Akim Tamiroff, Franciska Gaal—Seemed to please very well as a whole although it didn't do a great deal of business here. Several scenes are very hilarious and brought down the house; these scenes made the picture but outside of them there wasn't much else to it. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Good musical show which did above average business. Played February 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARIS HONEYMOON: Bing Crosby, Franciska Gaal, Shirley Ross, Edward Everett Horton, Akim Tamiroff—Was well liked by all. Franciska Gaal, this girl is great. Watch out for her. She is going places. Consider her playing was outstanding of the entire cast.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

RIDE A CROOKED MILE: Akim Tamiroff, Frances Farmer, Leif Erikson—A swell action picture but the title doesn't do it a bit of good. No drawing power. Those that came were loud in their praise of Tamiroff and Leif Erikson. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 15-16.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

ST. LOUIS BLUES: Lloyd Nolan, Dorothy Lamour, Tito Guizar, Maxine Sullivan—This wouldn't rate so high from a production standard but it's packed full of human interest stuff that small town folks go for. A good family type picture. Had many favorable comments. Business just average. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 19-21.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE: Donald O'Connor, Robert Kent, June Travis—Nothing to rave about. Just the week end of a double bill. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 15-16.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage,

Republic

BOOTS AND SADDLES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Judith Allen—A good Autry western. You're OK too, Smiley. Autry sings the popular "The One Rose" in this. Running time, 58 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

COME ON RANGERS!: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart—Sings well but not up to Autry. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PRAIRIE MOON: Gene Autry, Shirley Deane, Smiley Burnette—An Autry that was no better or worse than his previous attempts. His pictures are all the same but still he draws them, so why comment. We feel that "Smiley" is 90% of the shows and Autry gets the credit. An excellent combination. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE SADDLE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Not up to Autry's standard but still a good draw. Smiley Burnette pleases our patrons. You never miss on Autrys. Played February 12-13.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

SHINE ON HARVEST MOON: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Lulu Belle—This western lacked a plot but the hillbilly singing by Lulu Belle from the National Barn Dance program on the radio put it over. Played February 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNABEL TAKES A TOUR: Lucille Ball, Jack Oakie, Ruth Donnelly—No one liked this.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

FUGITIVES FOR A NIGHT: Frank Alberston, Eleanor Lynn—Just good for nothing. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 25.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

LAWLESS VALLEY: George O'Brien, Kay Sutton —George O'Brien in plenty of action that gets by nicely. Nothing great but you will know where to use it if you have to.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

"Raw Timber", on which an exhibitor report appeared in the February 18th issue, is a Crescent picture.

LAW WEST OF TOMBSTONE: Harry Carey, Jean Rouverol, Tim Hole, Evelyn Brent—Just another cowboy picture in my estimation, although some members of my audience remarked that they were especially pleased with this one. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MAD MISS MANTON: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Frances Mercer, Whitney Bourne—Pretty good program picture. Barbara Stanwyck just is no drawing card at the box office. I have yet to play a picture of hers that made money. Running time, 80 minutes. —P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Cannot say anything for this one. I doubled it and got by. That's all. Running time. 76 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS IN TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Robert Kellard, Jean Rogers—We note no improvement in this production over that of "Keep Smiling." It certainly must be hard for talented Jane Withers to "Keep Smiling" while 20th Century-Fox Corporation keeps her "Always in Trouble" such as in this picture. Why not give her a break such as we expect Shirley Temple is getting in "The Little Princess." It would seem to us that there are few enough box office stars so that any studio should be glad of two such swell players as Jane and Shirley. Why not let their productions ride side by side in importance. They are each a very separate and distinct sort of entertainer; they are quite dissimiliar in appearance and even age limitations differ. Both are growing up and both need careful attention and proper story selections. It is a fact no star can be better longer than the material given them. Played January 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Jane Withers, Leo Carrillo, Henry Wilcoxon—A natural for small towns and you won't be a bit sorry that you play it on a good date. Lots of action and yelling that generally gets the farm business in. Without a doubt Carrillo is about the whole picture but Jane will bring them in. Weather conditions bad for cash here but there will come a day. Running time, 69 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins—Much better than some that have gone before, and Eddie Collins is a welcome addition to the cast for he carried the comedy and was really funny.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: The Jones Family, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda, Russell Gleason—The best of the Jones Family series. Played on double feature bill with "Blockheads" and packed them to the doors. Would stand up as a single bill if backed by good program of shorts. Played February 8-9.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda—Nice B product. Pleased well. The best one I have seen in this series. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Cesar Romero—A fair picture, but the Quints don't get 'em in any more. Running time, 85 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bill Robinson, Bert Lahr—Was well liked by all. Shirley is always a life saver. Had a big snow storm but what few came liked it.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers, Gloria Stuart, Henry Wilcoxon, Helen Westley—Was well liked by all. Shirley will have to look out for this kid.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

MR. MOTO'S LAST WARNING: Peter Lorre, George Sanders—Seemed to please but didn't do a thing in cash. Not up to "Mysterious Mr. Moto," but that is only my personal opinion. We play these Friday-Saturday and the farm trade appears to like them. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Mary Maguire—This one nosedived so low we are still wondering what happened, and, by the way, if the rest in this series stack up as no better entertainment than this one, why make 'em. Bad box office, poor audience reaction. Played January 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PANAMINTS' BAD MAN: Smith Ballew, Evelyn Daw—Was good for a Saturday night show. Above the average westerns.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

SHARPSHOOTERS: Brian Donlevy, Lynn Bari—Disappointing. A mythical kingdom newsreel story is the idea back of some familiar action scenes. As a series we see no likelihood of popularity to warrant continuance. Played January 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, George Bancroft—Very good picture that doesn't appeal to the majority. Running time, 85 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Adolphe Menjou, Jack Oakie, Jack Haley, Tony Martin, Arleen Whelan Another higher allocation subject which should be in the lower group. Not very well liked here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Preston Foster, Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks—Just ordinary and certainly not entitled to any more than minimum film rental. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH: Gracie Fields, Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy—What a headache. Don't play this on any night. One of the worst.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

United Artists

DEAD END: Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney, Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, "Dead End Kids"—A1 production as you already know. Naturally the "Dead End Kids" steal the show away from Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney and Humphrey Bogart. I don't have to tell you any more about this one as you know all about it. Cash in on the "Dead End Kids" while they are still box office. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey—A beauty to behold but no good at the box office. Running time, 100 minutes. Played January 30-31.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

DRUMS: Raymond Massey, Sabu, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson—A beautiful picture for color and scenery but not much of a drawing card. Lost money on this picture due to cold weather. Pleased about half that saw it. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 10-12.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen, Ritz Brothers, Phil Baker, Andrea Leeds, Zorina—A knockout picture that really was the tops. All in beautiful color with outstanding scenery, etc. Bergen and "McCarthy" their usual good selves and Menjou deserves an orchid thrown in his direction. All in all a darn good show that should please the most. Running time, 109 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Frederic March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—Good comedy that pleased all that saw it. This type picture always pleases. Lost plenty on this due to cold weather. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 18-19.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard—A very good picture but no biz. Running time, 90 minutes.—C. H. Collier, Globe Theatre, Drew, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

ADVENTURE'S END: John Wayne, Diana Gibson A good sea picture that pleased most everyone. Running time, 63 minutes. Played January 28.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DEVIL'S PARTY, THE: Victor McLaglen, Beatrice Roberts—A nice picture for the "B" class. Too bad McLaglen has slipped so since his days of "The Informer." Here's hoping he makes a grand and glorious "comeback" in RKO's "Gunga Din." Good luck to you, Victor. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 7-8.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, George Murphy—A swell picture with a nice cast. Of course, "Charlie McCarthy" and Edgar Bergen steal the show. It should do a nice little business for you, too. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick, William Frawley—An excellent picture enjoyed by all. Here's hoping that Deanna will continue to hold her own and turn out more such masterpieces. I publish my own theatre weekly paper. A copy is yours for a stamp. Running time, 96 minutes. Played January 29-30.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SON OF FRANKENSTEIN: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Basil Rathbone, Josephine Hutchinson—Here's a winner held over in spots and entertains all the way. Running time, 91 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—Fairly good. Invite the State Troopers into this one and you will create some good will for yourself and your house. Some natural tieups on this one too. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland—Dandy little program picture which many patrons said was better entertainment than some of the socalled big specials. The tendency of patrons to like the extra good program pictures better than the spectacles, the reputed million dollar specials, is growing by leaps and bounds. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"COMMENT, MARVELOUS"

The place of institutional advertising in the theatre comes up again for discussion with the reproduction, elsewhere in this section, of four two-column displays executed by Ralph E. Phillips, manager, and Ralph Stitt, publicist, State, Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Adapting a technique found profitable in other industries, the theatremen have created a series of advertisements which stress other merits of the theatre in addition to the qualities of their programs. Writes Phillips:

"Our purpose was to sell the idea that the State presents the dominant entertainment in our town. In making up these ads, we did not attempt to get the so-called high class patronage, but worked more on the angle of the people that buy the majority of tickets. Maybe I am oversold on the idea, but really the comment we have received from this advertising has been marvelous."

Some time back on this page, we remarked that when one theatre had the best show, no amount of advertising, institutional or otherwise, could be expected to sway any amount of business to the opposition. But over a period of time, with everything else equal, there was reason to believe the theatre that consistently advertised its other advantages as well—and backed up this advertising—could be expected to show a better record in the long run.

The South Dakotans will probably bear us out

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE

Offhand, there would appear to be few exploitation possibilities in a theatre cellar, especially in the usual sidewalk opening covered with ordinary iron trap doors. In the agile mind of Manager John LaDue, however, it became the center of his activities for "Devil's Island" at the Warners' Strand in Akron, Ohio, as photo on a following page illustrates. Using the conventional cellar space and with appropriate tiein copy, LaDue duplicated a sequence from the picture, showing prison cell and prisoner, the latter "escaping" every now and then. It was sufficiently impressive to prove a continuous crowd-stopper and, incidentally, to win Fortnighter rating.

The difference between showmanship talent and something less is not too difficult to define. The former includes an instant ability to visualize even a theatre cellar as an immediate source of effective exploitation.

A WORD OF CAUTION

Study of entries for the selection of the second group of Fortnighter appointments, recorded elsewhere in the pages, confirms the early impression that the new rulings of the Quigley Awards seem to have released a flood of unusual top-line material. Those voted Fortnighters have reason to compliment themselves on the score of showmanship.

In taking earned bows, however, the winners are cautioned not to rest upon their laurels. True, the Quarterly Plaques will be voted for best expressions of showmanship executed among the Fortnighters. At the same time, it may be said that those who score oftenest in the Fortnight periods making up each Quarter will occupy preferential position in the judging.

FROM WITHIN—AND OUT

The Round Table spotlight is now turned in the direction of the Schine Brothers if for no other reason than to note the increasing number of top showmen associating themselves with the upstate theatremen. With the recent announcement that Kroger Babb and Frank Boucher have enlisted under that circuit's banner, it becomes more apparent that the Brothers do not hesitate to go outside their ranks for proven exploitation talent.

The policy of promotion from within the personnel is a sound one. For the most part found workable by its many adherents, the benefits of such procedure undoubtedly are realized by the Schines as well.

In taking on this added manpower, however, the Gloversville operators evidently are not allowing themselves to be confined within rigid policy rulings. They realize that lack of adequate manpower continues to remain one of exhibition's obvious weaknesses.

WALT DISNEY'S FERDINAND THE BULL

Bale of hay, old bucket with artificial flowers and a 40 by 60 topped with spread from Life with cutout of the tough bumble bee that stung Ferdinand was used for lobby display on that cartoon by Bill Yearsley, Warner's Circle, Philadelphia. Usher in bull-fighting costume with drawn sword called attention to copy reading "Ferdinand won't eat his hay unless it smells of flowers."

Mammoth 12 foot high display of the pictorial previews on "Jesse James" from Life, Look and the Buffalo Times roto-section were used in the lobby at Shea's Buffalo, Buffalo, N. Y., two weeks in advance of showing, and in front of the house during run of presentation. Setpiece was conceived by Charles Taylor, advertising manager of the Shea Theatres.

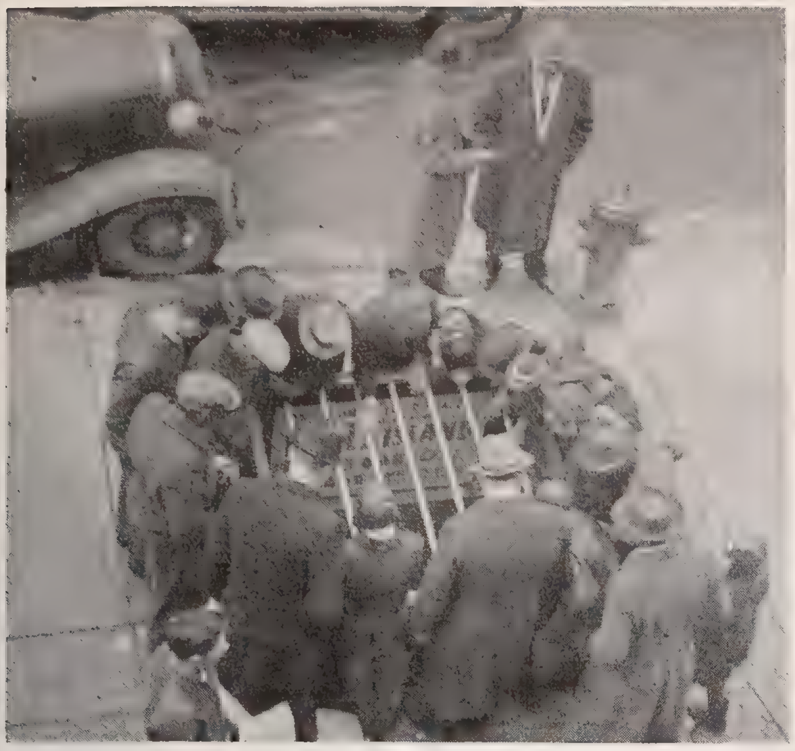
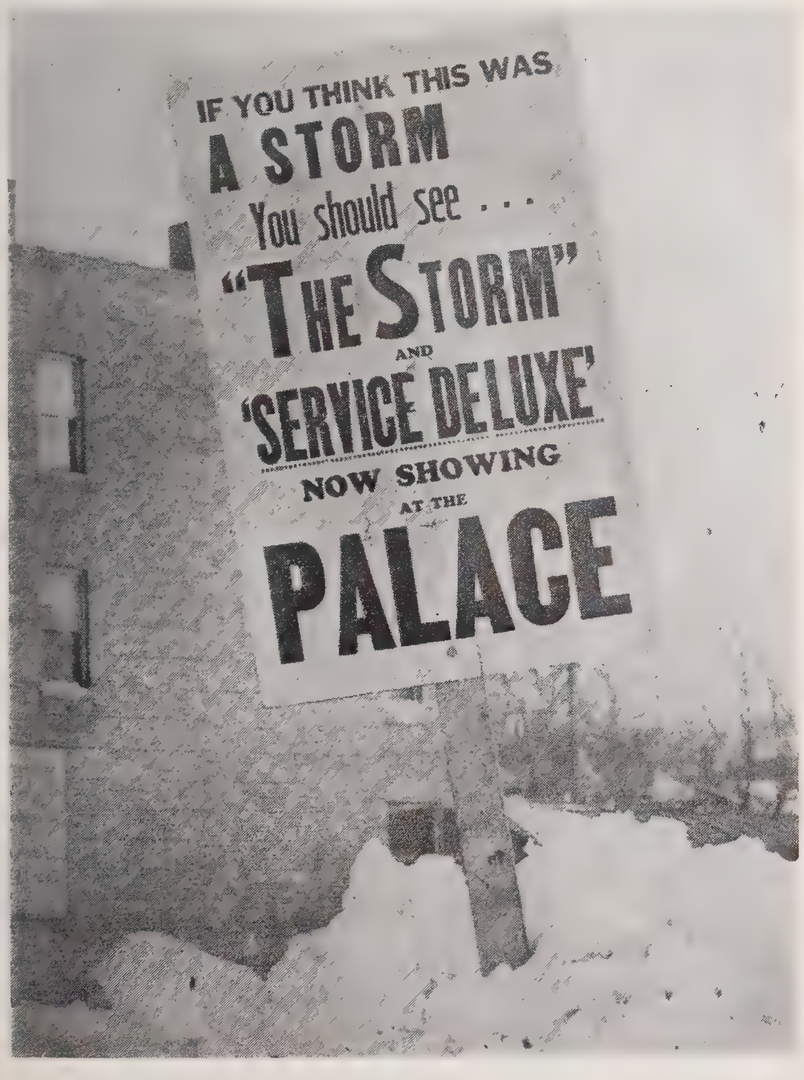
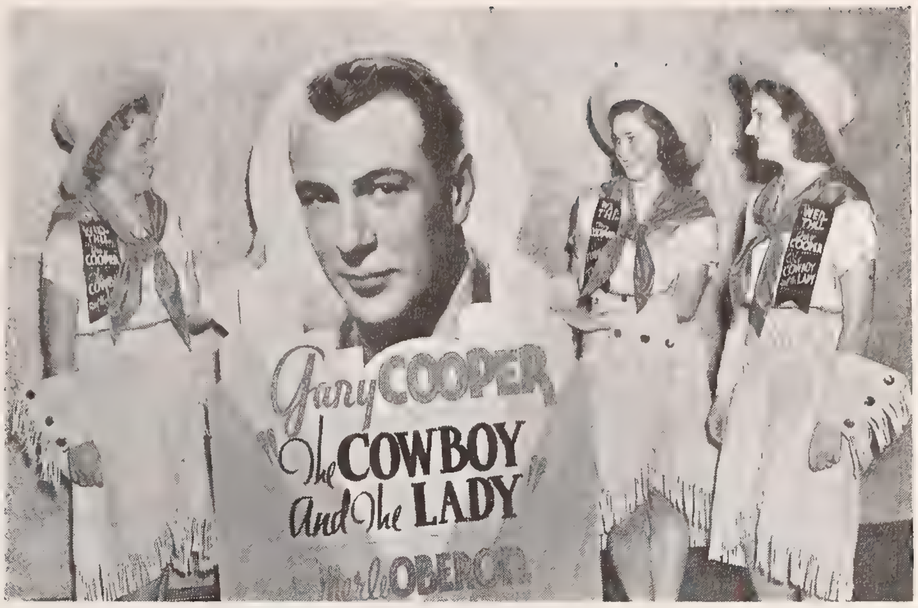
Reported by City Manager Leonard Worley, Publix Great States Theatres, Peoria, Ill., was display on "Gunga Din" at the Madison and constructed by C. J. Rhodes of the art department. Measuring 41 feet long by 10 feet high, the raised title letters were four feet high with 10 inch transparent sidewalls. Colored lamps were concealed in the letters and changed colors every five seconds. At bottom were 40 mirrors, set at an angle to reflect the changing colors, forming a background for the smaller cutout free standing black metallic letters, which spelled out star names.



Mentioned editorially in this section is street stunt put over by John LaDue, Warner's Strand, Akron, Ohio, for "Devil's Island." Utilizing trap doors in front of house, box-like barricade was planted with bars across upper opening, copy on sides "Don't look inside." Looking into the box through the bars one saw a ballyhoo man in dungeon below dressed in denim, chained and locked to the barricade, as suggested by sequence in the picture.

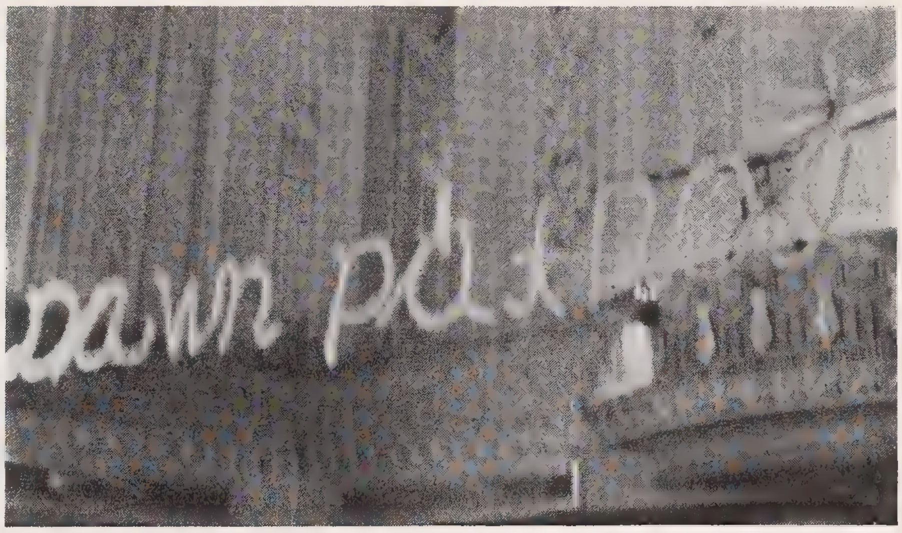
The elements played right into the hands of Bob DeHaven, Palace Theatre, Gary, Indiana, when he was playing "The Storm" recently. Strategically planting snow birds in snow piles at various spots around town, copy read "If you think this was a storm, you should see," etc., etc., followed by playdates.





Usherettes at the Empire Theatre, Daytona Beach, Fla., were dressed in cowgirl attire by Manager James L. Cartwright for the opening of "Cowboy and the Lady." Standing beside giant setpiece of Gary Cooper girls may be seen as they appeared week ahead and during engagement.

Above are members of the Madison Square Boys' Club, who were hosted by Managing Director John Wright, at the Rivoli. Boys had their long awaited opportunity of seeing themselves in "One Third of a Nation" in which they portrayed slum hoodlums.



Ingenious display for "Dawn Patrol" was conceived by E. J. Boonville, Dexter Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Smoke-writing effect was obtained by use of invisible wiring and cotton batting; stretched across lobby, writing appeared to be suspended midair. Small army model airplane trailing off the last letter completed the effect.

Ingenious Cruise Folder Sells Coming Attractions

Unusual piece of promotion literature is reported by Bolivar Hyde, Jr., Capitol, St. Petersburg, Fla., who credits Walter Tremor, local publicist for the Sparks Theatres, with its conception. Printed in the form of a regular cruise folder, front carried cut of steamer with copy selling eight weeks of entertainment.

Inside spread contained eight boxes, first headed U. S. A. plugging "Duke of Wset Point." Next came Algiers, featuring the picture titled the same. These were followed by India, selling "Drums"; Honolulu—"Trade Winds"; Khyber Pass—"Gunga Din"; Dutch East Indies—"The Beachcomber"; France—"The Three Musketeers," ending with England and "Pygmalion." Cast and playdates were included in each followed by copy to the effect that the passenger list included cinema's most famous stars. Reverse side of folder carried space for stamp and mailing address.

For "Dawn Patrol," Hyde advertised and held an early bird matinee starting at 5:45 A. M., to which all were invited, promoting coffee and doughnuts going to patrons.

"Ballerina" Contest

National "Ballerina" contest has been arranged by Arthur Mayer and Joseph Byrstyn, distributors of that film in conjunction with Lentheric and Dance Magazine. A one-month all-expense trip to Paris this summer is being offered by the sponsors as first prize for the best letter on the topic "What I liked best in Ballerina and why."

Philly Has Vitaphone Amateur Talent Quest

Sam Sax, executive chief for Warner Bros. at the Brooklyn Vitaphone Studios, in conjunction with Leonard Schlesinger and Warner Theatres in the Philadelphia zone, is conducting an amateur talent search for a Vitaphone Boy and Girl, to be featured in a short.

Contest is tied in with the Philadelphia Daily News, which will run a daily story for 10 weeks with coupon that the applicant can cut out and mail. Requirements are youth, personality and an ability either to sing or dance. Announcements plugging the competition are being given daily over Station WFIL.

Six of the Warner theatres in Philly will have the eliminations weekly with finalists judged at the finish of the 10-week period at the Earle.

Mr. Sax will officiate as judge, as will Jeff Keen, News columnist, and other local prominents. In addition to the first prizes, $1,600 in cash will be distributed to the runners-up, and a week's engagement on the stage of the Earle Theatre.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Flies Print to Theatre

Garson Jaffa of the Warner Avon Theatre, Watertown, N. Y. staged an air stunt to usher in "The Dawn Patrol". Arrangements were made with a young flying student to fly his plane to New York and return with a print of the feature. Photos were taken at airport on arrival of film and planted in local dailies together with stories and picture plug.

Co-op Ads Feature "Pygmalion" Date

Typically well-rounded campaign from Ray Bell in Washington for "Pygmalion" at Loew's Palace featured various tieins, especially newspaper publicity such as a "Movie Jury." Put on in cooperation with the Daily News, 10 women and 10 men selected from a list of applicants were invited to accompany the theatre's critic to the premiere of the picture and then collectively deliberate in writing a review. Paper ran application blank, listing various occupations of men and women and which each applicant was to check in accordance. With the local Times Herald Ray was able to crash that paper's Inquiring Photographer column, question being whether or not the premise of the story would be possible in modern life.

Auto Dealer Cooperates

The advertising campaign was featured by a series of quarter page displays paid for by the town's largest auto dealer. Theme of copy was "It's hard to get to the top. It's harder to stay there." Illustration in each ad was head of prominent female star accompanied by short biography. Stars used were those in all pictures playing the Loew house. In all there were some 24 plugs on current and coming attractions. For restaurants and night clubs, Bell concocted a "Pygmalion Punch," the tagline being "two drinks and you'll turn into a statue." Cards with contest copy and ballot boxes were planted in prominent night spots, bars, etc., the prizes going to the ones who correctly recognized all ingredients in the punch. Cooperating restaurants took ads to follow up.

Leading chain of popular priced women's shops carried counter cards, space divided to plugging spring styles with copy tied in to the theatre date. Children were interested by a special drawing contest tied in by the same store, wherein blanks were supplied carrying cartoon drawings of George Bernard Shaw with children invited to fill in missing parts of the drawing either in crayon, pencil or ink. Blanks were distributed in all parts of the store with guest tickets for the best drawings.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Niece of "Jesse James" Interviewed Over Radio

Several weeks in advance of "Jesse James" opening at the Aztec, Enid, Oklahoma, City Manager George Limerick discovered that a niece of the outlaw lived a few miles distant. With the aid of a prominent local organization, theatreman was able to have her come to Enid for an interview over KCRC. Interview occupied 15 minutes of theatre's half hour "Inquiring Reporter" program, which is a weekly feature in front of the theatre. Relation presented a new view of her uncle and disclosed incidents about his life which had been previously hidden, and stayed over for the preview opening night as guest of the management.

Large throngs witnessed the interview which was photographed and written up for local dailies. Three column story also appeared in the Sunday edition of the Enid Morning News.

Agency Distributes "Jane Arden" Heralds

In connection with the showings of Warners' "The Adventures of Jane Arden," the Ward Baking Company, sponsors of the "Jane Arden" radio program, are distributing thousands of four-page heralds to their dealers throughout the country as giveaways to patrons.

The folders present scenes from the picture, the comic strip and the radio program with the last page left blank for theatre imprint in local tieups. "The Adventures of Jane Arden" will be nationally released March 18.

SEVEN FORTNIGHTERS IN SECOND LISTING

Appointments Made in Second Preliminary Show Continued Excellence of Exploitation

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Following up on the top record made by Round Tablers wherein eight Fortnighter Appointments were made in the first two-week Preliminary period of the new Quigley Awards, seven additional entrants now enter the charmed circle as Fortnighters as the results of the second Preliminary are announced.

Who they are and what they did are listed on this page and it may be said right now that it was no easier selecting these entrants for honors than it was for the original listing. The new Awards policy certainly has stimulated a lot of fancy promotion, which of course is pleasing, no end.

In keeping with the Awards regulations, all entries have been considered on the basis of individual ideas or promotions and the winning entrants utilized their single ideas for coverage in newspapers, street stunts, contests of various kinds, etc. Feature attractions were not spotted exclusively. For instance, George Bannan did a whale of a job of the MGM short "Crime Does Not Pay" and Jimmie Redmond clicked with a grand effort on the old-fashioned spelling bee. Photo and details of John LaDue's ballyhoo on "Devil's Island" are carried in this issue as are stories of Ray Bell's and George Bannan's entries. Other winners will be represented in forthcoming issues.

If the results of the first two Preliminary periods are any indication, it appears that there is going to be a lot of work for winners to repeat in succeeding Preliminary periods. All those listed in the next column are first-timers this year which means none of the winners in the first Preliminary have repeated—thus far.

Best Records to Count

While on the subject, let us again call attention to the value of gaining more than one Fortnighter Appointment during the First Quarter. Those who have already scored are advised to keep on plugging for additional Appointments since entrants who make the best showings over the Quarter should rate extra consideration in the judging for the Quarterly Plaques. Of course, that does not mean an entrant with only one Fortnighter Appointment will be penalized by the Judges. But it stands to reason that those who roll up the "mosta of the besta" should profit thereby.

With the listings now presented, the first Quarter competitions reach the half-way mark. Those who have already scored will therefore dig themselves in to improve their records before the end of the Quarter. And those who have yet to win their Fortnighter Appointments still have plenty of time to get in under the wire.

Now in work, the detailed schedule of the complete list of Awards will be announced shortly. In addition to the Quarterly Plaques, other designations of merit will be given.

Captured Burglar Aids 'Crime' Short

One of those breaks that happen every now and then to be capitalized upon by theatremen, was the capture of a phantom burglar in Van Wert, Ohio, who for three months before his capture had been headline news. Eventually he was apprehended, reports George Bannan, Schine's city manager, but a number of small burglaries continued, attributed to juveniles evidently impressed by the phantom's example.

In the midst of all the excitement, Bannan had dated a "Crime Does Not Pay" subject, "The Wrong Way Out," which he seized upon for constructive newspaper publicity. This was featured by a half-page editorial flash, illustrated by a photo of the captured phantom, the copy in the form of an open letter to local youth. The erring juveniles were warned against continuing their petty larcenies, the short being used to illustrate why their attempts to outwit the law would end only in disaster. Bannan promoted hundreds of copies of the issue for distribution as "extras" in the city and in adjacent towns where the phantom had operated. Another paper used the idea for an editorial.

Bannan Interviews Burglar

The same theme was carried out in all the theatre advertising, and endorsements were secured from locally important civic organizations. Forty by 60 posters in the lobby carried out the idea further and heralds with the tiein copy of the newspaper campaign were circulated throughout the area. Topper of the campaign was an interview with the captured phantom by Bannan and local editor, the confession which appeared prominently in the papers stressing the "crime don't pay" angle of the short.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Kentucky Derby" Contest Inaugurated by Bishop

Tying in with the publishers of the Winnipeg Evening Digest, the local racing paper, Manager Hal Bishop, at Famous Players Capitol Theatre ran a "Kentucky Derby Quiz Contest" to usher in that picture. Fourteen questions pertaining to the Derby were listed daily in the paper, passes being offered to the winners.

Some of the questions listed were "In what year was the Kentucky Derby first run?" Does the winner's share of the purse ever vary?" Did War Admiral ever win the Derby?" etc. etc. Theatreman reports the contest drew hundreds of replies, publisher informed him it was the best stunt his paper had ever engaged in and agreed to run a personally endorsed review of the picture. Picture was also screened for the operators of two local racetracks, which brought lists of their club members, latter circularized by Bishop.

"I have to budget myself, and I'm 'choosy' about my entertainment. I'll hand it to The State for being the first with the best. See you have "Jesse James' coming — that's swell."

To put it our way, the discriminating young lady means . . . she knows from experience The State shows only the pick of the pictures from the leaders — Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer, 20th Century - Fox, United Artists, and Warner Brothers. Good sound reasoning, that!

McBride Awards "Point" Trophy

Effected by Ed McBride, Loew's State, Providence was tieup with R. I. Auditorium, home of Rhode Islands Reds, the champion professional hockey team, in connection with his engagement of "Duke of West Point". Theatre offered a Louis-Hayward-West Point plaque to the team scoring the greatest number of points in the semi-pro game night ahead of opening. Stories appeared in the sports sections of both daily papers, headline stories in the souvenir program published by the Auditorium and distributed at events taking place four days prior to event. Announcements were also made over loud speaker.

To augment the above, the R. I. Reds were invited to attend the first showing of the picture, after which they were interviewed on the Man-on-the-street program of Station WPRO. Nat Harty, local boy who appeared in the hockey sequences in the picture was visiting current with the picture's opening, so McBride garnered some extra publicity by inviting him to the opening. Opening day of picture being Friday the 13th, McBride arranged a special broadcast from house front, proffering guest tickets to person bringing the largest black cat to the theatre. The inevitable ladder, bag of salt, mirrors to break as well as questions on superstitions completed the "horror" show.

Candid Camera Contest Helps "Dark Rapture"

Tieup with San Francisco's leading candid camera stores was outstanding bit of exploitation staged by Hal Neides, manager of the Orpheum Theatre in building "Dark Rapture." Pictures of natives were displayed in camera shops and music stores, with prizes offered jointly by the stores and theatre for best candid shots taken in front of theatre by amateur lensmen.

Lobby, entrance and boxoffice were given jungle atmosphere by liberal use of bamboo and shrubbery. Belgian Congo phonograph recordings were played into loudspeaker in front of theatre during business hours.

We Live With You and We Like It!

Times was when show business kept pretty much on the move. Dad, remember buying rattlesnake curealls from backs of wagons to see Fatima the "kootch" dancer . . . those travelling tent shows? It was good for them they kept travelling, too. What sweet phonies they were!

It's different now, though. Show business has moved in to stay! We've become "home folks", you and us . . . and that's why we say — "we live with you and we like it".

In every day life you get what you give. You've given us your confidence . . . we've given you (and will continue to) the best entertainment there is . . . because we want to live with you a long, long time. These are the sentiments of the entire State Theatre staff.

FIRST IN SIOUX FALLS

Immediately above and below are reproduced four of the series of two-column institutional advertisements conceived and executed by Ralph E. Phillips, manager, and Ralph Stitt, publicist, of Minnesota Amusement Company's State Theatre, in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The progressive technique of utilizing the opinions and photos of local patrons engaged in various enterprises has here been turned to excellent advantage, especially where comparisons linking the other businesses and the theatre have been incorporated in the copy. In so doing, the theatremen have succeeded in translating the merits of the theatre's programs and services into terms to be easily understood by the average reader.

Howard Bauch
BAUCH'S MARKET
Phillips Ave.

Interested to know how many merchants 'clicked' 100% in 1938, we did a bit of snooping! Listen to a typical answer:

"Well, my business is like any other. They slip in a tough steak now and then — you can't pick 'em right every time. Some of the time you get fooled. I try, though, to get as near 100% right as I can . . . and that's what I like about The State. It seems to have the best of the crop the most number of times."

Right you are, sir! You see, out of a possible 300 films produced annually in Hollywood, The State plays only 104. That means we'll have the CHOICE of the "best of the crop". So, like you, we get fooled very little. Thanks!

WE JUST NATURALLY SAY: THE

STATE

is SIOUX FALLS' Dominant Theatre

"They don't wipe your windshield But . . .

Earl Wilkins
Texaco Service
1020 S. Minn.

They're glad you stopped by . . ." says our lubritorialist friend — and continues: "and that's what I like about The State. Sure it has the best pictures, I know, but my business is SERVICE, and I look for it wherever I go. From the time you buy your ticket — 'til you leave, you know you've been with 'home folks'."

Thank you, sir! We know we have a courteous, well trained corps, but did you know that special and unconspicuous attention is paid children, the aged and hard of hearing? Many do.

Here's Another Reason why the

STATE

is Sioux Falls' Dominant Theatre

Haley Sponsors "Gunga" Dance

R. J. Haley, at the RKO Orpheum, Kansas City, staged a "Gunga Din" night at local ballroom night ahead of opening on that date. Featured was a "Gunga Din" prize dance for which best couple won a gold loving cup. Immediately following the dance, several hundred colored balloons were released, among which were 50 complimentary tickets to see the picture.

Through tieup with agency handling distribution of Saturday Evening Posts, special advertising piece was inserted in the magazines. Sales prize to the carriers was a theatre party. Each of the boys was committed to tell five adults about the opening.

Picture received a full page in the Kansas City Journal five days ahead consisting of a series of stills showing the film in process of being made. Three of the pictures showed inspection at the local exchange, delivery to the theatre and then projectionist inserting the reel in the Orpheum machine. Outdoor campaign consisted of 24 sheets, numerous window cards and distribution of bookmarks.

Merchants Tie in On "Take It with You"

Arranged by manager R. Kennedy, Warners' Hamilton Theatre, Chicago, for "You Can't Take It with You" was clock display in local jeweler's window consisting of numerous different sizes and shapes of clocks with sign reading: "Time to see," etc., etc.

Lobby display included a 40 by 60 on the picture with money bags filled with paper and hung from sides of the frame. Sign in chain druggist's windows carried cast, playdates, etc., tiein copy reading, "We deliver, if you can't take it with you."

Harwell Offers Reward

Folks in Canton, Ohio, awoke one morning to find telegraph poles tacked with Bill Harwell's "reward" posters in connection with the opening of "Son of Frankenstein" at the Ohio Theatre. "Dead or alive" a reward for the monster's capture was offered.

MORE EXPRESSIONS ON AWARDS POLICY

GLENN H. NELSON

Manager, Harris
Findlay, Ohio

I sure like the way the Quigley Awards are set up for the ensuing year and I believe that you should receive some very good results from it. Sometimes it is a concentrated effort on an individual stunt that really puts over a picture instead of an elaborate campaign. This year ought to really bring forth some fine ideas in the way of showmanship.

JOHN F. PIVAL

Publicist, Senate
Detroit, Mich.

Just read about the new award setup and find it perfect. In the past sending in a campaign proved a dull job, since routine work-horse methods had to be included; I mean stuff that runs every week; stuff with no shine or newness to it. You can depend on my sending one or two new angles in whenever I use them now.

RALPH H. AYER

Manager, Ute
Colorado Springs, Colo.

In reply to your letter of the 9th, kindly be advised that I feel that the Quigley Awards have had value in the past. I believe your procedure of judging in the future will give them added value.

HARRY E. CREASEY

Manager, Alma
Vancouver, B. C.

Think your new setup for the Quigley Awards ideal. It gives the fellows in the smaller houses a much better chance.

STUART TOMBER

Manager, Fargo
Sycamore, Ill.

I am wholeheartedly in favor of the 1939 setup. As a manager of a theatre whose job entails the buying and booking of film, accounting and purchasing, etc., as well as the physical and promotional operation, I feel that there is a greater opportunity under the new plan.

ED LAMOUREUX

Manager, Empire
Windsor, Ont., Canada

May I extend to you my sincere congratulations on the new system you have inaugurated in connection with the Quigley Awards. Since it is no longer necessary to send in an extensive advertising campaign, I am sure you will be hearing from us more often.

In closing, I would like to thank you for all the useful ideas you pass on to us weekly in your Managers' Round Table conferences, and I wish your column every future success.

Milt Harris Reports Cleveland "Loew-down"

The old bugaboo of Friday the 13th was swatted one by publicist Milt Harris, Loew's Theatres, Cleveland for "Zaza". Window cards carrying cut of Colbert were displayed by 13 participating merchants who in turn distributed envelopes to customers. Small cards in envelopes informed shoppers that if the number on their card corresponded with the ones listed on the large cards displayed in any of the cooperating merchant's windows, guest tickets would be awarded.

Another envelope gag was the one used for "The Girl Downstairs", by Arnold Gates, Loew's Park, who distributed slips of paper with playdate and picture copy. Lower right hand side was left blank for imprint of lips. To the first 25 women submitting the most perfect imprints in the opinion of the judges, guest tickets were presented.

And now Milt seems to have turned lecturer, having recently been invited to speak before students from Cleveland College on the subject "Amusement publicity and how to get it".

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wright Creates New Effect For "Frankenstein" Front

Reported by Erle Wright, Schine's Glove Theatre, Gloversville, was specially constructed false front for opening of "Frankenstein." Designed by the theatreman were 24 inch ragged edge title letters which were mounted on steel springs and placed atop boxoffice. Springs kept the letters shaking with vibration as the wind struck them and Wright says he created this effect which he believes to be entirely new. Title letters were painted green with edges dry-brushed with black.

Nineteen foot monster cutout figure of "Frankenstein," hand painted and constructed of cardboard and lumber was placed on side of downtown building, 24 inch cutout title letters overhead. "Faint checks" were distributed to women on opening day, entitling them to return and see the performance in event they fainted and for street bally, man dressed as the monster covered entire city.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

New Mt. Union Theatre Gets Hollywood Opening

Regular Hollywood opening with all the frills was given the new Mt. Union Theatre, Alliance, Ohio by Harry Brown, Jr. Local beauties were chosen to act as hostesses in contest held weeks ahead, girls outfitted for the occasion by dress shop and presented with corsages from leading florist. Papers carried stories in advance and winners photos.

Cooperating merchants came through with three pages of congratulatory ads, center spread reproducing picture of the front and inside of the new house together with policy statement. Inaugural souvenir program which included letter from Mayor Senn and management statement was distributed, congratulatory messages tacked to display board in lobby and the Alliance Review came through with an editorial on the opening.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM HERE AND THERE

To those in Watertown, New York who were lucky enough to be able to read Esperanto, Garson Jaffa at Schine's Avon awarded cash prize and guest tickets to "Idiot's Delight." In addition to special teaser campaign in newspapers, Jaffa had jumbo window cards printed in Esperanto and planted in windows about town carrying message plugging the picture. Theatreman reports that while he received many solutions, no one apparently could read it correctly, so he is repeating the stunt on another picture.

Joe Samartno; Loew's Poli, Meriden, Conn., for "Jesse James" secured permission from the powers that be to stretch an imprinted net banner across the main street, heralding the opening. Local barber was discovered who had been a close friend of Frank James, story was planted covering the entire interview with the man, which brought additional publicity to the date.

During the engagement of "Topper Takes a Trip," Frank Murphy, Loew's State, Syracuse tied up with Philco and their local distributor on the mystery control radio used in the picture. Quarter page co-op was promoted in addition to seven radios for giveaway. Stunt was plugged in lobby and 15,000 flyers distributed by agency.

Wayne Williams, Warner's Majestic, Mansfield, Ohio opened his first jam fest recently. Tap dancers, accordion players, singers, etc. were included. Each Saturday night $10 in cash prizes are awarded to the best acts, so judged by audience applause, with the theatreman himself acting as master of ceremonies.

School supply tieup was effected by Paul Binstock, Marboro, Brooklyn, with local stationer. Gifts were available to each child attending special matinee in addition to six major prizes, presented to holders of lucky numbers. Promoted copies of Boys' Life were also distributed to the kids. Giveaways were advertised by cooperating merchant, lobby setpiece and house program.

For "Valentine's Day" local confectioner aided, offering 25 pound boxes of candy which were given to holders of lucky numbers at theatre. Display was planted in lobby and store.

Calling cards were distributed by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein, Warner's Hippodrome, Cleveland, for "Son of Frankenstein." Copy on card read "For the meaning of a new thrill, call Dr. F.—Office hours, 9 to 9.15." This was followed by theatre telephone number.

"Quiz Contest" is also being put on Friday nights through tieup with Station WHK, approximately $250 in cash going to winners in addition to guest tickets. Station runs three announcements daily in which plug is given picture opening following week. Only obligation to the theatre is the passes.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

manages the Broadway Theatre in Baltimore, Maryland, which belongs to the Rome Circuit. He began his career in 1927, acting as doorman at the Idle Hour Theatre, in Baltimore. Moving to Philadelphia, he became an usher at the Fox and a while later did doorman duty at the Warner Circle. His next job at that spot was chief of service. In 1931 he became manager of the Mayfair in the same city, then transferred to the Avenue, also as manager. Returning to the Idle Hour house he secured the skipper's job there. The Hippodrome and Preston Theatres also had of his services before he landed the house where he is now employed.

FRANK T. LE PAGE
manages the Millinocket Theatre, Millinocket, Maine. He started as an assistant manager in 1937 and although his experience in showbusiness is not of long duration, has already shown evidences of being a fine showmen by the contributions forwarded with his application of membership to Managers' Round Table. Let's hear from you often, Frank.

DON T. PALMER
began working in the theatre when he was sixteen, securing a job at the Columbia Theatre in Erie, Pa., under J. V. Minton. After four years Minton took over the Palace and Don went with him, acting as doorman. The next change brought him to Shea's Theatre, where he was employed as an assistant manager, still under Minton's management. In 1937 he was transferred to the State, in Conneaut, Ohio in a managerial capacity, and that's where we find him now.

ROLAND TREUL
is the assistant manager at the Princess Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In 1924 he started out in the theatre world as an organist but aspired to managerial heights. His chance came and he became the manager of the Plaza house, where he remained for a couple of years. Joining the Warner-Saxe Theatres, he received the post of assistant at the Savoy and was transferred to the Jeffris in Janesville, in the same capacity. Another promotion came his way when he obtained the assistant manager's job at his present, abovenamed house. Roland likes work in the theatres and hopes for a manager's promotion in the near future. We hope he gets it.

WALTER SELIGMAN
acts as an assistant manager at Loew's Criterion Theatre in New York City. He came on to this sector from Austin, Texas, where, at the Queen Theatre he served in a similar capacity for a year. Previous to his present position he also was an assistant manager at the Rialto Theatre, just across the street from the Criterion, holding the post there for five years. We look forward to a personal visit from you, Walter, and you don't have much of a walk.

HERBERT CHARLES LEWIS
started in showbusiness in Olney, Texas, back in 1936, as operator. He worked in that location for a year for the R. E. Griffith Theatres. So that he could continue his studies he was transferred to Lubbock and attended Texas Tech. College, at the same time acting as doorman at one of the houses in that city. Herb then took over the bill posting for three theatres there. His next promotion was a house manager's job at the Lindsey Theater and was later transferred to Borger, Texas for several weeks, on relief work. Not long ago he returned to Lubbock as advertising manager and is doing a swell job at the Palace, Lindsey and Texan houses.

GUS H. COATS
manages the Tiger Theatre in Auburn, Alabama, one of the houses of the Wilby-Kincey circuit. An usher's job back in 1921, in Chicago, was his point of beginning, and two years later he became chief usher. He advanced quickly, becoming an assistant manager at the Harding in 1925 and the following year travelled for Publix Theatres, installing service. Following managerial posts included the Saenger, Rialto, Calvin in Northampton, Mass., Broadway in Springfield, Mass. He operated the Gentilly and Casino in New Orleans and the Empire in Montgomery, Alabama.

J. FRANK GEPHART who is the skipper of the Logan Theatre in Altoona, Penna., one of the Silverman Bros. houses, is a newcomer in showbusiness, beginning his career about a year ago. He was first employed as a doorman at the Stand in Altoona but a quick rise brought him to manage his present house. We expect big things from Frank, since his beginnings shows so much promise.

V. H. EVERROAD
began as an usher at the Oriental Theatre in Chicago, Illinois, then moved to the Irvin in Bloomington, where he acted as doorman and chief of service. His next spot was Alton where he was promoted to manage the Princess Theatre. Another managerial post followed at the Empress in Decatur and his next transfer was to his present Palace Theatre in Danville.

HARRY ABBOTT
started at the bottom of the ladder by securing a job as usher and bill poster at the Lyric Theatre in Lebanon, Missouri, in 1928. He went to the Ambassador, then Fox houses in St. Louis, as usher, working up to head usher. For a while he tried his hand at barnstorm flying, but returned to doorman duty at the Fox Midwest Gillioz in Springfield, Mo., advancing to house manager. Left to work as radio announcer for over a year and then broke into film advertising, selling for Alexander Film Co. in Ohio and Michigan. Hico Circuit took over the Circle Theatre in Circleville, Ohio, at about this time and so Harry, able to obtain a managerial post there, gave up advertising and accepted the job.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

Following the title is information regarding the classification of the subject matter of the feature. A comedy is denoted by the abbreviation Com.; Melodrama by Mel.; Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel.; Musical by Mus.; Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com.; Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parentheses after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

BOOKS

MOTION PICTURE SOUND ENGINEERING—547 pages; illustrated, covers every practical method and process in present-day sound engineering. Leading engineers explain every detail of apparatus and its arrangement, with diagrams, tables, charts and graphs. This manual comes straight from the workshops of the studios in Hollywood. It is indispensable to everyone working with sound equipment. $6.50 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

THE 1938-39 EDITION OF THE INDUSTRY'S International reference book, "Motion Picture Almanac," edited by Terry Ramsaye, is now available. It has the most facts about the motion picture business ever published. It is indispensable to every executive in the industry. This issue contains more than 12,000 biographies of important film people. Send your order today with a check for $3.25 and your copy will be promptly mailed, postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION—Revised Sixth edition. The revised edition includes 722 pages of up-to-the-minute text charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring, and functioning of all modern sound and projection apparatus. It is a practical "trouble shooter," cross indexed for immediate reference in any projection room emergency. ORDER TODAY! $6.25 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

NEW 567 PAGE BOOK ON AIR CONDITIONING by Charles A. Fuller, authority on the subject, reviewed in Buyer's Number, available for theatre owners contemplating engineering changes. Book is cloth bound with index and charts and covers every branch of the industry as well as codes and ordinances regulating installation. Order now at $4.00 a copy postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

FAME, AN AUDIT OF PERSONALITIES EDITED by Terry Ramsaye. The class annual of the screen, radio and stage. Recognized by executives and talent agents as the guide to box office champions. Send your order today with check or money order for $1.00. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

AMERICAN Bodiform RESTFUL CHAIRS

NEW and old theatres alike can reap big benefits at the box-office by installing the revolutionary new American Bodiform Chair. For proof—read the statements below . . . from letters just received from theatre men.

The reason is apparent. The American Bodiform Chair is genuinely comfortable, spacious and beautiful. These attributes create an audience appeal that builds attendance steadily, week after week, month after month. You know that patrons will return to the picture house that offers not only good entertainment but true comfort, too.

So, install the American Bodiform. Increased attendance will make you mighty glad you did.

What They Are Saying About American Bodiform Chairs:

"We have had considerable favorable comment from our patrons and have noted substantial increase in attendance."
—Peter Mallers, Mallers Bros., Ft. Wayne, Ind

"Never before have I heard such comment on a theatre chair; comment as to its appearance, comfort and convenience. Any person interested in the purchase of a new chair should certainly investigate your product before making any purchase."
—H. C. Federer, Liberty Theatre, Lincoln, Nebr.

"Each day we receive more compliments from the public in our choice of seating."
—H. V. Lippert, Dyersville, Ia.

"The New American Bodiform Chairs not only fulfill every claim made for them, but have aroused universal approval for their comfort, beauty and perfect conformity to the spirit of the design."
—Maurice E. Thornton, Architect, Park Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

A LOW-COST SCHEME WITH DOWNLIGHTS

■ Costing $40,000, or about $57 per seat (exclusive of equipment), the Schine circuit's new 700-seat Wayne theatre in Wooster, Ohio, is of colorful treatment in modern lines with a combination of built-in fixtures and downlighting in the auditorium. The budget for this house in a small city called for low-cost construction and decoration. For auditorium lighting, 3-foot recessed panels, finished in plaster painted white, are spaced along the side walls, each containing a strip-light reflector with nine lamps—one 100-watt lamp for use in emergency lighting, and eight 50-watt colored lamps, alternately blue, red and amber. These circuits are controlled through dimmers from the projection room. The lamps are concealed behind the upper arc of circular plaster plaques forming ornamental pieces along horizontal wall bands. The walls above a cinder block wainscot are finished in alternate bands of rayon-cotton fabric and brocade; these are in three shades of orange. The bands are divided by blue-painted wood strips edged with chromium mouldings. The ceiling, which is finished in buff-tinted acoustic plaster, has side and central painted orange bands. Widely spaced along these are the downlights, consisting in 100-watt lamps in aluminum metal reflectors recessed flush. . . . The front of the Wayne theatre is faced in buff brick with buff stone and ceramic block trim, the latter being used for the base of the island ticket booth. Recessed display cases are lighted by built-in lumiline lamps. The marquee, built to specification by the Artkraft Sign Company, Lima, Ohio, carries attraction boards with only 2 inches between the opal glass behind the silhouette letters, and the outside framing. Attraction board lighting is by lumiline lamps; marquee trim lighting is in neon. Peter M. Hulsken, theatre architect of Lima, Ohio, was the architect.

Direct Regulation Of Air-Conditioning

WHILE ALL building code and safety regulations affect air-conditioning and ventilation installations one way or another, more direct regulation of air supply and conditioning provisions is likely. An indication of what may be expected along this line is contained in a bill recently introduced in the New York State legislature by Assemblyman McCaffrey of New York City. This measure would require a license for each installation.

It is also proposed that all persons who "render services in the maintenance or repair of any air-conditioning" system would require certificates of competence issued by state authorities, which would be a state board. Inspectors representing this board would be authorized to check on all air-conditioning systems to see that they met certain minimum standards. They would act through local city boards.

A Barn Theatre for "Subsistence" Farmers

MOTION PICTURE theatres have been housed in odd enough buildings, and of course the stage theatre has summer performances in many a barn, but it probably has remained for James Edwards, Los Angeles circuit operator, to have a barn especially designed for the exhibition of motion pictures. And not merely a barn, but a complete farm setting for this theatre, which is to be located in a community of little country homes which has grown up near Los Angeles. The theatre, an exterior sketch of which is reproduced in adjoining columns, has been designed by S. Charles Lee, prominent Los Angeles theatre architect. It will be called Tumbleweed.

The community is one of those settlements which have grown up as a result of the Federal Housing Administration's "own your own home" campaign. With the government aiding in the financing of construction, the plan provides an escape from the congested areas of cities, where living costs are usually relatively high, and suggests a little cottage out in the country with a vegetable garden and a few chickens. According to Mr. Lee, in the Los Angeles area this idea has appealed especially to families whose breadwinners have been working only two or three days a week, and consequently have time to work their little "estate."

Farm-Theatre for Farm-Minded Folk

One of the more populous communities of this type has grown up near El Monte, a suburb of Los Angeles. The community itself, called Five Points, is where the government built some of its first "subsistence homestead" properties. Few of the people have had much previous experience with a hoe, but they are farm-minded at least to the extent of liking to get good "vittles" cheap. Increase in their number, according to Mr. Lee, has caused Los Angeles exhibitors to cast a contemplative eye toward Five Points for quite some time before the Edwards circuit launched its project.

Being farmers at heart, if not in talent, the Five Pointers, said Mr. Edwards, would like their theatre to look like a barn, with all the farmyard fixings. Taking him at his word, Mr. Lee replied that he would design them "the cutest barn they ever saw." A picture of the result accompanies these paragraphs.

An interesting modification of conventional construction is used to effect the basis of the design. The ceiling of the auditorium is built on the lower instead of the upper chord of the roof truss. This provides for low walls inside but still gives clearance for projection of the picture between the interior trusses.

There will be a windmill in the front "yard," outlined in neon; the marquee is designed as part of the windmill. The yard, measuring 40x60 feet, will have a fence built of wagon wheels and other things one sees around a farmyard, and a duck pond, not without ducks, and even ye oulde oaken bucket.

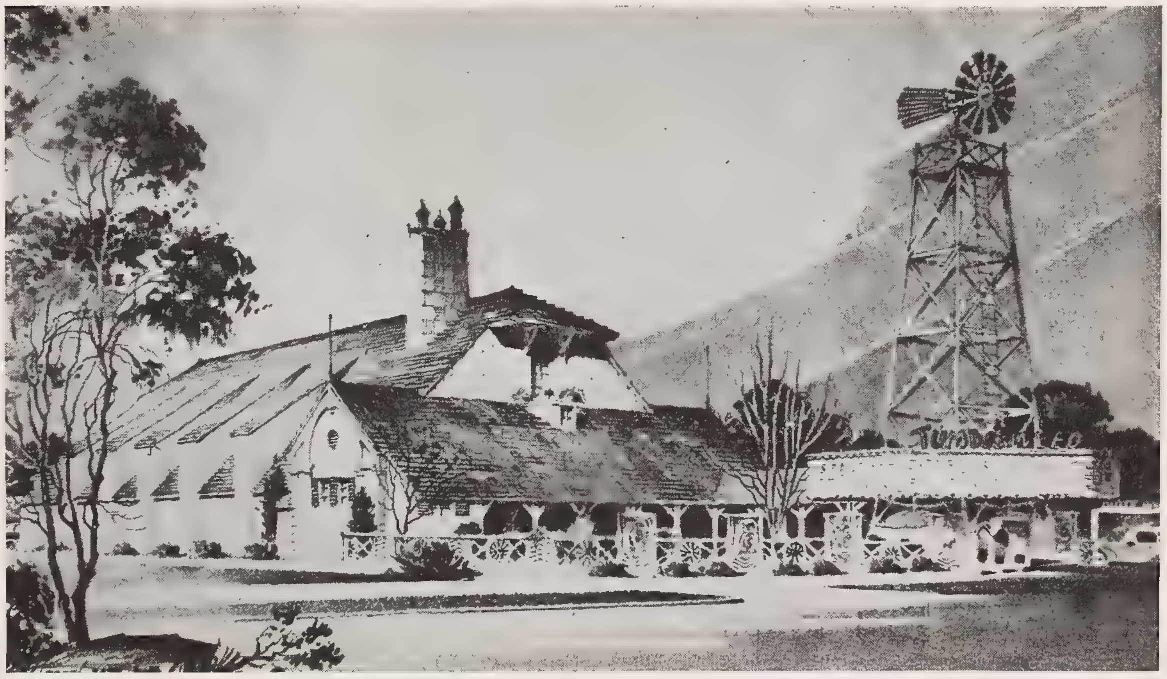
The lobby is designed as an old-fashioned farmhouse living room, with oil-type lamps for electric light fixtures, plush furniture and a gilt-framed chromo of grandpa. Foyer walls will be finished partly in wood, partly in paper.

Construction, according to Mr. Lee, will cost $30,000.

New Theatre Projects Top Those of Last Year

A TOTAL OF 47 theatre projects, including new construction and substantial remodeling, were reported for January by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York, whose reports cover 37 eastern states. This figure represents four more projects than were reported for the same area and the corresponding month of last year. The January 1939 projects called for an aggregate expenditure of more than $811,000.

Figures just released in Canada on 1938 theatre construction show that there were 102 new theatres opened in the Dominion. The Province of Alberta led with 30 theatres.



Rendering of S. Charles Lee's design for James Edwards' unique Tumbleweed theatre near Los Angeles.

New Things in Air-Conditioning

PREPARING FOR SUMMER AIR-CONDITIONING

SPRING overhaul of the air cooling equipment, which should be prepared for now, involves roughly four operations. Details of these will differ according to individual requirements of the installation. In general, however, all types of apparatus require cleaning, minor adjustments, minor improvements, and summer scheduling. Of these items, cleaning unquestionably is the most important.

Cooling equipments differ, of course, as to the points at which the most careful cleaning is essential, but in almost all systems three factors stand out as exceptionally important. These are lubrication, cleanliness at points of heat transfer, and cleanliness at all locations difficult to reach during the operating season.

With reference to lubrication, the best procedure usually is to flush away all old lubricants with kerosene, clean all oil filters, and thoroughly relubricate. Wherever possible, the kerosene used for clearing away old, gummed oil should itself be wiped away, and not left to dilute the new oil or grease.

Dirt at Points of Heat Transfer

The parts of the system where heat transfer actually takes place are the cooling coils and the condensers. Accumulated dirt acts as heat insulation, impairing the efficiency of the transfer and adding to the power cost necessary to secure a given amount of cooling. Over a summer, the difference in power bills may run up to a substantial sum. The dirt may come from the air itself, from the water of the system, or (in the form of scale) from the metal parts which are exposed to the action of the water.

Scale is removed with the help of a wire brush, and where it has developed on surfaces that are not involved in the transfer of heat, those surfaces may be painted with a protective compound, possibly one that has a rubber base. Surfaces through which heat is transferred of course cannot be painted without loss of operating efficiency; the only treatment for them is thorough scraping and cleaning.

Locations difficult to reach during the operating season include, in some systems, the condensers themselves, and such locations obviously need very exceptional attention before the equipment is put into use for the summer.

Common items of minor adjustment include the operation of mechanically moving parts, sealing of minor leaks, and the condition of the system water.

Tightening of Moving Parts

Among the moving parts that need looking over is the compressor, particularly with reference to the packing, stuffing or seals, which must be made absolutely tight; all valves, and all automatic controls. These last should wherever possible be tested for accuracy of operation. Improper functioning may not only result in poor performance, but may involve waste of operating power.

Condenser and cooling coils must be both gas tight and water tight. Very minor leaks, that may have done no great harm during the previous season, can develop into major troubles during the course of another summer's operation. Spring is the obvious time to check for incipient difficulties that may not be easy to locate once the equipment is operating.

The condition of the water may have changed since the Fall shut-down. It should be checked for acidity (litmus paper is cheap!) and corrective chemicals added if necessary to prevent undue corrosion.

Spring also is the obvious time for adding minor improvements, accessories or modernized components which, possibly, have already been determined on as desirable sometime in the future.

Lastly, Spring is the natural time for systematizing the summer's operation, and for planning and preparing those diary and record forms which are indispensable for any study of the equipment's efficiency and of means for improving it.

• And not only lower costs, but greater efficiency are among the advantages sought in recent developments in air-conditioning methods and equipment. This article discusses them from the specific point of view of the practical theatre operator.

By CARL F. BOESTER

GETTING READY for what all signs indicate will be a great year for the extension of air-conditioning in the United States, the air-conditioning industry has been going through one of its most strenuous and fruitful periods of activity in development work. The cost factor has been dealt with in equipment design with a great deal of success, extending the applications of genuine air-conditioning substantially. Greater efficiency in equipment and system design has also been attained, while space and structural problems have been greatly reduced by thorough and ingenious engineering.

While a considerable portion of all this advancement is of special significance to fields other than the theatre business, the theatre yet enjoys an important share of the new developments. What would seem to be the more significant of these have been selected for discussion here. Those that bear directly upon the theatre are indeed quite a few. We begin with—

¶ Storage Refrigeration

THE ACCUMULATION of refrigeration over a 24-hour period with a small compressor can contribute materially to over-all lower first costs in theatre air-conditioning. The storage equipment itself has been considerably improved and methods of manufacture and application have made it possible to lower the cost for this equipment.

It can certainly be reasoned that for the typical theatre application it is far more desirable from an operating viewpoint to have a small compressor operate 20 or 24 hours per day to accumulate and store up refrigeration to be used during the theatre operating period, than to have a larger compressor with sufficient capacity to produce the equivalent amount of refrigeration in the operating period of the theatre.

Of particular importance to the theatre

That Are Bringing Lower Costs

owner is the problem of maintenance. It is much easier to obtain service and parts on small compressors, which as a rule are carried in stock by the manufacturer of such equipment, whereas larger equipment is custom built, and if any parts do break, it is some time before the repair can be made.

Storage refrigeration offers an additional advantage in that, if the refrigeration equipment should fail, there is still the possibility of providing refrigeration for comfort cooling purposes by getting ice from the local ice company and using this ice in the ice storage tank.

¶ Refrigerating Units

OF REAL interest to the theatre owner is the development and improvement of 15- and 20-ton self-contained cooling units. These are particularly applicable to the small theatre of two to four hundred seating capacity; such units are quite reasonable in first cost, and if space is available, they permit a most practical application of theatre cooling.

One of the greatest costs in theatre air conditioning has been the labor item—that is, the cost of assembling the various parts of equipment to produce the required cooling. This can be done much more economically in a factory than it can be done on the job. Factory assembling of equipment reduces the labor item as much as 75% and, incidentally, insures that the equipment is properly assembled.

Most all self-contained units require the use of city water, and their operation is not economical unless the city water is cheap, or the theatre owner can provide a small well as a source of condenser water. Another alternative, of course, is the use of a small cooling tower, but this contributes to higher first cost.

IN MANY communities where the wet bulb temperature is quite low, at least most of the time, there are very successful cooling tower installations in which the water from the cooling tower is circulated through a bank of cooling coils, thereby cooling and dehumidifying the air. This is done at a considerable less power cost than that required when refrigerating equipment is used, and serious thought should be given by theatre operators to this type of equipment when considering any improvement in the cooling of of their theatres.

This application has been made possible by a new type of cooling tower, which produces cooling water somewhat below prevailing wet bulb temperature and through the use of a new type of coil which is high in efficiency and low in cost. It might be mentioned, however, that this type of coil will not stand very high pressure, and the piping arrangement to the coils has to be such that there is not much water pressure through the coils—that is, not to exceed approximately 20 pounds pressure.

¶ Compressors

REFRIGERATION compressors have been very much improved, their efficiency stepped up so that more work can be done with less power; and there has been marked decrease in the cost of this type of equipment. Many manufacturers recommend the installation of a battery of small compressors which are put in operation automatically by new types of controls, which start the number of compressors according to the current load. This method of control provides a great deal of flexibility and at the same time reduces operating costs to a minimum.

There have been several motors developed which are variable in speed, and they make it possible to vary the refrigeration output of the compressor by varying the motor speed. This also contributes to low operating costs by balancing the work done with the load in the theatre.

¶ Evaporative Condensers

MANY IMPROVEMENTS and refinements have been made in the design of evaporative condensers. These devices are a combination cooling tower and condenser in one device and make it possible to reduce the water requirements for condensing purposes by as much as 95%.

Principal improvements have been along the lines of increased condensing efficiency, which means lower condensing temperatures, which in turn make it possible for the compressor to which the condenser is connected, to produce a ton of refrigeration at a much lower power cost.

Evaporative condenser design has been materially simplified, which has contributed to a much lower first cost for this equipment, and many theatre men who are now operating equipment without such a device should give it serious consideration.

¶ Evaporative Cooling

MANY REFINEMENTS have been made in the art of evaporative or washed air cooling, a principal improvement being the use of pads of wood excelsior, or similar material. These pads are kept saturated with small spray nozzles connected to city water lines and the amount of moisture can be varied by controlling the water spray to these nozzles. The saturating efficiency of the spray pads is equal to, and in some cases better than, the conventional spray type of evaporative equipment. The new apparatus is much simpler in construction—more compact in size—and, therefore, considerably lower in first cost.

Since pumps are not needed on this type of evaporative cooling equipment, there is a considerable saving in power cost, which contributes to the lower operating costs of such cooling systems. By being able to control the water volume supplied to these mats or pads, it is possible to control the cooling effect and vary it according to outside weather conditions and thereby provide better patron comfort for this type of cooling. Since air volume is very much a part of washed air cooling, it is quite essential that the amount of air and the velocity of such air be controlled so that the customer gets the benefit of air movement in the theatre.

¶ Control Equipment

MANY THEATRES can simplify their control problem by a new type of thermostat, which in reality is a combination of thermostat and humidistat. The control point of the thermostat is reset by the humidistat device, which is geared into the control mechanism of the thermostat. For example, if the dry bulb temperature of the theatre is satisfied, yet the relative humidity in the conditioned space is still high, the humidistat automatically raises the dry bulb setting so that the cooling equipment continues to run until the humidity is satisfied. This device is particularly applicable to those installations using cold water as the refrigerant, in which it starts and stops a chill water pump. The device is calibrated in effective temperatures, not an indication of actual temperatures, but an arbitrary indication of degree of comfort felt as a result of the combination of temperature and humidity.

There is a new device on the market known as a Therhumiter, which is a combination dry bulb and wet bulb thermometer calibrated in effective temperatures and indicates the exact degree of personal comfort as a result of temperature and humidity conditions. Every theatre should be equipped with one of these devices. [This instrument is further dealt with in another article on page 23.—ED.]

¶ Arch Construction

AN EXTREMELY interesting development that would seem to have possibilities of unpredictable effect has come into air-conditioning from the field of building construction. In the past all Forms as a

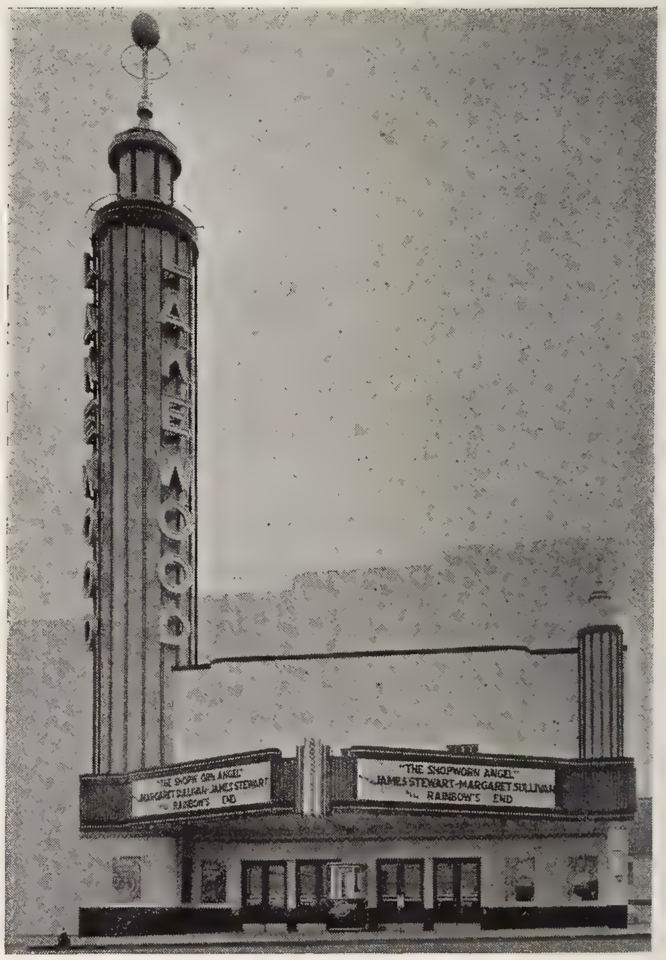
LOBBY: The Lakewood theatre building is of steel frame construction with masonry walls and an L-shaped plan—traffic to the auditorium is in line with the entrance to standee and promenade area (essentially foyer) at rear of main floor seating, the auditorium extending to the left. Entrance from the vestibule is directly into a spacious lobby carpeted and otherwise treated in the manner of a foyer. To the right of the entrance are stairs to a mezzanine level overlooking the lobby and from which stairs lead to the balcony (at about its center). The wall with doors leading into the auditorium marks one end of the mezzanine, which is above the standee or promenade area. Lobby walls to the height of this inner wall are finished in blonde Flexwood veneer; elsewhere the walls bear across their upper portion a continuous mural, which extends into the mezzanine level, there reaching from floor to ceiling. The lobby murals are on plaster, those in the mezzanine on canvas. Lobby and mezzanine ceilings are continuous, with treatment basically the same, having coffered sections whose coved sides form wide reflecting surfaces lighted by concealed fluorescent lamps. The section forming the lobby ceiling, however, is lighted with daylight type lamps and is faced with a bronze-groined flesh-tinted mirror. In the mezzanine the facing is entirely in plaster, while the lighting is pink and blue. The stairway is lighted by a line of lumiline lamps in bronze reflectors following the gradient of the stairs about 2 feet above them. Staircase balustrade and mezzanine rail are of brass with aluminum handrail. Baseboards throughout the lobby, mezzanine, lounge and foyer areas are 3½-inch strips of aluminum moulded on the job to fit the wall line. Doors to the auditorium are of dark wood. Carpeting of the lobby is the same as that throughout the theatre, including lounges; it is Velvet with red ground and figures in gold and tan shades.

The keynote of the architectural method employed throughout the Interstate circuit's striking new Lakewood theatre in an outlying residential section of Dallas, Tex., is sounded in the treatment of the front. The method is one of balancing broad essentially plain masses and flowing lines etched out, as well as ornamented, by artificial light. The daytime view below of the front shows the design in general (a night view, emphasizing the lighting, was part of a special feature on fronts in the February issue of Better Theatres). Architecturally, the facade consists in three stepped-back sections—the marquee forming one—held together by a 100-foot tower rising from amidst them. With the effect sought entirely in architectural massing and in light, the building sections, which are floodlighted by concealed mercury vapor lamps, are economically faced in white stucco. Elsewhere finish is in Texlite porcelain enamel, including a rust-colored coping on the forward section and the fluted tower with its beacon turret and luminous sphere. This lofty globe, 36 inches in diameter, is studded with 504 incandescent lamps flashed in a twinkle effect. The beacon below has eight windows of flashed opal glass illuminated from inside the turret with four 400-watt mercury vapor lamps, which produce a soft bluish glow. Along the blue porcelain tower shaft, where flutings join are light-reflecting ribs, behind which are green fluorescent tubes, and in front of which is red tubing. The two vertical signs mounted on the shaft consist in 46-inch skeleton type channel-faced letters studded with 10-watt incandescent lamps flashed to twinkle. A small facsimile of the large tower, having as a "beacon" a single 400-watt mercury vapor lamp, is introduced for purposes of design balance at the extreme right of the marquee. The marquee, triangular, 75 feet wide and with fascias 6 feet high, is of Texlite construction with rust and orange porcelain finish. Set-back borders are lighted with exposed gold and green luminous tubing. Adler attraction boards accommodate three lines of 10-inch silhouette letters. The marquee soffit, finished in bone white porcelain, is lighted by alternating rows of closely spaced 25-watt lamps—and of widely spaced 150-watt silver-bowl lamps set in recessed reflectors. This soffit is the ceiling of the vestibule, which has walls of ivory and rust, insulated porcelain with a burnt-orange border design, built-in displays.



Background for Living Light

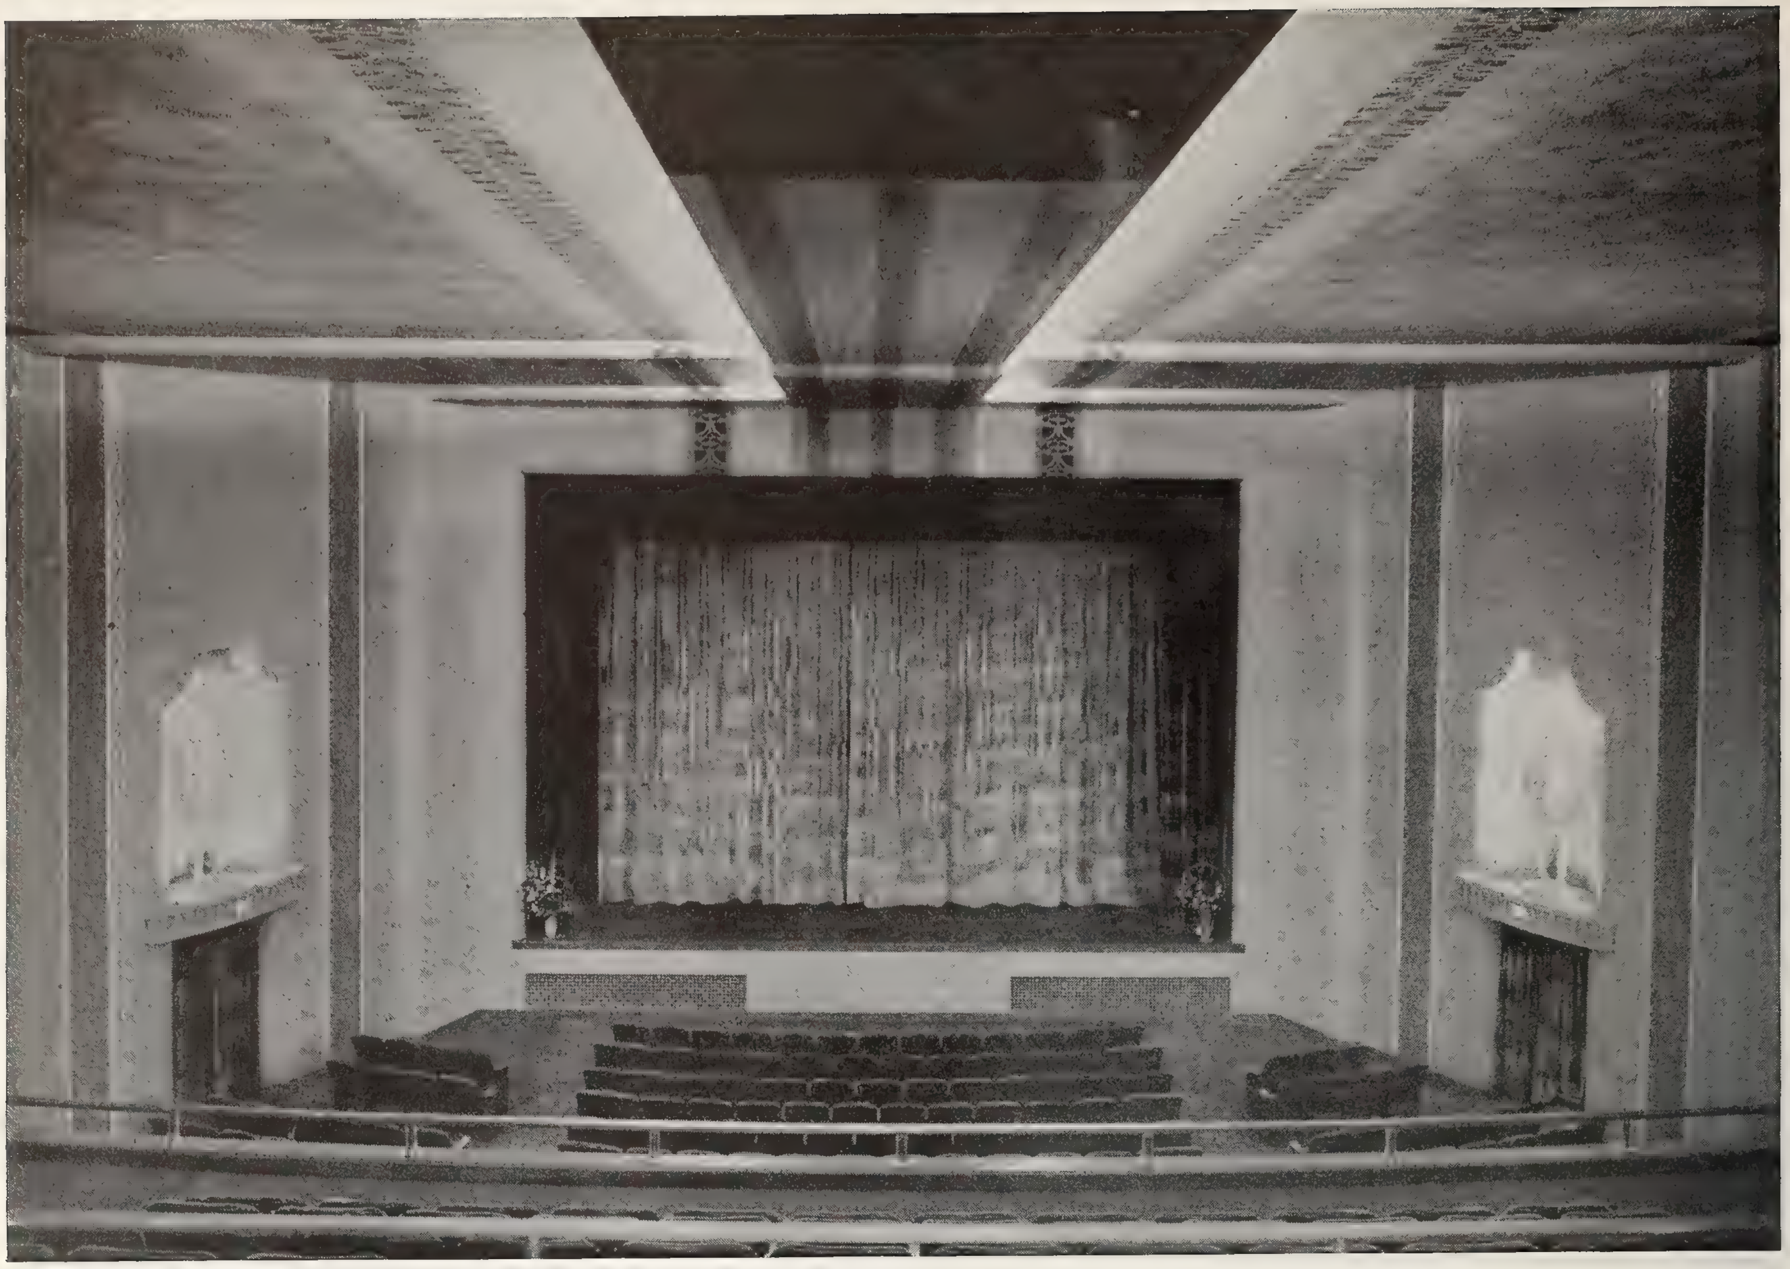
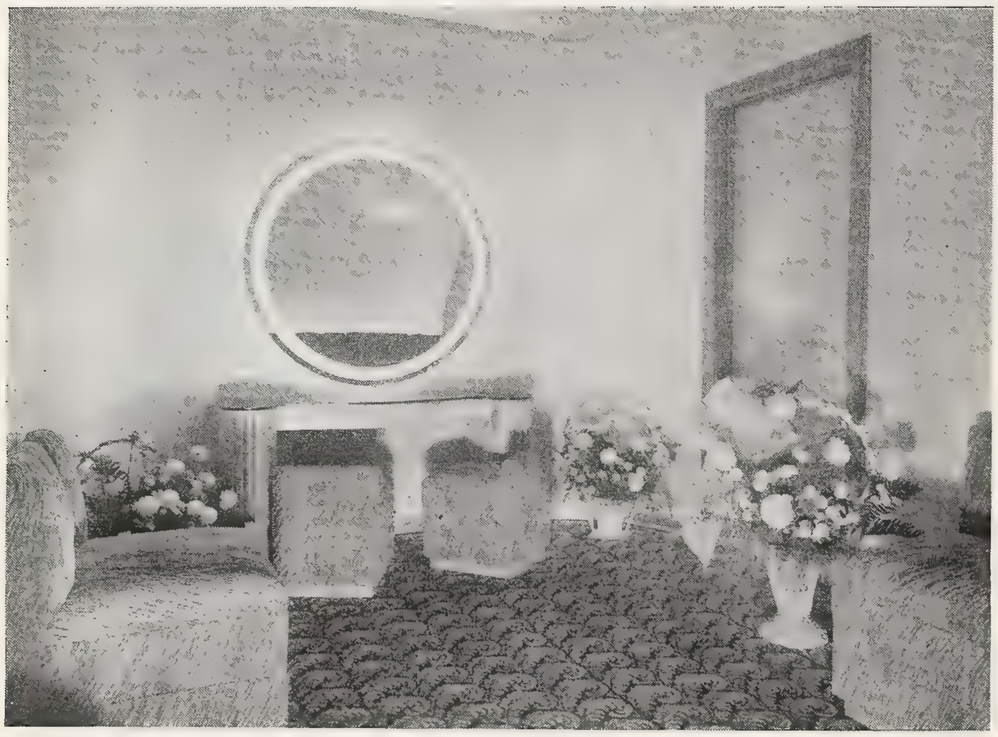
STANDEE-PROMENADE AREA: Passage from the foyer-like lobby is into one end of foyer-like space extending across the rear of the main seating area, from which it is separated by a plaster, wood-ledged standee rail united with the ceiling by plaster columns at the aisles. The general treatment is continuous with that of the auditorium, employing acoustic plaster wall and ceiling surfacing tinted a cream color. The decorative treatment is confined to the broad expanse of carpeting and a dramatic ceiling light plaque, the walls being plain surfaces. This is characteristic of the entire auditorium treatment—broad surfaces left plain and given a coloration to provide an effective foil for artificial light. To eliminate monotony of line, however, the more elongated surfaces have been broken into stepped sections with pleasingly rounded cornices—boldly, as at the rear wall (shown above), or in a mere suggestion, as along the side wall dado (see pictures of auditorium). The standee area ceiling plaque consists in porcelain enamel reflector troughs containing 65 feet of power yellow and 65 feet of red luminous tubing beneath a smooth plaster design. MEZZANINE FOYER: Wall and ceiling finish of this area (a section of which at top of stairs, is shown at right) has been indicated in describing the lobby. This space has been given lounge treatment, with birch furniture, the chairs covered in rust and gold mohair.





Except for toilet facilities off the mezzanine foyer, the men's and women's rooms are on the main floor, embracing men's lounge with adjoining toilet, and women's cosmetic room entered through a small ante-room, with toilet adjoining. These rooms have ceiling finished in acoustic plaster because of their close proximity to the auditorium. The ceilings are tinted cream, with green bands. Walls are of hard plaster painted grayish-green. The women's ante-room is furnished with a few lounge pieces of wood construction, fully upholstered and covered in mohair frieze with overall patterns in rust, tan and blue. Similar furniture is used in the cosmetic room, which also has a dressing table of birch above which is a mirror framed by six daylight type fluorescent lamps. Dome and pocket fixtures are used elsewhere in these rooms.

AUDITORIUM: Walls and ceilings are for the most part finished in acoustic plaster, which is tinted cream and otherwise little ornamented except for the lighting. The field of the ceiling is light rust with yellow band at walls and two bands of darker red, over-stenciled in maroon, along each side of a lighting plaque extending from proscenium to rear balcony wall. The suspended plaque, of hard plaster finish underneath and painted grayish blue with orange stripes, conceals two porcelain enamel reflector troughs containing 256 fifty-watt incandescent canary yellow lamps spaced 10 inches on centers and operated on a dimmer circuit (as is all auditorium lighting). The forward walls are of hard plaster, painted cream, and bear niches containing modeled figures dramatically high-lighted by ultraviolet beams from 100-watt, red-purple mercury lamps recessed in concentrating reflectors above and below the figures. The figures are treated with fluorescent paint and thus glow in the otherwise dark niche. The side walls, tinted cream above a hard-plaster dado painted rust, are ornamented only by centrally located lighting plaques, each consisting in parallel porcelain enamel reflectors open to the wall and containing 10-watt yellow incandescent lamps on 3-inch centers. Centered behind these, as part of the plaque design, are hard plaster reflecting circles with painted borders. Lighting beneath the balcony is provided by 10-watt incandescent lamps in coves along the edges of three bays containing air grilles. The balcony parapet has fascia finish in hard plaster and a wood cap with aluminum rail . . . Seating: The Lakewood theatre, with a total of 1,102 seats (768 on the main floor), has a staggered seating plan for the center bank. This is dealt with in detail on page 30. The chairs throughout have spring backs and seats, backs in rust mohair, seats rust leatherette.

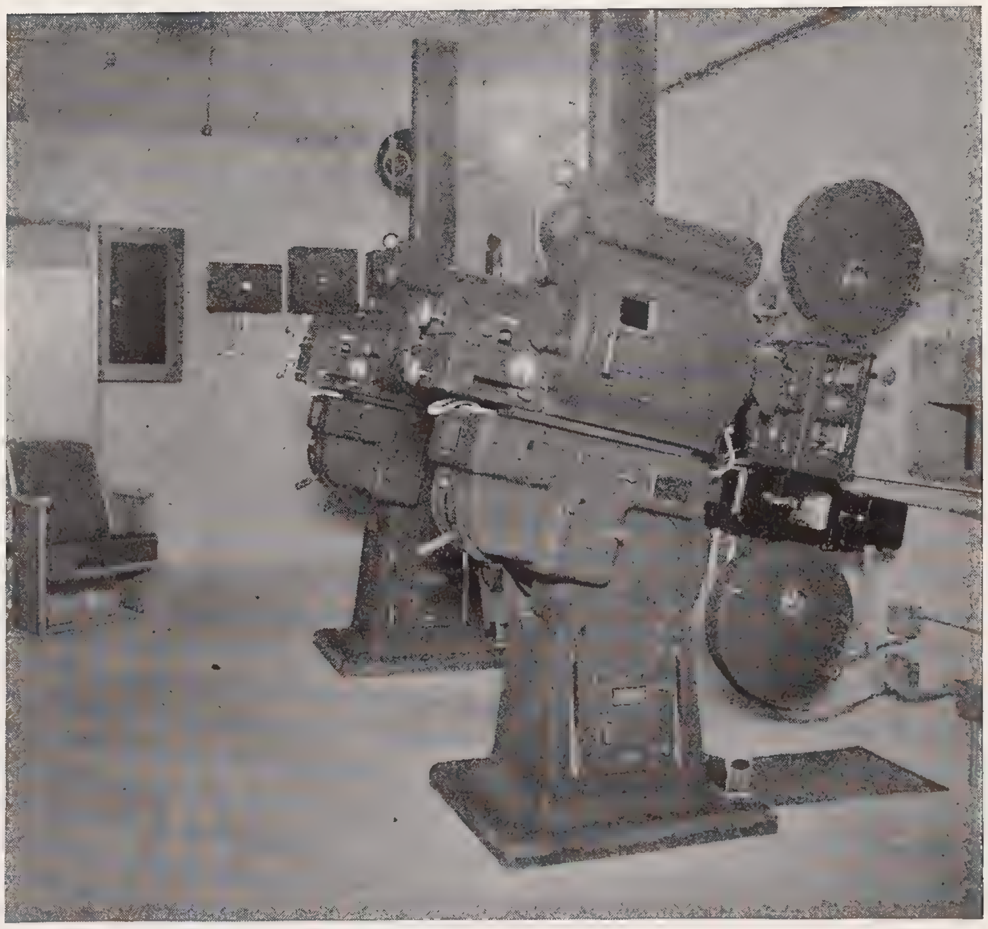
AIR-CONDITIONING: The Lakewood is completely air-conditioned under automatic control. The cooling system is of evaporative condenser type with two Delco-Frigidaire compressors driven by 47 h.p. natural gas engines (manufactured by Joe Hoppe, Inc.) Air-conditioning unit and main supply fan are located above the stage; overhead duct system supplies air through inlets down center of auditorium above lighting plaque, grilles in light bays in balcony soffit, ceiling grilles in standee area, and additional plaque diffuers at sides of auditorium above balcony. Recirculated air returns through ducts in balcony structure, main auditorium floor mushrooms, and large grilles in fascia of stage platform. Vitiated air removed from balcony and lounge areas by separate exhaust system. Heating is by duct-type, direct-fired natural gas unit located in by-pass return-air duct above compressor. The system has a cooling capacity of 87 tons. Main fan handles 36,000 cubic feet of air per minute.

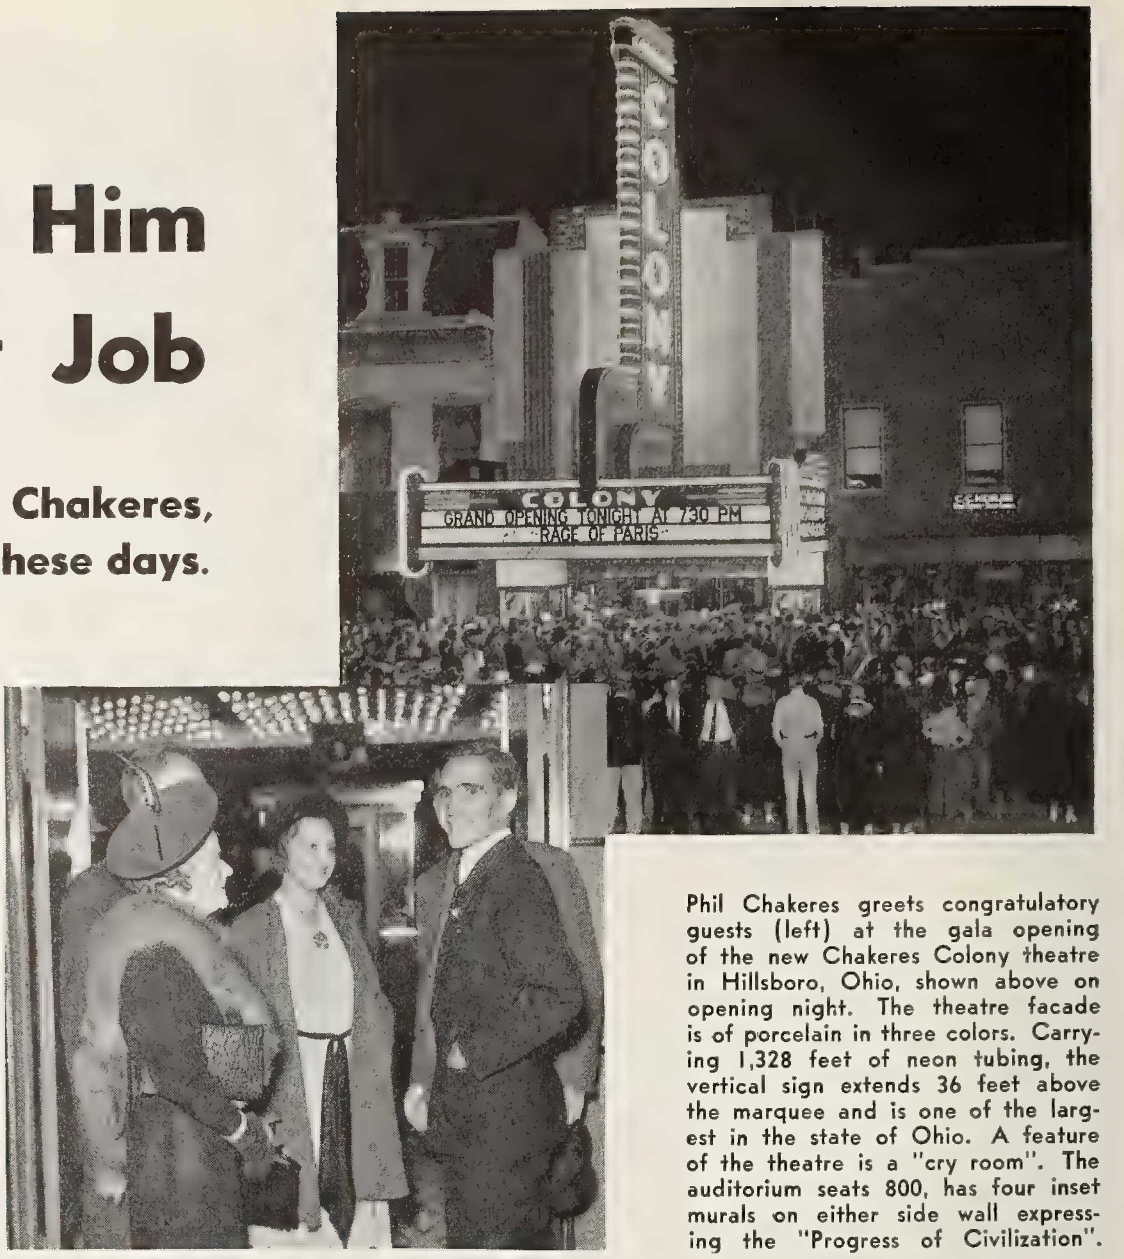
ARCHITECT: H. E. Pettigrew, Dallas. CONSTRUCTION: George P. O'Rourke Construction Company, Dallas. DECORATORS: Gilboe & Franklin, Dallas. FOR THE INTERSTATE CIRCUIT: J. H. Elder, supervisor of construction; E. C. Zrenner, sound and electrical engineer; C. E. Holmes, air-conditioning and heating engineer.



The projection room is 20 feet wide, 10 feet deep and 9 feet high, with light green walls, white ceiling, and green composition floor. Lighting is by opal glass ceiling fixtures. The angle of projection is 18°, the screen image 21 feet wide. (See Outline of Equipment and Furnishings, page 32 for projection-sound equipment provisions.)

Illness Took Him To the Right Job

An interview with Phil Chakeres, who is feeling just swell these days.



COLONY
GRAND OPENING TONIGHT AT 7:30 PM
RAGE OF PARIS

Phil Chakeres greets congratulatory guests (left) at the gala opening of the new Chakeres Colony theatre in Hillsboro, Ohio, shown above on opening night. The theatre facade is of porcelain in three colors. Carrying 1,328 feet of neon tubing, the vertical sign extends 36 feet above the marquee and is one of the largest in the state of Ohio. A feature of the theatre is a "cry room". The auditorium seats 800, has four inset murals on either side wall expressing the "Progress of Civilization".

THE OLD ADAGE, "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good," found direct and (more important) profitable application in the case of Phil Chakeres, executive head of the State-Regent Corporation, a Chakeres-Warner partnership, operating the Regent, State, Majestic, Fairbanks and Ohio theatres in Springfield, Ohio; and the Chakeres Theatres, Inc., which, in addition to the Princess and Hippodrome in the Springfield headquarters, also operate theatres in various Ohio situations as hereinafter referred to. Phil Chakeres is the antithesis of the average theatre man in that he has a particular aversion to personal publicity. A modest, retiring, unassuming individual, he was considerably hesitant in granting this writer an interview, which, incidentally, was the first time, he said, that he ever has granted one for publication, even to his home town newspapers.

Phil Chakeres started his business life by catering to the public, but this was through the sense of taste, rather than via the eye or ear. He embarked in the restaurant business, and was immediately successful in his efforts to satisfy the gustatory demands of his patrons. But fate, exercising one of her peculiar quirks, decreed that he was to seek other fields to conquer. His health failed—the result of the work, which was too strenuous, the doctor said. He, therefore, was compelled to give up his chosen vocation.

A Brother Stepped In

In order that he might be occupied with a business that would make less demand on his physical well-being, an older brother, now deceased, bought the Princess, a 166-seat house in Springfield and remodeled it. When the younger Chakeres had fully regained his health, he was installed as manager of that theatre. He was one of the youngest independent operators of that era, at the age of 23.

Thus, in the days when "One moment, please, while the operator changes reels," was a regular part of the screen program, Phil Chakeres received his first taste of the theatre business. The Princess was a five-cent house back in 1911, when song slides were featured to the accompaniment of the "tin-panny" piano. But Phil Chakeres, with inherent business acumen, foresaw the advantages of multiple theatre operation. He had the urge to expand. Three years after he started at the Princess, he took over the State in Springfield, Ohio, in which building his executive offices are located today. Thereafter, other houses were successively acquired in Springfield, whereupon the Warner interests came into the picture and the present partnership was formed. But all the while an out-of-town circuit was being built up by Phil Chakeres and his brother Harry, an associate in the Chakeres Theatres, Inc. operation.

In keeping with his dislike for publicity of a personal nature, Phil Chakeres prefers to keep himself obscure in the operating limelight, and to share, if not to give, others credit for the success he has attained.

"I have no specific formula for successful theatre operation," he finally said upon being questioned. "I always have been a keen observer and a student of people, situations and other peoples' problems, as well as the relation between cause and effect. I see what is going on around me, and try to improve on it, in addition, of course, to working out new ideas. I find that keen observation is one of the greatest helps in business, especially the theatre business," he added.

Characteristic of the policy of "credit where credit is due," which he so avidly follows, is Phil Chakeres' statement, "I am surrounded by a very competent staff of employees who are in a very large measure responsible for what success I may have had. We work on a co-operative basis, constantly exchanging ideas and constructive criticism, which, in turn, is unmistakably reflected in the mutual personal and professional welfare of all concerned.

"We have a managers' meeting every 30 days," he went on. "These are held here in Springfield and are really what in other lines would be sales pep meetings. They pay handsome dividends in improved theatre operation in our various situations."

The efficiency and demeanor of employes in every department with whom the writer came in contact bore out the fact that here was a circuit which was not operated by copy-book maxims.

Chakeres Expansion

Asked about his procedure in building new theatres, Mr. Chakeres said that they all represent an investment ranging from $75,000 to $100,000, and are in situations of not less than 5,000, and usually not over 10,000 population. The houses are from 750 to 1,000 seating capacity and are deluxe, both in architecture and operation, although the architectural treatment varies to conform as closely as possible to the prevailing theme or treatment of the community.

"My experience has proved," he explained, "that the farmer in practically

> The Delco-Frigidaire Air Conditioning Plant which was designed and engineered for the Broadway Theatre is working in a very satisfactory manner. I want to compliment your organization on the good work you did for us. We have had no trouble of any kind and we are well pleased. In fact, we expected to turn on the cooling system at least forty-five minutes prior to the opening of the theatre, but we now find if we turn it on ten minutes prior, it is cool enough for the early patrons. We also find we can turn it off thirty to forty-five minutes before we close and it then remains cool enough until closing time.

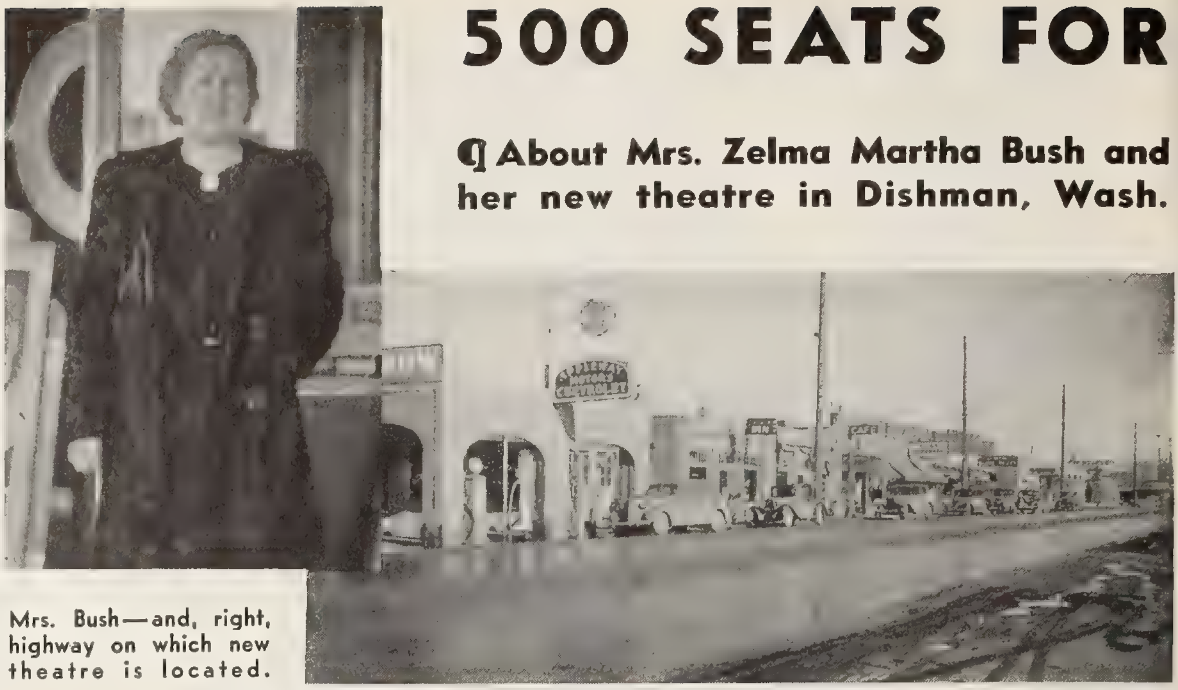
500 SEATS FOR

¶ About Mrs. Zelma Martha Bush and her new theatre in Dishman, Wash.



Mrs. Bush—and, right, highway on which new theatre is located.

WHEN A FEW months ago, Mrs. Zelma Martha Bush opened a new $60,000 theatre just outside Spokane, Wash., she faced problems of patronage and operation that were new to her, despite her experience as an exhibitor. And no wonder! Her theatre, located in the town of Dishman, has a capacity of 516, and there are only 395 men, women and children in Dishman. Another thing, her theatre, called the Dishman, is the first suburban or neighborhood theatre ever opened near Spokane, a city of 130,000. Later Mrs. Bush found out that this angle worked to her advantage, but at the outset she was worried plenty about getting product. (Spokane had it sewed up; she expected to run subsequent showings, but she didn't figure on having to take product that every other theatre was through with).

Patronage Varied

It wasn't long before she found that she had a varied audience every night—people from Spokane, from farms, from small towns and from country estates. She had one of the finest of the newer theatres in that area. From the looks of things now, her summer business will be as good as, if not better than, that of the rest of the year. Well, then, a 500-seat theatre in a 400-population town, is not as bad as it may sound.

General view of the theatre structure with adjoining parking lot.

A TOWN OF 400 PEOPLE—BUT THAT'S OKAY

Dishman is the largest of numerous small towns located in the fertile Spokane Valley extending eastward from Spokane twenty miles to the Idaho state line. In the valley are 18,000 permanent, prosperous fruit growers, truck farmers, ranchers and city people living on an acre and a half. The entire area is within a 30-mile radius of the Dishman theatre. The five most popular lakes are within 20 miles. By being located on a busy highway she will also attract tourist trade, the valley's extra "crop" being the tourist business from the numerous automobile camps.

Mrs. Bush has operated the Joy Theatre in Vernonia, Oregon, 60 miles west of Portland, for 15 years. She maintains her permanent residence at Dishman but keeps her Oregon interest.

The Highway Does It

When patrons registered for the "cash night" that she started, Mrs. Bush obtained an accurate check on her audiences. She was surprised to find that fully a third of her regular patrons came from Spokane, despite the fact that that city has three first-run houses, and 13 subsequent runs.

She began carrying ads in Spokane dailies stressing the fact that the theatre is just three miles from the Spokane city limits on the main arterial highway from the east, a four-lane road known locally as the Appleway. Patrons drove even as far as 35 miles away, from Idaho. The majority of patronage, however, came from an area with a radius of 15 miles.

One of the first things Mrs. Bush did after the theatre opened was to poll patrons on their preference between double and single features. The majority wanted single features, (in Spokane there is only one single-feature theatre), so she has single-feature programs, augmented generously by short features.

Before she opened the theatre, Mrs. Bush says, she pondered long over the question of how expensive a house to build. She could have a cheap building and hope for a quick return; or she could build well and consider the project a long-range investment. As the accompanying photographs indicate, the latter was her choice. She reports that the beauty and comfort of the theatre are helping her over the "thin spots" caused by inability to get the most popular pictures.

There are two main entrances, one on each side of the box office, which faces the main highway. The foyer is compact, but through use of large mirrors it has a spacious appearance. Toilet roms are on each side.

The building is of reinforced concrete construction with a two-story front. Two store locations extend to the corner on each side of the box office. Above there is a corner apartment and office for Mrs. Bush and for renting. On the corner is a beauty shop. On the side of the theatre is a large parking lot for patrons' automobiles.

The vertical sign is lighted entirely in neon. The marquee is semi-circular with space for two rows of letters.

The interior is of simple modern treatment, with walls of Celotex boards, which form alternately cream and brown bands separated by metal mouldings. Foyer and aisles are carpeted in a Velvet weave in green, brown and orange, while the screen curtain is orange velour. Lighting throughout the interior is by metal and glass ceiling fixtures of modern pattern.

The auditorium floor employs the "reverse" principle, sloping slightly upward at the first few rows. Seating, which consists in the new American "Bodiform" chairs, includes extra wide, deep-upholstered "lounge" chairs in the last three throws.

The Dishman is completely air-conditioned, with cooling equipment by Carrier.

Mrs. Bush has installed a policy of two shows nightly during the week, and continuous performances Saturdays and holidays beginning at 2 p.m. Prices are 10c and 25c.

Survey Prevents Serious Blaze in Theatre in South

THOMASVILLE, GA.—"Not satisfied with making his regular inspections of the sound equipment in our theatres, our Altec inspector, L. W. McClung, took it upon himself to make all our people 'fire-extinguisher conscious.' He personally made a survey of extinguishers in the Rose, Mode and Ritz in Thomasville, the Pine in Pelham, Ga., the Ilex, in Quitman, Ga., and the Shaw and Roxy in Quincy, Fla.," said Nat. M. Williams, General Manager, Interstate Enterprises.

"Within less than a week after McClung made his survey, we had a fire in the Shaw Theatre, at Quincy, Fla. The fire was put under control with a minor loss, but if McClung hadn't made that survey, it could have resulted in a serious property loss, to say nothing of the possibility of panic among the patrons.

"What the Altec man did wasn't part of his work, but such extra and unsolicited service certainly makes for an exhibitor's peace of mind."

TODAY'S THEATRE MUST BE A "STOPPER"

What a powerful magnet does to small bits of steel, a brilliant, colorful L·O·F Theatrefront does to show-going crowds. It attracts the eye and excites the imagination. It's a vital factor today in drawing crowds and building a paying patronage.

You can meet today's smart competition for full houses by specifying one of these modern glass and metal fronts of L·O·F Vitrolite, colorful structural glass, L·O·F Vitrolux, for luminous color, and L·O·F Extrudalite, the new storefront metal.

These materials are produced exclusively by Libbey·Owens·Ford. They offer you almost unlimited scope for modern designs—both opaque and luminous colors—plus outstanding weather resistance, easy cleaning and low maintenance cost.

Consider, too, that Vitrolite Structural Glass is widely favored as a swanky, colorful facing for ticket booths—also for walls and wainscots in entrances, foyers, corridors, washrooms and toilets in today's popular theatre buildings.

Reach out for new patronage. Make your theatre-front a "stopper". Write for latest literature.

AIR-CONDITIONING AS A NEED AND AN ASSET IN SUMMER OPERATION

THE motion picture theatre doubtless had more to do with "selling" air-conditioning to the public than any other factor. Now one may observe indications that the public is turning on the exhibitor to demand that he air-condition his theatre. The motion picture theatre was once the exception—it was the only public place that did provide comfortable conditions in summer. But it is the exception no longer. Indeed, the extension of air-conditioning to stores, restaurants, even offices, has set such a pace the last year or two that with only ten or twelve per cent of our theatres now air-conditioned, this business will soon be lagging unless installations are accelerated.

It's a matter of recognizing air-conditioning as a standard provision of the theatre. Time and the development of any industry impose new demands upon it. As with sound, the demand for summer comfort in the theatre must be met. Though once a few theatres offered it, as an "extra attraction," when there was no demand, today, as a result of the extension of air-conditioning to many fields, the theatre must provide it, not as an extra, but as something naturally expected by most theatregoers.

We speak here of summer air-conditioning specifically. And that means, in general, cooling. Which brings us to a matter that was otherwise referred to in these columns a couple of issues back. But it is one that definitely can bear repetition. It is one thing to have cooling facilities; it is quite another to make them an asset. We were discussing the problems of summer air-conditioning just recently with John R. Parsons, consulting physicist of New York, who has done considerable research in the comfort and medical phases of air-conditioning. His view was that air-conditioning systems in theatres have been operated in summer pretty much in ignorance of what really constitutes comfort conditions. It seems that many fields are just as guilty. Mr. Parsons showed us an article on the subject which he wrote for "Refrigerating Engineering" last summer. The moral is pointed in this paragraph:

"I hardly need say—except that some manufacturers still refuse to heed it—that the public thinks of air-conditioning as something which makes you cooler. So when a cooling plant is once put in, the owner wants everybody to know it and he proceeds to freeze you. Emphasis is put on cooling to the exclusion of other factors. It is not uncommon in travel to walk through several cars of a train to find every season of the year represented; some warm, some drafty and cold, and some where the air is stale. Again there is often a certain 'clamminess' which people are beginning to identify with refrigeration."

There need be no great mystery about proper operation. But those charged with supervision of the system have been exposed to the notion that it is coolness which is being sold, because, coolness is what a person identifies with comfort on a sweltering summer day. People still do, and always will. But they have learned to have a second thought, derived from experience. This changes the showman's line of attack—not to sell coolness, but to invite the public to the theatre in summer as in winter with the assurance that, although it may be hot and humid at home or in the street, it will be comfortable and healthful in the theatre.

There are theatre air-conditioning systems, of course, which cannot be operated as an asset. When this is a matter of cooling plant and fan equipment, it can be readily rectified. Too often, however, the fault lies in the distribution system. The newer air diffusers have done much to take the uncertainties out of air distribution, but in any case, design of the distribution system needs a sincere application of skill in order to assure comfort conditions throughout the auditorium breathing zone. Many a theatre with efficient plant equipment has only part of its auditorium really air-conditioned. One may say that such a theatre has only a part of its capacity fully available during the hot months. The best safeguard is the employment of thoroughly reliable engineers—plus recognition of the fact that there is no such thing as saving money in duct work and grille and diffusing devices. —George Schutz.

too often the theatre architect has given so much attention to the details of ornate design in theatre planning that the heating and cooling system has suffered from a lack of attention and a lack of money in the budget. Often the cheapest heating equipment possible was installed, and in many instances the installation of summer cooling equipment was postponed.

Recently, however, there has been worked out (unfortunately, I am not permitted to discuss the source of this method) a theatre scheme with an auditorium having no side walls whatever. Steel is used for this structure (making it fireproof) and a series of steel arches spring from the floor line so that the general appearance of the auditorium is that of half a cylinder laid on the flat side. The steel fabrication is such that there are no internal posts, braces or tie rods of any sort to interfere with vision or sound.

To compare an auditorium of this construction with that of regular type having a similar capacity: The regular type of auditorium of 700 seats would probably have a width of 50 feet, a depth of 100 feet, and a height of around 18 feet. This means that 10,400 square feet of wall and roof area in the conventional type of theatre, through which heat is dissipated in the winter time, and through which heat filters into the auditorium in the summer time.

In the other type of construction cited, there is about 2,000 less square feet of wall and roof area, and this materially cuts down heat loss in the winter and heat gain in the summer. The cubic content of this auditorium, which seats 700, is some 30,000 cubic feet less than of the conventional type would be, which means that either for summer cooling or winter heating there is that much less air in the building to be heated or cooled, and yet the two structures accommodate the same number of people. This new type of building can also be erected in less time and at considerably less expense.

[It may be pointed out that the type of construction referred to, which employs an arching span of truss-work starting at or near the foundation of the building, has characteristics in common with the type of construction, patented in the United States, employed for the Pix theatre in White Plains, N. Y., erected a few years ago. In the case of the Pix, however, the arching roof construction had to begin at a 9-foot wall because of building code requirements. —EDITOR.]

¶ Vapor Jet System

AMONG THE developments within the air-conditioning industry is a combination heating and cooling system in which both winter and summer functions are accomplished with the same equipment, while the equipment has no moving parts. This is called a vapor jet system, but is not to be confused with a steam jet system, which is sometimes used. The only similarity between the two is that both employ a steam ejector. The new vapor jet system uses a newly developed refrigerant that is non-toxic, non-inflammable and non-corrosive. Refrigeration is developed by coal, oil or gas.

The installation cost of this vapor jet system, developing heat as well as refrigeration, is comparable to that of a direct expansion refrigerating system. It is adaptable to existing as well as new theatres.

¶ Simple Control Wiring

AUTOMATIC CONTROLS have been greatly improved in the last year, and this improvement has made possible the fully automatic operation of heating and cooling equipment. Simplification of design of these controls has meant lower fabricating cost.

Companies manufacturing magnetic motor starters are now incorporating in their product many of the refrigerating controls, such as thermostats, high and low-pressure switches, etc. These magnetic starters are used to power certain types of air-conditioning equipment, and having the refrigerating controls built in them means that the electrical wiring is greatly simplified, thus reducing the cost of wiring up controls.

¶ Cooling Coils

NEW DEVELOPMENTS are also to be found in the manufacture of fin coils. These have made it possible to increase their efficiency to a point where a great deal of the sensible heat removed by the average cooling system can be removed by such coils when only cooling tower water is circulated through them. Costs have been reduced on the coils, due to increased volume, and this lowered cost permits the use of a larger bank of them to remove sensible heat by the circulation of cooling tower water through them.

In conclusion, I make the honest observation that there can be no question today that winter-summer air-conditioning takes its place on the list of "musts" in enterprising theatre operation. The various developments described in this article represent real progress and are well worth investigating.

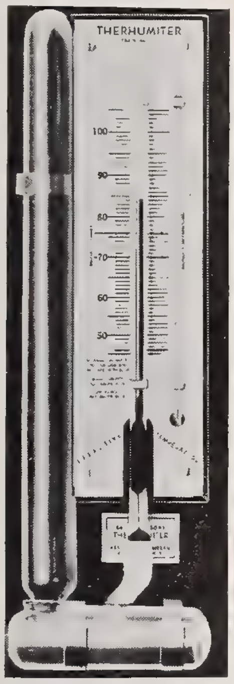
Dual Dry and Wet Bulb Thermometer

CONTROLLING the operation of air conditioning equipment for maximum bodily comfort, which requires knowledge of wet and dry bulb temperatures and relatve humidity, is facilitated by the new combination "Therhumiter," an indicating device on which these values are read directly without reference to comparisons or charts. The Therhumiter is manufactured by John R. Parsons, of New York.



A central thermometer column on the instrument reads a composite wet-bulb and dry-bulb "effective temperature" which is equivalent to the degree of warmth or cold felt by the body in response to heat, humidity and air motion. This central thermometer column is based, not on the usual single bulb containing a reserve of expansible red spirits, but on two such bulbs, one dry and one wet, both acting together to produce a composite reading in the column which is equivalent to heat or cold not as they are, but as the body feels them. Strand Theatre, Atlantic City, More Than Checks Loss With Year 'Round Air Conditioning

1. TURNS LOSS INTO PROFITS! Before Carrier Air Conditioning was installed in Strand Theatre, Atlantic City, business was off 50%. Now, not only has this loss been recovered, but business is up 60% above normal. And, says the management, the Carrier system will pay for itself in two years.

2. COSTS ½c PER PATRON or just $5.00 per day, for cool, clean comfort. Figure it out! When the 1200 seats are occupied, the daily operating cost of Carrier Air Conditioning is paid for during one show by allowing less than ½c for each patron. In Winter too, the Strand gets healthful, efficient heating by passing hot water through the same coils used for cooling in Summer.

Air Conditioning

KEEP YOUR SEATS FILLED THIS SUMMER!

● Keep your seats filled this Summer by keeping your theatre comfortably cool with Carrier Air Conditioning. No matter how attractive you make your stage and screen presentations, there is no substitute for Carrier cool comfort and freedom from odors and outside noise on hot days. In fact, many Carrier air conditioned theatres report "comfort" to be one of their biggest features—Summer or Winter.

Act today and have the benefits of profit-building Carrier Air Conditioning on the first hot day this year. Your Carrier representative is ready to tell you about the best system for your particular theatre—whether it is large or small. Remember, he brings you the advice and equipment of the company which has devoted 37 years solely to manufacturing and installing air conditioning systems.

And you'll find that Carrier Air Conditioning is economical — as proved by the actual experience of hundreds of Carrier air conditioned theatres ranging in size from the small Newsreel Theatre in Newark, N. J., to the 6,200 seat Radio City Music Hall. For a cent or less each day, theatres are securing all the advantages of true Carrier Air Conditioning such as increased patronage, reduced soilage on drapes and decorations, more efficient and pleasant employees.

Now is the time to make your plans for Carrier Air Conditioning. You benefit by taking advantage of favorable price and working conditions.

A smaller, blue-column dry bulb thermometer, which gives dry-bulb reading alone, occupies the right of the scale. Comparison of red and blue indications yields the relative humidity with a simple mental calculation requiring no charts. If the two columns are of equal height the relative humidity is 50%. If the red is above the blue, the humidity is high; 50% plus 8% per degree of difference. Conversely, if the red reading is below the blue, the humidity is 50% minus 8% per degree difference. Thus, if the red were four degrees above the blue, relative humidity would be 82%; if the red column shows two degrees less than the blue one, the relative humidity is 50 minus 16, or 34%.

The instrument is of simple, wall-mounting type, and requires no attention or operation beyond occasional replenishing of the wet-bulb reservoir. It is mounted where the air motion is approximately equal to the average air displacement throughout the theatre, to assure wet-bulb response that accurately represents general auditorium conditions.

Condenser Series Includes 27 Sizes

A NEW SERIES of evaporative condensers ranging up to 200 ton capacity have been developed by the Carrier Corporation of Syracuse, New York, for more economical operation where water supply or disposal present serious problems. One of the new models is illustrated here. A total of 27 sizes has been made available, with capacities from 200 tons to 10 tons, for freon or methyl chloride. The condensers are fully water proof and can be used in outdoor locations without protective housing or covering of any kind.

The new condensers are mechanically modifications of the Carrier humidifiers, altered to make them serve as condensing units of the efficient, evaporative type, capable of effecting outstanding economies in water consumption.

Air Equipment Catalog

A NEW 48-page catalog of air supply and treatment apparatus, including blowers, pumping units, dehumidifiers, air washers and diffusers has just been issued by National Theatre Supply Company. Equipment is illustrated, and blue-printed, with dimensions and installation data added. The catalog contains a large number of detailed charts covering fan capacities, dehumidifier data, wet and dry bulb temperatures of various conditions, psychrometric conditions and duct friction. Photographs show typical theatre installations.

A NEW booklet illustrated with striking photographs showing the structural and ornamental uses of Formica has been made available by Formica Insulation Company of Cincinnati. Full color plates cover the spectrum of colors and textures in which Formica is supplied. Four full pages of the booklet are devoted to structural diagrams detailing recommended methods of installation.

New Issue on Uniforms

RECENTLY issued, a 24-page catalog of The Russell Uniform Company of New York, illustrates a wide variety of uniforms and accessories adapted to the use of theatre ushers, doormen, usherettes, matrons and porters. The accessories comprise linen, gloves, coat badges, rubber coats, visor caps and braids and embroideries in many designs.

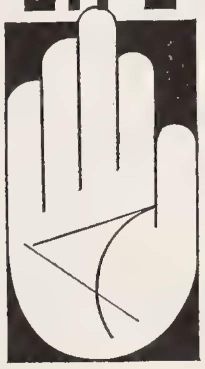
We'd like to TAKE YOU on a tour of our plants so that you could see for yourself why Artkraft products have become the established favorite with theatres everywhere.

We'd like to have you follow an order from the designer's bench through every department to the loading platform . . . to see the planning accorded each job . . . to inspect the quality of the materials which go into construction . . . to witness the care with which each operation is performed . . . to acquaint yourself with Artkraft's inbred quality . . . to see why the life of such products is predetermined in the factory in which they are produced.

Attractive marquees and signs, modern fronts and adequate poster frames today are essential to the efficient merchandising of the show. They provide one of the chief incentives to buy what's on your screen.

SIGNS OF LONG LIFE



These requisites are now within the reach of even the smallest theatre. Artkraft modernization can actually be done economically—and terms can be arranged. It's only the cost of NOT modernizing that should concern you.

Naturally no theatre can afford frequent replacement of signs, marquees, front and poster frames in order to retain the appearance of newness. That's why Artkraft offers the logical answer in "Signs of Long Life.".

Here are 8 contributing factors to this long life:

1—Artkraft's Exclusive Porcel-M-Bos'd Letters are 75 per cent more readable. Denote quality.

2—Artkraft Secret Process Galv-Weld Frame Construction. Prevents rust, the enemy of porcelain. Prevents vibration, the enemy of tube life.

3—Neon tubing made under direct supervision of an electro-chemical engineer by precision methods. Inspected six times. 999/1000 perfect.

4—Exclusive genuine wet process insulators permanently eliminate electrical shorts.

5—Artkraft uses only genuine NEW Westinghouse or Acme Transformers, which are furthermore engineered and balanced to the specific requirements of each sign. Less than one replacement necessary out of 1,000. Some manufacturers have as high as 200 out of 1,000 even when using standard units, due to improper engineering. (Actual statistics which will be verified upon request.) Be sure the signs you buy do not have used, rebuilt or cheap, makeshift transformers.

6—Everlasting Porcelain Enamel . . . Guaranteed for 10 years against fading, chipping, cracking, crazing or peeling by reason of the elements.

7—Wired to highest specifications. Bear the Underwriters' label.

8—Entire construction is 999/1000 perfect as proven by actual average records made through customer research.

ARTKRAFT PRE-FABRICATED MARQUEES

The greatest value ever offered theatremen. Standardization of basic parts and mass production methods permit quality heretofore impossible at such low prices. Choice of a variety of effects, color schemes, ornamental trims and uses of neon are combined to create fronts of real individuality. Elimination of the old style marquee front permits 100 per cent efficiency of abundant attraction copy as against 20 to 60 per cent.

DEODORIZATION AND SANITATION

Soft Water Needed for Cleaning

SLIPPERY, treacherous floors, imperfect cleaning and pure waste of the cleaner's time and efforts are all results that follow logically from trying to keep the theatre clean with water that is even slightly "hard."

There is no mystery about what constitutes hard water, and no difficulty or particular expense about correcting the condition.

Pure water dissolves soap easily, keeps the soap in solution, and forms suds generously.

Hard water carries with it certain minerals which it has dissolved in its passage through the ground. These may be some form of magnesium or calcium, or traces of aluminum or iron. Such water is "hard." When soap is dissolved in water that already contains such substances in solution, a chemical reaction takes place between the minerals and the soap. Effectively, there is no more soap; it has been involved in chemical change and become something else—something the chemist calls a "water-insoluble soap." This substance is seen as a gummy deposit, very hard to wash away because it refuses to dissolve; it needs more or less to be scraped away. This wastes the cleaner's time.

If dirt has been trapped in the formation of the scummy layer, the results of cleaning will be and look imperfect, and the only remedy will be prolonged effort to remove the last traces of dirty gum by pure friction, with no real help from water since the gum won't dissolve. Traces of such a formation on marble or some other floors constitute a highly slippery film which is a standing invitation to accidents, yet cannot be flushed or mopped away.

The sufficient and inexpensive remedy is to add to the water, before soap is added, neutralizing chemicals to react with the undesirable minerals and convert them into new compounds that do not act on soap. Such water-softeners are very inexpensive, and only quite small quantities need be used. In fact, the tendency to put in too much softener is in itself a possible source of trouble in some circumstances.

The water company, or municipal or state authorities having to do with water supply can always advise with reference to the degree and type of water hardness, and with this knowledge it is easy and inexpensive to obtain a suitable softener and full directions for its use.

Cleaner for Varied Surfaces

DESIGNED specifically for the removal of all forms of dirt and staining from hard, polished surfaces, Temp, a product of the Du Bois Company of Cincinnati, contains a series of ingredients based on analysis of the different types of soiling that may combine on theatre equipment to produce a general appearance of dirt.

Surfaces of the types exemplified by washroom tile, marble ornamentation, bright metal-work and even mirrors are subject to simultaneous staining from several causes. The simplest and easiest to remove is mere dust caught in a thin film of grease originating in cigarette fumes or other impurities of the atmosphere. Soap and water would remove such stain, if it were alone. Finger marks also are not very difficult to wash down. Chewing gum stain is more obstinate. Soiling caused by extinguishing cigarettes, in which ash has been ground into the pores of the material, presents still greater difficulties. More troublesome still is iron stain on washroom fixtures, resulting from deposit within the porcelain of iron rust.

Temp combines within itself physical and chemical ingredients necessary to adapt a single compound to the varied requirements which each of these forms of soiling presents. Specifically, it is capable of dissolving grease and emulsifying it with water, so it can be flushed away, and dust formerly trapped in the grease, being no longer glued in place, also flushes off. In addition, the compound attacks and removes chewing gum stain. Its chemical action depends on recently developed compounds which do not utilize alkali as the basis of their cleaning action, hence the hands of the porter are not left dry and cracked by its use.

To get at cigarette stain and iron stain requires more than mere chemical action, for here definite particles of more or less dark-colored material are physically trapped in pores of the surface. Such particles, if iron or ash, cannot safely be dissolved away. They must be removed by physical friction. A feature of the composition of Temp is a physical polishing agent which applies the necessary friction to the fine pores of marble, porcelain or metal surfaces, but does not scratch or abrade. The ability to provide non-abrasive friction depends upon the smallness and comparative friability of the physical agent.

The combination of chemical and physical agents forms a creamy paste, low in cost because it is based on the newer chemical discoveries in the field of cleaning, and lightly treated to leave only a faint, pleasantly "clean" odor after use.

The compound is available through dealers everywhere in five package sizes.

Portable Lamps For Cleaners' Use

A PORTABLE storage battery flashlight suited to cleaning and general maintenance work has been developed by U-C Lite Manufacturing Company of Chicago, under the trade name Big Beam.

The construction is such that the storage battery is completely enclosed in the steel carrying case, of which the lamp is a part. A built-in rubber reservoir seals the battery vents, protecting both the lamp and the person carrying it against corrosive fumes or spillage. Further protection is provided by the fact that the steel case is lead coated, to resist both corrosion and weather.

Two bulbs are operatively included. The larger will provide 10 hours continuous illumination on one full charge of the battery; the smaller, 60 hours continuous illumination. This lamp can be supplied with a.c. or d.c. charger, or with provisions for charging it from the standard circuits of an automobile.

Glass Cleaner

A NEWLY developed fluid for cleaning structural or window glass, porcelain, mirrors, chrome fittings and other bright surfaces has been developed by Kinner Products Co. of Springfield, Ohio. The liquid is free of all gummy components, so that it does not leave a film on the surface, even in cold weather. The cleaner is sprayed on, not too far in advance of the work, and the surface rubbed down with a soft cloth.

Let's Get Down To BRASS TACKS

Next to the picture, the sort of seating you provide affords the best yardstick for measuring your box-office, and, after all, it's only the box-office that really counts.

If you could do as much business without chairs, if you could continue using the same chairs indefinitely, if you could use the cheapest sort of chairs to as good advantage as the best, you probably would be satisfied. BUT YOU CAN'T!

Theatregoers today expect a new standard of comfort. The old backbreakers that once were acceptable are no longer tolerated. Poorly designed, cheaply constructed chairs do not last, require constant attention and repair, cost far more than the best you can buy.

Plan now to improve your business through better seating. We suggest that you write today for the Ideal catalog and name of your nearest dealer, that you may learn more about the comfort, style and service afforded by this most modern of all theatre seating.

HOW THE GLEN W. DICKINSON THEATRE CIRCUIT FOUND

New Profits in Lobby Shops

By JAMES McQUEENY

ABOUT SIX months ago, Glen W. Dickinson, operator of a circuit of theatres throughout Missouri, Kansas, and Iowa, took in a popcorn machine on a debt. He shipped it to one of his Missouri houses where it began to show an impressive profit, so impressive in fact, he began studying the possibilities of his theatre lobbies as an appreciable revenue source.

Prior to these times, independent concessionaries were paying small fees for lobby privileges in some of his theatres. The average rental was approximately a dollar a day, a negligible return for the trouble and maintenance involved. With smoky machines and slovenly operators, several of the stands were more of a liability than an asset. Others, Dickinson felt, were not making the most of their sales opportunities.

Accordingly, a regular department for handling lobby business was established and Miss Alberta Meinert placed in charge. At the present time, concessions are being profitably operated in eighteen of the chain's thirty-five theatres. As soon as concession leases expire on other locations, new units will be added. Provision also is being made to install stands in some of the other houses that never before have had them.

Profits Finance Expansion

In twenty weeks of operation, the lobby business department has netted sufficient profits to pay for the construction and equipping of a snack shop adjoining the chain's newest unit west of Kansas City, and a new company car to be used by Miss Meinert in supervising the different stands.

The concessions are being operated under the title of Lobby Shops and their design and operation has been standardized as much as possible. In virtually all of the theatres some alterations were necessary in order to fit the stands into the lobbies at strategic points.

One of the "snack shops" the Dickinson circuit has been constructing as a result of the success of its "lobby shops". This shop adjoins the Dickinson theatre in suburban Kansas City.

Each one is identified by a bright green neon sign. The color scheme is green and white throughout, the operators wearing uniforms to match. The white headbands or caps are lettered in green: The Lobby Shop.

Popcorn is the keystone on which the lobby business rests and new machines have been installed in all locations except the original one. Candy, peanuts, and gum have been added to the stands in three or four towns.

Clean, modern methods plus attractive dispensers are the rule.

The accent has been placed on popcorn sales, Miss Meinert explains, because of the greater profits involved. If candy bars and gum are not stocked, patrons, particularly children, will buy popcorn instead, thereby increasing the profit margin.

Cleanliness coupled with the personality of the operator are the big points in the successful operation of lobby concessions, Miss Meinert states.

"We've found that an attractive seventeen-year-old girl who has been properly trained can sell twice as much popcorn as a middle-aged woman. Fifteen of our eighteen operators are young girls, the remainder young men."

An extensive training course is given Lobby Shop employees. Instruction on the general conduct of the stand, the handling of change, the cooking of good, edible corn, and tips on salesmanship comprise the salient features of the course.

Salesmanship is particularly important. As an example, Miss Meinert cited the case of where a young man upon stepping into the lobby says to his date, "I'm going to get some popcorn." The alert operator will hand him two boxes and nine out of ten times he will buy them. But if the operator confronts him with, "Sack or box?" the patron may purchase only one box or two sacks, thus cutting the volume of the sale in half.

If you want to buy a sack of popcorn from a Lobby Shop you have to ask for it. Operators are instructed to keep sacks out of sight—more of the salesmanship course.

Daily reports are sent in by the stand operators and cash returns made weekly. Supplies are bought at the main office and shipped to the different units on requisition.

The boxes and sacks are numbered in the same manner as admission tickets and stand employees are required to make an accounting for each one sent out. Quotas equal to 10 per cent of the paid admissions have been affixed and with the exception of one or two operators who are just getting started, all are exceeding them.

The net profit on popcorn is about 70 per cent, exclusive of rent and commission to the sales person. In view of this, only the finest materials are used. For every 100-pound sack of corn, 40-pounds of special seasoning are used and from the two the operator is expected to sell enough sacks and boxes to gross $70.

Locations that formerly brought in $6 and $7 a week now are showing net profits between $38 and $40 weekly.

Odor Confined to Lobby

One of the principal arguments against popcorn machines in the minds of many showmen is the penetrating odor, but this problem has been satisfactorily answered by the Dickinson chain with ventilators directly above the machines that connect with exhaust fans. There is a slight popcorn odor in the chain's lobbies, which stimulates business, but none in the theatres proper.

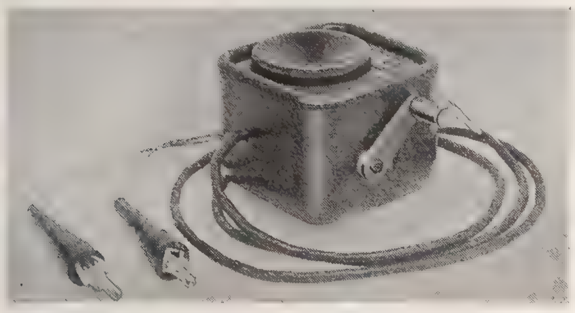
The snack shop that adjoins the Dickinson Theatre in Johnson County, Kansas, in proximity to Kansas City's rapidly expanding residential section, is a new venture. Although in operation only a short time, it is showing signs of developing into a stake winner. Patronage is drawn both from the theatre visitors and highway travel.

If the lunch counter becomes as profitable as the Lobby Shops, others will be added throughout the circuit.

Both the Lobby Shops and the other services are plugged on the theatre screens by slides. These are in the form of jingles and are changed weekly.

Voice-Powered Phone System

A "POWERLESS" telephone suited to theatre intercommunication, as well as to studio and location work, has been developed by Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc. The distinctive feature of the device is that the voice of the person speaking, acting upon the diaphragm of the instrument, produces all the power necessary for telephone communication even over great distances. No battery or power line connection is necessary. Such operation is made practicable only by the use of new magnetic material of extraordinary efficiency.



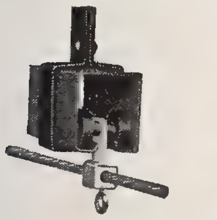
Transmitter and receiver are not separate units, but the same diaphragm and magnet serve both purposes. Speech can of course be transmitted in either direction without switching exactly as in any telephone.

For ringing to call attention of the person at the receiving end, the new telephone uses a small crank handle and train of gears which rotate toothed wheels of magnetic material in the path of the magnetic flux. The result is that the instrument emits an intensely strong tone, louder than the ordinary telephone bell, at a pitch of approximately 1,000 cycles.

The new device consists of two station units, each weighing 1 pound, 14 ounces, and measuring 3x3x2½ inches exclusive of the crank handle. Each unit is housed in protective, semi-hard rubber, and equipped with connection cords terminating in spring clips for easy attachment to the desired transmission circuit.

Curtain Track for Medium Service

A NEW CURTAIN track for medium-heavy service has been developed by Automatic Devices Company along the lines of that maker's Heavy Duty curtain equipment.



Coded as Besteel No. 170, the new track is of full steel construction, completely enclosed except for the slot at the bottom, and made of two halves, each of which is one continuous length of metal free from joints of any kind. Ball-bearing wheels are used in the pulley blocks. The medium duty track is adapted to openngs up to 30 feet wide.

Don't Be Afraid of Rushing the Season

Summer is only 60 days away. Don't wait for it to cut box office receipts before you install your air conditioning equipment. You've nothing to gain by waiting — everything to gain by acting promptly. BAKER engineers can study your requirements and plan the installation much more carefully now than at the peak of the season. Ample reserve stores at the factory assure quick delivery of equipment ordered. Skilled workmen, like anyone else, can do a better job working at normal speed than they can under last minute pressure ● BAKER System Air Conditioning is made to fit. BAKER'S complete line of Freon condensing units make it easy for BAKER engineers to meet individual requirements. That means economical operation over a long period of time. Advanced design keeps your equipment modern for years to come. Precision manufacture steps up operating efficiency, steps down operating cost.

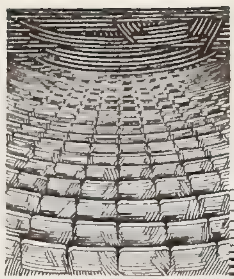
". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."



LAKEWOOD THEATRE STAGGER PLAN

IN THE Interstate circuit's new Lakewood theatre in Dallas, Tex. (described in detail elsewhere in this issue of BETTER THEATRES), a staggered seating plan is used for the central bank of the three-bank layout. The Lakewood stagger system is based on the use of extra-wide chairs at the ends of alternate rows.

This arrangement places the center of each chair directly behind a pair of arm rests in the row immediately in front. This method of course makes no allowance for varying angles of vision, but does place all end chairs in line so that the aisle line is even.

As indicated in the forward rows shown in the accompanying photograph of the Lakewood auditorium, the effect is obtained by placing a 30-inch chair at each end of alternate rows beginning with the second row. The first row is composed of thirteen chairs, all of 20-inch width. The second row has ten normal chairs with a 30-inch chair at each aisle, or twelve chairs in all. The next row consists again of thirteen normal chairs, with the following row having the wider end chairs, and so on. Since there are 30 rows in all in the center main floor bank, it is obvious that a total of only fifteen chairs have been lost to effect this stagger arrangement (it has been pointed out, in all seriousness, that the oversize chairs are wide enough for two slim persons and that they are often preferred by young couples, also by mothers with a child).

The plan was laid out in collaboration with the International Seat Corporation.

New Style Fabric For Theatre Seats

A NEW MOHAIR fabric has been developed especially for auditorium seating by L. C. Chase & Company of New York. Its first commercial application is on American Seating Company "Bodiform" chairs just installed in an MGM screening room in New York.

The new fabric is stated by the manufacturer to be successor to this firm's Malano grade, but it is somewhat differently constructed in order to provide a comparable pile at lower cost.

The pile is higher than that of automotive mohair and has freedom from matting and an acoustic factor corresponding to deep pile characteristics. It is available in patterns and in any color. The pattern used in the MGM installation is sheared in the pile, and other shear patterns are available.

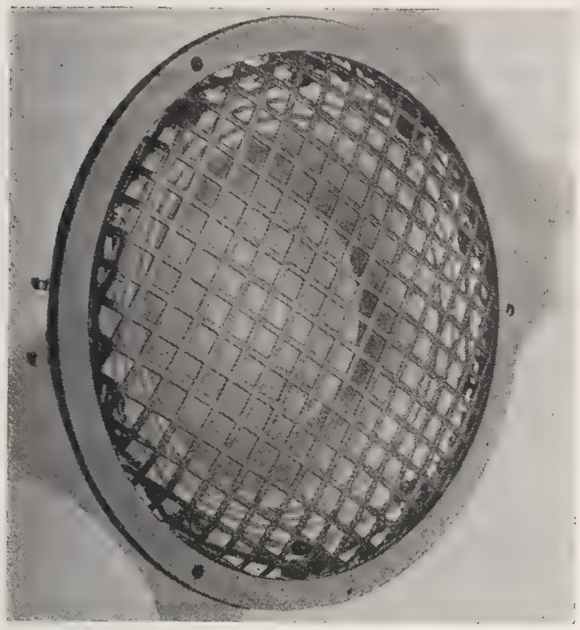
Speaker Applicable As Special Monitor

A NEW MONITOR speaker of special design, with specifications calculated to give it the same fidelity as latest type large speaker systems, has been developed by Western Electric. While designed primarily for recording and broadcasting service, it is of course adapted to any monitoring work. Its practicable application to the motion picture theatre is probably limited, however, to use in special sound monitoring booths in theatres where particularly vigilant supervision of the sound is maintained.

The unit is rated at a substantially flat frequency response between 50 and 10,000 cycles. It is of the permanent magnet dynamic type utilizing a specially shaped metal diaphragm. Power handling capacity is 12 watts, but the unit can withstand up to 20 watts if necessary.



Its physical measurements are 9½x3¾ inches, weight 9 pounds. The cabinet designed for it is completely enclosed and lined with acoustic material; it measures 24x18x13½ inches and weighs 42 pounds with the speaker. The speaker is available with cabinet, but can also be bought separately with exact instructions enabling the purchaser to make a cabinet that will be acoustically satisfactory. The instructions allow a reasonable choice of dimensions, suited to the user's requirements.

New Directional Type Microphone

PARTICULARLY well adapted to theatre public address work, a new uni-directional microphone, smaller, less costly and more sentitive than the model it replaces, has been brought out by RCA. The combination of greater sensitivity with smaller size and lower price is obtained by the use of recently developed magnets more powerful than those RCA previously employed.

Being uni-directional, with an average cancellation at the "dead" side of from 14 to 20 decibels, the instrument as used in theatre applications is relatively insensitive to audience noise or to echo, and makes possible an increase in loudspeaker power without a proportionate risk of annoying acoustic feedback. Its frequency range is rated at from 40 to 10,000 cycles, and its output impedance can be matched to either 50 or 250 ohms, permitting the use of very long connecting lines.

Since the bulk of the instrument is only approximately one-half that of its predecessor, the new microphone interposes a comparatively small barrier between performer and audience, with far less likelihood of hiding the performer's face. It is attractively styled, and finished in black enamel and chrome.

Illness Took Him To the Right Job

Other Ohio houses operated by Chakeres Theatres are the Xenia, at Xenia; the Murphy, at Wilmington; Grand, at Circleville; Logan, at Logan; State, at Greenville, in addition to the two Springfield houses previously mentioned.

"Attend the theatre regularly . . . In no other way can you enjoy life for so little," is the Chakeres slogan used everywhere.

The writer noted that practically all the doormen were of fairly advanced years. They have a leisureliness and a kindliness which appeals to the public, it was pointed out. Phil Chakeres has learned by experience through the years, the secret of promoting a broader conception of human relationship, which after all is the secret of success when dealing with the public.

Whether any new theatres would be built in the immediate future has not been determined, Mr. Chakeres said. Incidentally, the Chakeres organization took over Bell's Opera House, with 750 seats, at Hillsboro, where it also recently opened the new Colony; and also acquired the 1,000-seat Virginia and the recently-completed Louvee, with 600 seats, both at Wellston, on the very day the interview was granted.

Maintenance Marquee Structure Considerations in

THE THEATRE's marquee is or should be a single structural unit, in which all parts are properly proportioned to their specific functions and to each other. Frame and bracing, and the size and thickness of each component member, are or ought to be definitely designed and chosen with detailed knowledge of the strength of materials and of the stress each component must withstand. For example, oversize, overly-strong angles united with weak channels, or vice versa, are signs of poor engineering and improper construction. So is unnecessary weight anywhere.

The bond between structural members should be waterproof as well as physically strong. Undersize bolts in oversize holes are invitations to vibration and corrosion. Loosening of seams resulting from slight slippages in the physical bonds admits water to the interior, with obvious possibilities of resulting corrosion and failure of the electrical system. Interior corrosion of the marquee itself leads to further sagging, which again admits more water in an endless circle of progressive deterioration. Properly fitted bolts and the use of gussets or (by preference) rivet or weld construction, are signs of a well-planned, well-built marquee, that will not need early and extensive repairs.

The marquee roof is another weak spot in some types of inadequately protected products. The roof should be thoroughly pitched and very thoroughly flashed, and equipped with spouts large enough to prevent accumulation of a damaging weight of rain water even during prolonged storms of exceptional intensity.

Mounting cables, like all other structural components, should be properly chosen according to the strain that will be put upon them, properly located and properly installed, not by guess-work but on correct principles of structural engineering.

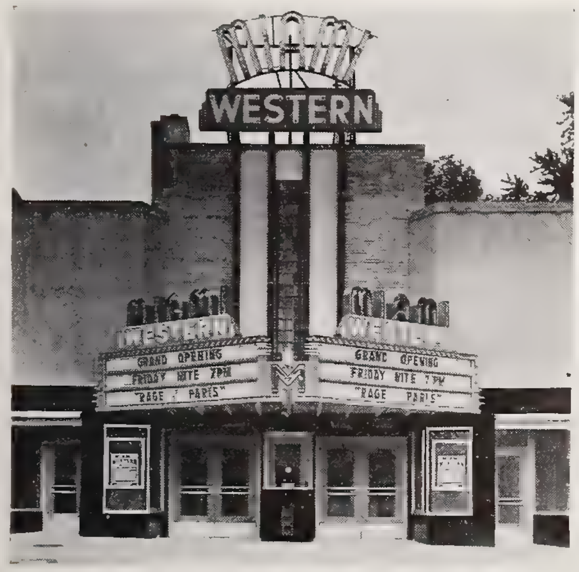
Compact Floor Plan to Get Maximum Seating

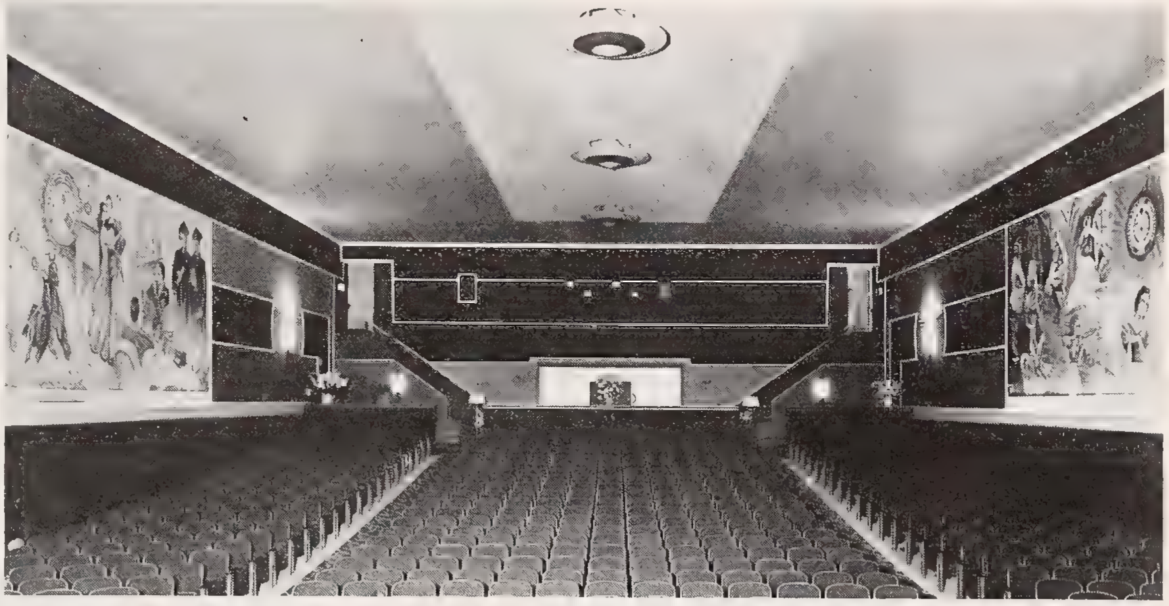
THE MIAMI-WESTERN a new 900-seat theatre in the business section of the college town of Oxford, Ohio, by the Wilmington Amusement Company, composed of J. S. Jossey of Cleveland, and Charles D. Mervis and Nat Galley of Cincinnati, derives its dual name from the two schools in that town of 2,500—Western College and Miami University. Designed and built by the F & Y Building Service, of Columbus, it has an extremely compact plan, with all space possible given to seating area. In addition to the theatre, the building contains two store rooms.

Construction is of masonry with reinforced concrete floors, steel trusses, wood roof joists, with built-up and reinforced concrete second floor. Facing material is face brick, black structural glass and blue terra cotta in convex fluted pylon effect. Cost of building alone is reported to have been $50,000.

General treatment of the vestibule is in black glass and alumilited metal, with terrazzo floor, doors of birch and black glass ceiling having concealed lights behind frosted glass sections.



The front, liberally faced in glass.



Rear view of auditorium, showing stairs to rest rooms.

The lobby has indirect lighting, wainscoating of leather with bands of blue and rust, floor and base of terrazzo with rubber mats made by the Hamilton Rubber Mfg. Co.

The foyer, which is integral with the auditorium, has carpeted floor, walls in two colors of velour—royal blue and brown rust—and dark leather wainscoat. Stairways to right and left of entrance lead to men's and women's rooms on a second level, at either side of the projection room.

The auditorium has a length of 85 feet from stage apron to the lobby, and a width of 52 feet wall to wall. Height at first row of seats, 24 feet, 6 inches; at last row, 19 feet, 6 inches. The auditorium has cement wainscoat painted blue, topped with a 9 inch plaster moulding simulating indirect lighting trough under murals. The general wall decorating scheme above wainscoat is achieved by the use of alternating royal blue and rust velour in 4-foot bands, which emanate from the murals placed midway in the length of the walls. The severity of the horizontal design is intermittently broken by the placing of modern stem and concentric flower design lighting fixtures, which are finished in satin aluminum. These are both direct lighting (by bulbs) and indirect (by lumilines). The murals represent the spirit of college life. Predominant colors in murals are red and white for Miami, and blue and white for Western, which form basis of the entire color scheme.

Seating, all on one level, is arranged in three banks with two aisles. First row of seats is approximately 20 feet from screen. Chairs (by American Seating Company) are covered in coral mohair.

The rear wall is slanted slightly inward, and acoustical felts are placed behind the velours at this point. Velour on the side walls, and the two large murals, also provide some of the absorption thought needed. The ceiling has a panel 12 feet wide and the length of the auditorium of U. S. Gypsum Sabinite acoustic plaster.

How the Auditorium Size, Shape and Surface Forms Affect Acoustics

By C. C. POTWIN and BEN SCHLANGER

[This is the second and concluding installment of a condensation made by the authors expressly for BETTER THEATRES, of their paper, "Co-Ordinating Acoustics and Architecture in the Design of the Motion Picture Theatres," which they presented before the Fall 1938 convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The original paper was published in the February issue of the SMPE Journal.—THE EDITOR.]

THE STUDY presented in Figure 1, was made to determine which one of five possible auditorium designs having the same seating capacity would prove most efficient for both vision and hearing, keeping in mind that economy in construction and architectural appearance are also important guiding factors. A seating capacity of 900 was selected for this study because this capacity has been found to answer the needs of the average motion picture theatre, and because a large proportion of the theatres now being erected have approximately this capacity.

It is interesting to note in the five theatre designs shown that the areas enclosed by the auditoriums vary from 108,450 to 134,100 cubic feet. Furthermore, the required screen width varies from a minimum of 16½ feet to a maximum of 22 feet due to the increases in maximum viewing distance. Such variations in design are not justified when the seating capacity is the same in all cases.

Ceiling heights have been kept down to a minimum in all five designs. The seating arrangement is the same in each case; i.e., two aisles separating three banks of seats, the middle bank being fourteen seats wide, and the side banks against the walls being seven seats wide. This particular horizontal arrangement was selected because it is the most efficient plan for capacities of approximately 900 seats. It requires the least amount of aisles and thereby reduces at the beginning the total volume for all of the auditoriums here dealt with.

	Cu. Ft. of Vol. per Seat	Max. Viewing Distance	Screen Width
Design A......	151	104′	20′
Design B......	148	119′	22′
Design C......	130	150′	20′
Design D......	136½	89′	16′6″
Design E......	120½	89′	16′6″

In the design types A, B and D shown in Figure 1, the orchestra floor slopes approximate those which have been commonly used in past practice. These slopes ordinarily do not allow a sufficiently unobstructed vision of the screen. Increasing the slope to correct this condition would result in a slight increase in the total volume whereas the volume is already excessive; however, vision could also be improved in these designs by the use of a stagger system of seating, which would effect a slight reduction in the total volume. This reduction would benefit design D primarily. But designs A and B would still have an excessive volume.

Effect of Regular Seating Plan

In designs C and E, the staggered system of seating has been used for the lower seating areas. A non-staggered plan could also be used in these designs. This would result in a floor slope which would pitch downward toward the screen approximately one foot more, and upward in the front half of the floor to a point about level with the floor behind the seats farthest from the screen. The volume added to designs C and E due to using this non-staggered plan would raise the total volume only a negligible amount.

Volume of Auditorium

The designs shown here have varying horizontal ratios. In designs D and E, the depth is a little more than half again as much as the width (1:1.65), while in design B the auditorium is twice as deep as it is wide (1:2). Although all of these ratios between width and depth are suited to good acoustical conditions, coming within the acoustical limits heretofore recommended, it is particularly significant from this study that the proper vertical solution of a design (ceiling heights) not only has much to do with getting a good auditorium shape, but in most cases is what really tells you just how big an enclosure (cubic footage) your auditorium ought to be.

an interesting parallel to this study and show the variations in cubic-foot volume per seat for 100 theatres recently built and seating from 800 to 1,000 people. Seventy-one of these theatres have balconies, whereas only 29 are single-floor houses. It is important to note that the peak of the curve lies between 140 and 160 cubic feet, and that the net average value for the 100 cases is 145 cubic feet per seat. These data suggest that the greater percentage of present-day theatre structures have an excessive cubic-foot volume per seat. This fact indicates a lack of thought given to coordinating the hearing and sight requirements in fundamental planning because in most of these cases excessive volume was a result of excessive ceiling height.

Providing for lower ceiling heights than has heretofore been general practice will produce:

(2) Smaller surface areas to be acoustically treated, permitting control of sound by the shaping of interior surfaces.

(3) Economies in theatre construction costs realized through the reduction in quantity of materials, structural and otherwise.

There are two additional advantages which should be be overlooked. One is that economies in the size and capacity of sound reproducing systems are frequently made possible in theatre auditoriums having reduced cubic-foot volumes per seat. The other advantage is that excessive power output is not required to compensate for high sound energy losses that may be caused by excessive use of acoustical materials.

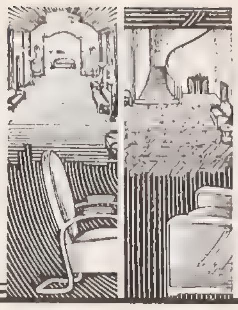
The final phase of theatre planning influencing both the acoustical conditions and the architectural treatment is the shaping or styling of surfaces within the auditorium. It functions with the proper determination of basic outline and structural volume to control the character of sound and the destination of sound reflections.

Functional Planning

In Figure 3 are shown the longitudinal and cress-sectional views of a theatre planned to seat 900 persons. This theatre was designed in accordance with the principles outlined in this paper and is now under construction. The horizontal ratio of proportions is 1:1.67, and the structural volume is 123 cubic feet per seat. No sound absorbing materials are used on either the wall or ceiling surfaces. These surfaces are of furred construction and are finished in ordinary hard plaster.

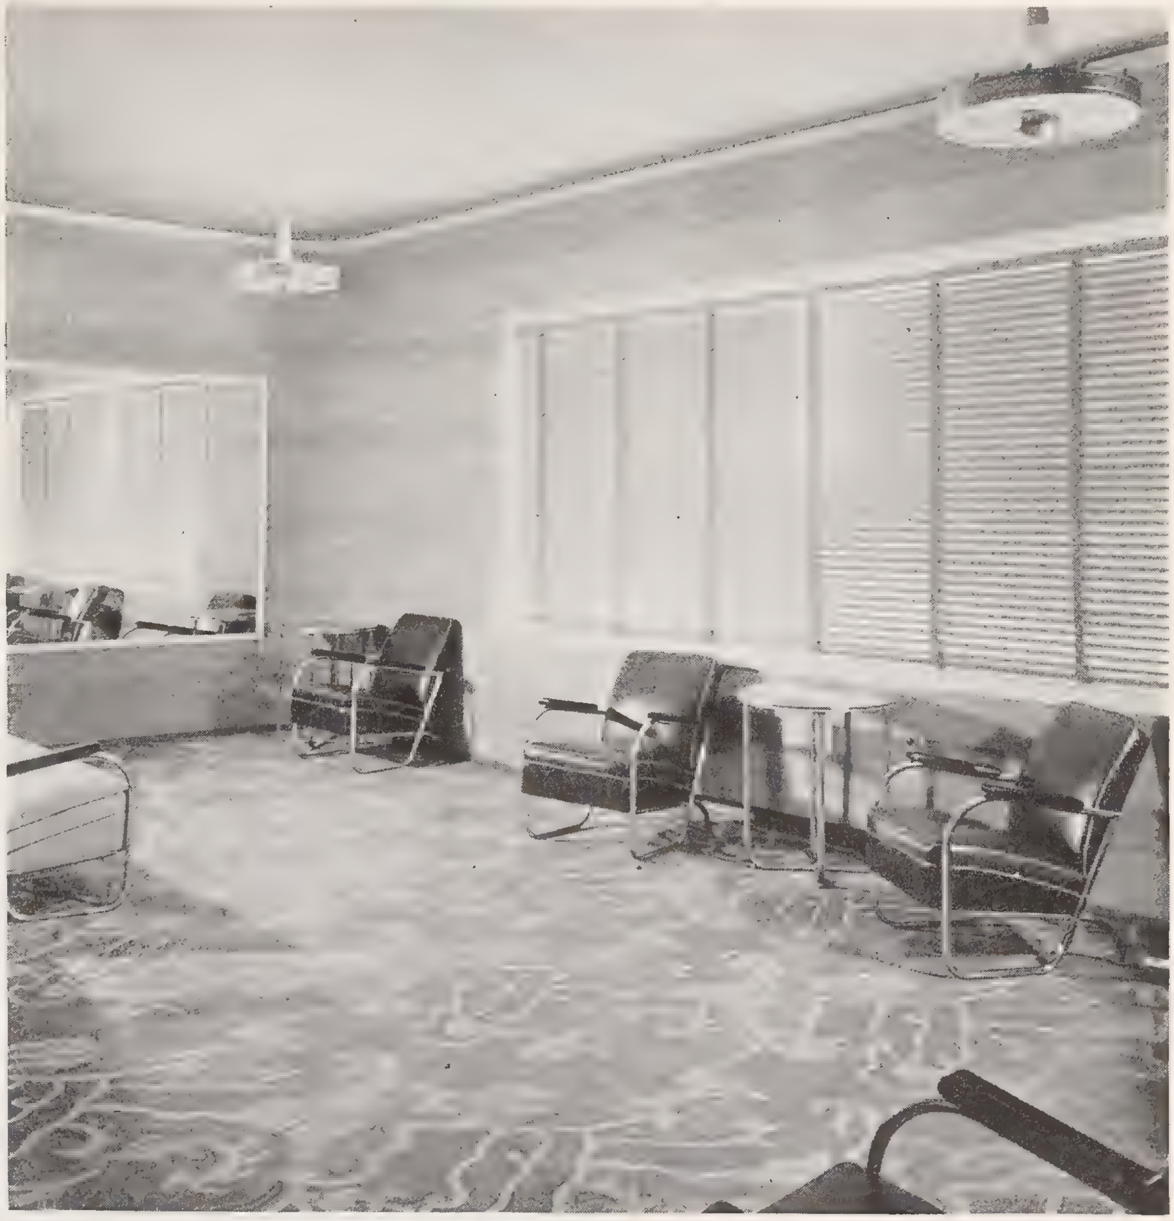
The side walls are composed of a series of horizontal angular and sloping sections which not only vary in width, but also in their degree of projection from a vertical line. The rear wall area is reduced to a minimum and a convex projection is incorporated in the design of the balcony rear wall. The ceiling, in the form of sloping planes joined by convex sections, is also designed, as are the walls, to control the destination and dispersion of sound reflections.

FURNITURE • for lounge & foyer



A SMALL TOWN MEETING PLACE

IN SMALL TOWNS especially, the value of a commodious, well appointed lounge as a meeting place is emphasized. Having such significance, it should be informal, and whenever conditions permit, it should be placed where it is readily accessible immediately upon entrance from the street. This scheme has been well worked out in a general lounge provided in the Model theatre, South Haven, Mich., illustrated here. South Haven has a population of only 5,000; the theatre, which is operated by Butterfield Theatres, has a capacity of but 500. Yet a substantial portion of the ground floor frontage has been given to the lounge, located immediately adjacent to the foyer. Furnished in keeping with the limitations of the small town theatre, the room yet is colorful. Furniture consists in Royalchrome metal chairs and settee with deep cushions and imitation leather coverings in colors repeating those of the walls, ceiling and carpet. Plastered walls are painted several shades of blue, and the ceiling vermillion with white trim, while the Crestwood Velvet carpet has a modernized traditional pattern in the same colors. A single Royalchrome metal table, with burn-resisting lacquered top, completes the furnishings, except for a mirror and Venetian blinds across a broad window by which advantage was taken of the front location of the lounge to give the lounge a "living-room" atmosphere, added interest and prominence.



The architect of the Model theatre was W. L. Pereira of Chicago.

Essential Facts About the Weaves Of Carpets Suitable to Theatres

- A non-technical discussion of the principal types of woven floor coverings adapted to theatre use, confined to those considerations of practical significance to exhibitors

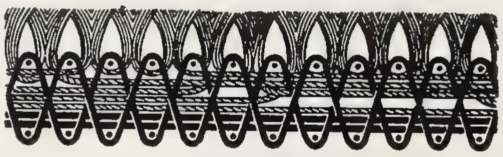
By NORMAN PATTERSON

THE FOLLOWING description of carpet weaves is intended, primarily, to properly identify the various types of carpeting best adapted for use in the theatre. Certain manufacturing processes and technique should not concern us inasmuch as there exists, even today, considerable differences of opinion as to the relative merits and demerits of the different procedures employed by the manufacturers themselves.For practical purposes, we can say that the reputable mill generally employs the best methods and materials consistent with standards determined by the price line on specific qualities and not so much by type of weave.

A light résumé of the four different types of available theatre carpeting will now be in order but it should be remembered that superiority in method of weave does not necessarily guarantee equivalent advantages in quality.

THE WILTON WEAVE

Wilton carpeting can be best identified by noting that the pattern is woven directly into the carpet through the use of strands of individually colored yarn. Although many colors appear in different sections of the face of the design, when a particular shade of yarn disappears in the pattern and then has to reapear even several inches later, it runs "buried" underneath the pile as illustrated in the diagram below:



Cross-section in diagram of Wilton carpeting. In weaving, yarn for each color is available for every tuft in each row of pile. The other yarns contribute strength, weight and depth to the fabric, giving the carpet a cushion back which absorbs vibrations and makes the surface springy and "rich underfoot."

In this type of construction the pattern is brought out sharp and clear and remains so even after considerable wear. Wilton, as one of the principal theatre carpetings, has a tried and tested history and offers an unusually large range of colors and figurings designed especially for theatre use. For effect, durability, and range of pattern the better Wiltons are admirably suited for use in the main body of theatre carpeting practice.

THE VELVET WEAVE

Velvet carpeting is manufactured with the yarn printed in the design first before it is actually woven into the finished product. On the loom this carpet is woven easily and with speed, which is a factor to be reckoned with when the mill considers the production costs. The design printed yarn appears after passing through the looming process in its final pattern with such clarity that it is necessary to bend the carpet open in the pile to see where two colors meet in the pattern. You will note where the one color of the design appears on a single strand of yarn and faintly impinges onto the next color on the same strand at the point where the visible pattern is formed by the two colors meeting.

Velvet is the other type of carpeting used in the majority of theatre installations. The better grade Velvets can and do compete favorably with good Wiltons, and offer a considerable variety of patterns created primarily for theatre requirements. The best evidence of its adaptability is shown by its wide and popular use.

THE CHENILLE WEAVE

Chenille (French for caterpillar) is generally used in rug form and is woven by machine and hand in such a manner as to resemble the fur upon the back of a caterpillar. This weave's principal features permit the utmost in luxuruious feeling, appearance, designs and shapes. Its tremendous pile has unusually great wearing qualities and is best suited for large theatres with foyers and lounges decorated and furnished in the grand manner. The flexibility in weave permits custom made designs in any desired colors, with resulting original and beautiful effects. The process of construction allows great variety in the larger sizes and shapes necessary for enormous foyers, eliminating seams and lending itself to desired conformations such as circles, ovals, multiangular shapes and curves around the base of grand staircases, etc.

Cross-section in diagram of Velvet carpeting. The pile is looped over long wire and the yarn extends only to the stuffer (parallel heavy lines from right to left), which gives a measure of resiliency and weight in place of the yarn itself.

Nationally known "showplaces," famous for their elaborate décor and exceptionally heavy traffic conditions, employ Chenille rugs to achieve the maximum in beauty and durability. It has also been used with excellent results in smaller theatres emphasizing the luxury class angle, but its costliness has generally prohibited the consideration of Chenille in the regular theatre field.

THE AXMINSTER WEAVE

Axminster carpet may be recognized by bending the carpet pile back and observing that the pile tufts running across the carpet are rarely loosely woven, completely separated from each other at the base by a large jute weft thread to which no tufts are attached. It method of looming permits the use of fine small patterns and a tremendous variety of colors.

Axminster carpeting, as a class, does not properly fall within the range and type of carpeting in general use in the theatre today, but that should not deter the reader from considering it under unusual conditions, such as for recovering certain portions of old houses that are only thrown open on rare occasions.

It can also be used when secondary lounges with light traffic conditions do not warrant much of an investment or where floor coverings for immediate and relatively short periods of use are indicated. There are instances where the finer grade Axminsters have been given consideration in theatre practice and many times they have furnished results more than comparable.

WEAVE PREFERENCE

In the last few years, the average well kept, medium-price neighborhood house has reached that stage in efficient management, chain or independent, where carpet expenditure has almost become a too fixed item in the budget. The "X" chain uses the "A Carpet Company's" lower priced Wilton exclusively. The "Y" Theatres Corporation confines itself entirely to the "B Carpet Company's" line of higher priced Velvets, and the "Z" Amusement Circuit refuses to interview competitive salesmen trying to displace the "C Rug Corporation's" super deluxe quality of Axminster.

For these and other pertinent reasons such as confidence created by your carpet dealer, I do not propose to deal with the highly debatable subject of Wilton versus Velvet versus Axminster. It is as futile as discussion over the relative merits of well advertised brands of ciragettes. For theatre practice purposes it will suffice to say, although even then it is not a hard and fast rule, that the best Wiltons are superior to the best Velvets and the best Velvets are much better than the finer Axminsters.

Many times the writer has been told by theatre owners that they have been dissatisfied with the results obtained from a particular type of weave. These complaints have been directed equally at Wilton, Velvet and Axminster. In some instances, investigation proved that the theatres involved were undercarpeted as far as grade and quality were concerned, irrespective of weave, and that the peculiar nature of the traffic conditions in these theatres did not warrant the colors or quality employed. Traffic was abnormally heavy for the grade of carpeting used, or in other cases cleaning methods, climatic or underflooring conditions, etc., were responsible for early breakdown in the carpeting.

Practical Procedure in Selection

Sympathizing with the theatre owners' natural desire to keep his carpet replacement expenditures at a minimum, we hold that his complaint should not, in the above cases, be directed against the weave, brand name or maker. In these instances, the carpet mills are innocent bystanders for the very simple reason that competition alone forces them to give a good value in every grade and quality they manufacture. In the future, a little mature reflection may achieve much. Why not ask for recommendations and suggestions for your specific problems? You would be surprised at the amount of data available to aid you in your case.

Theatre PLAN & FORM

UNOBSTRUCTED vision of the total picture area is sometimes referred to as first-row vision. Now, what is meant by this term?

First-row vision means that the viewer is able to see the entire picture area with no interfering obstruction by the heads of persons seated in the row immediately ahead of the viewer.

Second-row vision means that the viewer is able to see the entire picture area without interfering obstruction by the heads of persons seated two rows ahead. In the past we have generally been satisfied (without, indeed, giving the matter much thought) to accept second-row vision. During the past year or so, however, we have been hearing more and more about first-row vision, and there is considerable evidence that the higher standard represented in this term is finding an increasing number of adherents.

Posture with Second-Row Vision

If the exhibitor chooses between first and second-row vision, he is of course making a choice between degrees of comfort for his patrons. With second-row vision the patron has a view only partially obstructed, but the factor of sitting posture is decidedly different for this standard than for first-row vision. In the case of second-row vision, not only is it necessary to sit in a strained position—that of leaning to one side and holding the head at an uncomfortable angle—but it is also often necessary for from ten to fifteen persons seated one behind the other, to shift their positions when one patron changes his position in his chair, leans his head to one side, and so on. In addition to the annoying physical discomforts caused thereby, this shifting causes serious temporary obstruction of the view of the picture—interruption in the enjoyment of the performance.

First-row vision eliminates all of these disadvantages, allowing the patron to sit as he pleases, for his own comfort and convenience, at any time during the show.

The exhibitor who is interested in this vision problem may investigate it himself by standing at the standee rail, or at about the center line of the auditorium when nearly all the seats are occupied, and observe the postures of the persons in approximately the last fifteen or twenty rows. An observation period of from ten to fifteen minutes is necessary.

In our next column we will discuss methods of obtaining first-row vision in existing as well as new theatres.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants on inquiries from readers seeking counsel on the planning of theatres.

Projection Room Below a Balcony

AN inquiry received recently presented the somewhat unusual problem of placing the projection room underneath the balcony, instead of in its customary position. In general, the inquiry reads as follows:

We are at this time planning a new theatre which will seat between 800 and 1,000 patrons, for a plot 140 feet square. We will use a depth of between 86 feet and 90 feet for the auditorium proper, and have figured the width at 40 feet, to accommodate three banks of seats with two aisles between. The balcony will project about 39 feet and will seat about 200. The materials used for construction will be steel and concrete. We are seeking information mainly on placing the projection room under the balcony and directly above the lobby ceiling. We would also appreciate information covering any additional improvements.

In replying, it was pointed out that if the conventional downward floor slope is used for the main seating level, placing of the projection room beneath the balcony would tend to increase the pitch of the balcony seating area. The balcony pitch, for an arrangement of this kind, could be reduced to a more normal one, however, if the orchestra floor were designed so that the first row of seats could be at the same level as the last row with sight lines properly determined. In either case, the projection angle would be the desired minimum, although the structural height would be reduced if latter scheme were used.

There is one point we wish to emphasize, namely, that such low positioning of the projection room might prove annoying to patrons sitting in the balcony.

In order to obtain the most desirable visual and acoustical form for such an arrangement, it would be advisable to have a width of approximately 55 feet for the auditorium, giving a seating bank ratio of 7-14-7. If the wall surfaces were not to be of furred construction, acoustical materials having a high degree of low-frequency absorption would be required to offset the "boomy" condition frequently encountered when only steel and concrete are used for wall construction. —B. S. and C. C. P.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

by

C. C. POTWIN

Consultant in Acoustics

MANY ACOUSTICAL difficulties causing inferior hearing conditions in the motion picture theatre can be traced either directly or indirectly to the rear wall surface. All too frequently, little attention is given to (1) the proper acoustical form and area of the rear wall in planning new theatres, and (2) the correct sound absorption values of acoustical materials often required for this surface as a part of modernization work.

In considering the rear wall problem in basic theatre design, an analysis will first be made of the horizontal and vertical form of this surface relative to efficient sound control and pleasing architecture.

It is generally accepted as a fundamental principle in auditorium planning that curved surfaces of the concave type are undesirable because they tend to focus sound waves reflected from them to certain points, and thus to create echoes or areas of sound concentration. Although a number of articles have already been written in an attempt to explain the defects produced by such forms and to discourage their use, observations indicate that curvatures are still being employed to a very large extent, and particularly in the design of the rear wall.

Effect of Seating on Wall Form

The basic form of the rear wall in the horizontal plane is apparently influenced in present design practice by the seating plan and its general arrangement. If, for example, the seating banks follow a definite concave curve across the width of the auditorium, as they usually do in a comparatively wide house, it has been common practice to strike a curve for the shape of the rear wall which follows essentially the same curve as that of the seating banks. Obviously this is done primarily for reasons of appearance and with little thought given to desirable or undesirable acoustical form. Experience has proved that even though the center point establishing the curve may lie well outside the limits of the seating area, nevertheless such construction introduces a type of surface which may ultimately become a source of major acoustical difficulty.

Sound absorbing materials cannot always fully overcome the effects of a curved rear wall. The true curvature should be eliminated or modified in design. This can be done successfully from both the acoustical and architectural viewpoints, as will be explained in further discussion of this problem in this column in the next issue.

Sound Trouble-Shooting Charts

7. LOCATING TROUBLE POINTS

• Concluding a series of guides in the general maintenance of sound reproduction equipment. The first charts appeared in the issue of April 2, 1938, subsequent groups in alternate issues.

By AARON NADELL

PREVIOUS CHARTS of this series have been concerned with apparatus difficulties. The present (and concluding) installment deals with system troubles—that is, with faults located somewhere in the sound installation but not as yet isolated to a specific apparatus unit. The process of isolation is traced in these charts; when it is accomplished they have completed their duty and they then give way (as indicated) to some one of the earlier charts.

Sound systems as a whole, when compared with each other, vary far more widely than do any of their apparatus components; consequently these charts, more than any of their predecessors, are to be taken purely as guides to be modified by the user according to individual conditions, never as universal or infallible rules applying in every case. They are used in the same way as the preceding charts, and like them are arranged to give the fastest and most efficient results under average projection room conditions.

Sound Trouble Sleuthing Today With a Truck Load of Gadgets

How service men now track down system faults with speed and certainty

By F. C. GILBERT

F. C. Gilbert

EFFICIENT, fast-moving sound service required by conditions today, calls for more than a competent inspector with a voltmeter and an educated "nose for trouble." The finest, most carefully adjusted results of a few years ago would not be considered even passable with the new sound systems. Modern work must be done far more accurately, and above all, more rapidly. It is done with the help of a full automobile-load of test equipment, each item the most efficient possible for the particular job to which it applies, and many of them unknown and unimagined in earlier days. Technique and test equipment have in fact improved at least as extensively as the sound apparatus itself, probably more so.

The inspector has improved with them. He now requires a detailed training and background comparing with those of his early predecessors about as a modern flutter bridge compares with a pair of headphones. Laboratory apparatus in untrained hands is no help. It is more likely than not to be a source of additional confusion. The modern inspector must know the insides and workings of each complicated test gadget as well as he knows the circuits and internal performance of his sound systems. Under his ministrations, the tester and the item tested become temporarily a single electrical unit, the performance of which is understood at every point. Otherwise the observed results would be misleading, as in the simple case of applying a common voltmeter to an amplifier grid bias, in which the meter reading is always wrong and can be interpreted only by those who understand voltmeters as well as amplifiers. More elaborate examples of the same general principle would make today's ultra-efficient testers substantially useless if they were not applied by equally efficient hands.

On the other hand, while the art of servicing improves, and requirements are refined, basic needs are still basic, and the first of these is to keep the show going. For that purpose the modern inspector carries in his car another contrivance, a complete emergency amplifier that is practically a complete emergency sound system. It is no longer necessary to look for trouble before the audience can have its sound back. If there is a soundhead and a working speaker backstage, nothing more is needed. The emergency unit plugs into any sound system in a few moments, and the inspector is free to do the real part of his job thoroughly and carefully, taking time to run down not only the cause of the trouble, but if circumstances so indicate, the cause of that cause. And as already indicated, he has an automobile-load of test equipment for doing it.

EMERGENCY AMPLIFIER

The emergency amplifier, although not suited or intended for permanent use, is capable of delivering enough power to supply the largest theatre with adequate volume, temporarily, and with satisfactory quality. The output stage consists of a pair of 6L6's working in Class A. The response between 100 and 5,000 cycles is flat within plus or minus 1 db. Distortion is 6% at 25 watts ouput, 2% at 15 watts. Gain is sufficient for direct operation from the photocell socket. The amplifier includes a clickless changeover switch suited to any type of sound changeover, and the entire device is adapted to restore the show of practically any sound system in almost any condition of trouble. Yet it is small enough and light enough to enable the inspector, by merely slipping the canvas carrying strap over his shoulder, to take it up to a projection room that is reached even by a ladder.

TEST FILMS

The show having been assured, detailed adjustments can be carried to a high degree of perfection. The Altec inspector carries in his car not one but seven test films, and in addition, an audio-frequency oscillator. The multi-frequency film, used for today's more elaborate variations of the familiar transmission test, is accurately calibrated, giving the sound system different frequencies to work on at known values of volume input.

Volume output at each frequency is measured with an indicator that is no longer restricted to the loudspeaker circuit to get volume enough to drive it, but can be connected elsewhere in the system lines. Thus several components of the installation can be checked individually for frequency response, and the cause of any distortion run down without recourse to the older, slower, clumsier and more expensive substitution method. Further, by using his emergency amplifier, the response of which he knows and periodically rechecks in the Altec laboratory, the inspector can use his output meter to read even the photoelectric cell performance. Consequently there is no nook in the system where distortion can hide, to be driven out only laboriously by substitutions of apparatus. On the contrary, the first beginnings of distortion, wherever located, are turned up accurately, exactly measured, compared with known standards for the item in question, corrected, and kept on record for comparison in future inspections.

The test films include a loop of 1,000-cycle and 8,000-cycle toe-recorded negative frequency film, which makes possible rapid over-all transmission tests. With the help of the emergency amplifier, one projector can be thus checked while the other is carrying the show, the whole process taking much less time than the showing of a single reel. There is also an 8,000-cycle loop for adjusting lens assemblies, and a special "buzz film" that has sound tracks, not in the usual place, but on either side of it, for checking lateral alignment. A recording of women's voices, or sound of similar pitch, is used for checking the phase relationship of high- and low-frequency speakers. The pitch of such recordings is located close to the cross-over between the two speaker systems and facilitates upon physically shifting the high-frequency units, determination of correct phase relations.

TESTING FOR FLUTTER

Still another special film is a 250-foot length of 3,000-cycle recording, used with the inspector's flutter bridge, by means of which flutter is checked by actual measurement, and every least step taken with a view toward improvement reveals immediately whether it is a step in the right or the wrong direction—a far cry from the old flutter testing by ear and its consequent guesswork and delays, with final results of hopeful but doubtful character.

Lastly, the inspector has a steel film, highly flexible but unshrinkable, with which he checks the film path, and which also allows him to determine if film shrinkage is a primary cause, or a contributing cause, to any difficulty experienced.

CHECKING BEYOND SYSTEM

Supplementing all these test films is the audio-oscillator, which produces electrical frequencies of any desired pitch. Thus the inspector is no longer limited to the tones recorded on his test films. He can create sound of any pitch human ears can hear, and among other advantages, he can, by playing that sound through the screen speakers, check the auditorium for vibrating lighting fixtures, ventilating ducts or similar sources of annoying noise! The pitch of the oscillator is varied slowly until the offending part reveals itself by the intensity of its vibration in response to a sound of its own resonance.

THE NEW STROBOSCOPE

The stroboscope again, a device known in the earliest days of sound as a cardboard disc used to check the speed of rotation of the early phono-turntables, has been modernized in the form of a neon lamp and special circuit, giving a flash of high intensity at exactly 60 cycles. The film scanner, on which suitable lines have been engraved, seemingly stands still when so illuminated, and minute irregularities in its action become visible. The effect of adjustment made with a view to improving the scanner's performance is equally revealed to the eye, so that the work of correcting "wows" and similar oscillations in sound goes forward easily, systematically and swiftly. Further, the seeds of any such trouble are revealed in periodic inspections and uprooted before they become important.

The inspector whose district so requires him, carries two strobo lamps, for use with both A.C. and D.C. power lines.

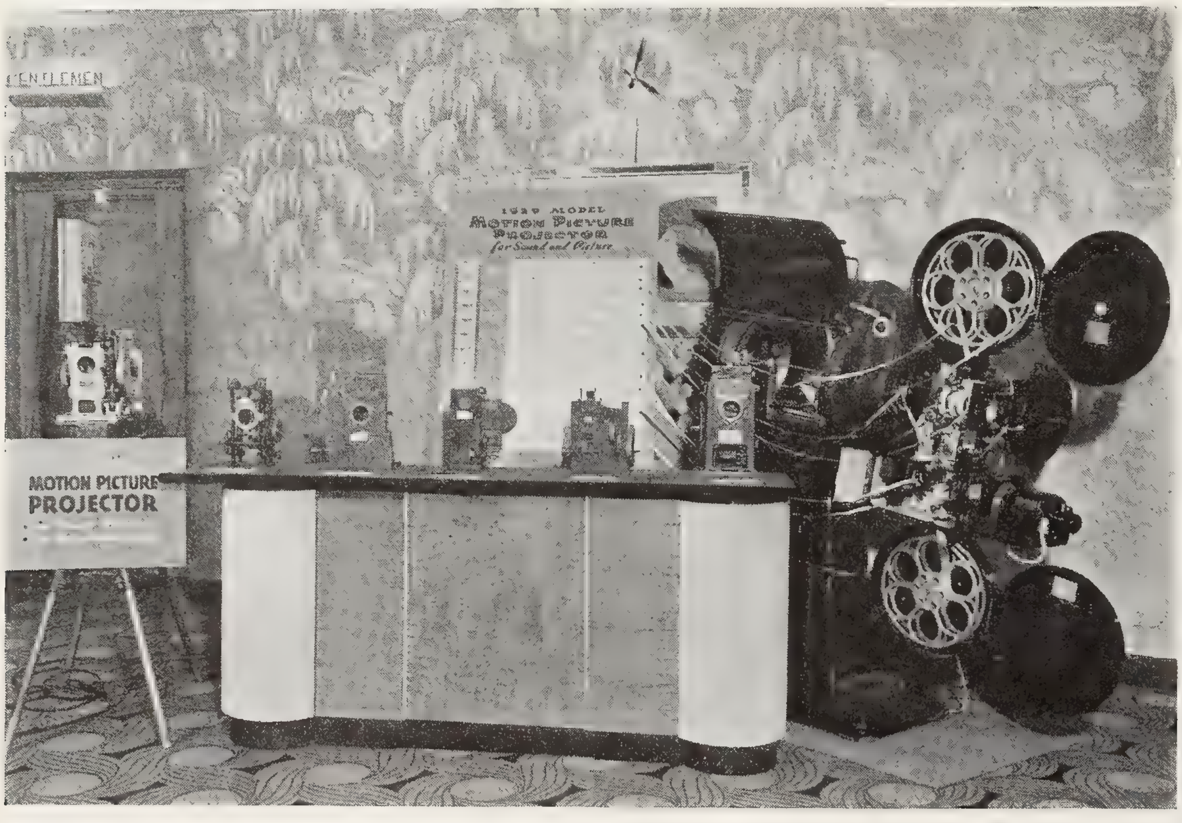
COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

EVEN IF YOUR MANAGEMENT DOESN'T CO-OPERATE—CARRY ON

IN WRITING primarily of of another matter, and in the course of speaking of a manager he had formerly worked for, a projectionist recently said, "I asked the manager to purchase the device, cost $3, but he refused. I might have purchased it with my own money, but it was a legitimate part of the equipment, the use of which would improve projection, so why should I? If the management thought so little of results that it balked at honoring a requisition for a three-dollar article that would last indefinitely, I should worry. As a matter of fact, a few such balks and I lost interest and didn't much care what happened to the show. Presently I left to work under an intelligent management that demanded good results and was able and willing to supply whatever was necessary."

More was said, but that is the kernel of the nut. Truly, it is most annoying when a manager acts thus. The real projectionist will, when confronted with such a situation, make a change as soon as he is able. However, I cannot in the least agree that one is justified in losing interest and not caring what happens to the show. Did the projectionist owe nothing to anyone except the manager, I might find it hard not to sympathize. But that is very far from being the case. Above and beyond all things else the projectionist owes a duty to the patrons and the industry which provides his job. He owes it to every one of the patrons in the auditorium to place upon the screen the very best that can be produced with what is supplied him to work with. He owes that to the producer who has invested a great sum of money in the production. He owes it to his craft—and ultimately to himself, for a man is only undermining his own character and skill when he evades the obligations of his job.

I give this matter some emphasis here because the attitude of this manager is not uncommon. Even though a manager refuse to honor requisitions for needed supplies, it nevertheless is up to the projectionist to carry on as best he may with what he has. It is truly very hard to accept that sort of thing, the more especially where a man is trying hard to do his best to get good results. However, the projectionist is the one who stands between audiences and all that has gone before in production. In proportion as he may fail, all else fails. If projection is poor, every one from actor to theatre patron must suffer. It is a projectionist's privilege to say what he wants to say about his manager (though preferably in private); but having thus relieved his feelings—blown off steam, as it were—he then should carry on, doing every possible thing he can to send audiences from the theatre of a mind to come again soon. Any other attitude is destructive, natural enough though it be.



Taking the public behind the scenes of the motion picture theatre—a projector display recently arranged in the lounge of the Trans-Lux theatre at Broadway and 49th Street, New York, consisting in a Simplex E7 projector contrasted with projector mechanisms of the past. Ribbons from various parts lead to cards explaining them. The exhibit was prepared by W. S. Schoening, manager of the theatre, in collaboration with P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation, and C. H. Secor, manager of the National Theatre Supply Company's New York branch.

STRAIGHT TALK ON THE ONE-MAN ISSUE

SOME PRETTY straight thinking on the one-man room issue has arrived from J. R. Prater, projectionist of the Princess theatre in Palouse, Wash. Doubtless there will be dissenters, but what Prater says is, in my judgment, well worth consideration. He writes:

"I was very much interested in your article in the February issue of BETTER THEATRES on one-man projection rooms, and will accept your invitation to comment. The one-man room is certainly not a desirable situation in any theatre, but when there is no choice between that and two men on full union wage scale, the one-man room is the only practicable solution for all except the large deluxe houses. But the great majority of theatres fall below this class. Their earning power is less, and their operating expense must be reduced in proportion. In most of these theatres I believe your suggestion of one competent projectionist and one helper or apprentice is a better solution than any other available today.

"Unquestionably, the second man can make it possible for a projection room to produce better screen results with greater dependability, safety and efficiency. It is equally true that these factors are worth money to the theatre. But whether or not they are a good investment depends upon how their value compares with their cost. Poor investments don't pay dividends; theatres that don't pay dividends don't last long; and dark theatres don't employ any projectionists.

"In a theatre running twelve hours every day, a second projectionist drawing $1 per hour adds $4,380 to every year's operating cost. For that tidy little sum any theatre, except a strictly deluxe house, can afford to tolerate a few minor faults in projection, some inefficiency in operation and maintenance, and the expense of a film fire as often as they ordinarily occur in one-man rooms where reasonable care is exercised, and still be ahead of the game. These things are by no means desirable, but if the cost of their prevention is too high, tolerating them is still good business. Unfortunately, theatres cannot produce perfect results at any cost, but must be satisfied with the best they can do within practical limits.

"The projectionists and unions must face this fact, and they will do well to make the best of it rather than stubbornly to fight for what is not in the cards. The same old objection to apprentices will be raised again as it has been before—namely, that the practice creates too many projectionists. This is as good an alibi as any to cover up the fact that many of the men now working are satisfied to learn and to do as little as possible and still get by. They are afraid new men will show them up and prefer to hold their jobs by keeping out any competition rather than by keeping ahead of it, even if it is only that of beginners.

"This attitude will never bring back the two-man crew, which has been lost largely through the projectionists' own neglect; neither will deliberately doing poor work in one-man rooms, trying to prove that two fully experienced men are necessary. Some exhibitors and managers have been projectionists themselves and know what can be done if a man really tries.

"Projection equipment today is definitely easier to operate than it was when sound was first introduced. At that time most of the sound was on discs, changeover cues were not standard, and many of the reels were short. The pioneer of talking pictures, Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," included five reels, each having a running time of less than two minutes. Many theatres were still using hand-fed arc lamps. Yet under these conditions, one can could put on the show acceptably and without interruptions day after day, because the writer has done it—not as well, as easily, as safely, as dependably, or as efficiently as two men could have done, but even so with better screen results than I have paid 55 cents to see in some first-class theatres.

"This does not mean that I favor the one-man policy. I have put in a good many years in one-man projection rooms and fully realize the inconvenience and shortcomings of the situation. But I do believe that a helper or apprentice is all a great many theatres can support for the second man. And let's not forget that they can not afford even that unless they receive the full equivalent in better results."

AND HERE'S STRAIGHT TALK ON TAILS-UP REELS

T. P. HOVER, a progressive projectionist of Lima, Ohio, writes, "The idea of shipping prints to theatres mounted in reverse (tails up) has raised quite a storm. (You know, every time some new idea in projection is introduced, sooner or later someone blames you for it!) Careful examination of this tails-up idea makes it appear that the only real argument disfavoring the practice is the effect upon exchanges and their inspections.

"With regard to this it should be obvious to projectionists that film exchanges in general are operated under direct supervision of a manager, and that these managers get their orders from some big boss, just the same as you and I. I don't believe shipping the prints out tails-up would have any serious effect upon time consumed. Even if some extra time were required, what of it, if service to our real boss, the theatre patron, is improved? That's the end we all seek, is it not?

"Certain exchanges spare no pains to deliver prints to theatres in excellent condition. Other exchanges are careless in this respect, almost disregarding both safety and good projection. Nothing you or I can do is going to change it, either.

"Projectionist Irl Gordon, Akron, Ohio, said the chief objection to the tails-up proposition was that where it had been tried, exchanges had been deluged with letters from theatre managers that films were being received with the leader on the wrong end. He said this type of complaint was fairly typical all over. To me the chief objection is that so many theatres have no house reels. Personally, I know several deluxe theatres that run the entire show using exchange reels.

"In some of them this is the case because, while they have house reels, they are so bady worn and bent that the exchange reels some of them monstrosities rather than reels, average as good or better than those owned by the house, and the management declines to supply new ones. The projectionist in one 2,300-seat deluxe theatre requisitioned a set of house reels; here was his answer: 'Requisition denied. All film now reaches the theatre on 2,000-foot reels, hence there is no need for them.'

"True, this great industry still has managers possessed of so little understanding; still, I can feel some sympathy with those refusing to replace badly damaged house reels. A set of really good house reels should last almost indefinitely, provided they be handled carefully."

The proper action, instead of refusing to provide house reels, would have been to replace the reels and make very pointed inquiry as to just how the old reels got into such condition, with a warning that future damage must be immediately reported, with explanation of its cause, else cost of damaged reel would be charged against the one inflicting the injury.

This suggestion should not cause any squawk. Aside from some very unlikely accident, a house reel may be (and I know of cases where they have been) used for a full five years and be substantially as good as new. Damage to house reels is almost invariably caused by negligence.

fect as possible at its center, I find its corners to be slightly out of focus. It is the same with both projectors. The screen image is approximately 18 feet wide; projection distance 93 feet; lenses Bausch & Lomb Cinephor Series No. 11. I will be very thankful if you can straighten out my trouble."

A trouble such as that here described has several possible causes. Assuming the screen itself to be perfectly flat, I think it must be due either to failure of the film to lie perfectly flat over the aperture opening, or to lenses poorly corrected for flatness of field. There are a couple of other possible causes, but it is unlikely that they would occur simultaneously to exactly the same extent in both projectors.

The lenses named are of excellent quality and the screen image dimensions are not excessive, considering the projection distance; hence we may, with reasonable confidence, eliminate the lenses as a possible source of the trouble, which brings us to failure of film to lie perfectly flat over the projector aperture openings as the probable cause of the trouble.

This may be ascribed to one of three conditions. First, there is film that is itself warped or buckled, which condition usually may be detected by casual examination. However, since the fault seems continuously present with both projectors, that evidently is not the solution in this case.

Next there is the possibility that the aperture plates are themselves pulled out of shape by being contacted to a surface that is not perfectly clean. But again it seems hardly probable such a condition would occur to exactly the same extent on both projectors. (In any event, remove one of the plates, clean the contact surfaces thoroughly, reinstall and try it out.)

The most probable cause, however, is worn aperture plate tracks. Obtain from a local hardware dealer 6-inch steel rule of good quality and, using it as a straightedge, test the aperture plate tracks for wear, remembering that (especially if the wear nearest the edge of the aperture opening be slightly more than at the outer edge) just the least bit of wear will force the frame of film over the aperture to "cup" slightly, which would induce the condition you describe. Then, too, if the tracks are worn, the tension shoes will be worn exactly as much and in exactely the same curvature, hence new aperture plates call for installation of new aperture tension shoes as well.

APS, 25 YEARS OLD, INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS

THE AMERICAN Projection Society was born a quarter of a century ago, and it's still going strong. Recently new officers were installed by P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation. They are: president, Edward McD. Bendheim; vice president, Alfred R. T. Bishop; secretary, Frank McMahon; treasurer, James Ambrosio; sergeant-at-arms, Jack Chulchian. The board of governors consists of Ed Ferris, Ed Levene, Fred D. Smith, Alex Polin, and Tony Rugino.

This society was the first technical organization in the motion picture field. Mr. McGuire has been an honorary member for many years, and this is the sixth year in succession that he has installed its officers. Wally Byrne, who served as president for five years, expressed regret that his duties as business agent for Local 306 made it difficult for him to continue as an active officer of the organization.

ON THE OVERLOADING OF MOTOR-GENERATORS

MY GOOD friend John Hertner, president of the Hetrner Electric Company, very kindly contributes a few precautions concerning motor-generator operation. He writes:

"The existence of overload conditions has always been recognized by the electrical fraternity and overload ratings have been established. Two things limit such ratings —commutation, and the amount and time of such overload.

"The first, commutation, need but be mentioned here because if a machine is properly designed, it does not enter into consideration. The second, amount of overload and its duration, is a matter of the heat storage capacity of the machine.

"When any motor or generator is under load, a certain part of the energy put into it is lost as heat. This heat is at first absorbed in raising the temperature of the machine, and finally a balanced temperature is reached where the heat lost by radiation, convection and conduction exactly balances the heat produced, and the constant temperature is reached.

"If the machine is heavy in metal, such as a large generator, its heat storage capacity is correspondingly great and a severe overload may be borne for a time without any great rise in temperature. If it is very small, it will heat much more quickly. If it is a lamp filament or a device such as a copper oxide rectifying element, the heating is almost instantaneous.

"The 15% service factor today applied to motors simply indicates that 15% overload may be carried at will without injury to the motor. It should be noted, too, that the 40° C. rise is far below the real danger point in an atmosphere at the usual room temperature.

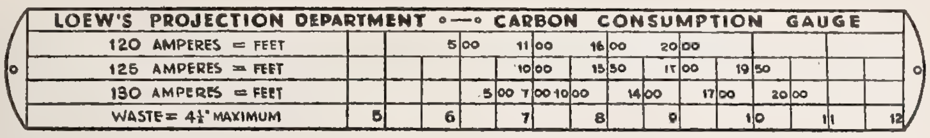
"The electrical manufacturers have always discouraged overloads because such overloads will always be encountered, and any encouragement of overloading would simply lead to superimposing one overload on top of another to the point where serious damage might result."

GAUGE TO DETERMINE REMAINING CARBON LIFE

A HANDY carbon gauge has been developed by the projection department of Loew's, Inc., headed by Lester Isaac, who is assisted by M. D. O'Brien. It is made up on metal.

The gauge is designed to determine, with suitable accuracy and little trouble or consumption of time, the amount of film that may be projected with an available carbon stub. Before the advent of this gauge many stubs were thrown aside as useless, some of them even as much as 12 inches long, this because projectionists, unable to ascertain the footage they might be depended upon to project, did not want to "take a chance" on stoppage of the show.

This gauge has been designed to determine, within a safe margin for the three amperages noted thereon, the footage of film that stubs of various lengths less than 12 inches will project. The distance from the cross-line at the left end to the first line at its right, measures (on the actual gauge) 4.5 inches. This has, after months of exhaustive tests, been determined as the maximum amount of unavoidable waste. In use a stub is laid upon the gauge, its butt end against the cross-line at the extreme left. Taking into consideration which of the three amperages are used, the footage of film it will project will be indicated by the vertical line its burned end reaches to.



Loew carbon guide (1/3 scale)

For example, if it reaches to the fourth line (marked 6) it will project 500 feet if the amperage is 120, but not if it be higher. At 120 amperes, if it reaches to the line marked 9, it will project 2,000 feet of film, but only 1,700 if the amperage be 125, a reel of 1,750 feet being possible only if it reaches to the short cross-line between lines 9 and 10. In the event a stub reaches only to the short line between lines 5 and 6, it would be safe for some subject not exceeding, say, 200 feet.

The gauge is designed only for use on 13.6-mm. carbons. The figures above quoted do not take into consideration the use of any of the various types of carbon savers. Several of the guages were put into actual use before it was finally determined to adopt them.

REWINDING FOR SHIPMENT DURING COLD WEATHER

RECENTLY TWO projectionists, E. W. Patrick and D. Smith of the Plaza theatre in Great Bend, Kans., asked if it were not reasonable to suppose that if a print just projected be wound, under the usually rather heavy rewinder tension, to a cold exchange reel for shipment, the strain due to contraction would not place a heavy strain on splices, possibly rupturing them.

Personally I could see no ill effect likely from such cause, but it was a new point, so I passed the matter along to Eastman Kodak Company's engineering department for decision. Their reply reads:

"We have discussed the question raised in your letter, with the decision that no evidence is available to us that the condition described is serious. Undoubtedly many projectionists now do, at last showing of prints, rewind them on an exchange reel that is relatively cold, but because of your own knowledge of and close touch with this field you would have report of any troubles arising from this condition.

"Incidentally, it would seem that a more drastic test of the effect of temperature would be encountered when reels are shipped in winter, especially when long hauls are made by truck, with temperatures down to a very low point."

That last remark has special interest. There seems to be no exact information available as to film shrinkage due to changes in temperature. It would be interesting to know what is the shrinkage per foot due to temperature drop, taking average spot heat as high and dropping in, say, ten degree steps, to 45 degrees below zero. Such figures might serve as warning against too snug rewinding where winter temperatures are low.

It is not at all impossible that exchange inspectors have found strained or partially ruptured splices in the past that were due to the condition we are discussing. However, I might not hear of this because it is unlikely inspectors would realize the underlying cause for the trouble.

A HAUNTED SCREEN AND QUICK WORK

A PROJECTIONIST who asks that his name be withheld, writes, "When I started projection I was thirteen years of age. Right at the beginning I had an experience that almost produced a nervous breakdown. The regular projectionist was taken ill and I, until then a helper, had to run the show. Somehow (have my suspicions) one of the rotating shutters came loose. When I made the first changeover, the screen was definitely haunted by the most complete family of travel ghosts I have ever observed—streaks from top to bottom.

"I was compelled to stop the show and switch the reel to the other projector, whereupon I was confronted with the problem of setting the shutter. I had sufficient common sense to set, first of all, the shutter adjusting knob in central position; then, working (mentally) at high speed I doped it out that when the intermittent sprocket just started to move, the master blade should cover about one-half of the lens. So I set it that way. When changeover time came I nearly bit the top end of my heart off, but, oh joy, there was not a sign of ghost, and that, too, without touching the adjusting knob!

"I don't imagine I am the only one who knows that method, but perhaps some do not. Anyhow, it was a harrowing experience for a beginner!"

It certainly was, and you proved you had brains by solving the matter so efficiently and so quickly. However, today no man should be permitted to take charge of projection until he has competent knowledge of such matters as synchronism of the rotating shutter and the intermittent movement.

INTERESTING IDEAS FROM ALASKA

MARION B. STOUT, a projectionist in Petersburg, some miles south of Juneau, Alaska, writes, "I was much interested in the letter of Brother Nelson of Houston, Tex., concerning the use of gray colors on projection room walls; also the article 'Reducing Amperage At Matinees to Save.'

"With regard to gray walls, Mr. Nelson covered the matter rather completely except for one thing, the ommission of which doubtless was an oversight. But the point is important. Gray is neutral to all colors, therefore may be matched with any of them without displeasing effect. This fact is emphasized by schools of art. Also, as Mr. Nelson says, it is pleasing to the eye. Observe store show windows. You will note that those in which that color predominates are most pleasing.

"As to reducing amperage to 'save,' I proceded to cypher things out. Our light source uses 22 amperes at 55 volts, which equals 1.21 kilowatts. Average running time two hours. That cyphers out 2.42 kilowatt hours, and since the rate here is 10 cents per kwh., the cost is 24.2 cents per show, running at full illumination.

"True, we possibly might reduce to 18 amperes, but with less excellent effect, as I am sure you will agree. Even though we did so, the 'saving' would be $00.034 cents. Phoeey! Wish I knew the brother's name so I could transmit the figures to him. I feel the show should be run at maximum excellence or not run at all. Am fortunate in working under a manager who makes no attempt to 'save' pennies at risk of the excellence of what our audiences see and hear."

As to the gray, I have said my say. While projection rooms should be made as comfortable as possible, still projectionists are employed primarily to work, and when comfort and ability to produce maximum results collide, work always should win. I repeat, most emphatically, the darker the front wall, down even to dead black, the clearer, sharper, better view the projectionist will have of his screen, and the better his view the more likely is it that maximum sharpness of definition (a highly important item) will be maintained. Not only that, but the greater will be the number of minor defects in the screen image detected and remedied.

During the four years I worked as a projectionist I demanded that the front wall be non-gloss black. Were I engaged in practical projection today, I would do the same. My view was that I was there to work. While I was there my mind was wholly occupied by my work, and my eyes were on the screen every possible moment.

As to saving, Friend Stout has omitted one important point; namely, the means by which line voltage is reduced. Presumably it is 110 volts, a.c., in which case there would be a large difference between transformer and resistance reduction. If it is the former, about 10% transformer loss occurs, if the latter, the resistance wattage is roughly equal to the carbon wattage.

But it is pleasing to know that even in far away Alaska, which of late is being recognized as capable of much agricultural development, we have wide awake men engaged in projection, willing to do their bit in studying the various problems of projection and helping maintain its high standards.

Directionalism in Microphones

[Concluding a series of three articles on microphone types. The first appeared in the January 7th issue, the second in that of February 4.]

For general use the new Western Electric cardioid microphone is designed to mount directly on a floor stand or desk stand. Table mountings of microphones have traditionally been of the close talking variety which push the instrument up to the face of the speaker. Room conditions have often dictated this technique but the directional characteristics of the new microphone permit satisfactory use at greater distances. Advantage of this has been taken in the new mounting which is a low set base styled to harmonize with the microphone. The upward tilt of the instrument overcomes the psychological tendency, fostered by earlier types in which quality varied with angle, to get directly in front of the microphone. Thus it is no longer necessary to hide the speaker behind a barrage of microphones set at chin level.

No tilting of the microphone is normally necessary as will be explained later. Because of its broad pick-up angle, sufficient adjustment usually may be obtained by setting the stand in the right direction. In special cases, however, such as in stage productions, hanging or other placement may require a tilting feature. For this purpose a universal swivel mounting is available. This suspends the microphone from its center of gravity and friction joints allow setting of the instrument in any direction. The mounting may either be suspended by cords or attached to a floor or desk stand.

Another feature of the new microphone is the three-way switch located at the lower rear portion of the housing. This allows the choice of the dynamic or ribbon units individually as well as the combination which gives the cardioid directional characteristic. Essentially then, the owner of a 639A has three microphones in one, non-directional performance from the dynamic, bi-directional from the ribbon, and cardioid-directional from the two together. Since the microphone is principally designed for the cardioid feature this is likely to be the most useful of the three positions, yet the microphone may be immediately converted into either of the basic types if a special occasion should demand it.

The 639A is designed for operation with amplifying equipment having an input impedance of either 30 or 50 ohms. Use with higher input impedances is possible under certain conditions but care should be taken to consider the undesirable results of the mismatch.

In order to demonstrate how closely the new microphone follows the cardioid directional characteristic at all frequencies, curves have been drawn on a standard decibel scale. Percentage scales are often used for this purpose but are likely to be misleading since 50% reduction looks like a lot more than the 6 db it actually is to the ear.

For ready reference, therefore, the chart of Figure 1 has been prepared. The figure has been shaded from light to dark to give a visual indication of the variation of sensitivity with angle. Also several zones have been designated as an aid to remembering how to utilize the performance of the microphone to best advantage. A "wide pick-up" zone of 120° represents the region in front of the microphone where there is practically no variation in quality or sensitivity. The "fading" zone from 60° to 150° on either side indicates that here the sensitivity changes rapidly with angle and care must be exercised to keep within range of the microphone. The dead zone at 60° at the back of the microphone is that for which sounds are discriminated against by approximately 20 db. In addition to these three principal zones, the sector from 60° to 90° on either side has been selected as the "announcer's" or close talking zone.

To understand the reason behind this announcer's zone requires a little explanation. The human voice is radiated as an expanding ball or sphere of sound, for low frequencies at least. Now it is a property of a spherical wave that whereas the pressure is independent of the wave length, the pressure difference between two neighboring points is not and this pressure difference becomes proportionately very large for points close to the source compared with the wave length. As a result a microphone of the ribbon type, which responds to the pressure difference, will, when placed close to a spherical sound source such as a person talking, favor the lower frequencies of long wave length. This is why ribbon microphones in general use are provided with a speech "strap" which equalizes for low frequency boom on close talking. The necessity for this can be avoided in the new microphone, however, by talking at 90° for in this position the ribbon element is contributing practically nothing, leaving the pick-up to the dynamic element which is not affected by the spherical character of the sound field. Although the "announcer's" zone is recommended for close talking, it should be recognized that since the ribbon element only contributes part of the output, the accentuation of its low end response by a spherical wave, is only partly reflected in the response of the combination microphone. Consequently, even at full front the new microphone does not accentuate lows in closely delivered speech as much as the ordinary ribbon microphone.

The "fading" zone is by no means useless for direct pick-up, but on the contrary, since the quality is just as good in this region, can be very useful if thoroughly understood. As an aid in this respect "isopics" have been developed. Isopics are lines of equal pick-up; lines along which a speaker may move without fading. It is clear that as one moves around the microphone loss of sensitivity may be compensated for by moving closer to the instrument; and the reverse is also true. Isopics are of cardioid shape. With a set of isopics on his stage floor plan a projectionist can readily predict the necessary positions for performers in the fading zone, either for full pick-up or for a fine degree of shading with respect to the whole.

The 639A cardioid directional microphone was thoroughly tested in the "proving ground" to demonstrate its worthiness before introducing it to the general public.

The approximate orchestra layout and the microphone placement as shown in Figure 3. Note that the microphone is set with its dead zone backed near a wall leaving plenty of room for arrangement of the orchestra within the wide pick-up zone. Because of the directional characteristic, reflections from the back wall were prevented from interfering with the direct sound. This made unnecessary the use of an acoustic screen or special damping of the wall surface. The stage was quite "live" in character, yet the new microphone handled the situation excellently and without particular care being paid to its exact position. Moreover, the same microphone was used by the announcer who stepped up to the side of the instrument as recommended, and without interfering with either the orchestra or the conductor. The quality of the reproduced sound was characterized by unusual definition of every instrument; the brasses, the woodwinds, and the strings standing out in full naturalness. Also the bass was very rich and clear without being "boomy." This was a result which it has not been found possible to equal with either the dynamic or ribbon element alone, a result directly attributable to the cardioid directional characteristic of the microphone.

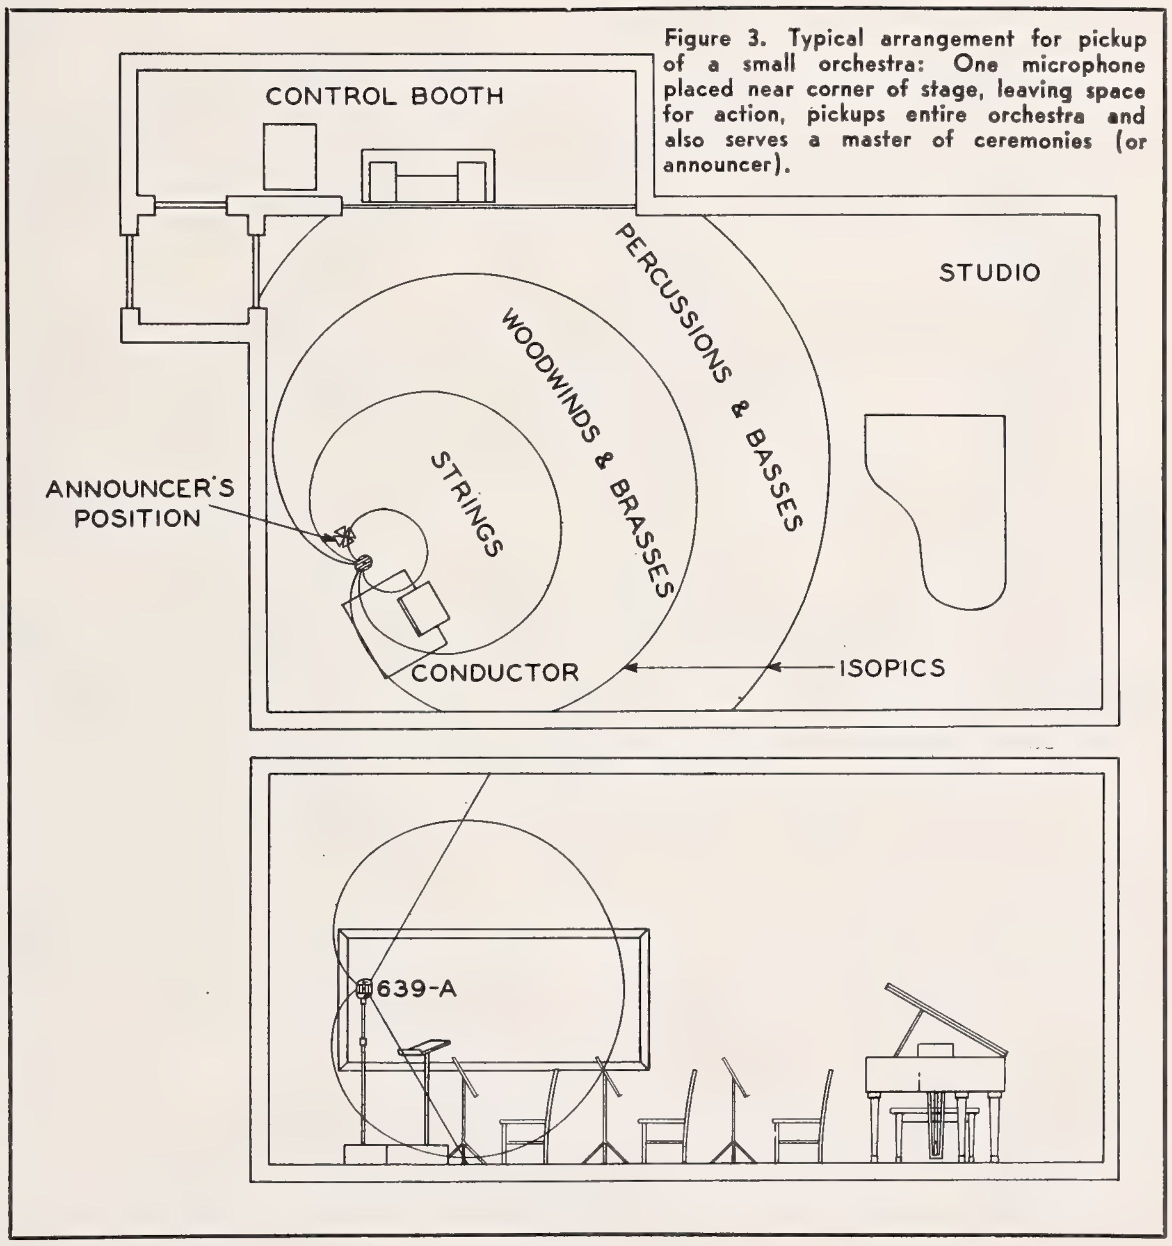

Figure 3. Typical arrangement for pickup of a small orchestra: One microphone placed near corner of stage, leaving space for action, pickups entire orchestra and also serves a master of ceremonies (or announcer).

The reason for the unusual quality obtained may be attributed to three principal features of the new microphone. First, the directionality gave prominence to the direct sound so that the individuality of the instruments was not lost in a jumble of echoes, that is to say the reverberation effect was reduced. Second, because of the cardioid directional response for bass as well as treble tones, indirect sound or reflections that were picked-up were transmitted with high fidelity. In other words, the quality of the microphone is good in the fading zone as well as the wide pick-up zone so that the total pick-up was evenly balanced. Third, since the microphone is made up of a pressure and pressure gradient element each responding to different properties of the sound, there are no "dead spots."

The actual trial thus indicated that pick-up control at the microphone, a long-cherished dream of sound engineers, has been accomplished.

Mr. Herbert Griffin,

International Projector Corp.
90 Gold Street,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Griffin:

Since April 7th, 1938, we have had in use at our Capitol Theatre, New York City, two Simplex E-7 mechanisms. Therefore I feel that you should be acquainted with our opinion of this new device as manufactured by your Company.

Frankly, I feel that the E-7 represents the greatest improvement since sound motion pictures. We have watched the operation of these mechanisms very carefully since they were installed, and we find that they deliver at least 15% more light to the screen with considerably less heat at the aperture, and the definition has been improved immensely.

In other words, the improvement in the projected image is so great with the E-7 the difference can be detected with the eye when changing over from another type mechanism.

Further, I feel that the design of the E-7 affords economy with improved results not heretofore obtainable with any other mechanism.

With kindest regards and best wishes.

Cordially,

Gentlemen:

Allow me to congratulate you on the splendid installation of RCA High Fidelity sound equipment in my new Centre Theatre at Radio Centre, Baltimore, Maryland.

This being the world premier installation of your new "Magic Voice of the Screen" equipment, I was naturally expecting something "extra" over other fine installations, and at the same time was just a little concerned about the "first night" results from a completely new system. However, your engineers handled this job so expertly that the sound contributed materially to the success of our premier opening. Frankly I have never received so many compliments on sound reproduction.

Very truly yours,

ADJUSTMENT

THE swift rise of critical controversy over "Yes, My Darling Daughter", and the even more rapid adjustment of the product to meet the issue of mores involved, affords a significant demonstration by the imposing House of Warner of constructive capacity in relating the screen to its customers.

By reason of the facile procedures involved, the screen emerges from the borderland of a realm of dangerous conflict without impairment of its institutional status.

Recognition of the responsibility and sincerity of purpose on both sides of the questions involved, and the action which was taken by Warner Brothers, leaves rather out on a limb those excited advocates of unlimited license and disorder on the screen who seized on the occasion as a pretext for agitation for the destruction of all regulatory measures and devices.

AND, speaking of regulatory measures, the lay press is now picking up reverberations of Mr. Walter Wanger's now all too familiar contention that the Production Code must be revised to give him room for the pictures of political and social import which he argues he must make to realize the fulfilment of what he deems the functions of the screen.

The advocates of the-lid-off have for their word of hissing "escapist", meaning that a motion picture which helps the spectator enjoy dramatic illusion and put the work-a-day world aside is "the opium of entertainment". Hollywood is cursed for devoting itself to entertainment, with much attempted sarcasm about the perennial theme of "boy meets girl".

Now it is more than conspicuous, to those who have indulged in that slight intellectual effort necessary to read the Code, that it is precisely in that sector of expression, the terms and procedures by which boy does meet girl, that the Code most pointedly functions. The Code is concerned with fundamental human morality, common decency. The Code neither stipulates nor implies restriction upon such matters as the gold standard, housing, taxation, employment, nationalism or internationalism, Capitalism, Communism or the price of fish and chips. Under the Code anybody can make a picture about anything, with only the demand that it be in terms of about the standard of decency of expression and import that obtains in a respectable American home.

The apparent probability is that neither Mr. Wanger nor the several vociferating advocates of what he thinks is a policy, have ever read the Code or, having looked at it, saw it through eyes that sought no information. The Production Code appears in full in Motion Picture Almanac.

THE newest of the fan magazines, Glamour of Hollywood, a Conde-Nast publication, monthly, is on the stands, with a dash of producer advertising and quite a flood of cosmetics, stockings and such. This publication is peculiar and special in that it is made up entirely of the feminine vanity and technique approach which is one of the departmental components of the other fan monthlies. It is specifically and consciously addressed to the lesser brackets of buying power. It would be a lowbrow Vogue, with movie aroma reaching at unsophistication.

ANYWAY Mr. Samuel Goldwyn had been out of the headlines about as long as could be expected. It is perhaps regrettable that he encounters and finds so much of controversy that interferes with his devotion to the art of production to which he has long made, and continues so capable of making, so much distinguished contribution. Everywhere in the industry, showmanship could be better served with more pictures and fewer lawsuits—this without bearing upon the merits or provocations of any or all of the so many controversies which beset the course of screen progress.

WHAT'S "VAUDEVILLE"

TEDIOUSLY often, and most often on the air, one hears the lament that vaudeville is dead. And that is about as wrong as most of what you hear.

Vaudeville, under other labels, is flourishing. For instance that substantial success entitled "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man". The critics of the lay press had a difficult time with that one because they could not find a plot, but admitted that Mr. W. C. Fields had given them, personally, an evening's entertainment. It seemed to be all Fields and not cinema. The fact is obviously that it is just vaudeville, the same Fields still fielding. Or turn to the stage, nothing could be more decidedly vaudeville than Mrs. Clare Boothe Brokaw Luce's "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Goodbye". As drama they would be, if a shade better, dreadful. As vaudeville they rate as hits.

The once standard motion picture program—newsreel, feature, cartoon and scenic—is profoundly vaudeville in structure and audience approach. The shows at the Radio City Music Hall and the Roxy partake of the nature of both vaudeville and hippodrome.

Today's newsreels, rather more entertaining to the lowbrow masses than of old, are exceedingly vaudevillian in nature, what with their comedian commentators and their Eve's flesh experts in guise of fashion artists. The March of Time has a lot about it to remind one of the "educational" aspects of Chautauqua, which was hayseed uplift vaudeville.

As for radio, it is all ear-vaudeville, and beyond doubt the worst and most successful of all vaudeville.

When Mr. Thomas Tally of Los Angeles in 1902 advertised his store show as "a vaudeville of motion pictures", he was eminently correct—and still is. The labels change but the content and the customers, never.

NOW the "Greatest Year" quiz contest is over, with prizes awarded, as you might just possibly have noticed, if you are a close reader of the papers. From the considerable splash of newspaper enthusiasm arising with the arrivals of the space buy, the "quiz" publicity built itself up to a tremendous diminuendo.

THE scientists who concern themselves with such problems have just emerged from the observatories to report that the indications are that the light and heat of the sun will last for about ten billion years yet. That means that the trade practice issues will have to be settled in the dark.

This Week

Product

With the 1939-40 sales convention season officially starting Monday, it now appears that production from the large companies will run about the same, numerically, for the new, as in the current season. The 10 large companies have tentatively set from 489 to 503 features for the coming season compared to current commitments of between 479 to 493. Short subject product totals for 1939-40 also will approximate the current season commitments. On Monday Warner Brothers will open its annual sales convention in New York thereby ushering in the convention parade. Of the 10 large distributors, seven of them have already scheduled convention dates, although some are tentative.

For further details of new season product plans see page 12.

Coleisms

Stopping over in New York this week, en route to conferences with Allied directors in Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and Baltimore, Colonel H. A. Cole, newly elected president of the Allied States Association, advocated the absolute abolition of clearance, and tore into the majors' professions of sincerity in their proposed fair trade practice program. In fact, Colonel Cole, speaking for himself and the Allied membership, declared that Allied, in effect, didn't care whether the trade practice program came through or not, inasmuch as it was not a "serious" attempt to solve the industry's problems; foremost of which, he said, were compulsory block booking and operation of theatres by distributors. Anent his proposal to abolish clearance, the Colonel thinks it would result in greater profits for distributors, first and subsequent runs.

More of Colonel Cole's opinions may be found in an interview on page 19.

Legislative

Indicative of the increasing irritation which exhibition and other interests feel in the ever continuing battle between the state and private initiative, was the attack this week by New York State exhibitors against the state censor board, following that body's rejection and subsequent approval of Warner Brothers' "Yes, My Darling Daughter." This attack headed a legislative situation this week, during which New York State exhibitors became increasingly aware of the threat implied by their State's possible adoption of a sales tax or greatly increased real estate taxes; ASCAP won in some states and lost out in others; and usual crop of proposals developed for Sunday shows, gross receipts taxes and two-men-in-booths.

These legislative movements are reported on page 20.

Television Flickers

The opening of two World's Fairs this spring will mark, in addition to their new highs in newspaper attention to their exploitation, a strengthening of the flickering shadows of television. The new entertainment medium, according to its sponsors and developers on the verge of accessibility to the public, will be demonstrated to thousands of visitors at the fairs. From a motion picture viewpoint interest is lent to the developments by the announcements that at least one company, Paramount, definitely is planning production of trailers for television broadcasts.

News from many quarters of the television field is on page 35.

Dramatists Speak

George Middleton, president of the Dramatists Guild from 1927 to 1929, and now on the Guild's Council, has spoken for the playwrights in giving their point of view as to their relations with the motion picture in its backing and purchase of Broadway plays.

Mr. Middleton's article, which may bear on the present negotiations between representatives of the film business and of the Dramatists Guild for a return of motion picture money to Broadway plays, will be found on page 28.

Quiz Suits

In a suit filed Monday in New York Supreme Court, a second claimant to ownership of the idea on which the Movie Quiz was based asks damages of $100,000 from Donahue and Coe, Inc., advertising agency, and its president, Edward G. Churchill, claiming that they submitted the idea, "originated" by him in June of 1938, to the major companies; that they promised him compensation, if it were used; that it was used, and he received no compensation. The complaint is Edward G. Pfeiffer.

Mr. Churchill this week said he did not know Mr. Pfeiffer and that he did not know why the suit should be directed against Donahue and Coe, instead at the film companies and the campaign officials.

A previous suit, filed in December, 1938, by Milton Spitz against the majors and the campaign corporation, asking unspecified damages, surrender of all profits derived from sale of booklets and the contest, awaits legal replies from Mr. Spitz' attorneys, and judicial action, on the motion by attorneys for the majors, for dismissal of the complaint. Action in this case is expected to be delayed until April.

Warner Loan

Warner Brothers on Monday revealed that it had arranged for a bank credit, covering a secured loan of $6,000,000, in order to purchase or retire $25,827,000 of currently outstanding debentures. Coinciding with this announcement, and with further revelations concerning Warner Brothers' financial standing relative to this deal, there were additional disclosures this week and last, symptomatic of more to come, from the Securities Exchange Commission in Washington, pertaining to motion picture enterprises. Annual reports, dividend declarations and salary revelations, salient features of which are noted on page 25, have come from RKO, Columbia, Loew's, Consolidated Film Industries, Twentieth Century-Fox, Republic, Dictaphone, and Time, Inc. (Noted more fully in the March 4th issue, were the 1938 analyses of RKO and of the Atlas Corporation.)

New Subsidiary

Paramount Pictures, Inc., has formed a new wholly owned subsidiary called Paramount Film Distribution Corporation, under the laws of the State of Delaware.

On March 7th, 1939, Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc., its wholly owned New Jersey subsidiary, which distributes Paramount pictures in certain states, was merged into the new corporation which will hereafter carry on the same motion picture distribution business under the name Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.

Lohr in Hollywood

Major Lenox R. Lohr, president of NBC, arrived in Hollywood Wednesday to examine personally the "feud" between films and radio growing out of the recent withdrawal of film stars from radio programs by their studio superiors, including 20th Century-Fox and MGM, because of protests by exhibitors against "unfair competition." The announced purpose of Mr. Lohr's visit was to inspect NBC outlets in California but on his arrival in Hollywood he announced that the film-radio "feud" is "just so much newspaper talk." Broadcasting and the screen are parallel mediums of mass appeal, he said, and there probably never will be a war between them.

Digressing to the subject of federal censorship of radio Mr. Lohr said: "The public is utterly behind radio. Radio has kept itself clean and has done great things in the interests of public service." He added that NBC has drafted its own code of adherence to good taste and decency which it has submitted to clients and agencies.

Attack Ticket Code

The New York theatre ticket code for Broadway established last September 12, limiting the profit of ticket brokers to 75 cents and levying a fee on ticket brokers, was attacked this week in a hearing in New York City on the petition of the principals in the Acme Theatre Ticket Agency, for a permanent injunction restraining the League of New York Theatres and Actors' Equity from enforcing the code. Charges were made by the Acme agency that the code constitutes a monoply.

Initial Decision in Government Suit Is Viewed as Draw by Both Sides

The first court decision in the New York suit in equity against distributors brought by the United States Government resulted late Wednesday in a partial victory for each side.

Federal Judge William Bondy, in U. S. district court of New York, instructed the Department of Justice to submit a bill of particulars on a limited number of the demands of attorneys for the defendants and extended their time of filing answers to the original complaint until 20 days after the Department serves the bill—a process which legal observers believe would delay completion of this action on specific pleadings for another two or three months.

At the same time he directed United Artists to submit to an examination before trial and denied that company's motion to strike out portions of the complaint.

As to those particulars which the Government is unable to furnish at the present time, a statement setting forth this fact must be submitted and further details may be furnished up to 30 days before the date of trial. Specific items on which UA may be examined were left for future determination on motion. In denying the motion to strike out portions of the complaint which do not apply to UA, Judge Bondy said that no prejudice could result from allowing the allegations to stand. He pointed out that if they had no reference to UA this fact could be shown at the trial.

The decisions were rendered a few minutes before court closed and a full analysis of the order for the bill of particulars could not be made. Courthouse sources said that Judge Bondy had granted the demands for full details where specific charges of monopoly were alleged and denied it where the charges were general.

The order requires a description of the "series of harsh, onerous, and unfair trade practices" mentioned in the complaint which allegedly resulted in a monopoly in restraint of trade. It also required a listing of all situations where independent exhibitors had been forced out, together with names, dates and places, and a description of alleged coercive or distress methods used.

Generally, the bill must set forth complete definitions of general phrases used, such as "key cities", "star system", "affiliated theatres", etc. A complete differentiation must be set forth of "feature motion photoplays" and "feature photoplays of better grade and quality".

The order requires a statement whether alleged refusal of first-runs to use independent product is the result of any agreement or understanding; a listing of advantages allegedly granted by defendants to each other; whether the alleged theatre monopoly results from direct holdings in affiliated theatres or otherwise; whether the alleged integration of production with exhibition is the result of agreement or understanding, and a listing of all first-run houses and all theatres constituting the motion picture market.

Hitting Back

Italian newspaper and magazine correspondents in New York may soon be hit on the rebound because of their leader's—Mussolini—ruling of January 1st which established a governmental distributing monopoly, so restrictive that American companies were forced to quit the Italian scene. Foreign publicity managers for the majors, on Monday, in the New York offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, generally agreed that the Italians be barred from access to all publicity material. Final decision awaits a meeting, shortly, of major company foreign distribution managers. Meanwhile, Italian representatives in New York have apparently been unsuccessful in obtaining any major releases for distribution in Italy; and it is generally conceded that the Italian public is making its wishes for American product known. There is even talk of reconciliation; though Hays office officials feel, from the obvious aspects of the case, that the reconciliation will have to be initiated, and established, almost solely, by the Italian government.

503 FEATURES IN '40; 47% OF '39 YET TO COME

Tentative Production Plans for Next Season Contemplate About the Same Number of Pictures as in Year of 1938-39

Exhibitors' source of product supply from the large companies will run about the same, numerically, in 1939-40, as in the present season.

The ten large companies have, in their first tentative plans, set down from 489 to 503 features for the new year. This compares to 1938-39 commitments of between 479 to 493. Short subject totals likewise will remain at about the same level—between 675 and 700.

With the 1939-40 sales convention season officially starting on Monday, at the opening of Warner Brothers' annual meeting, in New York, seven of the ten distributors have already scheduled conventions, even though tentative, at which formal notification of final programs and sales policies will be made to field sales crews to be relayed to buying exhibitor customers. (See chart on next page for convention plans).

In New York, corporate and sales officials continue progressively in shaping '38-'39 convention and sales arrangements. In Hollywood, the studios still have much to do to complete product still needed to round out 1938-39 program commitments.

Of the 493 features promised for 1938-39 at the beginning of the season, 263 have actually been released, and 86 are completed awaiting release. Of the 233 features still to be delivered, representing some 47 per cent, Hollywood still needs to complete 144 productions.

Of the 686 one and two reel subjects promised at the beginning of the season, 355 have been released and 82 are completed, awaiting releasing, leaving 301 to be released and 219 to be completed.

There are, however, nearly 100 features in actual filming or preparation, and nearly as many short subjects, indicating at this time that 1938-39 will not fall far short of the commitments made, if at all, before the end of the season in late summer. And among those still to come are many of the season's outstanding productions.

Columbia's highlights of 1938-39 features to come include "Golden Boy," "Coast Guard," "Your Wife" and "Good Girls Go to Paris."

Announced at the beginning of the season were 40 features, 16 westerns, 126 shorts and four serials. The company has completed 23 features and released 17, and 12 westerns, releasing eight. Sixty-four shorts have been finished, 57 of them released. Numerically, the 1939-40 program will be substantially the same, both in the line of features, shorts and serials.

The date and place of this year's convention is still to be determined. In 1938, Columbia held four regionals, from May 13th to May 28.

Company's British sales forces met last Saturday in London, at which Joseph Friedman and Max Thorpe presided.

In New York, A. Montague, sales manager, announced Thursday an increase of $5,000,000 in next season's budget for "A" pictures, the company acting as a result of spotty business from "B's".

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has coming for the present season highlights such as "Broadway Serenade," with Jeannette MacDonald; "It's a Wonderful World," with Claudette Colbert and James Stewart," "The Wizard of Oz," in color, with Judy Garland and Frank Morgan, and "Calling Dr. Kildare."

Twenty-eight MGM Features Completed

Announced for 1938-39 were from 44-to-52 features and 92 shorts. Already released: 28, completed but unreleased, seven. Fifty-five shorts are finished, 44 of them released. The new program will bring about the same number of features, according to present plans.

The company's sales convention was reportedly set for March, in Chicago, but no formal announcement has been made. Last year, MGM held three regionals, March 12, Kansas City; March 24, Chicago; March 27, New York.

William F. Rodgers, sales manager, left last Friday for Culver City to complete 1939-40 product and convention plans.

At Monogram, 26 features and 16 westerns were promised for this year. At this date, 18 features and nine westerns have been released, and two features and two westerns are awaiting release. The program will be increased to 30 features and 16 westerns for 1939-40.

This year's convention will be held about May 1st, in New Orleans.

tures still coming up for 1938-39, among them: Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific," "Beau Geste," "What a Life," "The Magnificent Fraud," and "The Gracie Allen Murder Case."

Promised for 1938-39 were 58 features. Up to the present, 47 have been finished, of which 30 have been released. Seventy-two shorts are finished, 60 of them released. In the new year, the company will have about an equal number of features and shorts.

Date and location for this year's convention are to be set shortly. Last year the meeting was on April 18th at Washington. Some $28,000,000 will be spent on next year's production.

At Radio Pictures, the original 1938-39 commitment was for an elastic program of between 42 to 48. To date 25 have been delivered, and five completed awaiting delivery. Of 95 shorts scheduled, 54 have been finished and 16 others completed. The same numerical lineup is tentatively set for 1939-40. highlighted by "Abe Lincoln of Illinois," with a total budget of $20,000,000.

Highlights to come this season include "The Dove," with Lupe Velez; "A Memory of Love," with Kay Francis and Carole Lombard; "Little Mother," with Ginger Rogers and David Niven; and "The Saint in London," with George Sanders, to be made in England.

June has been tentatively set as the time for this year's convention, at a place to be selected. Last year Radio held no convention, made its product announcement on August 11th, the lateness due to reorganization proceedings.

Republic promises much for "Man of Conquest," with Richard Dix, and "Street of Missing Men" with Charles Bickford, two releases for the present season.

Announced at the beginning of the season were 31 features and 24 westerns, with four serials. Completed to date are 15 features and 13 westerns, of which 13 features and 11 westerns have been released. The same total in each class is in line for 1939-40.

Regional conventions are expected at Republic this year, probably in May. Last year a single national meeting was held, May 2nd to 5th, at the Hollywood studios.

Fifty-two Features Likely From Twentieth Century-Fox

At Twentieth Century-Fox, 52 features and 57 shorts were announced for the year. By this weekend, 34 features will be released, ten others completed awaiting release. Thirty-five shorts are finished, 32 of them released. Fifty-two shorts and 52 features will probably be announced for 1939-40.

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" and "The Rose of Washington Square" are the two highlights coming this season.

Convention is set for March 30th to April 1st, in Chicago, corresponding with the March 31st date of last year's convention, held in Kansas City.

Fox Movietonews will hold a series of conventions on its own on 1939-40 plans.

S. R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, and Herman Wobber, sales manager, arrived in California this week to complete 1939-40 product plans. Some $30,000,000 have been earmarked for 1939-40.

"Captain Fury" will be one of the remaining releases from United Artists, others, however, being needed to round out 1938-39 commitments. Promised at the beginning of the season were 30 features, 12 shorts. Fifteen features have been finished, 12 of them released.

The sales convention will probably be held in June, same time as last year's, when regionals were held in New York, June 13th, and Chicago, June 30th.

Pictures scheduled for next season include eight from Edward Small, four from Alexander Korda, one from Chaplin, six from Walter Wanger, at least five from David Selznick, six from Hal Roach, among at least three from Samuel Goldwyn and others, including an undetermined number from Douglas Fairbanks.

Universal's 1939-40 sales convention plans are to be set this week with the return of William A. Scully from new-product conferences at the Universal City studio.

The company promised 40 features, six westerns, four serials, six western reissues and 68 shorts for this year. Of these, 25 features have been finished and all released, the six westerns have been released, also the six western reissues and the four serials. Of the 68 shorts, 36 are released and three others are awaiting release.

Highlight releases for the remainder of the year include "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," with Deanna Durbin; "East Side of Heaven," with Bing Crosby; "Big Town Czar," with Ed Sullivan; "The Sun Never Sets," with Basil Rathbone and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

The date and place for the 1939-40 convention have not been set; last year, the company met at four regionals, from May 13th to May 26th, from San Francisco eastward to Washington, D. C.

The company is expected to announce about 40 features, 14 westerns, four serials and 40 shorts.

Warners' annual sales convention opens Monday, running through Tuesday, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, where Jack L. Warner, production head in Hollywood; Hal Wallis, associate executive producer; Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager; Major Albert Warner; Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, and half a dozen other company officials will describe product and plans for 1939-40 to district and branch managers.

Probably committed to 48 features for 1939-40, the company is definitely set to raise "A" pictures to 36.

Still to come for 1938-39 are "Dodge City," with Errol Flynn; "Juarez," with Paul Muni and Bette Davis; "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," with Edward G. Robinson; "Each Dawn I Die," with George Raft and James Cagney and "Family Reunion," with Jeffrey Lynn and the Lane Sisters—highlighting the remaining 25 due to round out the year. Of 52 announced for 1938-39, 27 have been released and 14 others completed. Of the 134 shorts, 101 have been finished, 71 of them released.

Warners Start Off 1939-40 Conventions On Monday; Seven Companies Set Dates

The 1939-40 sales convention season officially gets under way on Monday, when Warner Brothers opens a two-day session at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

This first-of-the-season meeting is dated practically the same as last year's convention beginning, MGM opening the season in 1938 on March 12th.

Despite previous impressions, there is not likely to be any change in the situation which finds about half the distributors holding a single national meeting, and the other half favoring several regional conventions. Nor will there be any general advancement of convention dates from those of last season, as shown in the following comparison of last year's conventions with the first tentative draft of those to be held this year:

Amendments to U. S. Labor Law Would Have Mixed Effect on Film Industry

The motion picture industry, especially the production end, is watching with interest the present consideration by Congress of the pending amendments to the National Labor Relations Act introduced by Senator David Walsh (Dem., Mass.) at the behest of the American Federation of Labor, providing privileges for employers which they are now denied under the allegedly arbitrary policies of the National Labor Relations Board.

So far as the motion picture industry is concerned, enactment of these amendments would be a mixed blessing. While it is provided that employers shall be given the right to ask for employee elections to designate representatives for bargaining, and that employers shall have the right also to express themselves on matters of interest to their employees or the public—in other words, to make known their views on questions affecting their labor—so long as they adopt no discriminatory practices, the provision for the recognition of the crafts is seen as making the situation highly intricate.

It has been pointed out that, under this amendment, it would be possible for one man to call for recognition, if he is the sole employee of his craft in an establishment, and that in some industries this might result in a multiplicity of bargaining representatives working at cross purposes.

Generally speaking, however, it is considered that any amendment of the Labor Relations Act which puts a curb on the powers of the Labor Board will be an improvement over the present situation, of which both employers and the AFL have long complained.

To considerable extent, the Walsh amendments are concerned with provisions assuring to all interested parties the right to be heard in any disputes coming before the NLRB or any investigation which the board may make; requiring the board to act promptly on complaints of unfair labor practices; permitting court review of board decisions; opening the board's files to interested parties; broadening the subpoena powers so that parties to investigations could demand the calling of witnesses named by them; permitting the filing of charges of prejudice against examiners considered unfair in the handling of any case, and protecting the rights of "small" employers and "poor" unions financially unable to stand the cost of preparing records for court hearings by requiring the board to supply such transcripts as may be necessary.

Smith Undertakes Television Study

Courtland Smith, former president of Pathe News, and the first secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is expected to make "at least" a preliminary report, if not a detailed survey, of the relation of television to motion picture production and distribution, at the annual meeting on March 27, in New York, of the MPDDA. Mr. Smith has been appointed by Will Hays, president of the MPPDA, as chairman of that organization's television committee, as a consultant on television to the motion picture industry, and as creator of a survey of television relation, in its current stages, to the motion picture industry in all its branches.

The report on March 27 will be timed to coincide with the impending large use of television simultaneously with the opening, on April 30, of the New York World's Fair.

Mr. Smith's survey was begun last week. No date was set for its completion. It will bring up to date a previous report on the same subject, done for the Hays organization in 1937. It will be available, on completion, to all MPPDA members.

Mr. Smith's entrance into the motion picture industry was marked by his secretaryship for the MPPDA. He resigned that post to join William Fox, during the early development of sound pictures, and he organized Fox Movietone News. He then joined Pathe News, Inc., as president, resigning in May, 1937.

Portable Transmitter Shown

A portable television transmitter, weighing 450 pounds, which can be rolled about by two or three men indoors or out, was demonstrated for the first time Monday by the Philco Radio and Television Corporation of Philadelphia, at the opening of its "All Year 'Round" convention at the Savoy-Plaza, New York. New receiving sets for the home, which will be placed on the market about May 1st, were also shown. The cheapest, containing a five-inch screen, will sell for between $150 and $175.

The portable transmitter, recently perfected by Bernard Schnitzer and Charles Stec, is said by the designers to be the first of its kind. The transmitter is five and a half feet high, and about a foot and a half wide. It is made up of 12,000 individual parts, including 83 bulbs, a fourth of which are contained in the rectangular synchronizer inside the machine. The entire apparatus is mounted on four wheels.

The engineers said the transmitter had been successfully tested on golf courses, at beauty contests and outdoor events as well as in studios.

Producers Offer Screen Writers Bargaining Pact

Possibility of peace in at least some sectors of the Hollywood labor front appeared this week as producers recognized the Screen Writers' Guild as the writers' legitimate bargaining agency, and as the Screen Directors' Guild committee met with a producers' committee to approve a newly created bargaining agreement. The employees of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employes, are still waging internecine warfare, however, with one faction pressing charges against the producers; and the Screen Actors' Guild is still occupied with its long standing problems.

The agreement of the producers to the writers' Guild demands came as a surprise this week, as both sides faced a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, in Hollywood, on Tuesday. The producers' attorneys not only agreed to recognize the Guild, but also to negotiate a basic contract. The Guild had charged the producers with refusal to negotiate and with coercion.

Negotiating Committee Formed

Attorney Homer Mitchell, spokesman for the producers' attorneys, named himself, Mendel Silverberg, George Cohen, and Alfred Wright as a producers' attorney committee willing to negotiate. He also revealed that the producers had formed a negotiating committee, of Darryl Zanuck, E. J. Mannix, and Hal B. Wallis. It was agreed that negotiations for a contract would take about two weeks. The Guild's formal statement, after the hearing, said it was "glad" of the agreement, "in the interests of peace and harmony" in the industry; and that the writers "hoped" that they would not be "once again" disappointed anent the producers' desire to grant them "in reality" the exclusive bargaining right under the Wagner Labor Act.

Also on Tuesday, the Association of Motion Picture Producers' committee, Al Lichtman, Y. Frank Freeman, and Pandro Berman, approved the bargaining agreement with the Screen Directors' Guild, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and president of the association, declared there were only a few details to be ironed out, upon which the directors and producers were "already in accord."

Guild Accepted as Agent

The basic agreement was reached last Thursday after the issuing two weeks ago of what was virtually an ultimatum from the Screen Directors' Guild, demanding recognition and better conditions upon threat of a strike. The producers immediately recognized the Guild as the bargaining agency, and a committee from each group ironed out wages and hours for assistant directors and unit managers, points upon which the two sides differed. Frank Capra, president of the Guild, headed its negotiating committee. The agreement is the result of nearly two years desultory negotiations, during which the demands of the Guild were not heeded till its officers were empowered by the board and by the membership to declare a strike, "if necessary" to make the producers heed their requests.

The agreement provides for an 80 per cent Guild shop; an average wage scale of $165 per week for first assistant directors; a salary increase for unit managers.

GOLDWYN "TELLS ALL" ABOUT AFFAIRS OF U.A. IN HIS SUIT AGAINST COMPANY

Bares "Silverstone Plan" and Complaints He and Roosevelt Made to U.A. Partners Against Korda-Fairbanks Deals

Samuel Goldwyn, a producer-owner of United Artists, and James Roosevelt, his vice president, have been in strong disagreement with the company's four other owners since last January, when the four—Mary Pickford, Alexander Korda, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Spencer Chaplin, unanimously overrode Mr. Goldwyn's formal objections to new contractual product arrangements with Fairbanks and Korda, and also unanimously overrode his lone dissenting vote against the adoption of the "Silverstone Plan" for reducing distribution costs as an incentive to "outside producers."

Calls New Plan Contract Breach

The partners' objections to Mr. Goldwyn's disapproval of the new arrangements have caused him to file suit against the company charging breach of contract on the grounds the arrangements were effected over his objections.

In his complaint he describes at length his unsuccessful arguments with the four other partners at the company's annual meeting in Hollywood, last January. He describes, too, the subsequent defeat, on the same issues, sustained by James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President of the United States, when Mr. Roosevelt was sent to New York, in February, by Mr. Goldwyn, to formally protest adoption of the new arrangements by the board of directors at a meeting at the home office called to ratify the new contracts.

Mr. Goldwyn also, for the first time, makes public the company's "Silverstone Plan," its financial provisions and intricate ramifications.

These and other disclosures appear in his long bill of complaint which now gives legal standing to the disagreements. It was filed Wednesday, a week ago, by Mr. Goldwyn, through Max Steuer, noted New York trial attorney, asking for a declaratory judgment which would set aside his present exclusive producing and releasing contract with the company—which expires in 1945—and permit him to distribute through other companies. His old contract required him to release only two features a year through U. A. and allowed him to release other films through any other company.

"By reason of the said disputes". . . "the conduct of business between" Mr. Goldwyn and the company "is attended with hazard and uncertainty," declared the plaintiff in his complaint.

While it was generally known that during the January meetings in Hollywood vigorous opposition was made against the new Korda, Fairbanks and "Silverstone Plan" arrangements, it was believed that peace-in-the-family had prevailed before adjournment. Mr. Maurice Silverstone, as operating head of the company announced after the meeting that, "We have no stepchildren at United Artists. We not only wish to lend encouragement to our present producers, but invite others with quality pictures to join our family in United Artists on the same basis."

Following adoption of the "Silverstone Plan" at that meeting, the corporation sent out this statement in New York: "From all producers and from all stockholders came enthusiastic, unanimous commendation of Murray Silverstone."

GOLDWYN DROPS AIR CRASH STORY

Samuel Goldwyn in Hollywood admitted Tuesday scrapping three weeks' writing done on "Thirteen Go Flying," which was to have been based on the Atlantic crash, last month, of the British Imperial Airways' Bermuda-New York flying boat Cavalier.

Mr. Goldwyn is reported to have said: "I do not want to place any hindrance in the path of American aviation's fine progress," after Assistant United States Secretary of State George S. Messersmith, in Washington, reputedly wrote to Will H. Hays "informally suggesting" that the picture might be harmful to the trans-Atlantic service to be inaugurated shortly by the Pan-American Yankee Clipper. It was understood in Hollywood that Pan-American had brought the proposed Goldwyn film to the attention of Mr. Messersmith, whose duties in the State Department have to do with communications.

It had been a matter of common knowledge that Mr. Goldwyn had long objected to the situation wherein he, the most active producer-owner, should have to share the profits of United Artists with Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, who have been virtually inactive for several years.

Mr. Silverstone, for the corporation, last Thursday answered the filing of the Goldwyn suit with a statement disputing all of the plaintiff's contentions, and adding that they would be "vigorously resisted." Said Mr. Silverstone, speaking for the company:

"At the last meeting of our stockholders, Mr. Goldwyn demanded a voting trust of which he or his designee would be the sole trustee, thereby giving him control of the company.

"The remaining stockholders of the company considered this demand ridiculous and they unanimously and promptly turned down Mr. Goldwyn's proposal.

"The stockholders thereupon offered to cancel Mr. Goldwyn's contract and to release him from all further obligations thereunder, if he would turn back to the company his stock interest therein for which he had made no monetary payment. This proposal Mr. Goldwyn turned down.

"In the opinion of the company the suit has no merit whatsoever and will be vigorously resisted."

Sees No Effect on Operations

Of more immediate interest to the exhibitor customers of U. A. was Mr. Silverstone's statement that, "The suit will not have the slightest effect on the company or its operations, or on the important program of pictures which it is now releasing and will release in the coming 1939-40 season."

Mr. Goldwyn has approved contracts which have been made with exhibitors for all three remaining pictures. They are "Wuthering Heights," "The Real Glory" and "Restless Age." The contracts are three-way agreements with Goldwyn, United Artists and the exhibitor accounts, it was pointed out by company officials. The three features, it would seem, would keep Goldwyn productions on the U. A. roster for another year, regardless of the outcome of the suit.

Mr. Goldwyn filed his suit in the State Supreme Court at New York, through Mr. Steuer, and also through the New York law firm of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey, which firm represents Twentieth Century-Fox.

U. A. has 20 days to file an answer. Edward Raftery, secretary of United Artists and partner in the law firm of O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, and Charles Schwartz, of the law firm of Schwartz and Frolich, are counsel for the company in the action.

Only One Opposing Korda

The bill starts out asking for a judgment declaring the rights and legal relations of the parties to the action, and describes at length the various distributing and other agreements entered into with United Artists, as distributor, by Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., and Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda and London Film Productions, the Pickford Corporation and Mary Pickford; Elton Corporation and Douglas Fairbanks and with Charles Chaplin, these five constituting the sole owners of U. A.

Of the five producer-stockholders, the complaint continues, Mr. Goldwyn was the only one voting against the contractual arrangements for Alexander Korda, as proposed at the adjourned annual stockholders' meeting on January 16, 1939 at the company's studio in Hollywood. Mr. Goldwyn attacked the arrangement on the grounds that it would amend, modify and waive the agreement with Mr. Korda.

At the same meeting, Mr. Goldwyn also was the only one voting against the new contractual arrangement for Douglas Fairbanks. Mr. Goldwyn attacked this plan, too, on the grounds that it would amend, modify and waive U. A.'s original agreement with Mr. Fairbanks.

Still a third resolution presented and also passed at the January meeting, against Mr. Goldwyn's lone objections, concerned the so-called "Silverstone Plan," by which U. A. producers get considerably more liberal returns on their pictures.

Mr. Goldwyn's complaint alleging breach of contract, for the first time discloses the full nature of the plan. It follows, in part:

"Resolved, the proper officers of this corporation be, and they are hereby authorized and empowered for, or in the name of, and on behalf of this corporation to enter into either supplemental agreements or new agreements with each of the following, and each for convenience referred to as the producer:

"Mary Pickford and the Pickford Corporation; Douglas Fairbanks and the Elton Corporation; Douglas Fairbanks or a new corporation he is about to form for the purpose of producing feature motion picture photoplays; Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.; Alexander Korda and London Film Productions, Ltd.; Alexander Korda and a new corporation he is about to form for the purpose of producing feature motion picture photoplays; Charles S. Chaplin; David O. Selznick and Selznick International Pictures, Inc. and Walter Wanger Productions, Inc." (the last two named being non-owner, production contributing affiliates).

"Which agreements shall contain substantially the following provisions: Each of the producers and the distributors shall modify the so-called favored nation clause now contained in said producers' contracts, or which shall be included in any new distribution contracts, so that they give the right to the distributor (U. A.) to take on so-called local pictures for local distribution in certain territories outside of the United States of America, upon terms more favorable to the producer of said local pictures than the terms accorded stockholder-producers, et al.

"In addition to the present distribution terms now in force and effect in the above contracts, and subject to the limitations set forth in the following paragraphs, there shall be adopted for a period of three years, commencing as of January 1, 1938 (making the arrangement retroactive one year) and ending on December 31, 1940, the following new method (known as the Silverstone plan) of calculating additional sums to be paid the producers as an additional producer revenue:

"BASIC TERMS DISTRIBUTION EACH PICTURE

2 % Refund from $ 750,000 to $1,000,000
3 % Refund from 1,000,000 to 1,250,000
5 % Refund from 1,250,000 to 1,500,000
7½% Refund from 1,500,000 to 1,750,000
10 % On all over 1,750,000

25% to $300,000
2 % Refund from $300,000 to $400,000
3 % Refund from 400,000 to 500,000
5 % Refund from 500,000 to 600,000
7½% Refund from 600,000 to 700,000
10 % Refund on all over 700,000

"The above shall apply to all photoplays delivered to United Artists Corporation by any producer entitled to share in the refunds for the period commencing January 1, 1938 and terminating December 31, 1940, even though a part of the distribution of said photoplays continue after December 31, 1940.

"ADDITIONAL REFUND BASED ON ANNUAL PLAYED AND EARNED.
U. S. A.

2 % Refund from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000
3 % Refund from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000
5 % Refund from 4,000,000 to 5,000,000
7½% Refund from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000

ENGLAND

2 % Refund from $ 800,000 to $1,200,000
3 % Refund from 1,200,000 to 1,600,000
5 % Refund from 1,600,000 to 2,000,000
7½% Refund from 2,000,000 to 2,400,000
10 % On all over 2,400,000

"The foregoing right to refunds shall cease as of December 31, 1940."

"OVERRIDING ADDITIONAL REFUND BASED ON ANNUAL WORLD PLAYED AND EARNED

2% Refund from $8,000,000 to $9,000,000
3% Refund from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000
5% Refund on all over 10,000,000

"The foregoing right to refunds shall cease as of December 31, 1940."

The plan next cites restrictions which provide that in the event "additional" amounts payable to a producer or producers in any one year exceed 50 per cent of the company's annual profits, the amounts payable shall be limited to 50 per cent of the net profits, but should the net be less than $500,000, then the amounts payable shall be the excess above a net of $250,000.

The complaint then describes a meeting of the board of directors of United Artists on February 13, 1939, at the New York office, at which there were present: Charles Schwartz, Emanuel Silverstone, Dennis F. O'Brien, Paul D. O'Brien and James Roosevelt, the latter representing Mr. Goldwyn, who had become vice president of Goldwyn, Inc., only six weeks previous.

Immediately after opening of the meeting, James Roosevelt presented to the directors a statement in writing, "on his own behalf and on behalf of the plaintiff" (Goldwyn), as follows:

"At the adjourned annual stockholders' meeting of this corporation, which was held on January 16, 1939, at United Artists Studio, Hollywood, California, there were adopted three certain resolutions which are hereinafter more particularly described, over the strenuous opposition of Samuel Goldwyn who voted against the adoption of each of them.

"Inasmuch as these resolutions will regularly come up for discussion, approval, adoption and to be acted upon at this meeting of the Board of Directors, I wish, on behalf of Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., to place on the record of this meeting their and my views with respect to each of the said three resolutions so that this board may have those views in mind when it undertakes a consideration of any of said resolutions.

"The first resolution above referred to is the one which authorized and permitted Mr. Alexander Korda to form a new corporation and which further provided that pictures produced by such new corporation should be accepted by United Artists Corporation for all purposes as if they were pictures produced by London Film Productions, Ltd.

"ROTHSCHILD" BACK VIA RADIO PROGRAM

"The House of Rothschild," Darryl Zanuck-United Artists film released in 1934, is on its way to being reissued, through the impetus of the radio program of Sam Taylor of station WHN, Loew's airwave outlet. Mr. Taylor recently suggested a screening of the film for his audience, some small part of which he regularly takes to trade screenings or previews, with the idea that the particular timeliness of the film would make it of special interest. The response to his suggestion brought in more than 400 letters, a figure in excess of the amount regularly received for his "public reviews."

The screening was arranged, with 50 people picked to make as nearly perfect a cross section of an audience as could be found. Of the 50 asked, 44 attended, 41 went on record for the revival of the film, which more than 50 per cent of them had already seen. And the film which Benjamin De Casseres, writing in Motion Picture Herald in 1934, said he believed would "still be showing when any other picture you can name will be but a memory," received a vote, on the basis of 100 per cent, which averaged 94 per cent, from Mr. Taylor's audience.

Monroe Greenthal, United Artists director of exploitation, is now working on an estimate for the revival.

The James Roosevelt statement in the brief then described the nature of each of the three aforementioned resolutions, and concluded as follows:

James Roosevelt Statement

"I desire specifically to call to the attention of the officers and directors of this corporation that the approval of, the adoption of, or any favorable action that this Board or any of the officers or directors of this corporation may take with reference to either or both of the said first two resolutions or of the said third resolution (insofar as it deals with the subject matter of the first two resolutions and includes said individuals and said new corporations) constitute and would constitute violations of the terms of the existing agreement between Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Samuel Goldwyn and United Artists Corporation, dated July 22, 1926, and which was executed as an inducement to and simultaneously with or immediately prior to the execution of the distribution agreement of the same date between Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., and United Artists Corporation and the guarantee of Samuel Goldwyn of the same date relative to said distribution agreement.

"On behalf of Samuel Goldwyn and Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., I protest against any such action and request this corporation and its officers and directors to take such steps as may be necessary or proper to prevent any such action or any other action inconsistent with the requirements of strict performance and observance of the provisions of the distribution agreement entered into September 2, 1935, between London Film Productions, Ltd., Alexander Korda and United Artists Corporation and the distribution agreement date July 22, 1936 between the Elton Corporation and the United Artists Corporation.

"The above statement was thereupon recorded in the minutes of the said meeting."

Regardless, the complaint continues, "the board of directors at the February meeting adopted by a vote of four to one, James Roosevelt voting in opposition in each instance, three resolutions, each respectively identical with the resolutions adopted by the stockholders at the January meeting in Hollywood."

"That the adoption of the said resolutions, and each of them, by the said board of directors of the defendant (U. A.), as hereinbefore alleged, constituted a substantial breach by the defendant of the terms and provisions" of the producer-defendant agreements described.

Charges Korda Breach

The complaint also alleges that Alexander Korda and his London Films "violated and breached" the agreement it has with U. A., by becoming associated with others in two English corporations, known as Omnia Films, Ltd. and Harefield Productions, Ltd. Mr. Goldwyn charges that Omnia is distributing pictures in certain foreign countries, and that Harefield is producing and/or distributing pictures, which films "have not and will not be produced for or delivered to the defendant" United Artists.

"Despite such knowledge on the part of the defendant, it has wholly failed, neglected and refused to take any steps to compel London Film Productions and Alexander Korda to cease further violations" of the contract "and has wholly failed, neglected and refused to insist upon the full performance and observance by London Film and Alexander Korda of the said terms.

"By reason of the premises," continues the Goldwyn brief, "the plaintiff has the right to terminate" his agreements.

NEW SUIT, NEW BILL, HIT MAJORS; LAWYERS INSIST "PACT NEAR READY"

Georgia Proposal Would Place Theatres Under Control of State Public Service Commission Through Licensing Clause

Of all the legal and legislative attacks leveled at motion picture practice in recent months, the most unusual came this week in the form of a bill introduced in Georgia. It has the unique characteristic of being both anti-major and anti-independent. Under it:

All exhibitors, circuit and independent, would be compelled to apply to the Public Service Commission for a permit to operate, and pay $10 annually for a license.

Each theatre, independent and affiliated, would be forced to operate "strictly in adherence" to the rules and regulations fixed by the Commission.

"Such regulations shall be designed to prevent and prohibit monopolistic and unfair trade practices in the motion picture industry within the state."

The Commission would have the power to zone the state and regulate the pro-rata distribution of films.

No exhibitor could contract for more pictures than would be reasonably required for the operation of his theatre for the period of one year.

It would be considered an "unfair and monopolistic" practice for any exhibitor to make "an unnecessary and too frequent change of pictures that affects a complaining exhibitor." This, it appears, would prevent any exhibitor from changing programs when a competitor complained they were being changed "too frequently."

No exhibitor could be deprived of a sufficient number of pictures to operate his theatre "without just cause."

No distributor or producer could control more than 50 per cent of the stock in any theatre within the state, nor show preference for or discrimination against any other theatre in the same zone.

The Public Service Commission would be given power to regulate the clearance of pictures and to fix the maximum time and area for the clearance.

Rebates or refunds by producers or distributors to exhibitors would be strictly forbidden. Apparently involved, along with other matters, would be the generally accepted right of an exhibitor to an adjustment from a distributor on a guarantee-percentage booking on which the exhibitors' box-office receipts fall below the guarantee.

The Commission would be given authority to investigate and regulate exhibitors' "group buying," i.e., circuit buying, and, apparently "buying combines."

No distributor or producer would be allowed to dictate the price of admission to be charged by an exhibitor as part of the contract.

Georgia Exhibitors Sue All Majors

Added to the 30-odd anti-trust suits filed or pending against majors in the past 18 months for alleged violation of federal Sherman and Clayton Acts is the new suit of John W. Peck, Sr., and Mrs. Gertrude W. Peck, owners and lessees of two theatres at Sylacauga, Ala., and one at Dublin, Ga., asking $285,000 damages of the eight major companies and A. C. Bromberg.

LOEW'S CIRCUIT TO PLAY ANTHEM

The Loew's circuit, nationally, follows the lead of Warner Brothers Theatres this week by playing the national anthem. The circuit's theatres will open and close with a trailer flashed on the screen including words of "The Star Spangled Banner," also the American flag waving and a choral rendition of the song. Audiences will be asked to join in the singing.

Mr. Bromberg is the first independent exchange operator in the country, of the record, to be named with the major distributors as a defendant in an independent exhibitors' anti-trust action. He operates exchanges in all of the Southern key cities holding the Republic Pictures franchise, and for years has been considered friendly to and by independent exhibitors.

The Peck action charges the plaintiffs "did conspire and agree" with George Martin, Georgia theatre owner, to withhold first class feature films" from theatres operated by the Pecks. Actual damages were listed at $95,000, according to papers filed last Thursday at Atlanta.

Major Settles Suit Before Trial

A suit which threatened to involve the whole practice of clearance in the New York City area, was settled out of court last week between attorneys for Twentieth Century-Fox and Jupo Amusements Corporation, operators of the Polk Theatre, Jackson Heights, Long Island.

Jupo's application for a permanent injunction to restrain the major from granting a week's clearance to Harry Brand's Colony theatre, in the same territory, over the Polk, was to have been heard on Monday. Supreme Court Justice Peter Daly had granted Jupo application for a temporary injuncion.

The settlement apparently produced mutually satisfactory stipulations from both sides. These declare that the Colony and the Polk may obtain Fox films on an equal basis, and that the Polk is restricted only by a week's clearance granted to the Skouras' Granada, also in the same area. This restriction was understood, and agreed to, by Frank Moscat, owner of the Polk, and a principal in Jupo, before the present squabble, and was not an issue in the case.

The Two Actions In Chicago

Chicago—Hearing in the anti-trust action of independent theatre operators against Balaban & Katz and major distributors, scheduled for Tuesday, was postponed until April 18 by Federal Judge Wilkerson. The postponement was at the request of both sides.

Federal Judge Holly, after "pre-trial" conference Tuesday with attorneys in the suit of the Gary Theatre Company against Balaban

Program Including "Maximum Concessions" Drafted by Distributors; Further Meetings with Exhibitors Held Unlikely

The majors' lawyers have about completed their "polishing up" of the legal form of that industry document known as "A trade practice program for self-regulating distribution-exhibition." But, a spokesman for the distributors said Wednesday that no progressive outward action on the pact is likely before the return to New York, later in the month, of either S. R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, or William R. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the companies' two key negotiators. Both arrived in Hollywood this week to talk about 1939-40 product and sales matters with their respective studio associates. They went west together.

Speculation Rife

Printed speculation has been running high and wide over the final form of the draft, over the concessions to be given exhibitors, and the manner and method to be adopted for adjudicating differences in distribution and exhibition.

"This much is certain," declared a spokesman for the distributors Wednesday: "No changes in principle have been made in the program since the distributors presented the 'first tentative draft,' last November, except in its language.

"In the intervening three and a half months," he added, "the lawyers have been 'crossing t's and dotting i's.' "

As the plan now stands, the draft is to be put into formal printed form shortly, and then mailed to the various national and state exhibitor organizations. When the printed copies will be available, and when they will be sent to exhibitors, "is anyone's guess," according to a lawyer participating.

Maximum Concessions Included

When the distributors do submit the completed draft, it will be done with the idea that it contains their "absolute maximum concessions." They hold that no further meetings will be necessary with exhibitors, therefore, on "principles." Furthermore, the companies will stand ready to enact the program for any and all accepting it, regardless of the "attitude" of objectors.

Some talks might be held in the interim on matters "other than principle," however, such as a possible conversation with Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, who was understood to be willing—as of Wednesday afternoon—to go to New York from his Washington headquarters to talk with the lawyers, at their invitation, on the "suggestion" he made several weeks ago for a program.

On the matter of date of enactment, a pessimistic note was struck by Mr. Kent last Friday as he left New York for California. Indicating that the Supreme Court-Dallas decision had a disturbing effect on the completion of a program, he inferred that it is conceivable that there might be other "occurrences" which would interfere with the planned program.

It is possible, he declared, that the Government may decide that it is illegal for the eight majors to "get together" on a program.

END CLEARANCE AND RAISE REVENUE ONE THIRD, COL. COLE TELLS MAJORS

Allied Head Declares His Belief in Feasibility of Subsequent Run Immediately Following Previous Showing

"Abolish the clearance system!"

This suggestion was given Tuesday afternoon to the motion picture industry as a solution to existing differences in distribution-exhibition, by Colonel Harry Albert Cole of Texas, speaking as president of the national Allied States Association.

Mr. Cole had arrived in New York from the South, en route through the East and Midwest on his first official round-the-country visit to Allied's 20-odd state and city affiliated exhibitor organizations.

Colonel Cole—he was in the United States Army during the World War, after which he went into Texas exhibition, in 1919, affected complete indifference to the long-promised trade practice program from the majors for self-regulation. He declared he "does not regard seriously" the efforts of the distributors to appease exhibitor demands.

The comparatively new president of Allied—his election was in January—explained his ideas of "real reform" from his suite, at the Lincoln Hotel, where he said his "reforms would go much further than any which can possibly be made by the majors in their present state of mind."

Admits Idea Is Fantastic

Complete abolition of clearance—that national motion picture system by which one theatre is prevented from playing a picture until a fixed period after a prior run—was admitted by Colonel Cole to be "fantastic," but, he insisted, he was "most sincere" in advocating it. Said he:

"The more I think of it, the more I feel the idea has merit. I believe it is feasible for a subsequent run to start playing a picture immediately after the prior run is through with it, and not be compelled to wait for days, weeks, even months.

"The recent Supreme Court's decision in Dallas-Interstate case means that you cannot control a subsequent run. My position is that if we took pictures in a given locality, and ran them through various runs without any time lapses, there would be more revenue for all concerned."

He declared that, without clearance, majors' revenues would increase by one-third; he also believes that the present system hurts subsequent runs more than it increases first runs' grosses."

Colonel Cole charged that, "protection, insofar as receipts are concerned, means little or nothing to the first run—protection, as now practiced, is used to further a monopoly and is not a good business practice."

Sees Two Basic Problems

He was asked whether the establishment of clearance boards, to exercise "leniency" where that was necessary, would be a good measure. Colonel Cole pointed to the Supreme Court ruling, which, he said, meant that such boards would be legal only with the consent of all exhibitors affected.—"And," he added, "you know how likely that is."

SOUTHWEST SURVEY SHOWS TREND THERE

A new survey of the southwestern market, published by the Dallas Chamber of Commerce under the title, "The Dallas Market," shows that one-seventh of the total buying power of the United States, 11 per cent of the population (14,000,000), 12 per cent of the value of farm products, 55 per cent of the cotton, 20 per cent of the mineral production, and 73 per cent of total crude oil production are concentrated in the southwest.

The southwest accounts for 14 per cent of the nation's railroad mileage, 17 per cent of the number of farms, 16 per cent of the cattle, 13 per cent of the sheep, and 22 per cent of the exports. During the last decade Texas has shown a 25 per cent increase in population, the southwest 20 per cent, and the United States 15 per cent. The southwest normally produces $6,000,000,000 of new wealth annually.

"The majors' efforts to formulate a fair trade practice program are not a very practical approach to the solution of the many troubles of the industry," he said.

"The many 'trade troubles' of other nature," he continued, "resolve themselves into two problems: (1) how to divorce distribution from exhibition, and (2), how to get rid of compulsory block booking."

The trade practice program, he noted, does not attempt to rid the industry of either of these.

"A solution could be agreed upon tomorrow," Colonel Cole asserted. "But I don't think it will. That is the reason for our (Allied's) attitude. Nobody can tell me that there is any physical barrier to such a solution.

Colonel Cole elaborated: "The outside troubles which this industry faces—namely, more and more government suits—are mainly the consequences of its own misdeeds.

"Are we fellows (Allied) powerful enough to make the United States Government act?" Colonel Cole asked. "No; it was all brought upon the majors by themselves. Look at Dallas, for instance."

Most of the Allied members whom the Colonel has spoken to since his election as national organization head, think that the trade practice program is "just a stop-gap," he claimed.

"They haven't the idea that an elephant can live on peanuts," Colonel Cole said. He explained that concessions given to groups of independent exhibitors like Allied were small in comparison to their power and membership.

"I can add that Allied members are also very much put out by the North Dakota (divorcement law repeal) tactics," he said. "It was not so much the repeal itself, but the way it was done; and there is now quite a feeling of distrust as to any frank and open dealings."

Colonel Cole was scheduled this week to confer with the Allied units of Philadelphia, and of Baltimore; and on Monday next to meet with the Jersey Allied; on Tuesday with the Allied New England organization, in Boston; on Wednesday to speak in Boston before the Federated Women's Clubs of Massachusetts; on Thursday to meet with the board of directors of the New York Allied, in New York.

Study Clearance in New York Areas

There will be an adjustment of clearances in the Albany zone, the New York State Allied has informed its members, following protests by its members to the distributors, and the appointment of an Albany committee by the organization, to study the situation.

The Buffalo Allied unit meets Monday to receive a report from its grievance committee on clearance in the Buffalo and Rochester areas.

Last week, the New Jersey Allied, meeting in Elizabeth, endorsed the Neely anti-block booking bill, now in Congress.

Theatre divorcement legislation will be the principal topic at the annual convention of Allied States Association in Minneapolis next June. This was revealed by the call for the session issued last week by Colonel Cole, as he stopped at Washington.

The defeat suffered in North Dakota, where the legislature recently repealed a theatre divorce law before it had become operative, will not deter Allied members, Cole pointed out. Campaign will be launched to force N. D. lawmakers to reinstate statute at next session.

Plans also will be developed at the convention to intensify Allied's drive to persuade Congress to enact legislation abolishing compulsory block booking and blind buying.

Few Bills Filed On "Divorcement" and Katz and Warner theatres and major companies, refused to set a trial date. He suggested depositions be taken before the trial date.

On Theatre "Divorcement"

The theatre "divorcement" bill introduced during the week in Georgia highlighted the week. Added to this was the action of the Kansas Senate judiciary committee which recommended passage of the Williamson "divorcement" bill. The measure, already passed by the House, was due for a Senate vote by the weekend.

A similar bill in Washington remained in committee without action as the state legislature neared adjournment.

In Washington, D. C., Thomas D. Thacher, counsel for Paramount, asked the United States supreme court to dismiss his company's appeal for a review of a lower court decision on the constitutionality of the North Dakota law rendered moot by repeal of the law last month. The court gave North Dakota 10 days to answer.

A preliminary report on the "events" leading up to the sudden repeal of the North Dakota law was received Monday by the Department of Justice from its operatives. Department officials said a final report would come later.

By the investigation the Department hopes to determine whether there is adequate evidence to support a criminal charge. If not it is understood that the material will be used in new suits threatened by the Department.

NEW YORK CENSOR LAW FIGHT SEEN; ASCAP WINS TWO STATE BATTLES

Agitation Revived for Repeal of Empire State Censor Law Following Furore Over "Yes, My Darling Daughter" Rulings

Passing the two-thirds line in 1939 lawmaking activity, state legislatures continue to focus substantial attention on motion pictures, principally exhibition, as a subject of local supervision, regulation, taxation and whatnot, adding several new bills this week to the scores already proposed since the sessions opened in January. A few of the new bills are favorable to films.

Outstanding event in state legislatures during the week was the movement to bring on a contest over repeal of the New York State censorship law, following the banning and subsequent passage of Warner Brothers' "Yes, My Darling Daughter."

Varying fortunes attended anti-ASCAP legislation, ASCAP winning two state fights, and losing one.

Elsewhere, arguments raged over two-men-in-booth bills, new tax proposals, Sunday showings, regulation of billboards, juvenile admissions, and on other familiar film legislation subjects.

Theatre "divorcement" bills and block booking and other trade practice regulatory measures might probably constitute the most important legislative subject this year. Latest developments in that connection appear on page 18.

ITOA Hits Censorship

In New York, attorneys for the Independent Theatre Owners are drawing up legislation which, it is hoped, will end the state censor board as now constituted. This follows a well publicized meeting last week of New York exhibition interests, at which Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, called for such action, attacked the censor board as "a one man board," as "unfair," "useless" and "extravagant," and asked not only that the association's lawyers seek to devise terminating legislation, but that all New York State exhibitors join in the battle.

In Albany, however, observers did not concede the possibility of legislation at this session to abolish the censor board. It was felt that religious groups would exert a pressure fully as powerful as the exhibitor groups seeking the board's curtailment. The board's end has been sought at practically every session of the legislature for the past 18 years. Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, for five years in succession, urged its abolition. In all of the time during which censorship in New York has been under attack, the most that antagonistic groups could achieve was the transfer of censoring power from the Secretary of State's department to the State Department of Education, in 1927.

Oklahoma this week became the eighth state this season where a state proposal was introduced for a board of censors. Oklahoma also has a new Sunday closing bill.

Another legislative highlight of the week was the approval given by the Kansas Senate Judiciary Committee to a proposal to place censorship powers in the hands of a police committee.

It is pointed out by New York State legislative observers that the opposition to the censor board comes from the New York metropolitan area, that the legislature is Republican, and that few Republicans come from New York City.

RESEARCH COUNCIL CONDEMNS DUAL BILLS

The Motion Picture Research Council, through its head, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford University, has announced that it has gone on record as opposing double feature programs.

"It is quite clear," said Dr. Wilbur, "that motion pictures have a number of inadequacies, particularly in relation to children and the effects, good and bad, upon them." He added that it was unlikely that both features of a double bill would be of "family suitability".

Ascap Gets Some Support

The Ascap situation continues only slightly favorable to the organization. The Oregon Senate defeated a measure against Ascap; and in Connecticut, at a judiciary joint committee of that state's House and Senate, a proposed anti-ASCAP bill was attacked by the Secretary of State, and by Louis D. Frohlich, Ascap attorney.

However, the North Dakota House and Senate have passed an unfavorable bill, and Governor John Moses is scheduled to hear publicly, on Monday, arguments pro and con, before signing. The act requires the organization to file a list of all their compositions, and will levy a three per cent gross income tax. The North Dakota Attorney General has refused to declare on the constitutionality of the bill; that is a judicial function, he asserted. A similar bill had been killed in the legislature on February 20.

In New Mexico, both House and Senate are still mulling over an anti-Ascap measure, after many changes which rob the bill of much of its effectiveness had been made. Expected to be left in the bill, however, is the provision for a five per cent tax on the organization's gross receipts.

E. C. Mills, chairman of Ascap's executive committee, has been appearing before the various state legislatures in an effort to explain the association's "side" of the battles. To the New Mexico legislature, Mr. Mills stated that the organization cannot guarantee to grant licenses for the performance of individual musical numbers in "hostile" states. He charged lobbying by radio stations.

In Montana, anti-Ascap legislation became law on February 27. The Supreme Court was expected this week to hand down rulings on the constitutionality of such legislation in the states of Washington and Florida, but up to midweek had not done so. Such rulings would determine the fate of legislation in all states.

In Kansas, the House will soon consider a hostile bill passed on Monday by the Senate. This bill provides for the filing of a list of all copyrighted selections, for a three per cent gross sales tax, and for blanket licensing, with the prohibition of any discrimination within any individual classification of licenses.

A state-by-state summary of other legislative developments most salient this week, follows:

Connecticut: Strong opposition developed last week to the proposed two-men-in-a-booth bill. Approximately 100 exhibitors appeared before the judiciary committee in opposition. They claimed that safety in theatre operations is properly supervised by the state police; hence, no legislation was necessary. Union spokesmen insisted legislation was necessary. The bill had been introduced in the state legislature many times before, without achieving passage.

Wisconsin: A bill in the Senate this week asks for two schedules of taxes on theatres in circuits of over two houses. The first rate is a graduated tax of $5 per theatre up to five houses, to $100 per theatre in chains of 800 or more. The second rate is a seat tax—one cent to fifteen—depending on the number in the circuit. The revenues would go to reduction of local real estate taxes and to an old age pension.

Also in Wisconsin, a bill may be introduced soon calling for a five per cent tax on gross theatre receipts.

Other Legislative Action

New Mexico: The House unanimously passed a bill over the weekend, taxing "bank night," the proceeds to go to old-age pensions. The Senate passed an excise tax on itinerant amusement enterprises.

Delaware: Seven bills affecting the industry were before the legislature this week, including: a bill to legalize Sunday movies in the state, after two o'clock in the afternoon (this was abandoned on Wednesday after a flood of protests); a bill legalizing Sunday shows in cities of over 25,000 population, and providing for a referendum at the next general election; a measure to censor films to be shown to persons under 18 years of age, and authorizing juvenile court judges to pass on "questionable" films; a measure to limit the length of screen previews and other advertising matter to three minutes, unless "due" notice is given; a bill to create a board of music machine operators, who would license operators of all machines producing music; and a bill to create a commission to regulate highway billboards and impose a $200 license fee on owners of signboards.

Maine: Hearing at the legislature was held this week on the proposal to require, in motion picture projectors, a safety shutter between the film and the light. Theatre interests and union representatives called the proposal "unnecessary, untried, impractical."

Missouri: The House last week "polished up" the bill which would continue the present two per cent sales tax for two more years. An unsuccessful attempt was made to make the tax apply to magazine, billboard and motion picture advertising, now exempt.

New York: Committees of both House and Senate up to this mid-week still had most of the measures affecting the industry. Immediately threatening are a possible sales tax bill, or increased real estate taxes, the Bennett measure affecting chain stores, which now excludes theatres; an amendment to the Phelps-Crews bill calling for two-men-in-a-booth; Assemblyman Butler's bill to "clear up" the confusion concerning admission of children under 16 years of age (this now has the support of exhibitors, formerly withheld).

Two bills were submitted last week, one in each legislative division, one calling for amendment of present civil rights law, to end racial discrimination in public places, the other adding another section to the existing laws for the same end. There are also before the committee bills to tax and regulate billboards, to prohibit the use of any public medium of expression to promote racial intolerance; and a housing measure which would raise revenue by theatre ticket taxes.

INSURER MUST DEFEND THEATRE ASSAULT CASES

Operator Wins Judgment for Court Costs in Decision Setting New York Precedent

The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court has ruled that an insurance company must defend theatres in suits for assault for personal injuries sustained by the patron at the hands of a theatre employee.

Justice Edward J. Glennon, who wrote the court's opinion in a case involving the Florabell Amusement Company, of Long Island, declared it was the first such suit in New York. Florabel was granted a judgment of $1,750 against Standard Surety and Casualty Company for legal fees paid by the theatre company in defending a personal assault suit.

Patron Brought Suit

Florabell had successfully defended a $50,000 damage suit brought against it by a patron because of an alleged assault by the manager of the company's Floral theatre at Floral Park, after the insurance company refused to defend the exhibitor in the suit.

In granting judgment for the legal fees claimed by Florabell, the court declared that where an employee goes outside the scope of his employment to assault a patron the injuries which result are "accidental" and therefore are covered by the policy protecting the theatre against accidents.

Assaults on patrons by theatre managers and other employees frequently give rise to complicated legal problems, and before the theatre operator can be made liable, it appears that it must be shown that the employee was authorized to act in the manner he did.

Of course, no theatre operator ever tells an employee to assault a patron, but sometimes such authority is assumed by the law from the nature of the employee's duties. For example, if a theatre manager ejects a noisy and boisterous patron, he is acting within the scope of his authority. In the ordinary case, the manager has the right to insist that such patron leave, but only reasonable force may be used if the patron refuses to leave by himself.

"Reasonable Force" Question

What is reasonable force is a question of fact for the jury, and that means court trials, time and legal expenses. Generally, if police are available, such matters are left up to them.

Most frequently, however, assault cases arise not from an employee's duties, but from a personal altercation between the patron and the employee. In such cases, the theatre owner is generally held not liable, but here, too, the question of whether the assault occurred in the course of assigned duties is a question of fact for the jury.

Many theatre operators attempt to protect themselves from claims by patrons by purchasing insurance against personal injury claims. Although such insurance does not usually cover assaults which are authorized by the company, the policy generally requires the insurer to defend all cases where injury is sustained through accidental means.

Heretofore, most insurance companies have refused to defend all assault cases on the ground that injuries sustained as the result of an assault are not accidental.

As they appear in the Florabell opinion, the facts were that a manager assaulted a minor and that he was convicted in the Magistrate's Court of assault in the third degree. Subsequently, the minor brought suit for damages and the insurer refused to defend the case.

COURT WARNS ON THEATRE ACCIDENTS

It is the duty of theatre proprietors to exercise a high degree of care to prevent injury to their patrons, the Oklahoma state supreme court ruled last week.

It upheld a jury verdict of District Judge George H. Giddings awarding $1,750 to Mrs. Nova Hughes of Oklahoma City for injuries received when she fell in the Liberty theatre in Oklahoma City May 29, 1935. Mrs. Hughes contended that Standard Theatres Corporation was negligent in not having adequate lighting so that she could see the "jump off" step when she left her seat. She alleged that the aisle was approximately 4 inches below the row of seats.

The theatre firm had asked Judge Giddings for an instruction that it was the patrons' duty to use reasonable precaution to protect herself.

Fee Reimbursement Sought

It was agreed that the exhibitor did not authorize the assault, and, as a matter of fact, successfully defended the civil suit. However, legal fees of $1,750 were incurred and reimbursement for this expense was sought.

"The distinction between liability and coverage must be kept in mind," said the court. "So far as concerns the obligation of the insurer to defend, the question is not whether the injured party can maintain a cause of action against the insured, but whether he can state facts which bring the injury within the coverage. If he states such facts, the policy requires the insurer to defend irrespective of the insured's ultimate liability." The fact that the employee caused the injuries while acting outside the scope of his employment was held immaterial.

"An assault by an employee, an assault not foreseen by the employer, may be as catastrophic to the purse of the insured, the employer, as it is to the body of the person assaulted. Not being willful on the part of the assured, it is, from the point of view of the assured, in the nature of an accident in the course of his business."

Judgment Issue Undecided

Continuing, the court pointed out that the policy was drawn by insurance company and that all ambiguities should be resolved against it. From the language of the court, it might almost be assumed that the insurance company would be required to pay a judgment if it was recovered. However, the court was not required to pass on this phase (as no judgment was recovered) and deductions from the court's language are hazardous. One thing was made clear, however: the insurance company is required to defend and because it failed to do so was directed to pay the $1,750 in legal expenses which the exhibitor had incurred.

SEC Report On Monogram

Realignment in January of officers' holdings in Mongram Pictures was disclosed Tuesday by the Securities and Exchange Commission. The commission's semi-monthly summary of transactions of officers, directors and principal stockholders in the equity securities of their companies showed that Trem Carr, Hollywood, director, and Scott R. Dunlap, Hollywood, officer, each acquired 16,629 options for Monogram common by gift, and another 6,194 by purchase, each holding a total of 22,823 options at the close of the month.

It also showed that Sol A. Rosenblatt, New York, a director, disposed of 11,228 options by gift, his entire holdings, but retained 1,000 shares of the company's common stock.

Acquisition of 274 options by M. S. White, New York, Monogram officer, also was reported.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, and Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production, left New York last Friday for the company's studio. They arrived in Hollywood Monday to complete 1939-40 product plans. While in New York, Mr. Johnston's 25th anniversary in the industry was signalized by a luncheon at the Astor tendered him by Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. (See photo on page 10.)

Lloyd Lind, assistant to George Weeks, general sales manager, is on a tour of the Middle West, during which he will visit Monogram offices.

Fanchon Royer, Monogram announces, will act as advisor on a series of four Monogram pictures to co-star Marcia Mae Jones and Jackie Moran.

Other Stock Acquisitions

In other film stock transactions reported by SEC were the acquisition of 2,000 shares of Warner Brothers common by Jack L. Warner, Burbank, Cal., officer, whose holdings at the close fo January included 90,060 shares of common, 14,884 shares of preferred and 1,183,000 six per cent debentures; and the disposition of 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common by the Chase National Bank, New York, reducing its holdings to 221,158 shares.

The SEC summary also showed the acquisition of 300 shares of Trans-Lux common stock by Percival E. Thurber, New York, officer, increasing his holdings to 1,500 shares, and acquisition of 500 shares by Leslie E. Thompson, New York, director, giving him a total of 3,500 shares; and acquisition of 100 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by Henry R. Winthrop, New York, a director.

Wolfson Asks Morgenthau to Raise Tax Exemption from 40-Cent Tickets to 50

Believing that the present is "an unusually favorable opportunity" for exhibitors to get the exemption on federal ticket taxes raised from 40 cents to 50 cents, and that the lifting of such exemption by Congress "will eventually react for the benefit of the entire industry," Mitchell Wolfson, head of Wometco Theatres, operating 17 theatres in Florida and three in the Bahamas, has addressed the following to the Honorable Henry H. Morgenthau, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, at Washington:

"Honorable Sir:

"As you can see from the heading of this letter, I have a suggestion to increase the revenue of the United States Government, as well as our own. The plan I suggest would require a minimum of change and meet with the approval of an entire industry. My suggestion is very simple.

"For many years, the standard admission price to the better motion picture theatres of America, of which there are thousands, was 50¢. That is to say, one-half dollar, or two quarters, or as most people come in pairs, a man lays down a dollar, receives his two tickets in the least possible time, and walks right in the door with no delay.

"I am trying to convey the impression by the last sentence, that 50¢ is a good medium of exchange in our business, and it is almost as easy to sell a ticket at 50¢ as it is for 40¢.

"Now, what happened. The government as you know, has a 10% amusement tax on admissions over 40¢. In my judgment, over 90% of the theatres in the United States who were charging 50¢ dropped to 40¢. They could not charge 55¢. 50¢ is the top admission that most theatres could charge. The extra 5¢ built up a sales resistance that was almost impossible to hurdle, due, in a great measure to the odd cents. That is to say, 55¢ is a bad medium of exchange.

"As a result of this drop from 50¢ to 40¢, profits were greatly curtailed to the exhibitor, to the distributor and to the producer. As a natural result, the government received less income tax, the workers less salary, and the motion picture business less profit. This applies to all theatres, distributors and producers, because when the first run theatres cut from 50¢ to 40¢, the second runs and all other theatres had to reduce their admission prices in proportion.

"I suggest that the amusement tax exemption be raised from 40¢ to 50¢. As a result, the government will lose very little, as very few theatres charge 55¢.

"Certainly, the income of all the other thousands of theatres that might raise their admissions from 40¢ back to 50¢, and a proportionate increase in theatres charging a lesser price, would greatly increase the government's revenue from the motion picture theatres of the country through increased income.

"My suggestion is simply that the 10% amusement tax exemption be raised to all tickets above 50¢ or that it be raised to some figure even higher than this so that the profits from the amusement interests could be substantially increased and as a result, the government receive substantial increases in their revenue.

"I am taking the liberty of sending a copy of this letter to the various trade journals of the industry. I was encouraged to write this letter to you, by reason of your statement that businessmen forget their defeatist's attitude of 'What's the Use', and proceed to try and make money.

"If I can be of further service, please call on me.

"Yours very truly,
"Mitchell Wolfson,
"WOMETCO CIRCUIT."

Skirball Arrives in New York from Coast

Jack L. Skirball, Grand National production head, arrived in New York this week from the Coast after a stopover in Chicago for a meeting of company executives. Mr. Skirball said the company was increasing its production program and that prospects were bright for a substantial flow of product. He will return to Hollywood in about ten days.

Following a meeting with creditor and Loyd Wright, trustee for the company, in Hollywood this week, E. W. Hammons, president, said that Grand National was progressing in its development and that creditors were cooperating for the best interests of the company. Mr. Hammons expects to leave Hollywood for New York Friday.

Sol Edwards, eastern sales manager, who attended the Chicago meeting, is making a swing of exchanges.

Jeffrey Bernerd is expected in New York from London early in April in connection with Grand National's plans to produce "Newmarket Heath," a turf story, which will co-star two English-born Hollywood players.

H. Bradley Fish has been appointed Grand National branch manager in San Francisco.

Rydge, Australian Circuit Head, to Arrive March 20

Norman Bede Rydge, managing director of Greater Union Theatres in Australia and affiliated interests, will arrive on the west coast March 20th on his first visit to the United States. He is expected to continue on to New York, arriving there about March 27th. The purpose of the visit is to confer with Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and other company heads regarding the distribution-exhibition situation in Australia.

Mr. Rydge, who also heads British Empire Films, a distributing organization, and Cinesound Productions, was the chief sponsor of the new films act in New South Wales which imposed greater restrictions on American distributors, including a 25 per cent cancellation privilege and a production quota.

His interests, which are influential with the New South Wales Government, are willing to recommend amelioration of the law provided Greater Union and affiliated theatres are given a greater share of American films. The circuit's product troubles date from the time its pool with the Hoyts circuit was dissolved, in June, 1937. Hoyts, the dominant circuit, is controlled by Nationl Theatres (Skouras).

Greater Union has 60 theatres, plus others in affiliation. Its product consists of Universal, Republic, Monogram and second choice of other major product after Hoyts. The circuit, however, gets a good share of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, in conjunction with Metro's own six theatres in Australia. Greater Union finds this an insufficient supply of big pictures for its three first runs in Sydney and others.

Captain Harold Auten, Greater Union representative in this country, will leave New York Wednesday for Los Angeles to meet Mr. Rydge on his arrival.

REPUBLIC, RKO REPORT 1938 PROFITS; WARNER IN $6,000,000 REFUNDING

Substantial Net Incomes Earned Last Year; 20th Century-Fox Votes Dividend; Time Reel Said to Be "In the Black"

Substantial profits for 1938 were reported this week by Consolidated Film Industries and its subsidiary Republic Pictures; by RKO, by Time, Inc., and the latter's subsidiaries, including the March of Time news short.

Other motion picture financial developments of the week included the declaration of a dividend by Twentieth Century-Fox, and the disclosure of officers' salaries paid by Loew's, as reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington.

The Fox board of directors voted a cash dividend last week, amounting to 37½ cents per share for the first quarter of 1939 on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable March 31, 1939, to stockholders of record at the close of business March 15, 1939; and a cash dividend of 50 cents per share on the outstanding common stock of the corporation, payable March 31, 1939, to stockholders of record at the close of business March 15, 1939. The B. & K. circuit declared a dividend of 50 cents on voting trust certificates, payable March 31st.

The Loew's salaries revealed reached a total of $13,832,846 in 1938, paid to 172 studio executives, producers, supervisors, actors, writers, and cameramen. The Securities Exchange Commission disclosed such two-bracket salaries as that of President Nicholas Schenck, $351,042; of Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, $893,300, and of J. Robert Rubin, vice-president, $493,230.

Options Outstanding

This Loew report further reveals that options on 115,152 of its common stock at $40 per share are outstanding. Mr. Schenck holds options at that price, for 48,492 shares; David Bernstein, Mr. Rubin and Mr. Mayer each have options for 22,220 shares which, it was reported to the Stock Exchange Tuesday, they have exercised.

The Columbia report, also disclosed by the SEC, notes 26,266 common shares under option at $13.20638 per share, and that the original total of 25,000 shares was altered by a stock dividend. Samuel J. Briskin originally had an option on 10,000 shares, exercisable on 7,500 before August 10, 1943, and on 2,500 between June 10, 1940, and August 10, 1943. Abraham Schneider and Abraham Montague had options on 7,500 shares each.

RKO's net consolidated profit for 1938 was $173,578. This was revealed Monday at hearing in New York City Federal Court, on the RKO reorganizaiton. The profit figures thus revealed may be compared with $1,821,165 for 1937; however, earnings for the first period of this year are reported higher than similar figures during the same period of 1938.

Preferred and common stockholders of Consolidated Film Industries this week were advised of the annual meeting on March 23, in the New York City home offices at 1776 Broadway. Among the business to be transacted is the election of four directors for a three-year term. Present incumbents, who are likely to succeed themselves, are Herbert J. Yates, Jr., Joseph Aller, Richard W. Altschuler, and Edward C. Dearstyne.

In the annual report to the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., stockholders, submitted by Mr. Yates, the president, the following is disclosed:

Republic Gross Up a Million

That Republic grossed $7,373,972 in 1938; that this was an increase of $1,089,981 (17.4 per cent) over the 1937 world gross; that exhibition contracts in 1938 totaled $8,966,140; that this was an increase of $1,987,093 (28½ per cent) over 1937; that 1938 net earnings were $616,696, less all charges, including depreciation and Federal taxes, compared with 1937's net of $605,755; that Consolidated's earnings are equivalent to $1.54 per share on the 400,000 preferred shares outstanding, compared with earnings equivalent to $1.51 per share in 1937; that the company has paid off all its bank loans; that last year it liquidated $1,050,000 in loans; that it has improved its net current asset position, mainly from the sale of The American Record Corporation to the Columbia Broadcasting System in December, 1938, thus deriving net proceeds of $690,100; that the company had originally acquired the record concern in the belief that discs would be used in recording of motion pictures, which belief was not borne out.

The further report states that more theatres are playing Republic films than before; that, in 1939, the company will receive a larger share of the gross receipts in the United States, Canada and Great Britain as a result of revision of agreements with franchise holders; that, on the basis of these revisions and the company's 1938 gross, the company's share would have increased $448,928 over the amount it actually received in 1938; that net sales and royalties in 1938 totaled $8,799,875, with the net profit

MARCH OF TIME IN FIFTH YEAR

With its March issue, the March of Time starts its fifth year. The first release will be a pictorial story titled "The Mediterranean Background for War", which has to do with the Mediterranean, Tunisia, and Mussolini's demands.

To its previously won Special Award from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and the Clement Cleveland Memorial Medal, March of Time added in 1938 the annual trophy of the Motion Picture Traffic Safety Committee, when "Man at the Wheel" was selected as the year's best picture to dramatize the safety problem.

Last December, The National Archives, Washington, D. C., singled out the March of Time as the "best medium for transmitting a record of contemporary life to future generations", and has provided for the establishment in the national capital of a March of Time Memorial Library to preserve its film records.

Loan Arranged by Warner for Purchase of Debentures; First Quarter Earnings Are Expected To Be Larger This Year

Warner Brothers on Monday announced that it has completed arrangements for a bank credit covering a secured loan in the maximum amount of $6,000,000, maturing in various amounts every six months, beginning on April 1, 1940, the proceeds to be used solely for the purchase or retirement of debentures, of which $25,827,000 are currently outstanding.

Holders Notified

This was disclosed in a letter sent by the corporation from its headquarters in New York, to the holders of Warner Brothers Pictures optional six per cent convertible debentures, series due 1939. Said the letter:

"We desire to report the progress to date in connection with the plan of exchange announced by this company on July 25, 1938.

'$19,266,000 principal amount of Debentures have been deposited under the plan of exchange, for which certificates of deposit have been issued. The company has purchased in the open market $471,000 principal amount of certificates of deposit which are to be used for sinking fund purposes for the proposed new debentures. Since September 1, 1938, the company has also purchased in the open market $3,102,000 principal amount of debentures, of which $1,700,000 have been retired, and the remaining $1,402,000, which are held in the Treasury, will be retired in due course.

"After allowing for the foregoing purchases, there remain outstanding an aggregate of $25,827,000 principal amount of certificates of deposit and debentures.

"The company has completed arrangements for a bank credit agreement covering a secured loan in the maximum amount of $6,000,000 maturing in varying amounts each six months begining April 1, 1940, and ending April 1, 1944, if the maximum amount is borrowed. A copy of the agreement has been filed this day with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Proceeds from borrowings are to be used solely for the purchase or retirement of debentures. Therefore, the greater the number of debentures deposited the less necessity there will be for the company to avail itself of the maximum amount of the bank credit.

Earnings Increase Expected

"It is estimated that the earnings for the quarter ending February 25, 1939, will be in excess of those for the quarter ending February 26, 1938, when the earnings were $1,139,018.67 after all charges other than provision for Federal surtaxes on undistributed profits.

"If you have not already deposited your Debentures under the plan of exchange we would appreciate your doing so at the earliest possible date."

The bank credit is with the New York Trust Company, Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago.

It is anticipated that additional debentures to be deposited, in addition to earnings and to the bank loan, will cover the amount to be paid.

A copy of the loan agreement was filed Mon-

Papal Coronation Arrangements Set by U.S. Newsreels

American newsreel companies were completing plans, as the weekend approached, for the coverage, and the subsequent quick transportation to this country, and thence to theatres, of the pictures to be taken on Sunday, in Rome, of the coronation of Pope Pius XII.

Crews To Be Augmented

Newsreel coverage in Rome will be by three man crews, augmented as the situation warrants, according to the judgment of the Rome newsreel representatives. In some cases as many as three crews will be used, and both sound and silent cameras. Barring possible restrictions by the Vatican—considered unlikely because the Vatican dignitaries have shown modernity of taste and willingness to use modern vehicles of expression—and barring possible censorship delays, the films will be shipped aboard the Europa, in Cherbourg, Wednesday, the first available transatlantic sailing. The Rex is scheduled to leave Naples on Wednesday also but will not dock in New York until several days after the Europa.

Use of the air line from Paris to Natal, Brazil, was considered. The films could be transferred at Natal to a Pan American airliner for Miami. However, the French plane leaves Paris Sunday morning, too early; and Friday morning, too late.

Upon arrival here, the films will probably be released as "specials"; this depends, however, it was emphasized, on their quality, and how the time of arrival fits in with the makeup of the regular issues, which takes place usually on Mondays and Wednesdays. The Europa is due here Monday, March 20; and efforts may be made to transfer the reels to airplanes from the Europa as she approaches New York, in order to include the shots with the regular issues. Airplanes will "probably" be used, most officials said, to transport the finished prints to exchanges, and accounts.

Election Coverage Complete

A clue to the probable coverage of the coronation, almost equal in importance and certainly more spectacular than the election, will be found in the treatment accorded to the election of the Pope last week. All of the newsreels, with the exception of Fox Movietone News, issued "specials" on the event, and sent them out by airplane from the New York laboratories. Movietone had, in its advance stories, designated Cardinal Pacelli, now Pope Pius VII, as "the leading candidate." The "specials" showed the Vatican, and shots of the new Pope, who was a visitor here in 1936.

Radio Broadcast Planned

Radio networks elaborately treated the election last week, and are making similar arrangements for the coronation.

The three major networks broadcast the news of the election practically simultaneously last Tuesday morning. The announcement went first to the networks from the Vatican radio station; the three networks and the New York independent stations subsequently followed with their announcements.

The networks have announced that they will remain on the air all through Sunday morning, from midnight Saturday to broadcast a description of the coronation. These begin at 3:30 A.M., Eastern Standard Time, and last to 6:45 A.M. (9:30 A.M. to 12:45 P.M., Rome time.)

day with the Securities Exchange Commission. The deadline for depositing debentures for exchange is March 15, 1939. This date may be advanced by vote of the directors. Undeposited debentures are to be paid off in cash on maturity. The new bonds will mature in 1948 and bear the same rate of interest.

Warners will mortgage its studio and theatre properties for the $6,000,000 loan it has arranged from three banks to complete its $29,400,000 debenture refunding. This was disclosed in a statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington Tuesday.

As security, Warners will pledge all of the assets of the Stanley Company, New England Theatres and First Theatre Corporation and, when the borrowing reaches $3,000,000, will give a mortgage on the Burbank studio.

The agreement under which this arrangement is to be carried out will run until September 1. The loan matures in varying amounts each six months beginning April 1, 1940, if the maximum credit is borrowed. The money is to be furnished by the New York Trust Company, Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago.

Filing of the plan was for the purpose of keeping the S. E. C. informed of the company's operations and does not require S. E. C. approval, it was said.

33 Cities To See Train And Previews of "Pacific"

Paramount has scheduled 33 key cities for visits of a historic train and previews of Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific" with the Union Pacific Railroad cooperating. Present plans call for the tour to start April 17th and end in Hollywood about May 10th.

The cities to see the train, which will consist of an 1860 locomotive and cars hauled by Union Pacific's latest steam-electric turbine locomotive, are Salt Lake City, Ogden, Evanston, Green River, Rawlins, Laramie, Cheyenne, Denver, Omaha, Chicago, Toledo, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Schenectady, Springfield, Mass.; Worcester, Boston, Albany, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Altoona, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Time Reel "In Black"

While no breakdown was included in the announcement last week of the earnings of Time, Inc., including all its subsidiaries, it was asserted at the offices of the March of Time magazine reel that the film producing unit is in the black this year, "to the tune of several thousand dollars—and this, for the first time in our history."

Time, Inc., claimed a net profit of $1,129,422 for the year 1938, for the magazine and all affiliated companies. This compares with a net profit of $168,430 for 1937. Gross sales were $23,594,089 for 1938, as against $20,998,143 for 1937. Henry R. Luce, president, attributed the increased income to a lessened loss on the publication, Life.

DRAMATISTS WANT HOLLYWOOD BACKING BUT NOT "UNRESTRICTED"

Insists on "Real Competitive Bidding" and Author Control Over Film Cast and Direction, Says George Middleton

The organized Broadway dramatists and representatives of the motion picture industry this week finally opened formal negotiations to establish a new agreement which would return motion picture financial support to stage productions.

The first draft of the pact has already been completed and it now remains for both sides to ratify. Sidney Fleisher, acting as attorney for the Dramatists Guild, and J. Robert Rubin, counsel for GM, and Jake Wilk, eastern story editor for Warners, represent the motion picture industry.

Basically, the new plan provides that the purchase price of a play bought by Hollywood for filming depend on the length of the run.

Middleton Defines Problem

George Middleton, past president of the Guild, speaking for the Guild Council, tracing the relations between the dramatists and motion picture producers, declares that the basic "problem," revolves around the dramatists' belief that "the Guild does not want the American theatre to be exclusively picture controlled so that a play, without picture possibilities, may have difficulty finding production elsewhere. It wishes managers with private capital to be able to finance such plays under conditions which will enable them to do so equitably. All managers would not welcome picture money in the theatre under any unrestricted circumstances; they, too, are sharply divided on this.

The Guild also wishes the highest price for its members' picture rights, obtained through real competitive bidding. Failing that, the highest price, or other returns, depending on a value which can be freely established. Further, it wishes the author to have proper control over cast and direction. It wants the play honestly to be allowed to have its full legitimate life in New York and on the road. It does not want it withdrawn by the enforced release of a picture version of itself, thereby killing it as a stage proposition.

Wants Full Stage Life

"The manager wishes also to produce (and to be financed) and to get proper returns from its full legitimate stage life, as well as the highest price for the picture in which he may share. His problem is thus basically the same.

Mr. Middleton pointed out that the sum earned by dramatists through picture sales since 1926, totals $11,199,456.

"For years," Mr. Middleton said in part, "managers and authors shared equally in stock leasings and other by-products. Early picture rights were so regarded and thought of little value.

"The courts ruled that plays and pictures were competitive, and the manager had many technical nuisance claims. Consequently no picture company, quite rightly, would buy any rights with a clouded title. But highest prices were paid at the height of a play's run.

"In negotiating its first Managers' Basic Agreement, the Guild realistically faced these inescapable facts.

"Those who criticize the Guild, for agreeing to managers receiving any share, must also consider realistically the above conditions.

YEAR'S RETAIL SALES 12 PER CENT BELOW '37

Total retail sales in 1938 amounted to $35,300,000,000, a decline of about 12 per cent from the 1937 volume of $39,900,000,000, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. 1938 was the first year since 1933 in which the total dollar volume fell below the previous year's level. In the four preceding years there was a continuous expansion from the depression low of $25,000,000,000 recorded in 1933, to the 1937 mark, when sales were higher than at any time since 1930, and within 18 per cent of the 1929 total of $49,000,000,000.

Of each dollar spent in retail establishments in 1938 more than one-third went for food and beverages, about one-fourth for general merchandise and apparel, less than one-fifth for automobiles, auto accessories and gasoline, and the remainder for other goods sold.

"A search of members' contracts revealed many in fair practices had developed in the ten years previous to reorganization. Records showed some managers had refused to produce a play unless receiving 75% of picture rights; also that "options" had been demanded by them, to buy all such rights, after production, for a nominal sum—in some cases $1,000. If the play were a big success, the manager got all the difference.

"One producer would sell picture rights and include his "directing" services. Thus, if the total paid was $80,000 he would take say $60,000 for nominal direction or "consultation" and divide the remainder. The author would thus receive $10,000 instead of $40,000. Another device was to sell the picture rights of four plays together for a lump sum and then allocate the half payment due author of each play according to the size of the manager's production interest in each play.

Bidding Affected

"The Managers' Basic Agreement took from both managers and authors the power each had, in many instances, to block a picture sale indefinitely; it placed sale in an 'arbiter.'

"A total of $9,758,916.66, under the first two Agreements has passed through the Arbiter's office for picture sales," he said.

"Except where motion picture companies backed plays, the MBA brought free competitive bidding for motion picture rights," Mr. Middleton continued.

"Since the first two MBAs, with certain restrictions, then gave the managers 50% of any price received for picture rights, the company backing plays had an edge over any outside picture company in bidding for those rights. Not satisfied with this, the companies created the impression they controlled the property through the manager and that outside bidding was therefore useless. The result was generally only one offer for picture rights was made and that from the backer. The present MBA restores open competitive bidding.

"The proprietary rights being vested now in the author, no picture company can be assured of securing picture rights by backing a manager. It is provided that where an author accepts picture company backing it has the exclusive privilege of buying picture rights at a price fixed by the author and Negotiator, after production of the play. If this is refused the picture rights go into the open market.

"Not all the companies have explained their reasons for objecting to this proceeding. One or two have said they would not back plays unless absolutely assured of picture rights for their own company at a price.

Individual Producers Interested

"The picture companies, as companies, have not officially backed plays under the new MBA; but individual picture producers are and have been financially interested in stage productions."

In response to whether or not the MBA has lessened picture sales of other plays, Mr. Middleton said:

"The prices for individual plays, that were adaptable, have been higher since competition was open; some of the prices having been highest ever paid. Old plays under previous MBA are also still being sold. The picture sales, under present MBA, have amounted to $1,440,650. Of this the author received 60% instead of 50% as before.

"The total to date is $11,199,456.66 (both Arbiter and Negotiator)."

Mr. Middleton does not believe that the author's larger share in picture rights has curtailed private backing; and said that 453 contracts had so far been signed under the present MBA.

Far from objecting to picture companies backing plays, he added, "the Guild, as a business organization, eagerly seeks to encourage the widest possible stage production for its members so that all branches of the theatre may profit. But it also has a trust to fulfill to the theatre itself."

ERPI Distribution Deal

Electrical Research Products, Inc., has been appointed exclusive distributor for Simplex E-7 and Super Simplex Projectors in Brazil, China, Malay States, Straits Settlements, Siam, French Indo China, Borneo, Sarawak, Netherlands East Indies, Australia and New Zealand, according to Herbert Griffin, executive vice-president of International Projector Corporation.

Knopf Leaves MGM

Edwin Knopf, story department head for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has resigned. The resignation becomes effective February 28th. He headed the company's story department for the last five years.

Mintz Gets "Grand Illusion"

Robert Mintz has acquired the New England rights on "Grand Illusion," distribution to be handled through local offices of Imperial Pictures in Boston and New Haven.

Among those who have been invited to speak at the fifth annual convention of Variety Clubs to be held in Detroit in April, are Will H. Hays, Sidney R. Kent, Al Lichtman, Barney Balaban and Harry Warner.

"Blondie Meets the Boss"

(Columbia)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 27.—ENTERTAINMENT, in capital letters, is the essence of "Blondie Meets the Boss," second of Columbia's features taken from the popular King Features Syndicate comic strip. Seventy-one minutes of unadulterated comedy, the picture at its Hollywood preview evoked more laughs per 90 feet of film than any picture within recent memory. To say that a continual gale of laughter swept the theatre would be merely reporting a fact.

The characters familiar to hundreds of thousands of newspaper readers—"Blondie," (Penny Singleton), "Dagwood," (Arthur Lake), "Baby Dumpling," (Larry Simms), "Daisy," the dog, "Mr. Dithers," (Jonathan Hale),—romp through the substantial story to fashion an offering palatable to all types of patrons.

In addition to the evident exploitable assets of "Blondie Meets the Boss," there is in the story a topical angle—"Dagwood's" accidentally winning a jitterbug contest. The Kay Van Riper-Richard Flournoy story was adapted by Flournoy, and directed by Frank R. Strayer. Robert Sparks was associate producer.

"Dagwood," resigning in a huff because the boss would not give him a vacation, is replaced on the job by "Blondie." He becomes innocently involved in what appears to "Blondie" as a scandal, and domestic strife ensues. However, all is explained to the satisfaction of all, with "Dagwood" unconsciously winning a jitterbug contest and "Blondie" inadvertently ruining a business deal, which turned out for the best.

FCC SUBJECT OF NEW WASHINGTON DISPUTES

White Asks Investigation of Departmental Interference in Radio Commission Rulings

Seeking an expose of the New Deal's broadcasting policies, Senator Wallace H. White, Jr. (Rep. of Maine), this week asked an investigation by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee of the extent to which "other Government departments" may have influenced the Federal Communications Commission to exercise any censorship over stations and also whether attempts have been made by the Commission or any other Federal agency to influence stations.

These inquiries would be phases of an investigation of the FCC and the broadcasting situation generally which Senator White sought to initiate in a resolution introduced March 6th.

Attacks Wheeler Bill

A leading critic of the Wheeler bill for reorganization of the FCC, Senator White had previously introduced a measure calling for an 11-man body to regulate radio, asserting that the Wheeler bill was written by FCC Chairman Frank M. McNinch for the purpose of concentrating all authority over the broadcasting in the hands of one man, the chairman of the new Commission.

In addition to investigating New Deal radio policies, the resolution would have the ICC make a thorough study of the policies and acts of the FCC, the concentration of station ownership, newspaper interests in broadcasting, the desirable length of the term for which broadcasting licenses should be issued and other related matters.

As Senator White was introducing his resolution, the FCC found itself on the receiving end of bitter criticism in the United States Court of Appeals, which reversed and remanded for further action a Commission decision denying the Courier-Post Publishing Company a permit for a new station at Hannibal, Mo.

As in previous cases in which the Commission has been reversed, the court held its denial of a construction permit "arbitrary and capricious" and held that the publishing company had satisfactorily sustained the burden of proving that there was need for a station in Hannibal, which the commission held it had not done.

Dissension Flares Again

Smoldering dissension in the Federal Communications Commission burst into flame Monday with a stinging attack on Commissioner T. A. M. Craven by Chairman McNinch, prompted by the newspaper display given Mr. Craven's minority report on complaint procedure, issued in connection with the Commission's decision Monday to abandon the policy of placing stations on a temporary basis when complaints were received.

Charging Mr. Craven with having indulged in a "stump speech and flag waving" in his report, in which he urged the commission to avoid all implications of censorship, Mr. McNinch assailed him for having "by implication, attacked the intelligence, integrity and motives of the other six commissioners, to execute a grand stand play of devotion to free speech and opposition to censorship."

The chairman declared no important change is to be made in the procedure for handling complaints, only 10 per cent of which are worthy of consideration, and he pointed out that Mr. Craven, in the opening sentence in his report, expressed agreement in principle with the commission majority. In the only two cases in which the commission has been attacked—Mae West and "Beyond the Horizon"—Mr. Craven was a party to the commission's actions, Mr. McNinch asserted.

"CENSORSHIP OF FEAR" IN RADIO—ROOSEVELT

Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, told the Federal Communications Commission at Washington Tuesday that radio "needs a law that will allow a broadcaster to operate without fear," and that the present requirements that radio stations renew their licenses every six months "tends to act as a restriction on free speech."

Mr. Roosevelt, president and chairman of the board of the Texas State Network, also said that because of the license renewal and station sale regulations, there was little possibility for the obtaining of financial backing for small stations "because of the uncertainty of continued operation."

Delay in reorganization of the Federal Communications Commission until next year is seen in Washington as a possibility as several factors combined to make Congressional action this session doubtful.

Approval of the Administration bill introduced by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, providing for a three-man board, is seen as virtually impossible in the face of charges that it was drafted by Chairman McNinch with a view to securing full control of radio and the implications of such control in the 1940 elections.

Even more important, however, is the practical certainty that if the bill is taken up, it will be made the vehicle for a thorough investigation of the F.C.C. with possibilites that it may develop the first major scandal of the New Deal. Disclosures of a sensational nature, such as have been promised by members of Congress pressing for a probe, would be highly unpalatable to the Administration at a time when it was marshaling all its forces for a Presidential campaign.

Three-Year License Asked

Representative Clarence J. McLeod, Republican, of Michigan, proposed that radio station licenses be granted for three-year periods.

A bill drafted by Representative McLeod would forbid the Federal Communications Commission to consider, when acting on applications for license renewals, the political views expressed by any station or its operators.

"The answer to the film-radio problem is for the films to make use of what radio offers in the way of unearthing new talent," declares Jesse L. Lasky, who conducts the Wrigley-sponsored "Gateway to Hollywood" program over CBS in cooperation with RKO.

"Radio should be an ally, not an enemy of films. Our program shows the benefits that can be derived from radio by intelligent cooperation."

In addition to dramatic talent, it is understood Lasky will seek singers and dancers if the program is given a second renewal by Wrigley. It was recently renewed for 13 weeks.

Lewen Pizor, president of the UMPTO, in Philadelphia, has sent a telegram to Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th Century-Fox production head, commending him for his policy on film stars' appearances on the air.

"Grand constructive movement in withdrawing stars from radio," the wire says. "Box-office will have less competition, thus stamping again your cooperation with exhibitors."

Jack Kirsch, re-elected president of Illinois Allied of Illinois this week. called anew for the removal from the air of film stars, charging their radio appearances was hurting theatre attendance here.

The Allied unit renamed Van Nomikos vice-president, Joseph Stern, treasurer, and Ben Barthelstein, secretary.

Court Consolidates Actions of Stockholders Against RCA

Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, Wednesday granted the application of Radio Corporation of America to consolidate five separate stockholders' suits brought against it, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and some 30 officers, directors and individual defendants. At the same time Justice Levy provided in his decision that Abraham Pomerantz should act as general counsel to the stockholders and Max D. Steuer as special trial counsel for the stockholders.

The suit charges waste and mismanagement by directors, the transfer of a large block of RCA stock to G E and Westinghouse, and the alleged loss of over $7,000,000 in underwriting an $11,600,000 bond issue. An accounting, damages, return of the stock and the appointment of a receiver for RCA are asked.

Only Radtke Firm Can Grant Photocell License

License to manufacture photoelectric cell appliances under the patent granted Albert Radtke of Chicago about a year ago, can be issued only by the Radtke Patents Corporation, according to the Polytechnic Development Corporation of New York, which has been erroneously associated with such licensing in press reports.

The Polytechnic company, of which Leonard Day is the chief executive officer, has patents of its own, but these do not include the Radtke photoelectric cell appliance patent. Mr. Day is president of the corporation controlling the latter.

Canadian Documentary Bill

The Canadian Government has under consideration a special appropriation of $125,000 for making a series of documentary films depicting the utilization of natural resources and the operation of major industries in the Dominion. The films are intended for showing in friendly countries. Canada's proposed entry into the field of Government-sponsored propaganda films was recorded by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on page 15, of the issue of Nov. 26, 1938.

Seek Single Bills

Independent exhibitors in Milwaukee have instituted a move to bring a return of the single feature policy and eliminate the charging of matinee admission prices for evening performances that start at 5:45 P. M.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

United Artists' home office press agents in New York were all set the other day to garner some extra free space in the city's newspapers, but some burly cops stopped them right in their tracks—or at least in the tracks of an old "Deadwood to Cheyenne" cowboy-driven stagecoach. The coach was supposed to be carrying a print of U. A's "Stagecoach" from Newark Airport to the Rockefellers' Music Hall at Radio City, and the newspapers were so notified, with the reminder that it would be nice to send along a battery of photographers. But the police would not let them ride the coach and its six horses through the Holland Tunnel into New York.

Not all of the "Movie Quiz" prize winners were happy winners. Take Alice Walker, of Scranton, Pa., for example. When she was advised by a card from the "Movie Quiz" headquarters to be present at a Scranton theatre the night of the announcement of winners, she informed her uncle, Frank C. Walker, head of the Comerford Circuit, at one of whose theatres the $100 prize was to be presented. Now the rules of the contest allowed no one connected directly or indirectly with the industry to be eligible for a prize, and so "Movie Quiz" headquarters received a call from Mr. Walker, who explained the situation. Miss Walker did not get the prize.

Sound motion pictures in color of the Washington State legislature now meeting in Olympia are the ambition of State Senator Gordon Klemgard, wealthy Palouse wheat farmer whose hobby is photography.

Washington's Senate, presided over by Lieutenant-Governor Vic Meyers, Seattle orchestra leader when legislature is not in session, is notoriously roughhouse.

Senator Klemgard, a conservative, said in announcing his plan: "If the voters could see recorded on the screen the antics of some of the men they send to represent them in the legislature, and if they could hear some of the inane speeches which are made, there might be a general housecleaning at the next election."

New York censors, as previously noted, and considerably, ruled that Warners' "Yes, My Darling Daughter," was not fit for exhibition in its first version because it showed Priscilla Lane participating in a "trial marriage." During the very heat of the argument, the New York State milk board's regular daily newspaper gave praise to the state's contented cows, advertised praise of Priscilla Lane as the star of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," because she "gains vitality and loses excess weight with milk."

CAL TINNEY takes pen in hand in the New York Post, and pens the following complaint to James Roosevelt, care of Samuel Goldwyn, United Artists, Hollywood.

Dear James Roosevelt:

As long as you're out there in Hollywood, could you do something about these pictures based on figures out of history? For instance, the only thing true in the new Jesse James pictures is Jesse robbed trains and once he quit robbing them long enough to get married. The rest is all fiction.

Why, at this rate it is a dead cinch that 60 years from now our descendants will be viewing pictures that depict Al Capone as the kind-hearted operator of a Chicago soda fountain who gave the Chicagoans soda pop or they would have thirsted to death.

Our grandchildren will see a film edition of Al, showing him reading the American Mercury and giving dimes to the kiddies (they will have him confused with Mr. Rockefeller by that time).

But I don't guess we can kick too much, Jimmy. Always and always bandits have been romanticized faster than they could steal and kill.

The real Robin Hood was probably as ornery a cuss as ever came down the pike, but he got an awful good build-up in the years he operated. There came a time, eventually, when English children thought he was one of the 12 Apostles.

We still have the problem, though: what effect is the showing of this romantic picture of Jesse James going to have on the kids of the country?

Let enough of these "Jesse James" and "Oklahoma Kid" outlaw pictures come out and some of the nation's youngsters are going to itch to get a six-shooter in their hand and start carving out a hunk of immortality for themselves.

Jimmy, if we are going to be swamped with bandit pictures, the movie companies ought to donate the profits to building bigger and better penitentiaries because we're sure gonna need them.

Yours, CAL.

Rules Jury Trial For Chance Games

On the grounds, admitted by the justice and advanced by the petitioning attorney, that a case which is to be "the test" and to determine the fate of games in the New York City area, should not be tried by a judge, but rather by a jury, Judge Morris Koenig of General Sessions on Tuesday, in New York, granted the motion for a jury trial, asked by Harry G. Kosch, general counsel for the New York Allied theatres, and attorney in the court for the Jewel theatre, which is charged with the illegal use of games. The theatre is the interest of the Cinema circuit, headed by Max Cohen, president of the New York Allied organization.

New York License Commissioner Paul Moss, long leader in a growing fight by his department and the city administration against the games, and a close supervisor, generally, of theatres, publicly has stated several times that the Jewel theatre case will be "the test," and that if the District Attorney's office secures a conviction, all theatres using games will be proceeded against. He has also threatened to revoke the license of every house operated by the Cinema circuit in the event of conviction.

Says Property Rights Involved

Mr. Kosch, in asking for a jury trial, emphasized that the case involved valuable property rights; that any decision would be "far reaching," and that the case presented "exceptional circumstances of public interest."

Judge Koenig agreed that in any case in which the public opinion was of consequence, there should be a jury trial.

Two measures affecting chance games have been introduced in the Iowa Legislature. One, introduced by Representative John S. Heffner, would redefine "lottery" under Iowa law so as to include any scheme, plan or device in which chance plays any part. The bill would outlaw Bank Night and other games and would also include such affairs as church benefits and other events where chance games are played.

The other measure, introduced by Representative William N. Judd, would legalize Bank Night and a tax of 10 cents would be levied on each ticket sold by any theatre or other place of amusement offering any gift or prize. Proceeds from this tax would be paid into the old-age pension fund.

Would Bar All Games

A bill has been introduced in the Illinois Legislature by Representative John Pelka of Chicago, which seeks to outlaw all games of chance and also the manufacture of slot machines.

Two house bills in the Connecticut Legislature, one asking for the return of Bingo for charitable organizations, the other limiting grand prizes to $25, have been rejected. Four other bills along the same lines remain to be considered.

The Better Business Bureau in Pittsburgh is endeavoring to have Bank Night stopped, claiming the game is a commercial lottery and a violation of the Pennsylvania state lottery law.

A bill seeking to legalize Bank Night in Massachusetts has been introduced in the state legislature. Meanwhile Roy E. Heffner of the Key theatre, Middleboro, Mass., has been found guilty of operating Bank Night in violation of the anti-lottery laws of the state. The test case was pending for some time.

Theatre Bank Night insurance has been declared illegal in Zanesville, Ohio, under a new city ordinance designed to eliminate the sale of "protection" on such winnings. Meanwhile the council has passed as ordinance taxing Bank Night proceeds of local theatres. In Troy, Ohio, the police chief, E. J. Smick, has issued an order that all gambling in the city, including Bank Night as operated by individuals and pools, must cease. The order specifies, however, that Bank Night as conducted by the Mayfair theatre is considered legal and will not be interfered with.

The Attorney General of Oklahoma has branded as a lottery the so-called "shoot-the-wheel" game used in an Ardmore, Okla., theatre to select a winner from among its patrons. The lucky number was selected by shooting at a spinning wheel containing the numbers.

A bill has been introduced in the Arkansas Legislature which would fix a $25 maximum on theatre Buck Night awards.

The Conciliation Committee of the Toronto Board of Trade, Film Section, has succeeded in stamping out a new form of giveaway there consisting of a coupon which entitled the recipient to obtain two admission tickets for the price of one.

Argentine Decree Restricts Imports

A new decree providing that advance exchange permits would be required on all imports into Argentina is considered a possible wedge for curtailing importations of certain American merchandise, according to a report received at the Department of Commerce from the office of the commercial attache at Buenos Aires.

Recent applications for exchange permits on American raw film, as well as 16 mm. cameras and projectors, have been denied. On the other hand, imports of such items from most European countries have not been restricted, due to Argentine bilateral trade agreements with those countries.

A scarcity of dollar exchange continues.

Features released in the Argentine in the last two years are approximated as follows:

Country of origin	1937	1938
United States	394	323
France	25	52
Argentina	31	41
Germany	31	20
Great Britain	41	19
Spanish	9	11
Mexican	6	8
Italian	9	8
Others	9	10
	555	492

"One of the most significant developments is the increased French participation," the report says.

There are said to be 21 Argentine features ready for exhibition.

The decline in both the total and in American releases in 1938 is ascribed to the voluntary curtailment by the American distributors of inferior pictures and the tendency toward longer bookings of Argentine films.

Broadcasters Seek Data For New Code of Ethics

The National Association of Broadcasters has asked its members to send to headquarters in Washington a copy of their individual program codes, for use in revising the code of ethics for governing the entire industry.

Neville Miller, president, will appoint a committee representing a cross-section of the industry, to study the question of program codes and practices and report to the next convention.

The Federal Communications Commission will abandon the practice of issuing temporary license renewals to stations against which program complaints are pending. The Commission explained that the change was ordered because only about 10 per cent of the complaints received were found to be substantiated.

1870 Romance

"Young Man's Fancy," a new Michael Balcon production, with Robert Stevenson directing for ABFD release, went on to the floor at Ealing last week.

The cast assembled for this romantic comedy of the eighteen-seventies includes Anna Lee, Griffith Jones, Sir Seymour Hicks, Violet Vanbrugh, Morton Selten, Billy Bennett, Phyllis Monkman, Athene Seyler, Allan Aynesworth, Meriel Forbes, Felix Aylmer, Francis L. Sullivan, Irene Eisinger, Peter Bull, George Merritt, Hugh Miller, George Carney, Edward Rigby, Martita Hunt, Aubrey Dexter, Alf Goddard and O. B. Clarence.

With launching of work on this film Ealing Studios has been transformed into a veritable community of the 1870's. Horse-drawn buses, broughams and other carriages of the period continually drive round the stages. The restaurant is thronged with artists in the clothes of the period and on one of the stages an authentic reconstruction of the interior of a music hall of that time has been set up.

Technical staff connected with the film includes: Producer, Michael Balcon; associated producer, S. C. Balcon; director, Robert Stevenson; production manager, Frederick James; lighting, Ronald Neame; cameraman, Gordon Dines; art director, Wilfred Shingleton.

Other ABFD Releases

Pen Tennyson continues on his first film, 'There Ain't No Justice," which Michael Balcon is producing in the same studios for ABFD release. Most of the shooting during the last week concentrated on scenes of a Cockney party in that upstairs room which is always a feature of the English public house. Dressed in their Sunday best, Jimmy Hanley, Phyllis Stanley, Jill Furse, Mary Clare and Edward Rigby, the principals of that particular scene, joined with gusto in the Cockney ritual, "Knees Up, Mother Brown."

"The Four Just Men," another Michael Balcon-Ealing production for ABFD release, directed by Walter Forde and starring Anna Lee, Griffith Jones, Hugh Sinclair and Frank Lawton, has come off the floor and is now being edited in order to get it ready for an early trade showing.

Jack Kitchin, producer, and Anthony Kimmins, author-director, are now busy preparing the next Formby comedy which will go on the floor in two or three months' time. Also being prepared for earlier production is a new subject for Jimmy O'Dea which Walter Forde will direct and for which the casting details will be shortly announced.

Documentary

The British press, local government, housing, road systems, health, colonial administration and imperial communications are among the subjects dealt with in films currently being made in documentary form under the banner of the Associated Realist Film Producers.

Agriculture is presented in "Speed the Plough," which shows how during the past twenty years farmers have adopted new mechanical and scientific methods in order to farm their land more efficiently and more economically. "Roads Across Britain" dramatizes the social and economic importance of road transport and points the way to a planned road system for Britain. A unit has just left for East Africa to obtain material for a film on colonial administration, while another unit is working on the same film in London.

The part played by the press in the life of the nation is the theme of a film now being prepared about "The Times" and its history.

In "The Londoners" is described the administration of the metropolis and the way in which its public services have been developed in the fifty years since the first London County Council was elected. "The Growth of a City" will be an architectural film of social interest in that it will trace the development of an English "Everytown" from its birth as a group of huts to a modern industrial and commercial city. The story of public health services, which forms an important feature of these two films, is supplemented by another film showing how the safety and health of industrial workers are ensured. A series of films for use in the National Fitness Campaign is also being produced. "The Islanders" tells the story of communications between the islands off the coasts of Britain and the mainland. Two films on the development and organization of the Empire Air Routes show the importance of rapid communications in Imperial relations. The six recently completed Films of Scotland—on the character of the people, industries, agriculture, fisheries, education and sport are being supplemented by a film on the economic reorganization of Dundee.

BEST SELLERS AND RENTERS

Outside the Gate

Location work on "Where's That Fire?" the Will Hay comedy being made at the Islington Studios by Twentieth Century Productions, took the unit twenty yards outside the studio gates this week into Wiltshire Row, N.L., one of Islington's less salubrious slums. Over the back entrance of the plant yard, ordinarily used for timber storage, a gateway representing a Thameside Wharf entrance was set up. Police had to be called in to control the hundreds of Islington juveniles who flocked to help the filming.

Cameras set up on a rostrum overhanging the adjacent canal filmed the scenes, final work on which was not completed, thanks to the crowds, till 3 a. m. in the morning. Marcel Varnel directs and Maurice Ostrer is in charge of production.

Kalmus Purchase

Rights to a story by Sibyl Darwin, "The King Over the Water," written around Bonnie Prince Charlie, have been secured by Mrs. Natalie Kalmus, who says she will make a film based on it. Among the names tentatively mentioned in connection with the project, but not so far signed, are Leslie Howard and Anthony Asquith. No distribution arrangements have been reported.

The film rights of "The Stars Look Down," production of which was originally promised by Max Schach, have been taken over by Grafton Films, whose chief, I. Goldsmid, says he will spend £100,000 on filming it. Anthony Asquith may direct.

Following his drama of Sandhurst Military Academy "Sword of Honour," Maurice Elvey, veteran director, plans "Sons of the Sea," written around the Royal Naval Training College at Dartmouth.

Alfred Hitchcock, English director, arrived in New York Thursday, from London, on the Queen Mary. With him were his wife, daughter, and his production assistant, Joan Harrison. Mr. Hitchcock is scheduled to visit Florida. From there he will go to the coast to produce his first American film.

PUBLIC ACCEPTANCE OF TELEVISION ROUSES BRITISH EXHIBITORS TO ACT

Success of Fight Broadcast Shown in Three Theatres Stimulates Speculation on Immediate Future of Medium

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

No development in the field of television has had a more immediate and forceful effect in driving exhibitors into action than the broadcast of the Boon-Danahar fight from Harringay Arena on February 23rd. Concern began to muster in the exhibitor mind before the actual shows at the three London cinemas. The success of the presentations has had an almost explosive effect. It is almost generally agreed that a new era of entertainment has really been born in Britain, the ultimate of which for the show business is not easy at this junction to calculate.

Broadcast Seen Significant

Some 2,200 fight fans and picture house patrons—with emphasis on the former—thronging around the three houses showing the British Broadcasting Corporation record of the fight, breaking police cordons and standing in their hundreds at half a guinea or more, a time, excitedly registering applause obviously unprecedented in the British picture house, have awakened the trade to the thought that the Boon-Danahar fight may be playing a role in cinema history probably more significant than "The Great Train Robbery" or "The Jazz Singer."

Parallel with the announcement by Isidore Ostrer that he intends immediately to proceed with the installation of big screen television apparatus in the entire GB circuit, comes the decision of London exhibitors to press for a special committee to be appointed by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association to examine the television situation and report regularly to the General Council.

A committee, of course, is already in existence, but it has acted rather in the breach than in the observance. Exhibitor fears that television may change the industry in the same way as did sound are not likely much longer to remain unexpressed by action.

Competition Expected

Although exhibitors have been warned not to contract for the installation of television aparaus until so advised by the General Council, the forces of competition impelled by any installation on the lines suggested by Ostrer, will have an immediate and obvious driving affect. Many exhibitors foresee already the likely need for putting in television apparatus within the next twelve months.

Much, of course, depends upon the attitude of the BBC to cinema broadcasts. The change indicated by their agreement to allow the Marble Arch Pavilion and the Tatler to screen their record of the Fight by the Baird system, and Monseigneur on Scophony apparatus, is surely, in spite of Broadcasting House's insistence that it is not, a precedent.

Significant in this regard is the fact that television rights were bought by Baird, the GB concern, and that the BBC diffusion from their transmitter was by arrangement with all three parties. It will be remembered that the BBC refusal to permit the Monseigneur relay was ultimately removed and the relay permitted "by arrangement." Big money was paid by Baird for the television rights and the BBC were not charged a penny.

TELEVISION NETWORK PLANNED BY OSTRER

An ambitious television expansion program by the British Broadcasting Corporation under which Gaumont British theatres would be permitted to receive the programs in return for GB and Baird cooperation in the construction and operation of a broadcasting network has been proposed by Maurice Ostrer, GB head. Under the proposed plan 12 new provincial television broadcasting and relay stations would be built at a cost of from $250,000 to $300,000 each. Baird's technical resources and GB's talent facilities would be available to BBC in the construction and operation of the stations.

Although the BBC have a monopoly of broadcasting wavelengths and will not permit any intrusion upon their territory, it is obvious that the future of cinema television of sporting and professional events is, to a great extent, wrapped up in this question of rights. Boxing promoters see a new source of income in the high television fees they are likely to command. It would seem almost that Isidore Ostrer has taken the power out of the BBC's own hands.

Screens 15 by 12

The broadcast of the fight at the Marble Arch and Tatler Theatres was on a screen 15 feet by 12 feet. The Scophony screen at the Monseigneur was much smaller. The Marble Arch Pavilion is virtually a one-story cinema, seating approximately 1,200. On the 23rd every seat was filled and some 150 standing patrons lined the walls. Though the arc lighting of the ring interfered to some extent with the clarity of transmission, every blow was visible from any point in the hall. Intense excitement marked the whole screening, the audience virtually being part of the Harringay audience, giving the boxers gratutious advice, jibing the referee, and calling for "One for the loser!" The vast majority of those present, paying five shillings to a guinea a time, were fight fans rather than picture house patrons. Crowds queued up long before the opening and hundreds besieged the theatre and the Monseigneur next door in vain, though at the latter house a police cordon was broken and 50 constables failed to remove the invaders.

It is expected that the next sporting event to be televised will be the Oxford and Cambridge boat race. This, however, being a daylight event, cannot have quite the same significance as an event taking place during the hours when people normally seek entertainment. It will, however, obviously be a sell out.

Quota Fight Begun

Resuming its meetings this week, the Films Council was due to consider proposals put before it by the Labor Unions, and probably by the producers group, for an increase in the quota schedules. On the one hand, by the employees, the high unemployment figures were pleaded as justification; on the other, by the producers, the decline in production generally.

Due to be considered, also, was the memorandum of American producers here, who obviously can be taken as opposed to any increase in quota figures. It is not likely that the Labor groups will find the battle all theirs. Despite the sincere and impassioned pleadings that the situation can only be helped by an increase in the quota schedules, a widening body of thought takes the opposite view. It is not insignificant that this school includes not only the American producer, but exhibitor opinion.

Though the Act may have done little to help matters, believes this section, it should not be saddled with responsibility for the present slump. In short it is not quota production which has dropped, but voluntary production outside the Act. Nowhere, probably, has the American viewpoint been expressed better than in the article by Sam Eckman in Motion Picture Herald of February 11th. The American viewpoint on the quota situation will probably have followed the same line of thought.

Americans here contend, rightly, that there has been no decline in the volume of quota production and that they have themselves continuously fulfilled their quota obligations. Greatly, thanks to them, more money has been expended upon the 50 or 60 quota productions registered during the current year. Above and beyond these, however, only 30 pictures have been made outside the Quota Act, as opposed to the 120 odd in previous years.

Voluntary Production Would Drop

Here, then, would seem to be the decline. The increase of quota schedules would naturally mean a virtual increase in the number of quota pictures produced, which would probably then mean a serious drop in voluntary production already gradually nearing vanishing point. The compulsion to sponsor more British pictures, too, would probably result in a cut in the imports of foreign pictures so necessary to the British exhibitor.

That this view is not so far removed from the view of an exhibitor section, is clear from the comments of ex-president C. P. Metcalfe, who, reviewing the Quota Act's first year, insists that it is wrong to suggest that the Act is the cause of the slump. "If there had been no films made by American importers, there would have been many fewer films available . . . the Act has brought us another 50 films roughly, that we should not have had but for its operation." Metcalfe takes the view—a view which would probably be shared by American producers here—that the only remedy of the situtition is finance, the mobilization of which would probably give the needed stimulus to British producers.

Independent, Jack Prendergast has contended that a slow-up of production is not confined to Britain, and that without any legislation at all for a couple of years the industry might get back on its feet again.

Laboratory Contract Signed

Producers and technicians have reached an agreement with the objective of regulating wages and working conditions of laboratory workers. The collective pact covering an entire section of workers in one field is the first of its kind in the British industry and covers 14 laboratories employing approximately 1,000 technicians. It was negotiated by the Film Production Employers' Federation, formed to enter into an understanding with the unions, and the Association of Cine Technicians, authorized body representing workers in studios and laboratories.

FIRST REGULAR DAILY BROADCASTS OF TELEVISION FEW WEEKS AWAY

Daily Telecasting for New York Fair; Experiment Draws 12,000 in Two Days at San Francisco; Companies Plan Film Trailers

Regular non-commercial television broadcasts now are but a few weeks away. The opening of the New York World's Fair in New York in April will signalize the first extensive series of day-to-day telecasts to the public in this country.

Reactions Still Mixed

Executives of the television industry itself, film and radio leaders, the financial and business worlds and students and mere observers still disagree as to television's practicability at this time and its ability to maintain itself as a commercial entertainment medium. Dramatists and writers regard it as a threat to their protected rights in motion pictures, also as a source of new work. The general opinion is that motion pictures, new and old, will be used plentifully the first years.

The press shows an increasing interest, both because of the public curiosity and the advertising potentialities.

In Britain there is corresponding development and interest.

Major Lenox R. Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company, has warned the public against expecting too much at the outset. In a recent informal talk to the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, Major Lohr said:

"Television on a satisfactory commercial basis is not possible for at least five years. The public, accustomed to the high technical plane of motion pictures, would not be satisfied with the inferior television images as now broadcast, and it would require 40 persons to put on a broadcast that would be satisfactory to the public."

Baird's Plans

Baird Television may manufacture both theatre and television receiving sets in this country; television to theatres has been proved successful in England as a supplement to pictures, and is leading Gaumont British, a financial factor in Baird, to equip its whole circuit; telecasting has been achieved up to 90 miles in Britain; television is "considerably" further advanced in Britain than here; Baird Television may demonstrate its theatre television in a Broadway theatre during the New York World's Fair.—These opinions were voiced recently in New York by Ian Javal, commercial director for Baird Television, in this country to testify in the suit by British Acoustic Films against the Radio Corporation of America and Electrical Research Products, which was concluded in late February, in Wilmington, Delaware. Mr. Javal will stay for the arguments, in Wilmington, on April 7, and to complete his television deals.

Mr. Javal dwelt upon the installations in three West End, London, theatres, the Tivoli, Tatler, and Marble Arch, where the general public paid admission to watch the telecasts of the British lightweight championship bouts. This transmission lasted 75 minutes; reports were good; seats were $5, and the theatres were jammed, according to Mr. Javal; and the result is that Isidore Ostrer, president of Gaumont British, will equip with television receivers the 400 theatres of the GB circuit.

Audio Productions, Inc., with studios in Long Island City, New York, announced that they, too, "are prepared" for the new departure in entertainment and the use of pictures for telecasting.

12,000 AT PREMIERE OF RCA TELEVISION

More than 12,000 attended television's public debut and created a "housing" problem in the RCA Exhibit at San Francisco's Golden Gate International Exposition.

Though 10,000 were televised during the two-day celebration, waiting crowds filled all entrances of the building. It was estimated that one of every 12 in the opening day's 150,000 visitors saw the television show.

In the RCA studio crowds filed before the lens of the television camera at the rate of 15 a minute for 12 hours. In the reception room four television receivers mirrored this parade as thousands saw and heard a television broadcast for the first time.

The announcement made by this company mentioned the "limited horizon" which prevailed for the sending of television images. It also said, in part, that:

"It is the studied opinion of expert authority that film programs will constitute the bulk of television broadcasting for the following reasons: (1) Duplicates with sound-on-film may be made cheaply (2) Such prints will provide an inexpensive chain system of distribution (3) Programs can be edited and rehearsal time necessary for letter-perfect performance can be eliminated (4) The technique of film production will further reduce program costs by modern studio methods (5) Production can be made at the most suitable location (6) Talent need not be forced into rigid program schedules (7) Subject matter of a commercial, scientific or descriptive nature now beyond the reach of direct broadcasting may be included.

"With hundreds of local stations in prospect, each with full-time program requirements for sight-and-sound entertainment, there will be thousands of program-hours which cannot be supplied as live broadcasts outside of major talent centers. Thus a new field for motion pictures may be expected for television of the future, to create a vast new audience for industrial and commercial films."

Five to Ten Years

Business Week prefaced an article entitled "1939—Television Year," as follows:

"Unlike Minerva, television will not spring full grown from its father's head. Service in 1939 seems probable only for New York City and Los Angeles. It will be another year until there will be television shows in any of the other principal cities, and until they provide a market for the sets now being readied by a half dozen manufacturers. And it will be at least five years—possibly ten—until television shows pay their way."

The analysis itself said that there are only 96 areas in the country which would support television, "under any conditions imaginable."

Version of "Gunga Din"

RKO, as part of its campaign on "Gunga Din," has been preparing a "television" version of the film, this being a ten minute synopsis, with medium and close-up scenes, with special sound effects, and a smooth continuity, the whole being shipped to the NBC studios in New York for tests this month, after which time it will be telecast generally.

"This special version of 'Gunga Din' is a ground breaker," said Pandro S. Berman, executive vice-president of RKO.

Paramount Plans Trailers

Paramount, in conjunction with the Du Mont laboratories, has developed a soft tone process negative, especially for telecasting. It is almost a sepia-color, and purported to be better than black-white for telecasting.

First use of the negative, it was indicated in an announcement by Neil Agnew, Paramount vice-president in charge of distribution, will be for the production of special trailers for the exploitation of Paramount product. Plans are being discussed for one on "Union Pacific" and another on "Midnight." The trailers would be of greater length than those used for theatre exploitation and would be designed to be entertaining in themselves.

No arrangements have been made by the FCC for commercial television programs and opinions differ on what ruling would be given on such semi-entertainment programs.

At the Fairs

It is in the two 1939 fairs, the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition and the New York 1939 World's Fair, that the new industry expects to make its first extensive and best showing to the public.

RCA has erected a building with 5,000 square feet of space, on the Golden Gate Exposition grounds; this houses the television studios, the viewing room, and a broadcasting studio, facsimile apparatus, and other displays representative of every phase of radio.

At the New York fair, RCA will have a similar building. Among its features will be a "Television Living Room of Today" and "The Radio Living Room of Tomorrow." The television room will be appointed with period furniture; and the radio room, with modernistic furniture. The radio room will show a combination of sound broadcasting, television, facsimile broadcasting, phonograph recording, and phonograph record playing, all supposedly five to ten years beyond present day developments. There will be four other "viewing rooms."

The RCA building at the New York fair is shaped like a huge radio tube, affixed to its base, and lying on its side.

The company had drawn up plans for representation of television at this Fair, prior to January; but, coincident with the intentions voiced by David Sarnoff to have NBC and RCA begin television broadcasting and sale of sets with the Fair's opening, it was decided to double the space allotted.

That NBC will spend about $1,000,000 this year on television experimentation in New York was indicated by the company's vice-president, Niles Trammel. If this policy is successful, he added, the company will set up additional transmitters in other key population centers.

According to Mr. Trammel, NBC-RCA's plans call for the broadcasting in New York, co-incident with the World's Fair opening on April 30, of television two hours per week.

In Hollywood, Station KHJ is prepared to telecast a 441-line image to conform with sets manufactured by the American Television Corporation. The station is operated by the Don Lee Network.

One television manufacturer has been reported making sets for rental, instead of sales.

JAPANESE WANT U. S. PICTURES, SAYS AGENT

Restrictions Required by Conflict in China and Own Industry, Ushizo Ono Observes

The Japanese government has been forced to restrict American film imports only because of the emergencies of the incursion into China and the desire to help the thriving Japanese industry, and certainly does not want to alienate the American public, according to Ushizo Ono, director of the Nippon Motion Picture Trading Association, a government sponsored organization of independent film distributors. Mr. Ushizo is in this country seeking to buy the product of independent producers.

Seeks 40 American Films

The government is allowing, this year, the importation of 60 independent films from the United States, England, and France; Mr. Ono, recognizing the preference for American films, hopes to buy at least 40 pictures in America. He has been conferring with Republic, Monogram, Grand National, Imperial, and other producing companies.

Of the restrictions, exportation of currency from Japan by the companies, Mr. Ono said:

"I cannot say that they will receive their money any quicker than the majors; but I can say that surely it doesn't matter whether they wait three years—they'll get their money. We are not like other nations, who give something else instead of money. You know that the Japanese government, and people, have always honored their debts."

Under the existing arrangements with the major companies the money received from rentals is to be deposited in the Yokahama Specie Bank for three years, at the end of which time the producers may withdraw the money.

Mr. Ono declared that the independent producers would be assured of immediate payment of their print costs: freight, insurance, accessories.

Selection of Product

A large problem facing the independent distributors in Japan, he said, is the selection of pictures, as the Japanese are not so enthusiastic for western type pictures as generally imagined.

The association which Mr. Ono represents was formed last November, at the instigation of the government, which regulates the financial transactions of every individual and finds accountability best regulated by the formation of associations for each commercial and industrial group. Mr. Ono expects the major distributors soon will be forced into such a similar group, or will join his own association.

Understood to be certain of passage in the Japanese Diet, meeting in March, is a regulatory bill, backed by the ministers of home affairs and education, which is viewed with concern by American interests. "I don't think the bill signifies anything for Americans," Mr. Ono said, but added, "You know, of course, that there are differences in the national moralities of each country. There are some things in your pictures that we not only do not understand but which would be harmful to our younger people."

USHIZO ONO

One provision is that "in view of the influence of foreign pictures upon national morals and the motion picture industry, the volume of foreign pictures distributed, as well as exhibited in theatres, shall be restricted."

Urges Fewer Imports

The Japanese distributor, emphasizing the wide scope of the Japanese producing industry, said:

"You always used to send too many pictures. In Japan, about 500 pictures are made yearly. Next to America, we are the largest picture producers in the world. And we must protect that industry."

Two sections of the proposed bill stipulate that "exhibition of cultural pictures shall be ordered so as to promote national culture," and "for purposes of education and national propaganda, exhibitors may be ordered to exhibit certain designated pictures."

It is the feeling of observers that these two provisions may be used as a lever to force Japanese exhibitors to show German and Italian, as well as Japanese films, of a "totalitarian viewpoint," under the German-Italian-Japanese cultural world understanding. Mr. Ono observed that the regulations concerned cultural films, but predicted a drop in the demand for foreign features.

"If the new law comes out," he said, "it will be compulsory for the exhibitor to show educational films, shorts and features. This might result in the cutting of the entertainment element to one feature to a program."

Additional Provisions

Other provisions of the pending legislation call for licensing of the Japanese picture industry, to "prevent undue increase" in the number of persons employed, and "to foster healthy development"; registration of directors and players; recognition of those already engaged in business as entitled to licenses; awards to pictures promoting "national culture"; compulsory preservation of "valuable" pictures by their owners; presubmission of scenarios and manuscripts to authorities; control overlength of performances, methods of exhibition, attendance of minors; prohibition or restriction of women in night work, in film production; establishment of a motion picture committee.

Mr. Ono declared that he did not contemplate buying German films, which compared to American films, constitute a "negligible factor" in Japanese audience preference.

Palestine Sees Better Day Ahead

by ISAAC R. MOLHO
in Palestine

The disturbances in Palestine of the last 33 months are still very much in evidence, and the prospects of the motion picture industry are not any brighter.

In all the territory the incomes of all theatres are falling down and down. Terrorism obliged exhibitors, in the Arabic area, to close their doors several months ago. Three theatres were closed in Haifa, two in Jaffa and one in Jerusalem, the Rex, which had opened in June.

Large theatres in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa have adopted, as a result, the policy of reissuing super films such as "The Life of Emile Zola," "Mayerling," "Maytime," "San Francisco," "Good Earth," "The Merry Widow," "Romeo and Juliet" and others.

Majors and independent concerns have been obliged to change their methods of operation, accepting reduced rentals, and sometimes waiving the minimum guarantee clause. Results with second, third and fourth run pictures were better than playing new pictures of an average standard. American serials are now practically prohibited due to the high customs duty, imposed on films last year.

Local Production Attempted

Distributors and exhibitors are really struggling for their business life and reducing weekly expenses. German and Austrian products are banned from the market and the circulation of French talkers, with superimposed titles, is increasing.

Very poor results were obtained with a local production, "Up the Ruins," in Hebrew, and the dubbing of the film "Motel the Hazzan" in that language. Press and public received these two pictures with considerable criticism. On the other hand, "Carmel-film," local news reel, improved its status in Palestine.

The new film season has got underway under a more favorable light, due to the arrival of new British troops, to restore peace in the Holy Land.

The new big theatre of 1,200 seats, opened a few months ago, in Jerusalem, with "Victoria the Great," succeeded in obtaining good results with "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

The Projection Room in ERPI's new Hollywood laboratory, where sound problems are studied daily and solved under actual working conditions.

. . . to assure ever-finer entertainment in your theatre

Since the introduction of sound in motion pictures, ERPI and Bell Telephone Laboratories — which developed the first practical apparatus—have pioneered in sound recording and reproduction research.

These developments have been made available to the industry in Western Electric Sound Systems —used by leading producers and thousands of theatres throughout the world.

In introducing sound pictures, ERPI accepted a definite responsibility to the industry. Now, ERPI reaffirms its acceptance of that responsibility.

Conscious that the future progress and prosperity of the industry depend upon continued improvement of sound pictures through research, ERPI—backed by Bell Telephone Laboratories—will continue to devote its efforts to meeting the problems of today and anticipating and solving those of tomorrow.

U. S. FILMS HOLD LEAD IN EASTERN EUROPE

Hollywood Product Increases Popularity in Greece, Bulgaria, Turkey; Like Revues

by JOHN LORANT

A turn of Bulgaria, Turkey and Greece shows the great development of the film trade in Eastern Europe since the World War. These countries are particularly important from the point of view of the American film trade, for although they are all anxious to develop a national industry, they are staple markets for American product. Here follows a general survey of the film situation in each of these Balkan countries.

BULGARIA

The cinema is very popular in Bulgaria and there is a great number of enthusiastic picturegoers. There are 30 cinemas in Sofia, the capital, and about one hundred in the provinces, all fitted with modern sound equipment. The cinemas of the capital are surprisingly well equipped, large and luxurious. The Royal, Balkan, Gloria and Slaviamska Besseda cinemas are the smartest first-run theatres.

Twentieth Century-Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists and Paramount have branches in Sofia. American films are very popular and importation figures of American pictures tower high above those of other countries. Last year's greatest hit was MGM's "Maytime," with six weeks in a first-run cinema. The Bulgarian public is particularly partial to revues with plenty of songs and dance numbers, but they also insist on love interest.

German influence is very noticeable in Bulgaria's economic life and so in the film trade.

French films are also popular, particularly among the intelligentsia. "La Grande Illusion" was, after "Maytime," last year's greatest success.

Tickets in the first-runs of Sofia range from 10 to 20 leva (10 to 20 cents). The first-runs show one feature in the winter and double features in summer. Provincial movies release two features in a program the year round.

Bulgaria has no independent national film production of its own. The few films made in the country so far have been produced by foreign companies.

TURKEY

Turkey imports 200 features annually. American films make up nearly half the total imports. Next come the French, with 75 films. Germany has a sizeable share of the remainder.

Turkish audiences prefer adventure pictures and thrillers. A small group of the intelligentsia have favored the artistic French films, but lately have complained about always seeing the same stars.

Last season's success was a synchronized version of the old Rudolph Valentino picture, "The Sheik."

There are about 60 cinemas in Turkey, all with sound equipment. Istanbul has the greatest number of theatres; the other towns have no more than two or three cinemas each. Even Ankara, the new capital, has only two. These are absolutely up-to-date, smarter and more luxurious than those anywhere else in Turkey. In Istanbul's five large first-run theatres the prices range from 20 to 60 kurus (about 20 to 60 cents). A factor is the duty of $150 on every foreign production.

American companies distribute their products through independent local distributors. The spectacular song and dances revues have many admirers.

NEW FILM SHOWS HOW FILMS MOVE AND TALK

Portraying the mechanical, electrical and visual principles which make possible the modern motion picture, a new 16 mm. film has been prepared by Bell and Howell for free distribution to schools in either silent or sound versions. The part played by each successive machine; perforator, camera, developing machine, splicer, printer, projector, is illustrated, as is the recording of sound on film and its reproduction.

The sound recording and reproduction are shown by means of animated drawings.

There is an independent national film production of shorts in Turkey, but it is on a very modest scale.

GREECE

Greece has no independent local production but does have the most flourishing film trade of all Balkan states. Greece is an excellent market for foreign films, and gets better and better every year.

Athens, the capital, has eight large, super-luxurious first-run cinemas today, the Orpheus, Pallas, Athikon, Rex, Titania, Splendid, Kronos and Pantheon.

There are thirteen other film theatres in Athens and ten more in the surrounding suburbs. All the first-run theatres except the Rex close in the summer, but there are forty open-air movies opening each May. The largest of these are the Hesperos and the Athina.

The biggest local distributing company is the Skouras Film Company, owned by Athanasios Skouras, nephew of Spyros Skouras. The Skouras company distributes the product of RKO, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox. It also owns the Athikon and the Rex in Athens. United Artists pictures are distributed by the Astoria company. MGM and Warner Bros. have branches of their own.

The total number of cinemas in Greece is 150, all equipped with sound apparatus. The prices of tickets in first-runs range from 10 to 25 drachma (10 to 25 cents), in subsequent-runs from 10 to 15 drachma (10 to 15 cents).

American and British productions lead, with French next and Germany following.

Greece has no studio and no production of its own. Two pictures were shot in Egypt in the Greek language.

Importation of German films has decreased from last season to this one, whereas that of English-speaking ones has shot forward.

The types of features preferred are either spectacular revues or artistically valuable features with sound story and good acting.

The duty on imports varies by weight; on an average feature it is $70 to $100.

Pathe Laboratories Organized

Pathe Laboratories, Inc., has been incorporated in New Jersey following approval of the Pathe Film realignment plan.

Paramount Pact Ends with Famous

The voting trust agreement between Paramount and Famous Players-Canadian Corporation, which was established ten years ago to exercise stock control of the latter company, expired Monday. No new trust agreement will replace it, but control of the Canadian company is not affected, regardless, it was said.

The voting trust held 189,000 shares of Famous Players-Canadian common. Most of this was, and remains, in the control either directly or indirectly of Paramount. Members of the trust were Adolph Zukor, N. L. Nathanson and I. W. Killam, the latter a Montreal financier. Mr. Zukor withdrew as chairman of the board of Famous Players-Canadian some time ago. There are no plans for the election of a successor to Mr. Zukor at this time. Mr. Nathanson continues as head of the Canadian company.

Mr. Nathanson is due back in Toronto from a Florida vacation in a week to complete arrangements for the annual meeting of the company, to be held towards the end of March.

One of the features of the five-year Nathanson contract with the company was the granting of options to him to take up shares of Famous Players-Canadian stock in blocks of 11,000 at a time. Earlier this year, he exercised his option to buy 11,000 shares at $13.65 per share. It is reported a block of similar size will be available for him to purchase, in July, at $15 per share, and he also holds the right to buy 11,000 in 1940 at $16 per share, and another 11,000 in 1941 at $17 per share.

Fan Magazine "Abuse" Hit at AMPPA Lunch

Hollywood publicity directors have again tightened restrictions on all Hollywood press correspondents because of the recent "abuse of studio courtesies" by fan magazine writers and photographers resulting in the publication of misleading material detrimental to film personalities and pictures.

This was disclosed Tuesday at a luncheon held at the headquarters of the Association of Motion Picture Producers of America, in Hollywood, by Kyle Palmer, chairman of the AMPPA public relations committee, who addressed the studio publicity heads on the importance of proper public relations.

Cohn Purchases Stock

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia, has acquired 41 shares of the company's common stock and 1,719 voting trust certificates, through a stock dividend, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission. The report showed that Mr. Cohn also acquired 30 voting trust certificates through a stock dividend for the Joan Perry account.

Renew Lasky Air Show

The Jesse L. Lasky-RKO "Gateway to Hollywood" radio show has been renewed for another 13 weeks by the Wrigley company, sponsor. The program is heard Sunday nights over the Columbia Broadcasting System network and is tied in with an RKO talent search. Mr. Lasky is master of ceremonies.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

No Reaction

Walter Wanger's attack last week upon the Production Code and his assertion that the code makes it "almost impossible to face and deal with the modern world," stirred hardly a ripple in Hollywood.

Various executives interviewed refused to take the development seriously, pointing out that Hollywood is not unaccustomed to publicity gestures on the part of Hollywood personalities visiting in New York.

Inquiry here fails to reveal executive support for Wanger's declared position. Among lesser studio figures, particularly writers, there has long been much chaffing at the bit with respect to any and all regulatory measures. Many of the writers, now and formerly, are all for a wide open track with not even the curves banked. Among these and elsewhere on the Hollywood intelligensia fringe there are plaudits for Wanger's latest gesture, as well as for his whole program of pictures with a "message."

Elsewhere inquiries as to possible agreement with Wanger's move against the Production Code were met generally with a "why ask me to build his publicity?" Sharp denials, however, were issued against any possible interpretation that Wanger's move represented anything in the way of majority opinion.

Typical of important executive reaction was this observation of William LeBaron, Paramount production head:

"Walter Wanger made 'Stagecoach,' his best picture since 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine,' under the code. The 'Trail' also was made under the code. The industry set up the code. The Hays office is part of the industry. No doubt the code does seem restrictive at times, but it keeps a lot of people from going haywire."

Al Christie, long famed director, whose "The Birth of a Baby" went without a code certificate, expressed disagreement with Wanger. "The code as constituted is no hindrance to production," he said.

Several responsible leaders let it be known that they regard the code as having played an important part in contributing to the worldwide acceptance of Hollywood product and that there is no disposition to dispense with its services.

Following his New York campaign against regulatory methods affecting motion pictures and for pictures with a social "message" Wanger returned to his studio and prepared to start production on—of all things— a sports feature, entitled "Winter Carnival."—W. R. W.

Start 3; Finish 13

Paralleling the circumstance of every March 1, Hollywood held new picture production to an absolute minimum. Only three films were started. That tax assessors may have only a lot of bare stages to look at, thirteen productions were checked off as finished.

Paramount began work on "The Great Enemy," a story of the noted Apache Indian warrior, Geronimo. Preston Foster, Ralph Morgan, Ellen Drew, William Henry and Chief Thundercloud will be featured.

"Second Shot" was started at RKO-Radio. Lucille Ball, Bruce Allen, Evelyn Brent and Steffi Duna are the principals.

THE FIGHTING ROAD TO FAME

Enacting the role of a pugilist in a rousing prizefight picture has often helped picture players to scale the ladder of public popularity. Wallace Beery was a well established star when he appeared as the broken down pug in "The Champ". Yet many people consider that picture one of his best. Richard Barthelmess is still remembered as "The Patent Leather Kid". An incident in the he-man buildup of Robert Taylor was the "Tommy McCoy" role in "The Crowd Roars". Chester Morris, Wayne Morris, Clark Gable and James Cagney have put on the gloves to do their share of screen battling.

Latest to join the ranks is Fred MacMurray who has done a bit of freehand slugging in almost all his pictures, with his part in "Sing You Sinners" outstanding. In "Invitation to Happiness" he becomes a real ring performer.

At Warners, "Battle of the City Hall" went before the cameras. The "Dead End-Crime School-etc." youngsters, Ronald Reagan, Bonita Granville, Henry O'Neill and Eduardo Cianelli head the cast.

Four of the 13 completed pictures are credited to Paramount. Of these "Union Pacific" is the most important. Already well publicized, the Cecil B. DeMille production will feature Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, Brian Donlevy, Anthony Quinn and Evelyn Keyes. The top name players in "Invitation To Happiness" are Irene Dunne, Fred MacMurray, Charles Ruggles, Donald O'Connor and William Collier, Sr. Bob Hope and Shirley Ross are the stars of "Some Like It Hot" in which Gene Krupa and his orchestra will be featured. Grace Allen, Warren William and Kent Taylor are the stars of "The Gracie Allen Murder Case" in which Ellen Drew, Jerome Cowan, Judith Barrett, Donald MacBride, H. B. Warner and Horace MacMahon will also be seen.

MGM Contemplates Three

MGM with three completed ran second to Paramount for number of productions finished honors. The fantasy, "The Wizard of Oz," will present Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton, Charley Grapewin and Pat Walsh. Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor, which is sufficient name value for almost anybody, are the stars of "Lucky Night." "Penthouse" (tentative title) will present Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Frances Mercer, Leo Carrillo, Lee Bowman and Frank M. Thomas.

Warners dropped two pictures from the active shooting schedule. "Nancy Drew, Trouble Shooter," second in the series, will feature Bonita Granville with Frankie Thomas, John Litel, Charlotte Wynters, Aldridge Bowker, Edgar Edwards and Orville Alderson. The "Dead End" lads with Stanley Fields, Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, Grant Mitchell, Frank E. Burke, Charley Foy, Frank Taylor and Robert Strange will be seen in "Hell's Kitchen."

For Monogram distribution, Crescent Pictures completed "Undercover Agent." It will present Russell Gleason, Shirley Deane, J. M. Kerrigan, Maude Eburne, Oscar O'Shea, Selmar Jackson, Rolf Harolde, Ray Bennett and Ralph Sanford.

Arcadia Pictures finished "Everything Happens to Anne." Heather Angel, John King, Emma Dunn, Tom Dugan and Constance Collier are the principals.

"Captain Fury" Finished

Marking the first time he was worked as a director for several years, Hal Roach finished "Captain Fury." To be distributed by United Artists, the Australian story will feature Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, June Lang, Paul Lukas, John Carradine, Virginia Field, Lumsden Hare, Margaret Roach, John Warburton, Claude Allister, Charles Middleton, Gibson Gowland, Gene Morgan, George Zucco, Eddie Brian, William Hall, Frank Moran, Frank Hagney, James Pierce and Mary Gordon.

Last but by no means the least important picture on the completed list is Universal's "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey and Helen Parrish are the stars. Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, Ernest Cossart, William Lundigan and Nella Walker head the supporting cast.

Action Cycle

"Stand Up and Fight," "Jesse James" and "Gunga Din" didn't start it, but they certainly gave impetus to the action cycle. "Wings of the Navy," "Idiot's Delight" (in a way), "Tailspin," "Huckleberry Finn" and "Let Freedom Ring" helped keep the wheel turning.

Warner Brothers has three action productions ready, "The Oklahoma Kid," "Dodge City" and "Juarez." "Each Dawn I Die" is in work. "John Paul Jones" is in preparation.

Columbia just previewed "Let Us Live," finished "The Lady and the Mob," and is working on "Plane No. 4." Among its future prospects are "Golden Boy," a prize fight yarn, and "Arizona."

Paramount's "Hotel Imperial" will have for background the Eastern Front of the World War. Exhibitors have been made as familiar with the action content of "Union Pacific" as of "Beau Geste." The studio also has "Ruler of the Sea."

Twentieth Century-Fox is busy with "Stanley and Livingstone."

As soon as the snow is out of the mountains, MGM plans to resume work on "Northwest Passage."

Pascal Signs Vorkapich

Slavko Vorkapich, formerly with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been signed by Gabriel Pascal, British producer, to do the montage work on "Doctor Dilemma." The film will be made in England for MGM release.

Dark Victory

(Warner)

Emotional Portrayal

As the first film appearance of Bette Davis since winning the Academy award for having given the best performance by an actress in 1938, "Dark Victory" is patently a made-to-marquee-measure attraction. Showmen desirous of capitalizing doubly on the Academy findings have here also excellent opportunity to remind the customers that Hal Wallis, executive producer of the picture, won the Irving Thalberg Special Award this year in competition with the other ranking producers of Hollywood. The names of George Brent and Humphrey Bogart are likewise available for electric light display, but the picture is first, last and always a Bette Davis performance.

The screen play is by Casey Robinson from the play by George Emerson Brewer, Jr., and Bertram Bloch. It is a straight telling of an essentially sad story with only minor moments of incidental comedy to relieve the tension. The telling is accomplished chiefly by dialogue and most of it transpires indoors, specifically in a fashionable Long Island home, in a hospital, at a hunt club, a night club and a Vermont farm house.

Miss Davis plays a young lady of wealth afflicted by a brain condition threatening death and Mr. Brent plays a surgeon who operates and obtains assurance of 10 months of normal health to be followed by certain death. They fall in love and are to be married, but she learns the truth of her condition and embarks upon a course of simulated gaiety. Wearying of this, she marries the doctor and they spend idyllic months together before the end comes. She meets it bravely.

The narrative affords Miss Davis ample opportunity for demonstration of her histrionic talent. She enters the picture as a highly spirited young modern defiant of restraint. As her malady develops she undergoes a gradual change, softening ultimately in acceptance of a tragic destiny and earnest in preparation for the death she knows is drawing near. Half a dozen or more of the situations are of the kind that commonly bring the feminine portion of a cinema audience to the verge of tears or beyond.

Mr. Brent gives adequate account of himself as the surgeon and husband. Mr. Bogart has a relatively small part and plays it with an Irish brogue. Edmund Goulding's direction concentrates attention upon Miss Davis at all times.

Previewed at the Warner Hollywood to a predominantly professional audience which paid homage to the Academy award winner by applauding her big scenes.—William R. Weaver.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Director, Edmund Goulding. Screen play, Casey Robinson. Play, George Emerson Brewer Jr., Bertram Block. Music, Max Steiner. P. C. A. Certificate No. 4896. Running time, 106 minutes. Release date, April 18, 1939. General audience classification.

Never Say Die

(Paramount)

Comedy

This dizzy comedy reunites Bob Hope and Martha Raye, who were featured in "Give Me a Sailor." The title, star personalities and quality of supporting cast, together with the story idea and the tricks played with it, blend to open the way for a snappy exploitation and advertising campaign. Hope's popularity, helped along by his radio broadcasting, is growing, while Martha Raye is already very well established. Theatre goers have come to realize that they can expect a lot of amusement whenever Andy Devine, Alan Mowbray, Gale Sondergaard, Ernest Cossart and Christian Rub are concerned.

A gag yarn, "Never Say Die," is a natural for gag advertising, characterizations, dialogue and situations. The time is the present and the general locale is a European health spa named "Bad Gasswasser." There, to escape his many fancied ills and to dodge the wiles of much married "Juno," lies millionaire "John Kidley." Sick as he thinks he is, he begins to lead a dog's life when a chemist gets his stomach analysis mixed up with a pup's. Visioning a short life, "Kidley" figures that anything would be better than marriage to gun-toting "Juno," so he weds a Texas nouveau riche, "Mickey Hawkins," to save her from a fortune-hunting nobleman, "Smirnov." Meanwhile "Mickey's" taxi driving boy friend, "Munch," shows up to go on the honeymoon. "Munch," "Juno" and "Smirnov," all figuring they have been cheated by "Kidley," set out to make life exciting for him. All becomes hilariously complicated before a burlesque dual between "Kidley" and "Smirnov." "Munch" shows up married to "Juno," "Smirnov" is brushed off neatly, and hapless "Kidley" sees a healthy new life with "Mickey."

Previewed in the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles. The cosmopolitan drop-in crowd, especially the gathering up in the balcony, seemed to enjoy the show greatly. It didn't require the loud laughing of Mr. Bob Gillham, Paramount publicity chief; it erupted spontaneously.—Gus McCarthy.

Q Planes

(Columbia - Irving Asher)

Spy Melodrama

Considerable interest attached to the London presentation of this, the initial acquisition under Columbia's new and more ambitious British program. The selection of a subject which has a certain timeliness obviously adds to the immediate appeal of the film. Spy stories are, in general, safe fodder for the British box office, and this should prove no exception to the commercial rule. Ralph Richardson, whose public has increased steadily and firmly in every film, will inevitably help pull them in on this side of the Atlantic and it was generally agreed after the London trade show that "Q Planes" will still further enhance his star appeal.

The Richardson element is probably the backbone of the film which, elementally a dramatic and action subject, was wisely handled by director Tim Whelan on jaunty lines, with plenty of laughs woven around the whimsical, delusively blundering personality of "Major Hammond," the Secret Service's noblest bloom. The yarn, concerning the inexplicable disappearance of secret planes and the efforts of Scotland Yard to plumb the mystery, has both mystery and action, even if the former element is not its strongest point. The narrative develops around "Hammond's" efforts to solve the mystery and his discovery that the planes are crippled by a death ray fired from a foreign ship, and machines and crews taken aboard. There are the conventional passages of radio conversations twixt plane and airport, some flying sequences and an ultimate machine gun battle upon the enemy vessel. Honors even out, of course, with the aid of a Naval destroyer, and Laurence Olivier, test pilot, gets the girl, Valerie Hobson, who had been posing as an airport waitress to help her profession as a reporter. There have been similar films handled on more spectacular lines, and even with a greater manliness, but there is a comfortable quality about "Q Planes" and a native flavor which will ensure its box office appeal here.

Richardson's "Major Hammond" is an unceasing delight, human and carefree, efficient and whimsical. His passages with a much neglected blonde who ultimately marries another fellow, score consistently, and his unceasing umbrella is certain for the laughs. To say that it is Richardson's film is not, however, to deny credits to Valerie Hobson for a polished and happy characterization as the reporter, to Laurence Olivier for honest work in an unfruitful role, and to George Merritt for his captain of the aviation industry.

The film is not extravagantly staged, but is in the double quota category, and has technical qualities as sound as Denham has led the fans to expect, notably in Stradling's sheen of photography and Ian Dalrymple's coherent and logical scenario.

Previewed to an interested trade audience, the film scored all along the line, provoked much laughter in the right places and was in general hailed as an appreciable offering to the British box office. Richardson, however, walked off with all the personal laurels.—Aubrey Flanagan.

The Mind of Mr. Reeder

(Jack Raymond - Grand National)

Counterfeiting Melodrama

First quota acquisition by Grand National's English organization, this makes an immediate bid for moneymaking honors with two obvious assets, the appeal of Edgar Wallace, which noted and still extremely popular writer was responsible for the original whence the film is derived, and the following commanded by Scots character comedian Will Fyffe. Both elements mean something at the English box office. Will Fyffe's whimsical and quietly human characterization here is a pleasurable specimen and the brand calculated to provoke word of mouth publicity.

Raymond as producer and director exercised much ingenuity in making his film—made in a vest pocket studio—look more expensive than obviously it was, and the general production flavor and sheen are satisfactory.

"Mr. Reeder," played in quiet and effortless vein by Fyffe, is an elderly eccentric employed by the Director of Public Prosecutions, and in this yarn he sets about unmasking a counterfeiting gang and in the latter stages avenging the murder of a young detective to whom he is attached. Familiar Wallace twists punctuate the yarn, with passages in wharfside hideouts, nightclubs and East End saloons, clues being taken from the odor of rare liqueurs and fragments of monocle, helping out the interest. The narrative lingers rather longer on its way than might seem necessary, but the winsome personality of Mr. Reeder himself, and a generous supply of supporting characters will keep the customers' interest most of the time.

Fyffe dominates the picture, though it is an effortless sort of domination. Kay Walsh in a spry brand of portrayal, Bettey Astell giving beauty the core of character and lending brains to both, Romilly Lunge as the slaughtered Inspector, Wally Patch in a gem-like Cockney moment, help the picture's entertainment total.

Most English exhibitors, for whom it is, of course, designed, will sell the film on the star's name, borrowing the Wallace angle to help pull them in. Potential U. S. appeal would probably follow his success in Gainsborough's "Owd Bob."

Shown to an all trade audience at the Cambridge theatre, the film held interest throughout. Credits went universally to Fyffe.—A. F.

Secret Service of the Air

(Warner Brothers)

Action Melodrama

Warners' keynote for this season was action. Here it is in an exciting film of the alien smuggling racket as it concerns airplane transportation. The story is based on material compiled by William H. Moran, former head of the Secret Service Bureau of the Treasury Department.

The love interest has been toned down to allow a maximum of action, which is indicated in the fist fights, jailbreak, airplane hijinks and general all-around cussedness. The picture has a competent cast, if lacking outstanding name value, and includes Ronald Reagan, John Litel, James Stephenson, and Eddie Foy, Jr., who takes care of the comedy and Ila Rhodes.

"Lieut. 'Brass' Bancroft," a clipper plane pilot, gets a job with the secret service and is assigned to track down alien smugglers. To set the stage for future maneuvering, "Brass" is arrested on a criminal charge and locked up in a cell with "Hamrick," known to be a member of the smuggling gang. The two try to escape but are captured. "Brass", set free, joins the smuggling gang and becomes a pilot of the plane bringing in the aliens. "Brass" arranges a trap, which is almost upset by his pal "Gabby." After an exciting fight in the plane, while it falls dizzily towards the earth, "Brass" turns over the smugglers and the aliens to the authorities.

Bouquets from Nicholas

(Walch Film Corp.)

French Comedy Satire

From a story by Noel-Noel, who also plays the lead, and C. Wheeler, "Bouquets from Nicholas," is a French satire on the American gangster film with narcotics peddling and kidnaping as the theme. The picture is slow paced and lacks the ardor of American product. Noel-Noel, given a suitable vehicle, should prove popular with the French cinema fans in this country. His simplicity and charm are outstanding.

The superimposed English titles are plentiful and the dialogue is easy to follow.

"Nicholas" is offered a job as flower boy in a Parisian night club owned by "Gregor." Not knowing that the bouquets contain hidden narcotics, "Nicholas" substitutes a bouquet from "Lisette," who sells flowers outside the club. The customer starts an argument with "Gregor" and is accidentally killed. "Nicholas" is assigned to transporting the trunk containing the body to an abandoned house. He gives two trusting policemen a lift. Inside the house are three kidnaped children being held for ransom but "Nicholas" is led to believe that they are orphaned relatives of "Gregor." Taking the children to "Gregor's" cafe for more money, "Nicholas" finds the cafe being raided by the police and returns to the deserted house, where "Gregor" is hiding. "Lisette" goes to tell "Nicholas" of the raid and the two are held captives. "Gregor" is subdued and "Nicholas" and "Lisette" return the children to their parents.

The supporting cast of Jacques Varennes, Henri Nassiet and Madeleine Robinson do little to speed up the action.

Mothers of Today

(Apex Productions)

Yiddish Film

Unless the audience is racially and religiously akin to the language and customs depicted in this Yiddish talking picture, there would seem to be little or no general entertainment value in the screening of this Jewish folk morality. There may be a limited appeal in that foreign sphere where the English tongue presents a language barrier but the production holds slight chance of attracting the attention and interest of the younger generation of Jewish picture goers.

Filmed at the Biograph Studios in the Bronx, New York, technical facilities are extremely limited and inadequate, particularly in setting and lighting outlay. Musical portions of the picture contain some folk and religious tunes. An overabundance of English titles translates the Yiddish tongue.

Esther Field, billed as the "Yiddishe Mame,' handles the principal part of an old fashioned mother who fights to keep her two children close to the ancient customs of the Jewish race. The daughter elopes with a small time gangster while the son forsakes for the time being his cantorial career for the wiles of a siren. Mother love rules supreme at the finale when the erring daughter returns home and the modern daughter-in-law slows down her pacing to a conventionally approved speed.

Trouble Brewing

(Associated Talking Pictures - A.B.F.D.)

Crime Comedy

With a comedian so deeply enshrined in public favor as MOTION PICTURE HERALD Poll winner, George Formby, a film like this is a moneymaker of the highest calibre on this side of the Atlantic, even before it starts. Fortunately ATP have been wise in retaining continuously the same producer and director. As a result a film is turned out which not only shows astute realization of the comedian's strengths and weaknesses, but is technically of a standard comparable with Hollywood's norm. Net result, then, is probably to widen the already abounding appeal of the "Lad fra Lancasheer." British pictures like this not only recompense their sponsors and satisfy the showman and his public, but help appreciably to fortify the prestige of the home production in general.

Formby's role here is that of a printer's compositor with a bent for detective work, and the yarn into which are woven the comedy and musical passages which swell the sum total of appeal, unfolds with incessant action and even a quota of comedy thrill in the old Harold Lloyd manner, his adventures in tracing a gang of counterfeiters whise hideout is a brewery. Formby, of course, is unceasingly the good humored goof who does nearly everything wrong, but who almost accidentally, at last unmasks the crooks. The changing scene which includes racecourses and newspaper offices, an all-in wrestling hall and a brewery, and the variegation of characters—there are police chiefs, newspapermen, racecourse crooks and forgers, a prima donna and Man Mountain Somebody or Other—allow for no slackening of interest. Most successfully comic of the many episodes are probably Formby's unwilling intrusion into a wrestling ring he thought was a swimming bath, a somewhat broad but very funny sequence in which he tries to recover an incriminating paper from the Prima Donna's stocking, and the frenzied slapstick beer bottle battle in the brewery. These are but three of a long succession.

Among the film's many assets—and no small aid to Formby—are Googie Withers, whose unusual personality has never registered better; Gus McNaughton, an unselfish and intelligent foil, and Garry Marsh, capable and polished as the news-editor-cum-counterfeiter. Joss Ambler as Lord Redhill, owner of George's paper, and Martita Hunt, the Prima Donna, call for credits, too.

Kimmins' direction of the film is beyond criticism and consolidates his place among the front rank directors here. As producer, Jack Kitchin presumably merits a bow for the film's high technical qualities.

English in subject and treatment, with its humors as naive as they are native, and its setting and scene making no pretence to ape the foreign pattern, "Trouble Brewing" is assured of a cast iron box office appeal in its own country. One day, maybe, Formby's sponsors may realize that the time is ripe for wider markets. The star is capable of them.

Seen cold in a London preview theatre the film sent six or seven sophisticated technicians, craftsmen and viewers into continuous laughter. —AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Le Récif de Corail

(The Coral Rocks)

(Alliance Cinématographique Européenne)

Adventure

Based on a novel by Jean Martet, this French language film, produced in a German studio and on the French Riviera, has a story which would give Hollywood opportunity of a first class remake. It was produced in Germany but its producer, director, author, screen-play writer, cameraman and actors are French. Jean Gabin and Michele Morgan play the leads.

Action is set in Australia and in a lost coral island of the South Seas. In Brisbane, an outcast, "Matt Leonard," has killed a man in a riot. He escaped on a cargo-boat which is bringing arms to Mexican revolutionaries. "Leonard," after a crossing in which the cargo has been pursued by a Mexican submarine, is brought back to Australia. Hiding in the woods, he finds a young girl, "Lilian White," living alone in a cabin. A police inspector arrives, but he is seeking the girl as a murderer. She escapes. In a neighboring town where there is an epidemic of typhoid fever, "Leonard" and the inspector find her and save her life. The inspector, who knows now that she has killed in self-defense, lets the two lovers go.

Besides the clever treatment and excellent dialogues, the good direction and convincing scenic background, there is first of all the story. Then too it reunites the star team of "Le Quai des Brumes ("The Foggy Quay").

Previewed in Paris at trade-show, the audience applauded loudly.—PIERRE AUTRE.

Blackwell's Island

(Warner Brothers)

Crime Melodrama

This is a swiftly paced crime melodrama that deviates somewhat from the sameness to which this type of picture is prone. Thematically it has all the ingredients of other crime films plus an exposition of a condition that is alleged to have existed on the island from whence the picture draws its title. The island in New York City's East River has since come to be known as Welfare Island, the change in name stemming more or less from the story which this film dramatizes. The island houses a municipal prison.

The Blackwell's Island scandal made headlines quite a few years back as time is measured these days but it is a condition that is not necessarily limited to New York or to the past. As an expose it is a constructive piece of work and as entertainment it is good melodrama.

John Garfield, previously of "Four Daughters" and "They Made Me a Criminal," is seen as a newspaper reporter whose articles and later experiences in the prison causes the expose. Stanley Fields as the big-shot gangster turns in an excellent performance. The film has a light thread of romance running through it with Rosemary Lane as the girl. Other players are Morgan Conway, Dick Purcell and Peggy Shannon.

"Bull Bransom," gangster, practical joker, ally of politicians and seemingly outside the pale of the law, is the head of a racket organization known as the "Waterfront Proective Association." When his henchmen blow up a fishing schooner and injure the skipper, "Bull," on the advice of a political friend, consents to a court trial. The testimony of the skipper and a policeman send "Bull" to Blackwell's.

The warden of the prision, threatened with loss of his job and retirement pay, allows the gangster the run of the prison. "Bull" has his own suite, in the hospital ward; a special dining room and operates concessions. He leaves the island at will. "Tim Haydon," the reporter, causes himself to be incarcerated in order to obtain evidence against "Bull." Meanwhile the policeman who had testified against the gangster is murdered by a henchman and when the policeman's sister visits "Tim" the ganster devises a scheme to get rid of the reporter.

The scheme backfires and "Tim" escapes. He returns with the new Commission of Correction and police in a surprise raid. The gangster is captured after attempting to escape by boat.

Seen at the Globe theatre in New York. The comparative nearness of Welfare (Blackwell's) Island and the New York atmosphere generally caused quite a stir in the audience. There were an especially large number of that species who insist on audibly explaining what is happening on the screen and anticipating what next. But they liked it.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

The Ice Follies of 1939

(MGM)

Spectacle with Story

Double-barrelled is the showmanly word for this unusual attraction. Along the broad box office front the names of Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lewis Stone, Lew Ayres and Lionel Stander assuredly qualify as exploitation material enough to sell a lot of tickets. In the areas where ice-skating has become a major interest the presence of the International Ice Follies troupe in the most magnificent skating exhibition ever filmed is likely to stack up as equally magnetic. In communities where both of these strike a responsive chord, no showman need wrack his brain for sales ideas.

Because it so completely outshines anything of the sort previously brought to screen, the long sequence presenting the ice ballet, in full color, is the more memorable entertainment factor and, therefore, the one likely to profit the picture most by word-of-mouth publicity. This portion of the picture successfuly defies written description. Only the color camera, a most flexible and artful one in this case, is competent to report accurately the artistry of these quite incredible skaters. This portion of the film is without precedent.

The name players referred to in the opening paragraph are engaged in a story about skaters and motion picture people which is well told and frequently amusing. Mr. Stewart plays a rink impressario married to a cinema star. Their professional preoccupations keep them apart until the girl determines to give up her career, whereupon her employer hires her husband as a film producer, thus making it possible for them to be together more. The players named make this seem realistic without attempting to build it up for more interest than is compatible with the success of the skating finale.

Producer Harry Rapf divided emphasis between story and spectacle, giving the second somewhat the better of the bargain and, of course, the title. Reinhold Schunzel's direction is gracefully effective. Leonard Praskins wrote the necessary story and Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf collaborated with him on the screen play. Franz Waxman and George Stoll supplied appropriate musical direction with Roger Edens furnishing excellent score and lyrics. Bernice Petkere and Marty Symes composed "It's All So New to Me," the song number given chief prominence.

Members of the International Ice Follies troupe whose names are box office to ice fans are Bess Ehrhardt, Eddie and Roy Shipstad and Oscar Johnson.

The Lady and the Mob

(Columbia)

Comedy

"The Lady and the Mob," a glib satire on gangster-crime stories, is a full load of farce comedy entertainment and a picture replete in unique exploitation possibilities. Not the least of its commercial values is the presence in the leading role of Fay Bainter who only last week was awarded the Academy prize as the best supporting actress of 1938. For additional name value the show also makes available the advertising worths of Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman, Henry Armetta, Warren Hymer, Harold Huber, Joseph Sawyer, George Meeker and a squad of lesser lights.

Comedy is the spirit of "The Lady and the Mob," but novelty is the factor that sets it apart from the routine comedy or serious crime melodrama. In this case, Miss Bainter, playing the role of "Hattie Leonard," a wealthy old spinster who has long dominated the political, social and business life of a small town and who knows everybody by his or her first name and all about them, become the "gang-buster."

Indignant when she finds she has to pay tribute to a lot of cleaning and pressing racketeers, and finding the law enforcement officers impotent, she takes matters into her own hands. Importing her own gang of gorillas, arming them with tommy guns and pineapples, she proceeds to fight fire with fire. Her adventures lead to her being jailed as a kidnap suspect and makes possible many amusing escapes from durance, almost to break up the romance between niece "Lila" and her boy friend "Fred" and finally to a showdown with her hand-picked "Mayor Jones" that culminates in the rout of the racketeers and the establishment of law and order.

There's not a slow moment during the picture's entire running time. Dialogue and action are well balanced but the greater accent has been placed on the latter quality. In most of the scenes there are anywheres from half a dozen to a score of people on the screen and this mass grouping makes for movement and excitement practically all the time.

Previewed March 3 at Pantages theatre, Hollywood. The Friday evening gathering which seemingly did not anticipate anything much when the title and credits rolled on the screen quickly found that it was being agreeably surprised. It is likely that this circumstance will be repeated when the picture goes into general distribution. It might be wise, therefore, to plan that as large as possible audience be influenced to attend the first performance. Word of mouth advertising, all favorable to the attraction, in which the folks most likely will indulge should serve to boost the show.—Gus McCarthy.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Story by George Bradshaw and Price Day. Screen play by Richard Maibaum and Gertrude Purcell. Wilbur McGaugh assistant director. Otto Meyer film editor. Photographed by John Stumar. P. C. A. Certificate No. 4926. Running time, 65 minutes when seen in Hollywood. Release date: April 3, 1939. General audience classification.

Risky Business

(Universal)

Melodrama

Although altered in several respects, "Risky Business" is a remake of "Okay America." It will be recalled that the original made an effective impression upon audiences at the time of its release. However, as a matter of screen merchandise this version does not measure up to the standard of its parent. Unimpressive in the matter of name worth, the production's audience entertainment value is hardly of the caliber that will arouse any unusual enthusiasm.

In character the production is a picturization of events and experiences in the life of a Hollywood radio broadcasting commentator. The hero, even to the style of news material and picture reviews he broadcasts as well as identifying production detail is patterned after one of Hollywood's better known radio reporters. Cracking a kidnap case, he finds upon delivering the ransom money that he has been double-crossed. This typical bit of underworld tactics was to find out whether or not he was on the level before he can deliver the victim to her parents. He is implored to intercede with the Governor on the behalf of a notorious gangster. The Governor will not extend clemency, but in order to save the girl, the broadcaster stalls to gain time, then informs the criminal that he has been duped. The latter worthy is killed before he can do any killing himself, and while the broadcaster is telling the story over the air himself, he is fatally wounded by the dead public enemy's henchman.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale. The audience could not arouse itself to the point of taking any great interest in the picture.—Gus McCarthy.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Associate producer, Burt Kelly. Director, Arthur Lubin. Screen play, Charles Grayson. Original story, William Anthony McGuire. Cameraman, Stanley Cortez, A.S.C. Art director, Jack Otterson. Costumes, Vera West. Film editor, Maurice Wright. Sound supervisor, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, Robert Pritchard. Assistant director, Fred Frank. P. C. A. Certificate No. 5139. Running time, 70 minutes. Release date, March 3, 1939. General audience classification.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 8

(Paramount)

Pictorial

The subject matter of this latest issue of the Pictorial grouping treats of two topics, the manufacture of gold leaf and the yearly migration of sheep to the mountain pasture land of the Great Divide country. The sequence depicting the processing of gold leaf, used decoratively in architecture, art and industry, is interesting and detailed in its description of the minute and laborious methods employed. However, it will be in the second section showing the animal exodus that the audience will derive the greater amount of entertainment. Photographed with a sensitive feeling for land and sky effects, the camera shots tracing the sheep trek through lowlands, villages and then up to the most breath-taking beautiful mountain scenery ever caught within the scope of a lens will have any audience expressing audible appreciation of the superlative pictorial beauty.—Running time, 10 minutes.

A Small Town Idol

(Vitaphone)

Broadway Brevity

A Ben Turpin comedy vehicle from the ancient past has been jazzed up into new life with some "screwball" commentary and sound effects. Besides Ben there are Phyllis Haver, Marie Prevost, Charlie Murray, Louise Fazenda, Jimmy Finlayson, Dot Farley, Andy Clyde, Billy Bevan, Bert Roach, Eddie Gribbon and the Mack Sennett Beauties. Also Ramon Novarro as a dancer. Running time, 20 minutes.

Going Places (No. 60)

(Universal)

Travelogue

Universal takes the audience on a railroad trip from Johnson City, Tennessee, to Boone, North Carolina. The train is the famous "Tweetsie," so named because of the shrill whistle of the original locomotive, which has plenty to do, for stops are made, any time or anywhere, to pick up passengers, deliver groceries to housewives and to permit the conductor to pass the time of day with neighbors. Then the camera turns to the executive of a pressed steel plant in Worcester, Mass., who collects ancient, medieval and modern armor.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

The Magic Bean

(Universal)

Lantz Cartoon

The story of "Jack and the Beanstalk" has been modified to fit the needs of this Walter Lantz cartoon, with a mouse playing "Jack" and an enormous cat the giant. The little mouse trades the family cow for some beans which just grow and grow. When the mouse climbs the stalk and reaches the castle he finds a hen laying golden eggs. The mouse is trapped trying to make off with the eggs. The scene dissolves and the patron finds that the cat and mouse are only playing a scene for a film director.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

Circus Co-Ed

(Paramount)

Paragraphic

Behind the scene glimpses of the training of a circus aerialist for her debut under the big top are offered in this interesting and at times exciting Paragraphic number. With an amusing spoken commentary from the radio experienced voice of Budd Hulick, a troupe of trapeze artists, the Clarkonians, perform a thrilling routine of difficult tricks. The material, enhanced by some expert slow motion camera work, will interest any audience of young and old circus fans.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Bank Notes

(Universal)

Variety Program

This is a Mentone variety short subject headed by Gus Van, who is master of ceremonies and is featured in two song numbers. The locale is the interior of a bank. The performers are Minor and Root, dance team; The Three Wiles, male dancers in a specialty number; The Barton Harp Quintet; Bernice Parks, singer; Ruth Daye, tap dancer, and The Five Ames Sisters, acrobatic dancers.—Running time, 19¼ minutes.

SPOKANE HOUSES TO PAY FEES QUARTERLY

Theatre operators in Spokane, Wash., pleading poor business conditions, have won the right from the City Council to pay their annual licenses on a quarterly basis. The grant carried the stipulation that if the installments are not paid on time, the entire yearly fee becomes due immediately.

J. J. Rosenfield, city manager of Evergreen Theatres, told the council the city fee was too large. "The fee charged in Spokane is far in excess of any city of its size in the United States," he said.

Vode-Vision Threatens Suit Against Musicians

Threats of a suit for an injunction and damages unless his decision on regulation of recordings is revoked were reported this week to have been sent to Joseph M. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians by the backers of Vode-Vision, a project using "live" talent and "canned" music, for which members of the New York local 802, and union members generally, have been forbidden by their officials, and by Mr. Weber, to make recordings.

The AFM, in the summer of last year, forbade its members to make recordings for the vaudeville company. That company's sole unit had made several successful stands in Pennsylvania cities; but rather than make further recordings for further units, without union musicians, Vode-Vision stopped functioning. A protest was filed with the Department of Justice, but this was not acted upon.

In late January, New York Supreme Court Justice Kenneth O'Brien ruled that the AFM and the IATSE, acting in conjunction, had no right to interfere with the operation of the Opera on Tour, Inc., a similar project using live operatic talent and "canned" music. The decision also mentioned the lack of a "legitimate" labor dispute between the AFM and the opera company.

The Vode-Vision company expects to use this decision as a basis for their legal proceedings against Mr. Weber and the AFM local.

Yates and Grainger on Coast for Conferences

James R. Grainger, president of Republic, and Herbert J. Yates, arrived on the Coast this week for studio conferences, including the handling of "Man of Conquest."

The picture will have its world premiere at the Majestic theatre in Houston, Tex., April 6th.

Expressed opposition of exhibitors to film stars' radio broadcasts is understood to have caused the company to abandon its contemplated radio program.

Color Short Pressbooks

Cinecolor, in Hollywood, has started an exhibitor press book service for its clients making short subjects, a monthly bulletin issued through all Paramount exchanges to theatremen.

DENVER SCHOOLS DOING OWN MOTION PICTURES

Students and Teachers in Citywide Project; Subjects Chosen for Five Films

by ROBERT S. DANVERS in Denver

Added to the many and widely different approaches undertaken or proposed for the opening of the potentially vast school films field is a new project in Denver, said to be the first in the country, for the production of educational films by students and teachers for the city's entire school system, under the direction of Dr. Roy A. Hinderman, school social service chief.

School systems or individual schools elsewhere have produced individual films for experiment, but none on such a widespread scale as that proposed in Denver.

"There is a twofold purpose," said Dr. Hinderman. "First, the exploration of community resources and the production of films on these resources for the public school curriculum where such films are the most appropriate method of dealing with the problem; and, second, the educational activity involved through the joint participation of the administration, the teachers, and the pupils in exploring these curriculum subjects and in actually producing the films."

Hoban and Brooker Advisers

The project is under the general advisement of Charles F. Hoban, Jr., and F. E. Brooker, both of the American Counsel on Education, in Washington, D. C. The responsibility of administration and supervision has been distributed among committees consisting of teachers and students. Each committee will supervise the entire production of a motion picture relative to its assigned subject. Films dealing with five different subjects are to be completed by June 1, 1939. Plans are to allow about 400 feet of film per subject.

Subjects Chosen

The folowing subjects have been chosen for motion pictures: "Denver's Food Supply," to show the principal markets, how incoming perishable foods are handled, cold storage plants, packing companies, canning factories, and the like; "Shelter in Denver," inasmuch as the city recently voted a slum clearance project, this film will be largely devoted to this particular phase of the subject; "The Protection of Our Health," on public hospitals, clinics, and institutions pertaining to public health; "How to Have a Good Time in Denver," showing skiing, skating, boating, swimming, amusement parks, theatres, etc., and "How to Get a Job in Denver," in which it is planned to visit department stores, manufacturers, business houses, and stores, in an attempt to show correct methods for approaching prospective employers.

The work has been divided into four divisions: (1) organization of materials, (2) preparation of scenarios and shooting scripts, (3) photography, and (4) editing of films. Following is the working procedure:

Four Divisions of Work

1. Analyze the problem.
2. Consult local authorities and experts and form advisory councils.
3. Select aspect of problem for film production.
4. Determine purposes of films in terms of predicted audiences and desired reactions of audiences.
5. Determine interests of students and audiences as one basis of interest centers and devices in films.
6. Study nature and limitations of a motion picture; what can be done with a camera
    a. Consult published materials.
    b. Analyze different types of films.
    c. Begin to think of films in terms of specific pictures.
7. Prepare scenario.
8. Prepare shooting script. Shot for shot: place, length, type and angle.
9. Organize working committees: Camera, script, props, electricity, and location.
10. Shoot film on location.
11. Preview rushes and edit film in cooperation with guiding committee.
12. Add sound if possible and desirable.

"Our major concern for the present with regard to evaluation," said Dr. Hinderman, "will be to determine the practicability and educational values to be derived from having pupils and teachers cooperate in the production of motion pictures to be used in the study of community life. It will be interesting to discover the extent of community as well as school participation that was promoted by the making of these films. We may find answers to such questions as the following: How much can children do in producing motion pictures? How much teacher time is consumed? How much of the community can be brought into the classrooms in an effective manner by this technique? And, is the cost commensurate with the educational outcomes in school made motion pictures?"

Form Ohio Product Buying Pool; Offices in Columbus

Marking the first step in the formation of product buying pools in Ohio, there has been formed in that state Theatre Service, Inc., a non-profit corporation, members of which, with their interests, are as follows:

W. C. Chesbrough, Alhambra, Champion, Drexel, Empress, Garden, Grandview, Hudson, Northern, Piccadilly, Pythian and Victor theatres of Columbus, and the Classic, Mecca and Salem theatres in Dayton; C. A. MacDonald, Arlington, Cleve, Southland, Thurmania and Westmont theatres in Columbus, and the Ada theatre in Ada; Virgil A. Jackson, Goodale, Uptown and Wilmar theatres in Columbus, and the Avon theatre in Cincinnati; F. W. Rowlands, Columbia, Main and Parsons theatres in Columbus; Frank Ferguson, Avondale theatre in Columbus; Al Taylor, Dixie theatre in Columbus; Lee J. Hofheimer, Indianola theatre in Columbus; W. C. Pullin, Linden theatre in Columbus; Max Stearn, Southern theatre in Columbus.

At the first meeting, Messrs. Chesebrough, Rowlands, MacDonald, Jackson and Stearn were elected trustees. They elected Mr. Jackson, president; Mr. Rowlands, vice-president, and Mr. Stearn, secretary and treasurer. Offices are in Columbus.

Seadler at Studio

Si Seadler, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer advertising manager, is at the company's studio for an annual inspection of product and conferences with executives, which are expected to continue the rest of the week.

Arkansas to Meet; Illinois Elects

April 2nd and 3rd have been selected by the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas for the next state meeting, which will be the annual spring convention, with election of new officers. To be held in Little Rock, the convention will feature a screening and the exchange of publicity and advertising ideas.

Jack Kirsch was re-elected president of Allied States of Illinois, with all other officerts and directors re-elected, at the annual meeting held last Thursday. At the meeting there was a discussion of the proposed trade practice agreement, led by Mr. Kirsch.

The adoption of resolutions authorizing the appointment of a committee to meet with representatives of the West Virginia management association, in order to effect an amalgamation and to accept theatre managers who are not owners as associate members, marked the last meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners of West Virginia. Held at the Waldo Hotel in Clarksburg, the meeting was attended by more than 150 exhibitors and sales representatives.

Oklahoma Governor Appoints New Will Rogers Commission

A new seven-member Will Rogers Memorial Commission to replace the 15-member commission created last year, has been appointed by Governor L. C. Phillips of Oklahoma. They are Will Rogers, son of the late humorist; N. G. Henthorne, Walter M. Harrison, Lew Wentz, Dr. J. C. Bushyhead, W. E. Sunday and W. E. Halsell.

"In making the selections, I chose a majority of the members from persons of Cherokee blood, who were true friends of Will Rogers," the Governor said. He also said the members have agreed to give without charge to the state their time to build up a fund to maintain the memorial. "I hope that during my administration enough will be provided to maintain it and remove the expense from the state," he said.

Davidson, Linet Join Universal

Sidney C. Davidson has been appointed general assistant to Lou Pollock, eastern advertising and publicity director of Universal. Mr. Davidson was exploitation director of Warner Brothers for eight years and until recently has been with Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, Inc.

Hank Linet, former associate editor of Showmen's Trade Review, also has been appointed an assistant to Mr. Pollock. Mr. Linet will be active in all branches of the department.

Irving Mack returned to Chicago last week after purchasing 3,000 negatives and other properties of Standard Advertising Corporation in Hollywood to be used by him in operating Filmack Trailer Corporation.

Joan Crawford, star under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has signed with the RCA Victor Recording Company to record popular songs. Her first will be "Something's Gotta Happen Soon," from "The Ice Follies of 1939."

SAN FRANCISCO FAIR USING RCA SOUND

A sound reenforcement system, capable of delivering a volume of sound "greater than that of 30 of the world's largest symphony orchestras, playing fortissimo" and of reproducing every sound cycle from the very lowest whisper to the mighitest crescendo, is one of the features of the sound and radio network which has been installed by RCA-Victor on "The Treasure Island of 1939," in San Francisco Bay, site of the Golden Gate Exposition, which opened February 19th.

The system comprises about 60 high power, high fidelity loudspeakers, of special design, the order for which comprised the largest such the company ever received for this type of equipment. In addition to this loudspeaker system, there is a radio control center, a 3,200 seat broadcasting studio, and several smaller ones, and portable radio broadcasting units.

Paramount in Deal With Mayflower

An important deal for the world-wide distribution of British films was announced Tuesday by Paramount. The agreement gives Paramount sole distribution rights for the world, save in the United Kingdom, of two Mayflower films, "St. Martin's Lane," with Charles Laughton and Vivian Leigh, and "Jamaica Inn," with Laughton and Maureen O'Hara, directed by Alfred Hitchcock.

"The Admirable Crichton," with Laughton and Elsa Lanchester, based on the play by James M. Barrie, will also be distributed by Paramount except in the United Kingdom. Production is scheduled to start in early summer.

Slight Theatre Decrease Noted in Omaha Area

Only a slight decrease in the number of theatres in the Omaha trade territory of Nebraska, southwest Iowa and southwest South Dakota, has been evident the past year, according to the territory's theatre guide.

There were 302 theatres in Nebraska in 1939 as compared to 309 in 1938. The Iowa territory remained the same, 131 houses, with 44 for 1938 and 1939 in the South Dakota area. Fifty-four of the Nebraska houses are closed, the same number as a year ago. There was a decrease from eight to five in the number of closed houses in Iowa.

John Hicks Plans Visit

John W. Hicks, Paramount vice-president in charge of the foreign department, plans to sail from England to this country on March 18th. Adolph Zukor is not planning to accompany him, but will probably go directly to South America.

Netherlands Have 297 Sound Houses

There has been no change in the number of theatres in the Netherlands wired for sound, the American Consulate, in Amsterdam, reports, according to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce. The report covers the first 11 months of 1938.

There are 297 theatres in the Netherlands wired for sound, with 90 installations for sound on film and 207 for sound on film and disk. That number includes the 275 theatres giving regularly scheduled showings of films, if only seasonally; there are no theatres giving regularly scheduled performances which are not wired for sound.

In the first 11 months the Netherlands National Board of Censors banned 16 feature films; eight American, four French, three German and one Russian. The number of films from America and other countries passed by the censors follows:

	Number
Country of Production	Year 1937	11 Months 1938
United States	312	278
Germany	75	55
France	45	45
England	31	18
Austria	11	9
Netherlands	11	2
Czechoslovakia	5	1
Russia	1	5
Other	8	0
	499	413

These figures show an increase in the predominating preference for American films. The percentage of films of French origin has increased while the popularity of German films continues to decline.

Unofficial figures compiled by the Consulate showed attendance to have increased slightly without further price reductions in the 11 months period.

Malsed and Winters Named RCA Managers

George Malsed has been appointed RCA Victor district sales manager for Dallas and Harold Winters has been named to a similar post at Kansas City. Mr. Winters replaces Dale Neiswander, now general manager of Interstate Supply Company, RCA Victor distributor at St. Louis. Mr. Malsed succeeds George Ewald, who has been transferred to Camden, N. J.

Other RCA Victor appointments are those of Francis H. Engel, who is placed in charge of coordinating and planning development of television receivers, and J. A. Milling, former manager of parts sales, who has been named manager of the Small Radio Division.

Ginsburg in New Haven

Lewis S. Ginsburg, with United Artists in the New York exchange and the home office for the last six years, has been appointed salesman of the New Haven exchange, succeeding Reville Kniffen.

Join March of Time

James L. Wolcott and Alan Brown have been appointed to the staff of the March of Time. Mr. Wolcott was formerly with Twentieth Century-Fox at the studio and Mr. Brown was previously with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, also at the studio.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CITY STREETS: Edith Fellows, Leo Carrillo—A mighty fine picture. Leo Carrillo was never better. Quite popular here. That Edith Fellows is a comer. Will satisfy 100 per cent.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

GIRL'S SCHOOL: Anne Shirley, Nan Grey, Ralph Bellamy, Noah Beery, Jr.—Not the type of picture the title might imply. It isn't a girls' reformatory but a girls' college or school. It isn't a bad picture at all and went over darn good here. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 18.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—As good a picture as Brown ever played in. It's a knockout comedy as good as "The Earthworm Tractors." Don't miss playing "The Gladiator." It will do business.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Lew Ayres, Doris Nolan, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—A very good show and pleased 100 per cent. Hepburn does not mean a thing here. No draw; no business. Running time, 50 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HOMICIDE BUREAU: Bruce Cabot, Rita Hayworth—A fair "B" picture. It's strictly an action picture and I am doubtful if it could hold its own. We played it in connection with a stage attraction to the tune of standing room only business. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 14-15.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

I AM THE LAW: Edward Robinson, Wendy Barrie, Barbara O'Neill, John Beal—No business. My patrons getting fed up on Ed. G. Robinson. Same old stuff. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 31.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins—This drew good and was surprised to see such a good crowd on the second night. 'Nuf sed. Play it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 30-31.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Crime School Kids"—An A-1 picture that did A-1 business even in this small third-run neighborhood house. The picture is a "natural" with the perfect cast and a swell story. Play this one by all means. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 19.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Crime School Kids"—Every pastor in town saw the picture and ranked it very high. Two day run. Could have lived on the third day. Warner, give us more pictures of this type. Ranks with "Boys' Town." Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Marshall Rooks, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

DAREDEVIL DRIVERS, THE: Dick Purcell, Beverly Roberts, Gloria Blondell, Gordon Oliver—Played this on a double and clicked. This is our third straight year with Warners' product and must say their pictures are the best draws. Box office figures prove this and how. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 2-4.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, John Garfield, May Robson, Claude Rains—The entire cast is excellent. From Robson, the star, on down, this picture is flawless. One of the best pictures we have ever played. Priscilla Lane is going places before they are through with her. Good any day in the week. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan—Very good program picture that drew quite well at the box office. Jane Bryan is coming to the front. Running time, 73 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me

Rockefeller Center, New York

GIRLS ON PROBATION: Ronald Reagan, Jane Bryan—Excellent production. Production that pleased and did a nice business. Played February 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MISSING WITNESSES: Dick Purcell, Jean Dale, John Litel—This was a swell show and drew good. Played this on a double and it was much better than expected. Played February 10-11.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville—A great little show. Starts slow but ends with a bang. Pleased 100 per cent and did average business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 7.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WHEN WERE YOU BORN?: Anna May Wong, Margaret Lindsay—Used this on a double and pleased. Another mystery picture and it seems the public can't get enough of them. Played February 13-14.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Grand National

WHIRLWIND HORSEMAN: Ken Maynard, Joan Barclay—This will pass on a double and please. Nothing outstanding. Just another western for your weekend date Played February 17-18.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BILLY THE KID (reissue): Wallace Beery, Johnny Mack Brown—A nice little picture that came out with the advent of sound. We cashed in on Beery's name at the box office. If you find it hard getting product, give this one a try, Mr. Exhibitor. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 12-13.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Henry Hull—The boys went to town and so did yours truly in spite of adverse weather conditions. The picture holds house records to date. Played February 12-15.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Mickey Rooney, Spencer Tracy, Henry Hull—Very, very fine. They don't come any better than this one. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. K. Burgess, Iris Theatre, Velva, N. D. General patronage.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL: Luise Rainer, Paulette Goddard, Alan Marshal, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—About as close to nothing as I have ever seen for a long time. Had plenty of walkouts on this. Would have had more but there weren't enough customers in the house to do much walking out. Played February 21.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DRAMATIC SCHOOL: Luise Rainer, Paulette Goddard, Alan Marshall, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—No dice for small town. In a class with "The Shining Hour," "The Great Waltz." They will not go for heavy drama in this small community. Rainer is excellent but needs a stronger male lead than Alan Marshall to hold her up. Think Walter Pidgeon as lead would have helped immensely and the story, instead of Paris, could have had a New York locale without detracting that would have helped the receipts. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Reginald Gardiner, Walter Connolly—Pretty good farce comedy which failed to draw. Played February 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Leo Carrillo, Buddy Ebsen, Walter Pidgeon—A delightful film of light operatic nature. Fans of Eddy and MacDonald will like this one and will also find this famous time tried story has lost none of its appeal. Needless to say the singing of both Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald is superb. The only regret is that Eddy's acting is not as flawless as his vocal renditions. Leo Carrillo and Buddy Ebsen masterfully supply the comedy sequences This is a jewel for those who enjoy good music. If your audience is so inclined, it's a case of—"nuff sed." Running time, 120 minutes. Played February 22.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Burgess Meredith, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut—My cashier saw this in a city and warned me, so I took a look at it. I do not believe it will please in a small town.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—This is what the public wants. Down to earth comedy. Kept the crowd roaring from start to finish. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 29-30—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—A nice little picture. We ran this on a dish night as the first main feature and did a sweet little business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

STABLEMATES: Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney —A good picture and two swell stars but the picture just didn't go over so big. Everyone likes Mickey and usually his pictures go over big but this one didn't make a hit. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 8-9.—Marshall Rooks, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly—Too much snow. Otherwise the crowd would have been too big to handle. Played February 26-March 1.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—Very entertaining picture. Pleased my patrons. Running time, 78 minutes.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

Paramount

AMBUSH: Lloyd Nolan, Gladys Swarthout—Good program picture. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis, Yacht Club Boys, Eve Arden, Billy Lee—Paramount produces a good

musical in this film. Filled with good music (both vocal and instrumental), it is bound to please those who like pictures of the syncopated musical type. The little nonsense indulged in by the Yacht Club Boys is not amiss. Harriet Hilliard's pleasing singing is enjoyable and Fred MacMurray does well. The dance team of Ben Blue and Eve Arden put over some good routines. Rufe Davis is his usual comical self. Spotlight stealer is little "half-pint" (Billy Lee), to whom the boys here capitulated. He'll win everyone who sees him "beat it out" on those drums. It's a nice, light musical with plenty of variety and should fit into any spot where such a picture is desired. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 25.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FRONTIERSMAN, THE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—A fair picture with a fair cast. Could have been much better. I publish my own weekly theatre paper. A copy is yours for a stamp. You may get some ideas from it. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 18.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—Very fine production and worth extended playing time.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

MEN WITH WINGS: Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland, Louise Campbell, Andy Devine—An excellent picture and did good business on a two-day run. Had a number of praises on the picture. Paramount, give us some more similar to it. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 15-16.—Marshall Rooks, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Russell Hayden, Weldon Heyburn, Charlotte Fields—Was a good Saturday night show. Pleased all of the western fans.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

SAY IT IN FRENCH: Olympe Bradna, Ray Milland—The last reel is a scream. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SONS OF THE LEGION: Donald O'Connor, Billy Lee, Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley—A story that's only propaganda. One patron raised hell right and asked how much I was paid to run this. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 15-16.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SUNSET TRAIL: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—Pleased all my non-western fans and the rest were kept interested by the activities of Hopalong, who was playing the part of a tenderfoot in a very convincing manner. This is a very interesting outdoor drama that did only average business here but will do better in spots where action is not always necessary or desired. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THRILL OF A LIFETIME: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Good picture and pleased all of the fans.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

Republic

ARMY GIRL: Preston Foster, Madge Evans, Neil Hamilton, Ruth Donnelly—A mighty fine picture but where did the film salesman get the idea this was going to break records? We couldn't find any. Just about got by with this. A swell picture nevertheless. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 6-7.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ARMY GIRL: Madge Evans, Preston Foster, Neil Hamilton, Ruth Donnelly—Very good. Did a nice business. Played February 14.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BILL CRACKS DOWN: Grant Withers, Beatrice Roberts—Played this on a double and it was well liked. This Withers guy sure looks hard and our fans liked him. Played February 13-14.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

CALL THE MESQUITEERS: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Lynn Roberts—Another great western with the Three Mesquiteers that pleased 100 per cent. We can't get enough of them. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 3-4.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Sydney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Plenty kicks. Kids all ask when's amateur night again. My patrons boo these shows. One woman came out and asked why "Smiley" Burnette didn't change shirts once in a while in the picture. His shirt was wet from sweat. Used on double feature. No business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 10-11.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY, NO. 1: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Ann Rutherford—Another great western with the unbeatable Gene Autry. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 10-11.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

RIDIN' THE LONE TRAIL: Bob Steele, Claire Rochelle—If there ever was a he-man, Bob Steele is the one. A really down to earth western and this boy Steele doesn't hold back any punches either. Running time, 56 minutes. Played January 27-28.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BORDER G-MAN: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—Played this picture with a blizzard and hit the biggest Thursday opening I have had for some time. Played February 9-11.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

JOY OF LIVING, THE: Irene Dunne, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady, Steiner Twins—A light comedy which amused the majority here. Although a bit weak at times, perhaps mostly in the musical scores, it has its delightful moments. Most hilarious was the skating sequence, which really is comical. An excellent cast for this type of comedy gives the picture what success it has managed to attain. Irene Dunne's singing is good (though the songs are not), and her acting of the same high quality she has always maintained. Doug Fairbanks, Jr., does a good job as Dan, the carefree Back Bay Bostonian. Guy Kibbee and Alice Brady also deserve honorable mention. The Steiner twins are great and we hope RKO gives us more of these two youngsters. While distinctly not highbrow or of Academy Award material, it is good entertainment and should prove popular with any adult audience. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 18.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

KING KONG (reissue): Bruce Cabot, Fay Wray, Robert Armstrong—Would have done a land office business if it had not been for a blizzard. Played February 16-18.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

MAN TO REMEMBER, A: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Lew Bowman—A grand show. A great cast. A grand story. Did some extra business. Played February 17-18.—Roy S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ROOM SERVICE: Marx Brothers, Lucille Ball, Ann Miller, Frank Albertson—The Marx Brothers still "click" here in Torrington and everybody seemed to enjoy this picture. If you haven't already played it, give it a try. You may be surprised and I mean pleasantly surprised, too. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Pearce Parkhurst. State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ROOM SERVICE: Marx Brothers, Lucille Ball, Ann Miller, Frank Albertson—I am at a loss to know whether this is a comedy or a tragedy, but one thing is certain that it was a tragedy the way the audience tried to laugh and couldn't. Why don't producers lay off stage productions for screen adaptation. I haven't see none of them that was a success yet, and I've seen them all. Business just fair. Played February 23-25.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

SMASHING THE RACKET: Chester Morris, Frances Mercer, Rita Johnson—Used this with "Man from Music Mountain." A little better show than average. No kicks, no brags, no business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 10-11.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Joan Davis, Slim Summerville—Not much to this. Story weak. Newsreel shots of the Quints and the French talk went over swell with my Swede patrons (?) What do you think? Business just fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 12-13.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FIVE OF A KIND: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Claire Trevor, Joan Davis, Slim Summerville—This picture has been panned but with us it went over big and enjoyed by all. It may be wise to double with a 60 minute picture of detective type. Matinee business very good.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes—A good little picture but that is all you can say about it as very few people saw it. The only reason it did as much as it did is because I played "Mother Goose Goes Hollywood" with it. Played February 5-8.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly—Who could write an honest report on a picture that packed your house three times in one day and followed it up with two more good days of about the same sort of business. It pleased and we are all happy. Running time, 105 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—Shirley a brilliant girl but we cannot get them out to see her except at matinee. Looking forward to "The Little Princess." Played January 9-11.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—This is one of the best liked pictures we have ever shown. It is a credit to all connected with its making. Richard Greene will really mean something after this. Loretta Young very good, and Brennan superb. The color is the best ever and the recording perfect. More raves than any picture for months. It is 100 per cent in every way. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 5-7.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—I believe that I can honestly say that this picture pleased 100 per cent here. The color and the settings for the various scenes were very beautiful and without a doubt left a very vivid picture of Kentucky in the minds of all. I am sorry to report that we took a very bad beating at the box office on this one due to very unfavorable weather conditions, but if Fox would be so good as to give us a return date on this, I'm sure that the coins would jingle a very merry tune for us. Play this. Running time, 95 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Cesar Romero, Joan Davis, Buddy Ebsen—Another Colorado blizzard stopped this one and, believe me, Sonja would have felt at home. Played February 19-22.—A. W. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW: Ritz Brothers, Richard Arlen, Phyllis Brooks, Ethel Merman—Had many kicks on this. The Ritz Bros. are all washed up here. No business. Very few laughs. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—One of the most satisfactory pictures we have played this winter. Liked by everyone. Has plenty of action and suspense and is not rough. Richard Greene and Nancy Kelly both clicked. Splendidly photographed and recorded. Should be good for any day of the week. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 17-18.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

THANKS FOR EVERYTHING: Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Adolphe Menjou, Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin—Was nicely received. Played it on Sunday and Monday.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

TRIP TO PARIS, A: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason—Above average in the Jones Family series and far better than some of the recent ones I have seen. Business good. Played February 9-11.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

United Artists

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—Good show for men and a number of my patrons did not like its propaganda.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, David Niven, Walter Brennan, Thomas Mitchell, Patsy Kelly—A very weak sister. Story not plausible, acting not convincing and whole picture does not ring true. Very amateurish in spots. If Cooper and Oberon top stars they did not show it here.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DRUMS: Raymond Massey, Sabu, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson—Very good picture of its kind. The great trouble with this type of picture, they don't draw at the box office. The coloring was wonderful. Running time. 96 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—A splendid cast works hard to make something of this and all the merit it has is due to them. I believe Ed Sullivan wrote this story. He is always writing about run of the mill product from Hollywood. This is run of the mill plot no. 1,001. It hasn't a new twist and the dialogue is as stupid as the plot. Sullivan forgot to include this in his list of the 12 dullest pictures of the year. Running time, 84 minutes. Played January 29-31.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre. Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young, Billie Burke—A truly splendid picture. A class picture that has mass appeal. Nothing but favorable comments. Gaynor would soon be on top again if she made a couple more like this. It is a beautiful production, nicely photographed in sepia, and well recorded. Should please any type of audience and is a credit to any theatre. Good work by cast. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 19-21.—Pearl C.

Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

AIR DEVILS: Dick Purcell, Beryl Wallace—Played this on a double and it clicked 100 per cent. Our action fans liked it fine. Purcell is well liked here. Running time, 61 minutes. Played January 27-28.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

BLACK BANDIT, THE: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—Pretty good western. Running time, 57 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BLACK DOLL: Nan Grey, Donald Woods, Edgar Kennedy—Another Crime Club production. While nothing to brag about, it isn't a bad series and we already have played many of them here with fair success. Give it a try. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DRACULA (reissue): Bela Lugosi; FRANKENSTEIN (reissue): Boris Karloff—We did not do the business on this we anticipated. On the last night we had no business whatsoever.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LADY IN THE MORGUE, THE: Preston Foster, Patricia Ellis—A fairly good picture. Not an "A" production, but a pretty good "B" picture. Give it a try yourself and see what you think of it. Running time, 70 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish—These Kids good but overrated in my opinion and after "Dead End" the allocation is too high. Afraid they will be short lived with their popularity.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

NEWSBOYS HOME: Jackie Cooper, Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie, "Little Tough Guys"—Just fair. Lots of action, in fact, too much fighting, but it got by nicely on a weekend. Would go better on the upper half of a double bill. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRISON BREAK: Barton MacLane, Glenda Farrell, Constance Moore, Robert Wilcox—A very good crime picture. While not an awfully lot different from the usual crime pictures, it's good enough to hold the patrons' attention from start to finish and that's something in this day and age. This one should hold its own in most houses. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PRISON BREAK: Barton MacLane, Glenda Farrell, Constance Moore, Robert Wilcox—This drew very good and pleased. Played it single with plenty of shorts. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 8-9.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

STORM, THE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Preston Foster, Tom Brown, Nan Grey—If it's action your patrons desire then this is it. On the whole it is a badly mixed up bit of rehash that seemed to please about half of the very few who came to see what it was all about, but it has action in it of about every conceivable kind and description. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SUDDEN BILL DORN: Buck Jones, Evelyn Brent—Buck seems to have slipped since Roy Rogers and Autry have become so popular. Business below par.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WESTLAND CASE, THE: Preston Foster, Carol Hughes—A "Crime Club" production. It's a fairly good picture with a really spooky background. Good as the second feature on a double feature program. Nothing to get excited over, although it's a fairly good all around feature. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 22.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

WIVES UNDER SUSPICION: Warren William, Gail Patrick, Constance Moore, William Lundigan, Ralph Morgan—A very good picture which we played as the only feature in conjunction with a gala stage revue. You can't go wrong with this one, Mr. Manager. It really is good, but please, please don't expect too much or the impossible. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

YOUNG FUGITIVES: Robert Wilcox, Dorothea Kent—This drew fairly good crowd for the midweek and pleased. Wilcox is well liked here. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 1-2.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

BLONDES AT WORK: Barton MacLane, Glenda Farrell—Played this single and the receipts were not so hot. Good on a double. Don't play it single. Played February 15-16.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Very good dramatic picture that did an excellent business. Played February 18.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—Fine portrayal by entire cast, but with no women in cast no women attended showing. But, nevertheless, a very fine production.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

DAWN PATROL: Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp—A splendid picture in every way. Did not please 100 per cent, however, because women do not care for this type of picture regardless of its merit. Excellent work of cast and very well done. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 15-17.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

FOUR'S A CROWD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell, Patric Knowles—Pretty good show for another screwball type.—Lee Brewerton, Capitol Theatre, Raymond, Alberta, Canada. Small town patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—This picture seemed to please everyone and was much better than we expected from some of the criticisms we had read. It is light but quite clever and entertaining. Dick Powell is still well liked here. We thought de Havilland a very good comedienne after some of the silly parts she has had. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 22-23.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—A nice little picture. We ran an "identify star" movie contest on this one. Mat for same is in the press book. Went over big, as did the picture. Use your own judgment. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 25.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Hevilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Very good comedy. Everyone enjoyed it. Played January 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—This is one of the best. Good for any spot or date. It pleased the old as well as the young.—A. H. Records, Majestic Theatre, Hebron, Neb. General patronage.

KID COMES BACK, THE: Wayne Morris, June Travis, Barton MacLane, Maxie Rosenbloom—Played this on the weekend with another feature and must say this broke our weekend record for the past year, which was held by "Kid Galahad." No wonder we say that Warner has the money makers for the past two years, and look ahead: "Angels with Dirty Faces," "Heart of the North" and "Wings of the Navy." Played February 17-18.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Kay Francis, Humphrey Bogart—This picture is good entertainment. It is a little different and has action and suspense without being too gruesome. However, our patrons are so fed up with gangster, newspaper, murder mysteries that they won't come to see one if it is good. I can't blame them, either. We have been saturated with them. Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 25-26.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, John Litel—This picture is good entertainment for juveniles. The series would be all right for towns large enough to run matinees just for children; it is not adult entertainment and adults will not pay to see them. I hope they don't make many more of them. Running time, 65 minutes. Played January 27-28.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Just a picture. Another newspaper, machine gun talker that we are so tired of. Bobby Jordan helps a little. Too bad to waste O'Brien in such as this. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Ian Hunter, Dick Foran—Good picture. Errol Flynn and Bette Davis acting great. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Ian Hunter, Dick Foran—A very good show that please 100 per cent. Would-do business in good weather. Played February 19-20.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SISTERS, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Anita Louise, Jane Bryan, Dick Foran, Ian Hunter-Superb. Almost beats "Four Daughters," which is saying plenty. Bette Davis turns in a splendid performance and Errol Flynn is his usual good self. You can go to "town" on this picture and do some real big business. At least we did. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 7-8.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: George Brent, Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris, Frank McHugh, Doris Weston—We enjoyed record business on this picture. Wish there were more of this type made. Perfect entertainment for our situation. Everybody happy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Claude Rains, "Dead End Kids"—Good action picture which pleased all and did fair business. "Dead End Kids" always please. Played February 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY MADE ME A CRIMINAL: John Garfield. Ann Sheridan, Claude Rains, "Crime School Kids"—Here's one for you boys. A humdinger. Knocks them in the aisle. Step on it. It's meat all the way. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TORCHY BLANE IN CHINATOWN: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Not up to the Torchy average and they are all too similar. Everyone knows every line each character is going to speak. Too many of the same type. We thought this repulsive and thin. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 1-2.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—This fine action picture pleased all and did good business. Play it. Played February 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: No. 2—As I have said in the past, this is a very good series and when plugged in the right manner, this little short can do miracles for you at the box office. Running time, nine minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DOGGONE MIXUP: Harry Langdon—A hilarious comedy enjoyed by our farm friends.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EARLY BIRD: Scrappy Cartoons—A fairly good little cartoon. Clever in parts and it will relieve the tension of a long show. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

FISTIC FUN: Special Sport Thrills—Played this during the Golden Glove competition and it went over fine. A very good reel with plenty of laughs. Running time, eight miuntes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Andy Clyde—This oldtrooper wows them in comedy and did excellent in this little offering. Enjoyable. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUMP, CHUMP, JUMP: Andy Clyde—Real slapstick entertainment. It brought the house down.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE MOTH'S BIG FLAME: Color Rhapsodies—Cancel or pay and forget. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NOT GUILTY ENOUGH: Broadway Comedies—O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S ADDED ATTRACTION: Scrappy Cartoons— A good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Always well received in our situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1—A fairly good short, although there are lots out that beat this series by a mile. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 4—A fair short showing the various stars playing and watching football games. Mickey Rooney is in it and plug him for all you're worth. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Educational

AFFAIRS OF PIERRE, THE: Willie Howard—At last a really funny star in Educational lineup. This is okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BEAUTIFUL BUT DUMMIES: Two-Reel Comedies—A nice little short subject. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GETTING AN EYEFUL: Two-Reel Comedies—A fair comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

AWFUL TOOTH: Our Gang—Very good. Not as good as the old Our Gang two-reelers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ALADDIN'S LANTERN: Our Gang—This series is slipping badly with us. Doesn't seem that they have the talent they used to have and are running out of good subject material also.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CITY OF LITTLE MEN, THE: MGM Miniatures—An excellent foreword to "Boys Town" and likewise should prove an equally suitable epilogue if you must use it after the feature.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—One of the best sport reels of the year.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EVENING ALONE, AN: Robert Benchley—A usual Benchley. Will hit the spot with any man who has been in a similar predicament. The subtle humor which generally underlies all of Benchley shorts finds full strength in this one. Most patrons will get a kick out of it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FOLLOW THE ARROW: Pete Smith Specialties—A good subject appealed to the young and old alike. We need more of these.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

FOLLOW THE ARROW: Pete Smith Specialties—Another Pete Smith Specialty that is well deserving.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FOOTBALL ROMEO: Our Gang—Real good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Pencook, N. H. General patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—A poor short and could be definitely improved throughout the series by not making them.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

GREAT HEART, THE: MGM Miniatures—This company has the ability to go out and pick up small events and by calling them to the attention of the world really do some good. We earnestly urge every showman to play this excellent short. The audience will eat this one whole hog. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GREAT HEART, THE: MGM Miniatures—Entertaining one-reeler dealing with leprosy. Educational.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HIDE AND SHRIEK: Our Gang—Well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD HANDICAP: MGM Miniatures—Personal glimpses of many famous stars enjoying themselves at beautiful Santa Anita. With good harmony provided by the "Original Sing Band," this short also has its comical elements. These combinations work out to make as nice a picture as could be desired. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HONDURAS HURRICANE: Captain and the Kids—Average black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAGICIAN'S DAUGHTER, THE: Musical Comedies—Very good musical. Something different in the line of shorts and was well liked. Running time, 20 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MEN OF STEEL: Musical Comedies—A very good two-reel musical.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MENTAL POISE: Robert Benchley—Another good Benchley comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MUSIC MADE SIMPLE: Robert Benchley—A good Benchley subject but had no audience appeal for me.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

NEW ROADWAYS: Passing Parade, No. 2—Passing Parade, and a dandy. Very interesting and educational. More talk about this than the feature.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARTY FEVER: Our Gang—Another excellent comedy from the kiddies. These shorts pep up any program. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kans. Small town patronage.

PETUNIA NATURAL PARK: Captain and the Kids—Very poor. We wonder when we start to see something from Harmon-Ising, reported as back on the job at Metro. This can't be their work! The Katzenjammer Kids are lacking in cartoon "it."—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PETUNIA NATURAL PARK: Captain and the Kids—We knew that this company could make a good cartoon if they tried and they finally did, but it took eleven months to do it. This cartoon is excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRACTICAL JOKERS: Our Gang—As good a gang comedy as you would want to play. Alfalfa is the whole show and his singing was "excellent." Brings the house down every time he sings. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE: Special—Very good, especially for American audiences.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THEY LIVE AGAIN: MGM Miniatures—Fairly interesting short telling about the new found cure for diabetes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY'RE ALWAYS CAUGHT: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A very interesting short, showing how criminals are tracked down. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE INTERLUDE, A: Vitaphone Varieties—Three okay acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WRONG WAY OUT, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very good two-reeler of the "Crime Doesn't" Series.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

COPS IS ALWAYS RIGHT: Popeye the Sailor—Up to the Popeye standard.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I YAM LOVE SICK: Popeye the Sailor—A good Popeye. Will please any of his fans. Running time, seven minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PUDGY THE WATCHMAN: Betty Boop Cartoons—A good little cartoon. Book the whole series. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

RACING PIGEONS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Interesting. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TWO BOYS AND A DOG: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Excellent. Photography is tops. Idea good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO BOYS AND A DOG: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A very good short that will make any show a success. Play this by all means.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: No. 2—This short is sure to be enjoyed. Running a gamut of many interesting subjects, it winds up with a most interesting and enjoyable interview with Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy" and "Mortimer." Well done color. Audience will find it excellent entertainment. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An exciting Ted Husing sport film. Dealing with aquatic sports, it hightlights boating and aquaplaning with some unique and exciting shots. A substitute for "Ball Tossers," it proved to be very interesting to all. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RKO Radio

BEAUX AND ERRORS: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Very funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CLOCK CLEANERS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another very pleasing Disney production.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DONALD'S BETTER SELF: Walt Disney Cartoons—A Swell cartoon in color, picturing that wellknown and inimitable screen star, Donald Duck, himself. Book the series by all means and see your matinee attendance grow. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GOOD SCOUT Walt Disney Cartoons—Good. Running time, seven minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

INTERNATIONAL RHYTHM: Nu-Atlas Productions—They should let Warner Bros. make single reel musicals. Just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 3—Tops in its particular line. As I have said before, go to town on this short and it will mean real do-re-mi in the old box office. Running time, 1? minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 4—Tops. This is one of the outstanding shorts on the market today. Plenty of free plugs, too, from "Life," "Time" and "Fortune." Book in the entire series, now, today. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, THE: No. 5—This is a good subject and pulled 'em in for me.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

MOTH AND THE FLAME, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—A very good and clever cartoon in colors. Keep up the good work. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE GOES HOLLYWOOD: Walt Disney Cartoons—An excellent cartoon and had more drawing power than the feature I played with it.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

SALT SHAKERS: Nu-Atlas Productions—Very mediocre in entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SEA MELODY: Headliners—Ted Fio Rito scores again in this one. A nice little story backed up by good music and the popular voice of Muzzy Marcellino makes this short desirable for any theatre audience. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STAGE FRIGHT: Leon Errol Comedies—Leon Errol puts it over once more. If continuous laughter denotes the ability of a comedian, then Errol is tops. The laughter evoked by this short was sure continuous and real. With a neat plot to back him up, Errol goes to town in this one. Of course, he indulges in his usual inimitable "rubber-legged" routine as an inebriate. Give your patrons a treat by giving them Leon in this exceptionally good short. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHRIS COLUMBO: Terry-Toons—A poor excuse for a cartoon, as are all in this series.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

FASHION FORECASTS: Winter Styles—One of the niftiest shorts we have ever run. These are done in such excellent taste and so cleverly presented that they appeal to men as well as women. Ilka Chase is tops as a fashion commentator. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

FILMING NATURE'S WONDERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Very entertaining and appreciative.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GANDY THE GOOSE IN THE FRAME UP: Terry-Toons—Clever black and white. Pleased.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MYSTIC SIAM: Magic Carpet Series—Very interesting and entertaining.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW COMER, THE: Terry-Toons—There should be a new comer to take the place of Terry-Toons.—A. N. Beezley, New Grand Theatre, Littleton, Col. Suburban and rural patronage.

RECORDING MODERN SCIENCE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Average.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW: Lew

Lehr—Poor or rather very tiresome.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

FOX HUNTING: World Windows—Some beautiful scenes of the countryside. However, very slow and dull in spite of the fox hunt. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: No. 49—Quite interesting. "Man Made Rubber" and "Circus Seals" are the topics.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOING PLACES WITH LOWELL THOMAS: No. 56 (Puerto Rico)—If this short had been made in color it would have equalled anything FitzPatrick ever made for Metro and that is saying a lot. This is an excellent travel talk. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OSWALD CARTOONS: A nice little cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

PIXIE LAND: Oswald Cartoons—Amusing.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RABBIT HUNT, THE: Lantz Cartunes—Just a fair cartoon that didn't have a laugh in the entire reel. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 55—This series has been very good with us this season. Not a poor one so far this year. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SPEAK ENGLISH: "Charlie McCarthy," Edgar Bergen—Put this on your weekend and watch the kiddies pile in. Come on, Warner, give us more of these. Running time, 10 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

A-LAD-IN BAGDAD: Merrie Melodies—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CAMPUS CINDERELLA: Johnnie Davis, Penny Singleton—An excellent color musical. This is the most consistent series of shorts for good product that any producer makes. Excellent. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CHINA TODAY: Color Parade—The photographer must have been in a fog the entire filming of this short. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CINDERELLA MEETS FELLA: Merrie Melodies—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Oka. Small town patronage.

FEUD THERE WAS, A: Merrie Melodies—One of the best color cartoons we've ever used. Blow your horn over this one as folks will be glad they came to see it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT LIBRARY MISERY, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Whoever took this short for comedy better have his head examined. Running time, eight minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IDENTIFIED: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—A swell little series that are continually being plugged in the newspapers and over the radio. You can't miss on this series as they have plenty of human interest in them. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

JOHNNY SMITH AND POKER HUNTAS: Merrie Melodies—A very, very clever color cartoon. Book this for your theatre for sure. It's a riot and a truly knockout. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

JUGGLING FOOL, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Very entertaining short. Something different and that is very welcome. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

LOVE AND CURSES: Merrie Melodies—An average colored cartoon for this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE AND CURSES: Merrie Melodies—Good color cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DISNEY EVOLVES COLOR MEASURER

So that colors in "exceptional" Disney cartoons may be reproduced in the future, no matter what the condition of the original, the Disney studios in Hollywood have in operation what they term a "spectraphotometer", a measuring instrument to make in three minutes a permanent record of degrees of color.

The record is obtained by inserting a color sample under a lamp in the machine. Pressing a button sets into action a series of electric eyes, revolving prisms, and lenses. As the color is measured, by the electric, optical and mechanical devices, a fountain pen describes a graph upon a chart.

MELODY MASTERS: This series used to be a treat but lately they have all been so similar in talent and treatment that they are just a bore. Regardless of how good the orchestra is, the only thing they have in the way of specialty numbers is a singer or two, most of them with neither a voice nor personality, and a couple of dancers throwing each other through space. Are there no banjo, accordion, guitar or other good instrumentalists available? Where are the male trios and quartets? Anything different would be welcome.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

MERLE KENDRICKS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters--A dandy orchestra short. This bunch is neatly presented in this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Vitaphone Varieties—One of the finest shorts we have had for some time. Truly a credit to any program. We would like to have more like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

MURDER WITH RESERVATIONS: Broadway Brevities—This had one good number and we thought it was going to be something. It was about the poorest excuse for a Brevity we have ever had. Mediocre talent, badly presented. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

PORKY IN WACKYLAND: Looney Tunes—Certainly a goofy cartoon. Did not go so well with the Porky fans.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S NAUGHTY NEPHEW: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon which pleased all.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RISE AND SING: Broadway Brevities—Pretty good. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROBIN HOOD MAKES GOOD: Merrie Melodies—A clever little cartoon that pleased. We have had better from this producer but cannot complain on this one as it is above the average. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROBIN HOOD MAKES GOOD: Merrie Melodies—An excellent colored cartoon and very clever.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUBINOFF AND HIS VIOLIN: Melody Masters—Very, very good. The best of this series we have had this year. Some good talent and had a little variety. Enjoyed by all. Recording only fair Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town patronage.

TOILS OF THE LAW: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure" Series—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO SHADOWS: Broadway Brevities—Most excellent. Vitaphone's two-reelers are getting back their old style and zip this season. Best wishes for more like this.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ZERO GIRL: Broadway Brevities—An extra good Brevity with a world of real skating stars. The comedian held up the show.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

ZERO GIRL: Broadway Brevities—Play this. One of the best shorts I've run. Patrons sat through twice. Running time, 18 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

FLYING G-MEN (Episode 1): James Craig, Lorna Gray—The first chapter is excepionally long, lasting about half an hour. Might I suggest you book your chapter one of your new series on same program as last chapter of your old serial to assure an extra big attraction. Running time, 30 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

FLYING G-MEN (Episode 2): James Craig, Lorna Gray—A nice little serial that offers you all kinds of corker tieups. Comet airplanes will cooperate us to the utmost on this one. Plenty of good fast action, which is what the kiddies crave for. Running time, 18 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SECRET OF TREASURE ISLAND: Don Terry, Gwen Gaze—This seems to have a nice following.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SPIDER'S WEB, THE: Warren Hull, Iris Meredith—The last chapter, episode 15, of a swell little serial. It reveals who the Octopus really is. We enjoyed good business throughout the entire 15 chapters and are now booking in Columbia's new serial "Flying G Men." Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Republic

HAWK OF THE WILDERNESS: Herman Brix, Malo—This new serial of the Tarzan type is starting off very nicely.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix —Playing chapter 7 and must say this is a sure bet. Only hope Republic have another as good to follow. Running time, 20 minutes.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Open Cincinnati Offices

Trailer-Made Service, Inc., recently organized in Cincinnati by William Bien, operating the Theatre Poster Supply Company, and Ralph Kinsler, who resigned as Grand National branch manager to devote his time to the project, have opened quarters in the Film Mart Building.

Disney Building Four "Stages"

The Disney studios in California's San Fernandino Valley are to build four stages. One will be used for the recording of dialogue, another for special water effects and other sound effects, a third for orchestra recording and the fourth for recording symphonic orchestras.

Chicago House Ends Duals

Double features have been discontinued at the Esquire, Chicago, operated by the H. & E. Balaban Circuit. The move was made following a survey of patrons which showed that the majority prefer a single feature and short subjects, according to Elmer Balaban.

Alster Leaves Randforce

Samuel Alster, manager of the Kinema, a Randforce circuit theatre in Brooklyn, has resigned. He is planning to live in New Orleans and establish a business in a different field. Mr. Alster was tendered a going-away party by associates.

New Chicago Independent Unit

A new Chicago organization is the Terminational Film Company, formed by E. and H. Balaban and G. T. Topper, for distribution of independent films.

Garrison Handling "People"

Garrison Films will distribute the Spanish war film "The Will of a People." The picture had its premiere at the Belmont theatre in New York.

This unique advertising medium stands alone in many ways . . .

It can be heard as well as seen . . .

It entertains while it's selling . . .

It appeals to a hundred percent audience, reaching every person it is aimed at . . .

And it is the only medium of advertising that you can absolutely control so that it reaches your prospects when you have them all together—in a buying mood.

A rare investment . . . a unique investment which sells seats at lowest cost per seat sold of any medium in the field.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

DON'T MEAN A HOOT

Of course, it's very satisfying to meet the local big names as guests of the theatre at special advance screenings. It's also nice to have these gentry murmur how much they enjoyed the picture and "how lovely it was of you to have me." But after the ball is over, can some bright boy tell us just how many extra tickets the screening sold and if it did anything more than let in on the cuff a lot of folks who could well afford to pay their way.

Immediately granted is the exception of an attraction that may hold a strong appeal for special groups, wherein a screening for group leaders and their endorsements bring many followers who otherwise might not attend. But this does not apply to the usual aggregation of guests at the usual screening. In the final analysis, the manager is doing nothing less than giving his show away in exchange for vague, general approval that doesn't mean a hoot down a rain barrel at the boxoffice.

There is little justification for the run-of-the-mill advance screening. Surely, if a picture has sufficient merit and the theatreman sold on its ability to draw, why does he need the dubious affirmation of a certain favored few to impress his entire community? It's up to the manager rather than a lot of aimlessly occupied laymen to decide on just how much of a punch his attraction packs.

If the picture has it, let the theatreman say so, good and loud. If not, then the flossiest endorsements from the town's most important people are just so much wasted space bought at the expense of the only thing the theatre has to sell.

SWITCHING THE ATTACK

Undoubtedly, "They Made Me A Criminal" packs drawing power, as the grosses have shown, in Kansas City as elsewhere. However, at the Newman in this situation, according to Ken Force, Herald correspondent, it was discovered after the opening that the balcony at 25 cents was outselling the lower floor at 50 cents in the ratio of ten to one. Concluding that the "criminal" slant in the advertising might be the cause, Manager Jerry Zigmond jumped into the breach with a type ad on Sunday following the opening, copy stressing that the attraction was not a gangster picture, that it was fit for the entire family.

After the ad appeared, the ratio of admissions changed to half and half in both parts of the house, and remained there for the balance of the engagement.

It is generally accepted that, when your picture opens, little can be done thereafter to push it along. For the most part, this is true. But it's equally true that a smart general switches his attack, even in the heat of battle, when a change in tactics is called for to win the day.

A LETTER: AN ANSWER

From John Pival, accompanying an effective invitation card idea signed by the Hardy Family, announcing "Out West With the Hardys", at the Senate, Detroit, came the following note:

"Enclosed is the best I could do for the Quigley Awards this week. It did attract attention, though."

In quick acknowledgment, your Chairman answered John as follows:

"Regardless of whether or not your 'Hardy Family' invitation is the best that you could do this week, as you report, the fact remains that at least you are doing something each week for the boxoffice. That, in itself, is more important than any Competition.

"If theatremen generally would realize the necessity of keeping everlastingly at it in impressing their theatres and attractions upon the consciousness of the motion picture going public, I suppose that a lot of our immediate business problems would be solved."

As concerns the average patron, until a few weeks back "Pygmalion" might just as well have meant most anything but a motion picture, and, even if it did, so what? So what? Launched by the Howard Dietz and Oscar Doob forces, with an emphatic follow-through by showmen in the field, a smart, aggressive campaign pushed along by all hands has translated that once puzzling title into fat boxoffice.

The sales power of motion picture exploitation has not been so positively demonstrated in many a moon.

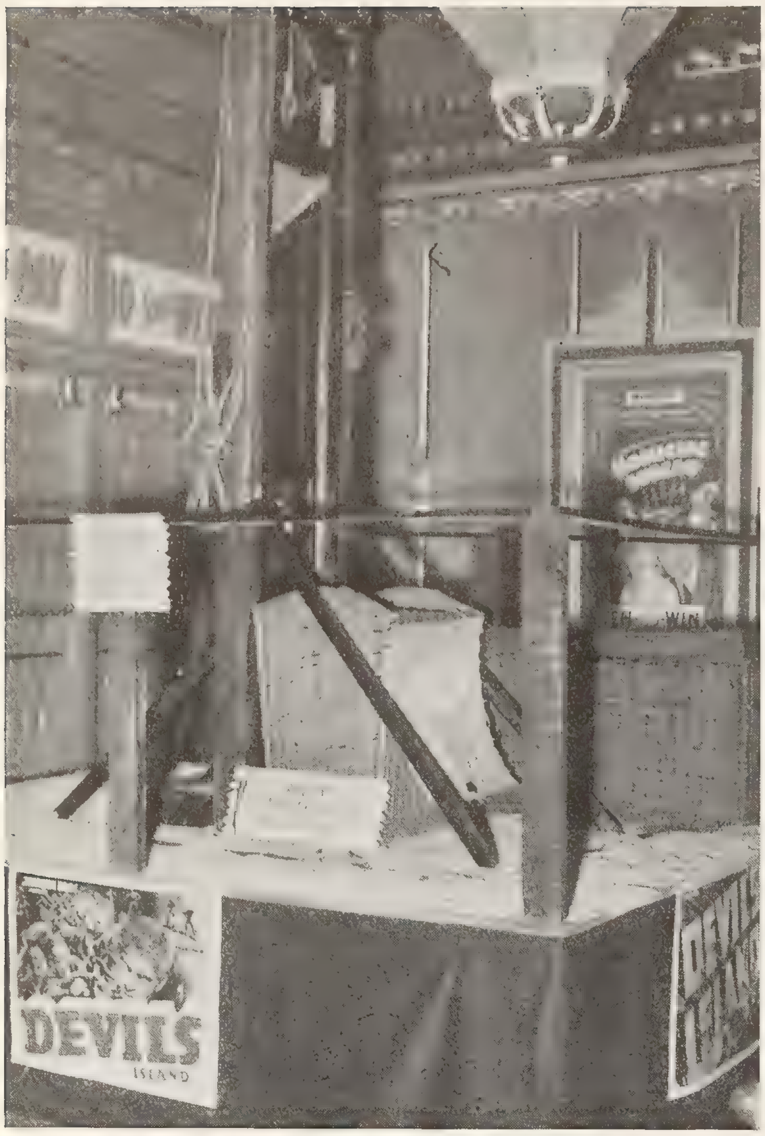
Round Table In Pictures



Created by Assistant Manager Dorwin L. Robinson, Warner Theatre, Morgantown, W. Va., was guillotine display in lobby as advance on "Devil's Island". Original thought which motivated this type display centered around the fact that Morgantown is the city in which West Virginia University is situated. Display was life size and built along lines of instrument used in picture.

Double sized car cards for surface cars and buses done in rich colors, and including space for local theatre datelines, have been made available by United Artists in 111 cities throughout the country. Each campaign is timed to precede immediately the local engagement of "Stagecoach" as part of the company's plan to assist the individual playdates.

"Four Girls in White" street ballyhoo was engaged in by City Manager Walter Norris, Majestic Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Girls paraded streets carrying with them one of the new "pick-me-up" radios which tuned into Station WOOD. Spot announcements were made from time to time as well as three special 100-word announcements on the picture.

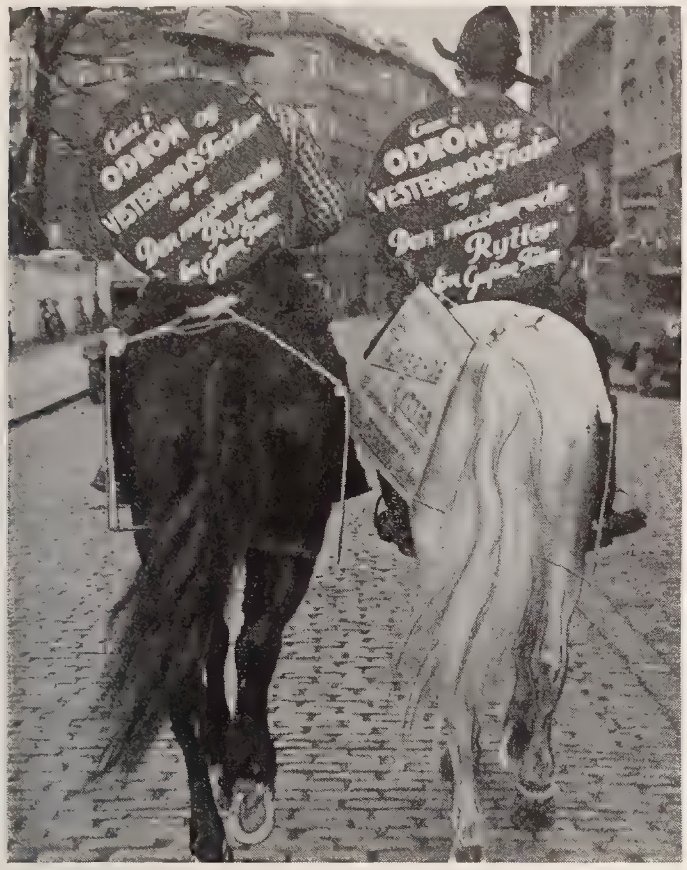
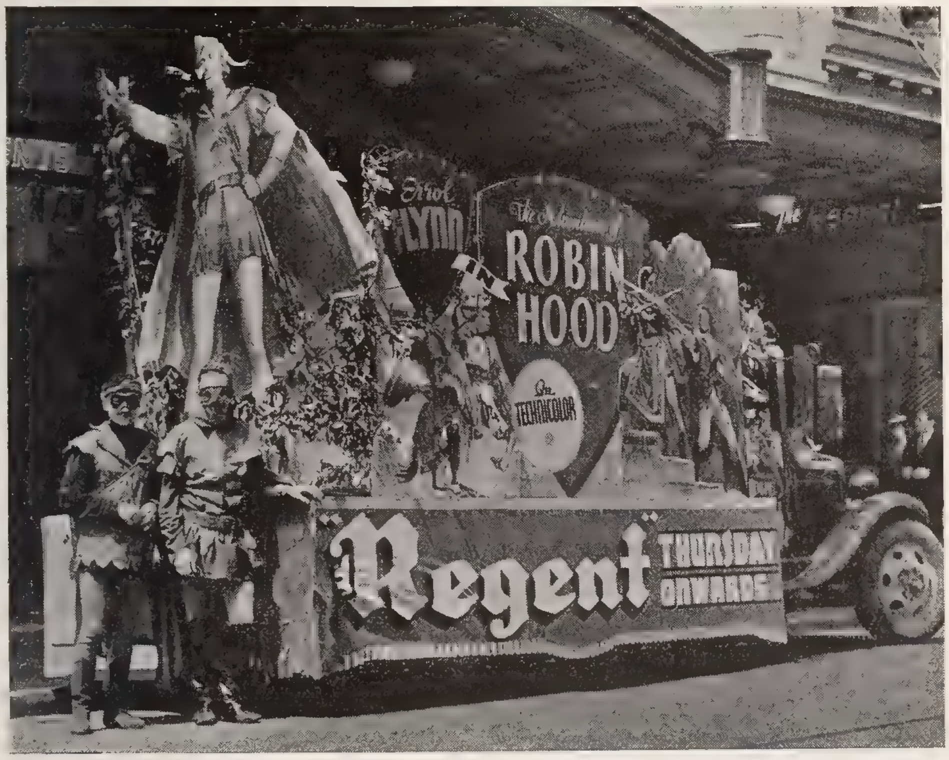
A real Entertainment TREAT not to be missed
AT YOUR FAVORITE THEATRE

Apparently street ballys are the order of the day in Copenhagen, too, as witness masked riders shown below, who, reports Victor Andersen, paraded streets as advance for "Lone Ranger" at the Odeon and Vesterbros theatres. Back banners carried playdates, etc.

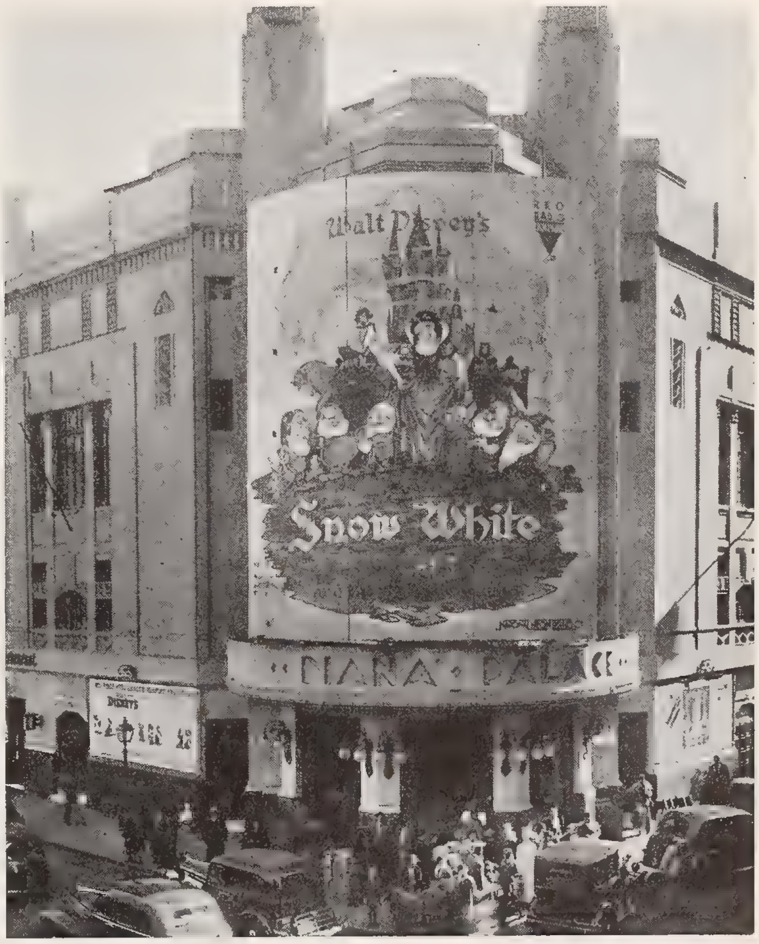


Boosted as the first screening in Australasia, Reg. Felton, publicity manager for Paramount, arranged for a preview of "Men With Wings" at the Air Force camp at Blendheim, New Zealand, for the entertainment of the territorials under the canvas at the Amaka Aerodrome. Widespread publicity given this camp in newspapers promoted Paramount to contact the Secretary for Air, who detailed plane and pilot to convey Felton and print of the film to the airport, where it was delivered to commanding officer. Broadcast at the aerodrome brought mention of the picture, in addition to play dates and plug for its opening at the Palace Theatre. After showing at the field, parade was held to theatre which was covered by the local press, including photo of entire aerodrome personnel as here represented.

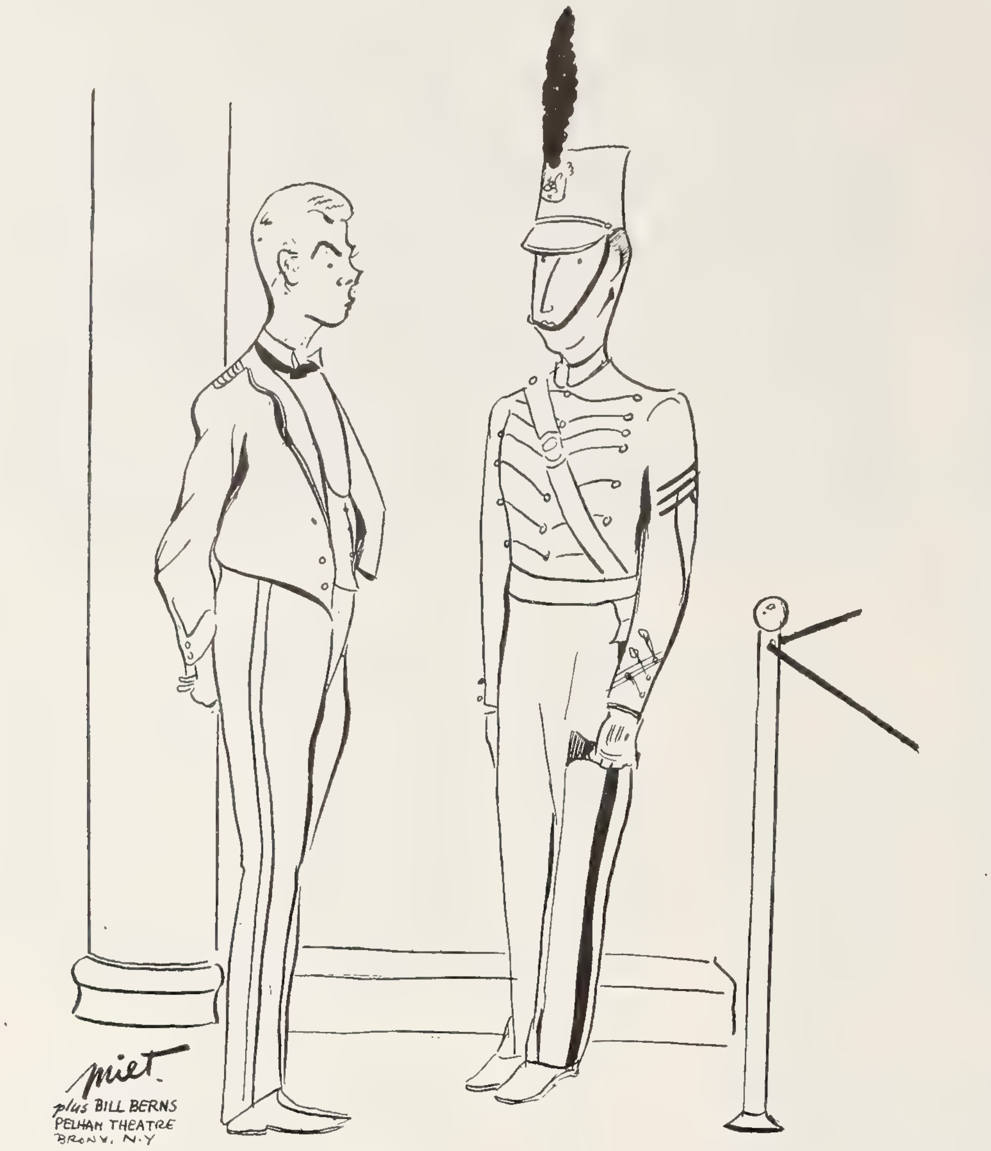


Highly deserving of all the attention it attracted was the "Robin Hood" float shown above which was created by Yorke Gray, manager of the Regent Theatre, in Wellington, New Zealand. Two men dressed to suit the era tended to make the effect more realistic. Part of Gray's campaign for the date included an archery contest which was sponsored by leading department store, which featured the stunt in its newspaper advertising, windows, and through use of a giant cutout of Errol Flynn which was planted on front of their building.

Reported as a first time that such neon lighting had been used locally for a theatre, was front created by Gregory E. Georgoussy, RKO manager for the Near East, to exploit opening of "Snow White" at the Diana Theatre in Cairo. Sign which measured 38 feet in height by 26 feet in width attracted considerable attention and could be seen from blocks distant.



SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS



CHIEF USHER: What made you get so spruced up tonight?
USHER: We're expecting a talent scout from the Music Hall.

Early Bird Matinee Held for "Delight"

The early birds catch worms, so they say, but in this instance they caught a 5:30 a. m. showing of "Idiot's Delight" which was put on by Fortnighter Ed Forester at the Tri-States Omaha in Omaho. Tying up with local merchants, the theatreman promoted coffee, rolls, orange juice, doughnuts, etc., for the breakfast. Entire staffs, dressed in white jackets, spent the night in the theatre to be on hand. Food was arranged cafeteria style and served in the lobby to the customers. At 6:15 over 300 people were in the house and by nine o'clock over 700 had been served.

Stories and photos were generously displayed in the local press and Forester played up the local angle on the picture, using in every ad the line "It happened in Omaha." Eddie reports that additional publicity was garnered on a humorous incident which occurred. Two women drove up in a chaffeured car, alighted, stopped at the coffee table, refused the paper cups proffered and withdrew from their purses two china ones which they had brought along for the occasion, and proceeded to have their breakfast before going in to the show. Papers covered this amusing episode.

Meekin Arranges Campaign For "Spirit of Culver"

Official Washington was prominently in attendance at the opening of Universal's "Spirit of Culver" at Keith's, following a lively advance campaign supervised by Manager Hardie Meekin. Delegations were on hand from Congress, Army and Navy Departments, American Legion and Local Youth organizations attended by the 30-piece police boys' band and welcomed by the honor guard of the local Boy Scout unit.

Representing Indiana, which is the site of the famed school around which the picture was made, was contingent of state and federal officials. Congress was represented by the Hons. Pat Harrison, William H. King, Henry E. Ashurst, Sherman Minton, Frederick Van Nuis and Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead.

Reeths Circularizes

Special three fold postcards were mailed out on "Wings of the Navy" by Fred Reeths, Sheboygan Theatre, Sheboygan, Wis. Outside carried copy "Can America defend herself in the air," inside, picture plug, cast and playdates.

50 Stores Hooked to Window 'Hunt' For Ace Prizes

Two extensive tieins that had the enthusiastic cooperation of the local Board of Trade, daily paper and theatre, used in the closing months of last year are now reported by Manager T. A. Mangan on behalf of the Warner in West Chester, Pa. The first was called "Window Shoppers' Star Hunt," put on in conjunction with the recent movie drive. This was found so successful that the same contacts were used for a following "Window Shoppers' Pleasure Hunt" put on early in December to coincide with the Christmas shopping season.

On the "Star Hunt," which was aimed to interest contestants in merchants' window displays, and incidentally to sell the theatre attraction, photos of stars were mounted on 22 by 28 cards and planted in 76 windows—the best in town. Full page announcement carried list of participating merchants and rules of the contest. Entrants were required to identify stars in windows of merchants listed in the page. After filling in all spaces in the blank as required, and signing names and addresses below, contestants were asked to mail the coupons to the theatre. Prizes were guest tickets.

"Pleasure Hunt" Follows

"The Pleasure Hunt" was also given the same widespread publicity but the procedure changed by each participating merchant, who, in addition to his regular window display included merchandise foreign to the business of that particular store. For instance, candy store displayed hosiery; a food market shoes, etc. Contestants had to identify the "outside" item and identify it properly in the special entry blank in the newspaper page layout alongside the name of the store where it was found.

In addition to list of correct answers contestants were asked to submit 50-word essay on the subject "why you should patronize our local merchants." The first prize here was an all-expense three-day trip to New York for two persons.

The only cost to the theatre for both contests was $12 for the window cards, plus a sizeable number of passes for the winners. Newspaper donated the full page layouts and in the "Pleasure Hunt" Board of Trade supplied money for the New York trip.

"What's in a Name" Contest Inaugurated for "Jesse James"

Taking a leaf from Shakespeare's book, Moon Corker, together with the Athens Banner-Herald sponsored a "What's in a name" contest in connection with opening of "Jesse James" at the Lucas and Jenkins Palace Theatre, Athens, Ga. Contest run-for ten days, broke the front page six days ahead.

Contestants were required to write a letter not exceeding 100 words on what the title name meant to the individual. Cash prizes and tickets went to winners. Corker, who received his Fortnighter Designation on this tieup, says a total of 1,440 lines of free publicity was received.

Paramount Sets Big Tie-up on "Union Pacific"

The world premiere of Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific," which takes place simultaneously in three first-run theatres in Omaha, Neb., the Paramount, Orpheum and Omaha Theatres of the Tri-State circuit, in April, will be ushered in with a $50,000 advertising campaign sponsored by Paramount Pictures, plus a similar advertising expenditure by the Union Pacific Railroad.

The Union Pacific Railroad is extending Paramount full cooperation in conjunction with the film's premiere by running special advertising in all time tables, displaying special cards in railroad terminals, placing special cards on the tables in diners and stickers on all courtesy newspaper, magazine and the voluminous direct mail literature issued by the railroad. Convention of the Union Pacific Oldtimers has been timed to coincide with the premiere and the City of Omaha will participate to the extent of erecting oldtime western false fronts along the main streets and encouraging citizens to dress in western costumes.

Hollywood will be represented at the premiere with the presence of Producer Cecil B. DeMille, Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Evelyn Keyes and other members of the cast.

For the national campaign, Paramount has arranged tieins with such companies as: Hamilton Watch Co.; Pennzoil; International Silverware; Western Union; American Express Co.; Continental Baking Co.; Wonder Bread; the Tea Bureau, controlling national tea distribution and the Aluminum Company of America.

State Officials Aid Missouri

Cooperation from Missouri state and civic agencies has been obtained by Paramount for the world premiere of "I'm From Missouri" at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, set for the middle of March. A representation of Paramount players and production executives is expected and among the featured promotions planned is an invitational preview by Governor Lloyd C. Stark at the executive mansion.

Top local tiein is to be a Missouri Day celebration which civic associations, merchants and newspapers are sponsoring.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Industry Heads Attend "Cafe Society" Opening

Premiere of "Cafe Society" at the Sheridan Theatre, Miami Beach, Florida, was featured in advance by a strong campaign supervised by Manager George Hoover. In addition to representative newspaper campaign, all radio stations cooperated with special announcements. An idea that attracted was a number of imprinted kites, flown from various parts of the city.

Papers further tied in on the stunt wherein Brenda Frazier, current glamour girl, was invited to be guest of honor. Featured race at the local track was named after the picture and contest was planted among top night clubs with guest tickets to the winners. Opening was attended by visiting industry heads and other prominents.

DOUBLE PREMIERE HELD FOR "OKLAHOMA KID"

Oklahoma City, Tulsa Combine at Civic Celebrations to Honor Openings of Picture

For the dual world premiere of Warners' "Oklahoma Kid" at the Criterion, Oklahoma City, and the Orpheum, Tulsa, Humphrey Bogart, who plays a feature role in the film and other Warner players represented the studios. They were welcomed by Governor Leon C. Phillips and then attended a special screening for high state officials.

Wide civic cooperation was obtained to publicize the Oklahoma City opening. Under the supervision of local Park Commissioner, the city's Wiley Post Park was turned into a typical pioneer camp of land rush days. The entire park was decorated and fitted up to look like the city did 75 years ago.

Prior to the opening, a barbecue was held at the park attended by prominent residents of the city, invitations sent out by Mayor J. Frank Martin in the form of a proclamation of a land rush with special carriers on horseback delivering them. Following the barbecue there was a horseback parade to the theatre, which included a number of oldtime vehicles carrying members of the city's Roundup Club, the Amateur Cow Girls' Association, the Embassy Club and other organizations. The town was completely decorated. Merchants had their employees wear ten-gallon hats during the celebration and those attending the barbecue wore costumes befitting the period.

Famous Oklahomans Invited

In Tulsa, invitations were sent out to the last remaining Oklahoma "bad men" and prominent figures of the land rush days. Such well-known characters as Kenneth McHilanny, who actually went under the name of "The Oklahoma Kid"; Pawnee Bill, Indian scout; Elfrego Baca, J. Frank Norfleet and Chris Madsen attended a luncheon at the Tulsa Club prior to the premiere performance at the Orpheum Theatre.

The Tulsa celebration was tied to an "Indiana Territory Day" which started with a special showing followed by Chamber of Commerce luncheon, honoring residents who had lived in the state and "Territory" or longer. During the luncheon talks were made on the early history of the area after presentation of the Warner stars and introduction of special guests.

In the afternoon were unveiling ceremonies for the presentation of the Warner Brothers marker to commemorate the first commercial building site in Tulsa. Marker was presented to the city and accepted by Mayor T. A. Penney. This was followed by tour of the city for out-of-town visitors and old-timers, one of the events arranged by the Chamber of Commerce publicity committee which had complete charge of the celebration.

All newspapers gave generous cooperation in publicity and photos as did papers all over the drawing area, editors of which were invited to Tulsa to participate in the celebration. Other activities covered window displays, prominent among these being cooperation of the city's largest department stores which gave space to the costumes used by the stars in the picture in addition to historical relics supplied locally.

On arrival from Oklahoma City in the morning, the visitors were welcomed by an assemblage on the roof of the Chamber of Commerce building, composed of remaining members of the Frontiersmen Association, Anti-Horse Thief Association, Dawes Commission and the Indian Territory Peace Offering Association, including the old-timers listed above. Here the visiting stars were commissioned as members of the Anti-Horse Thieves Association and presented with badges.

The three local radio stations KVOO, KTUL and KOME took a prominent part in the activities, starting a week ahead. KTUL presented programs outlining the celebration and urging attendance from all over the territory. KVOO presented an historical drama on the early days of Tulsa enacted by members of the high school dramatic class, which had previously presented a series of other historical programs before the school.

Bonham Patrons Are "Spell-bound"

Through the efforts of Jimmy Redmond, advertising manager, local teams are invited to participate in spelling bees held weekly at the Bonham Theatre, Fairbury, Neb. Each team consists of five active contestants and two alternates, contest prize going to the team whose members longest survive the "spell down."

By inviting teams to enter the contest, rather than choosing contestants from the audience, Redmond is assured additional revenue through patronage of friends of the entrants. Interest is built up by advance publicity planted each week. Different local businessman is invited to act as the spelling master and high school principal as chief judge. As each story is run in local paper, Jim invites various groups to arrange a match.

Remond, who won his Fortnighter on this campaign, says that the popularity of the spelling bee increases weekly, and so it is planned to continue the stunt.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Thrill Reactions Tested On "Gunga Din" Date

Reported by Pat Patchen of the Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., was stunt he planted in the hard-to-crack local papers. A blonde, brunette and red-head were used in an experiment made by the Oklahoma University school of medicine to test the thrill reactions of the various famale "types" to "Gunga Din."

Despite the fact that the newspapers there are strictly allergic to picture publicity, abundant stories and art work were garnered by Patchen, who won his Fortnighter Assignment on the campaign.

Rules for the Quigley Awards

No fancy entries are necessary. With the usual "evidence", submit brief description and "reasons why" an entry should be considered

There are no more deadlines. All exploitations will be entered in the Fortnightly competition underway on date they are received.

"Antoinette" Costumes Duplicated by WPA

Several months ago, reports Arthur Egberts, publicist, Loew's Jersey Theatre, Jersey City followed up a WPA handcraft exhibit in lobby by inviting the recreational division to make an exhibit of "Marie Antoinette" costumes. Stills were provided the instructors, extensive library research work followed, the committee saw the picture at the New York Astor and work was begun in the schools, recreation centers and clubs.

WPA headquarters thru superintendent of schools sent notices of the display to every public and high school, libraries, Y. W. C. A.'s, Girl Scouts and other organizations. Advance stories broke in papers and three column photo of the display in lobby and opening with Commissioner McGovern officiating, broke in the Jersey Journal, Jersey Observer and Hudson Dispatch. Ceremony was broadcast over WAAT and on theatre quiz program.

Manager George Dumond built the display with materials already on hand, David Friendlander did the art work, assistant Joe Sloan getting credit for the arrangement of the scene.

Brien Plants Kid Contest on "Angels with Dirty Faces"

Contest for his kid club was planted by Lige Brien, Prince, Ambridge, Pa., in connection with "Angels With Dirty Faces," prizes going to those who correctly answered the question "How many angels are there in," etc., etc. It was also suggested by the theatreman that the children ask their parents to aid them in the solution.

Mounted 24 sheet was planted atop marquee ahead and during run, with red spot shining on faces of Cagney and O'Brien. Heralds, entire cost of which was met by merchant's ad, were distributed, entire mailing list was circularized and telephone subscribers reached.

On "Drums," Brien effected an interesting lobby through use of six actual scenes of India mounted on display board. Typical was a street scene, depicting native village with horse carriage and wagon pulled by oxen; pictures were secured from the Canadian Pacific and tiein copy used.

Contest Aids Gamble

Guessing contest was opened by Jack Gamble, Regent Theatre, Norwalk, Conn. in connection with "Too Hot to Handle." On display in front of theatre was 300-pound cake of ice, object was for contestants to guess the number of cubes which could be cut from the cake. Samples of size of cubes were also on display; guest tickets went to winners.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Selette Dresses Front

For "All Quiet on the Western Front" at the Albany Theatre, Albany, N. Y., Eddie Selette dressed his marquee with flags of all nations. Large display on sidewalk included sand bags, machine guns, rifles, bullets, shells, etc. Lad in German uniform was stationed on guard out front and helmets, gas masks, canteens and cartridge belts were suspended from boxoffice.

Size, 165 lines on three columns.

(2) One of the latest poster type displays from Charley Pincus for "Huckleberry Finn" at the Centre, Salt Lake City, illustrates handling of the two-column "deeps" Charley favors for the day ahead of opening announcement. Size, 170 lines on two columns.

(3 & 5) The hand-drawn art head treatment with reverse copy panel that distinguishes newspaper advertising of the Famous Players-Canadian Toronto first runs is here adapted by Ad Head Jim Nairn and Artist Jack Barker for "Son of Frankenstein" at the Imperial. Similar procedure was used to announce fourth-week holdover at the Uptown for "Snow White".

(4) The four one-column, 15-line, hand-drawn teasers here reproduced are of a series used by Ray Bell in the Washington, D. C., papers to acquaint readers with what "Pygmalion" meant and what the picture was all about in advance of the date at Loew's.

(6) Benday backgrounds were used in this two-column on 110 lines to sell "Four Girls in White" at the Midwest, Oklahoma City, as lighter entertainment rather than heavy drama, with cuts of the smiling girls to carry through.

(7) Straight type ad, tied together by the theatre reverse slug atop and parking slug below, was found effective by Harry Brown, Jr., district supervisor, to announce opening of the Mt. Union, Alliance, Ohio. Size, 140 lines on two columns.

(8) Including air jargon copy in outline lettering for holdover, Manager B. D. Cockrill and Artist Warren Thomas incorporated halftones of stars and drawing of speeding plane to call attention to title in black for "Men With Wings" at the Denham, Denver. Size, 100 lines on two columns.

U.S. Offers New Service to Survey Foreign Markets

The United States Government at Washington this week announced a new service to all American exporters, including motion picture film and equipment, for surveying, without charge, any foreign market desired. Through its 34 foreign offices and the 262 American consulates throughout the world, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, will conduct individual foreign market trade surveys for American exporters.

"These surveys may result in positive or negative action by the field officer in behalf of the exporter," it was said. "If, after surveying the market, there is found to be a possibility for the sale of the exporter's product, the U. S. foreign field officer may furnish the names of one or more potential distributors who have expressed an interest in the line. At the same time, he will ask these distributors to write direct to the American firm," it was stated.

"Obviously, in order to perform this service adequately, the field officer must have certain information about the American firm and its products," continued the Department. "A form has been developed for this purpose and is available at all of the Bureau's district and cooperative offices. It requests, in addition to the name and address of the exporter, a statement as to his method of operation (either as a manufacturing exporter, export commission house or combination export manager); catalogues should be provided where available, otherwise descriptive literature of the product; the countries to be covered in the survey and the type of foreign representation desired (manufacturers' sales agent, importing wholesaler, commission merchant, or importing retailer) are to be specified; the selling terms of the exporter, including prices (if possible quoted c.i.f. foreign port), discounts (special, trade and cash), methods of payment desired (by L/C or draft drawn documents against payment or acceptance), agent's commission and allowances for advertising, travel, etc., are asked for; the previous interest of the exporter in the territory is necessary for the field officer to do a good job and not cross wires; finally, general information is requested so that the potential distributor may know something about the American firm, the year established, paid up capital, length of time engaged in export trade, percentage or total production exported, financial references, cable address and codes used.

"With this information, furnished preferably through the nearest district or cooperative office, the field officer is prepared to make a thorough and expeditious survey of the market for the exporter's product in the territories specified. If, after noting the information desired, the exporter wishes to write to the field officer directly, that is, of course, his choice. The district and cooperative offices, however, will gladly furnish him with an 'Application for Assistance in Securing a Foreign Market Trade Survey' and forward it immediately through Washington to the appropriate field officer," according to the Commerce Department.

Cut Philadelphia Prices

Three first-run Warner Brothers houses in the downtown Philadelphia section will cut their top prices of 68 cents to 57 cents on February 24th. The theatres affected are the Aldine, Stanley and Boyd. The Fox will stay at the 68 cent level but will use stage shows.

Dismissal Upheld in Paramount Complaint

The dismissal by Salvatore A. Cotillo, New York supreme court justice, of a complaint of Robert S. Levy, a bondholder of Paramount-Publix Corporation, which had attacked transaction of officers of Paramount, Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., and certain banks, was unanimously affirmed this week by the appellate division of the New York supreme court.

Paramount-Publix, Chase National Bank of the City of New York, as trustee of 5½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds of Paramount, eight other banks and 23 officers and individuals had been named defendants in the suit, which sought to remove the Chase Bank as trustee, and charged misconduct between Paramount-Publix officers and the bank. In addition, the complaint asserted that CBS had illegally acquired from Paramount the 50 per cent stock interest which Paramount had in CBS, and had demanded return of the stock.

$2,000,000 Plagiarism Suit on Songs Starts

The trial of the suit of Ira B. Arnstein for $2,000,000 damages, an injunction and an accounting against Warner Brothers Pictures Company, Inc.; American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; National Broadcasting Corporation, Columbia Broadcasting System and a number of individuals and music publishing houses, started Monday in the United States district court in New York with Federal Judge Edward A. Conger presiding. The complaint charges plagiarism of some 50 songs allegedly composed by Mr. Arnstein in songs written, published and broadcast by the defendants.

File Acoustic Briefs

Plaintiff's briefs in the Wilmington, Del., patent infringement suit brought by British Acoustic Films against Radio Corporation of America and Electrical Research Products, Inc., were served upon defense attorneys this week. Final briefs will not be completed before April 5th, with arguments set for April 7th before Federal Judge John P. Nields. The action involves two patents covering improved film feed mechanisms through sound head projectors.

MGM Suit Dismissed

Charles B. McLaughlin, New York supreme court justice, this week dismissed for failure to prosecute a plagiarism suit brought by Robert Brister and Harry T. Bliven against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation and MGM Distributing Corporation. The plaintiffs had charged the plagiarism of the title of their play, "Penthouse," in a film of the same name.

File Reorganization Plan

A proposed plan of reorganization was filed this week in the U. S. district court in New York by the French Motion Picture Company, Inc., which provides for payment of 15 per cent to general creditors on their claims filed and allowed. The plan also provides for full payment of wage claims and taxes, and for the ratification of all executory contracts.

IN NEWSREELS

All the newsreels, with the exception of Movietone News, made up specials on the election of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli as Pope. Movietone had already designated Cardinal Pacelli as the leading candidate and did not feel that a special was necessary. (For further details see page 26.)

Order Suit Testimony

William D. Shapiro, vice-president of Bobby Breen Productions, Inc., this week was ordered by Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, to testify before trial in a suit brought by Israel, Harry and Larry Abelson, doing business as L. Abelson and Sons, which sought $22,798 from Bobby Breen Productions. The plaintiffs, clothiers, claimed breach of a contract licensing the use of the name and photograph of Bobby Breen.

Seek Testimony Before Trial

Application was made this week to the New York supreme court for an order directing W. G. Van Schmus, president, and Fred A. Cruise, manager of Radio City Music Hall Corporation, to testify before trial. Lillian L. Davidson, plaintiff in a $50,000 suit for alleged injuries, claims that she was hurt by spectators on April 1, 1937.

Boris Demitroff, a wrestler, has filed suit in New York supreme court for $25,000 against Universal Pictures Company, Inc., claiming he received an infection in his neck caused by a hanging scene staged by the company.

OBITUARIES

Alfred S. Krellberg Dies, Motion Picture Attorney

Alfred S. Krellberg, member of the law firm of Krellberg and Fitzsimmons, who specialized in motion picture law and as a tax consultant, died March 5th at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York. He was 36.

He was a graduate of Columbia Law School and a member of the American Bar Association, Tammany Central Association and the Grand Street Boys Association. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krellberg; a brother, Sherman S. Krellberg, president of Amusement Securities Corporation and Principal Film Exchange, and two sisters, Mary J. and Florence Krellberg.

Herbert Mundin Dies in Crash

Herbert Mundin, British film comedian, who has been in Hollywood since 1931, died March 4th of a fracture of the skull suffered in an automobile accident at Van Nuys, near Hollywood.

Mr. Mundin appeared in more than 100 films, outstanding of which were his characterizations in "Cavalcade" and "Mutiny on the Bounty." After the World War he served in the British Navy on a mine sweeper. Mr. Mundin obtained a job with a London stage company, later joining "Charlot's Revue" in New York in 1931 and the same year went to Hollywood. His more recent films include "Robin Hood," "Invisible Enemy" and "Lord Jeff."

David Warner

David Warner, the only Warner Brother not a member of the motion picture firm, died Tuesday night in Boston, aged 45. Mr. Warner had been an invalid for many, many years, from sleeping sickness, which he is understood to have contracted during his World War career. He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Rodney Upright of Cleveland, and by three sisters, Mrs. Harry Charnas, Mrs. Lewis Halper and Mrs. David Robbins.

M. H. P. Hoffman, Jr.

M. H. Paul Hoffman, Jr., 29, son of M. H. Hoffman, now associate producer at Republic, died March 2nd at his home in Hollywood.

Henry W. Lewis

Henry W. Lewis, censor contact for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in the Pennsylvania territory, died Saturday in Baltimore, aged 63. Mr. Lewis was on the original Pennsylvania censor board in 1915, was chief censor for several years; was branch manager in Philadelphia for the Pathe Company; then joined MGM. He is survived by his widow and daughter.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

Following the title is information regarding the classification of the subject matter of the feature. A comedy is denoted by the abbreviation Com.; Melodrama by Mel.; Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel.; Musical by Mus.; Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com.; Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parentheses after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

LITTLE FILM, BIG ISSUE

FOR a long time the projectionists unions have been viewing with interest the rise of the 16 mm. motion picture, born as an amateur device, growing up into a servant of business and more recently making tentative invasions of the entertainment field.

Foolproof mechanisms and non-inflammable film have made the 16 mm. projector neither more demanding of operating skill nor more dangerous than a parlor phonograph.

Sixteen millimeter roadshows are serving little audiences in the lodge halls and schoolhouses of the remote hinterlands and now and again 16 millimeter interludes of locally made pictures have been appearing on the screens of established theatres.

It is therefore with something of the nature of the inevitable that the issue of special manpower and union operations of 16 mm. projectors has arisen in connection with the many projected installations of continuous, automatically controlled, picture display machines among the exhibits of the New York World's Fair. Reports on the status of the movement appear in the news pages of this issue. Meanwhile the significances concerned and potential influences upon future motion picture development in lesser communities make the subject of wider import than the debates on the big show lot on Flushing meadows.

"HOWEVER BURNING"

IT was to be expected that when the Institute of Human Relations up at Yale should get around to making some findings on this sometimes human race there would be remarks and references to the screen.

The other day three years of effort under the attentions of Dr. Mark Arthur May came to flower with the publication by Yale University Press of a volume entitled "Frustration and Aggression." It seeks to explain phases of conduct on the notion that persons thwarted in natural desires erupt somewhere, somehow.

Some of the conclusions convey that Democracy, Fascism and Communism, as now constituted, contain so many frustrations as to invite revolt. Some analytical passages observe that the frustrated German and Italian tend to blame and hate foreigners, the Russian finds scapegoat "wreckers," while the Americans tend to blame themselves, with a consequence of bitter competitions, and escape in ephemeral literature and the movies.

Yale, so it seems, finds the film the American way.

Of a certain relevancy is the comment of the monthly bulletin of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, issued this week, in the course of which is recorded:

"We are not asking that entertainment pictures be used to crusade for any pet causes, however burning or worthy. Theatre audiences do not like sermons, lectures or debates. They want a good story, well told, and not a dirty story, either. We think the studios know this and will be able to solve the problem presented."

CATLESS GRIN

THE intellectually and mathematically altitudinous Mr. Albert Einstein has been busy, while the world has been going to hell in general, in seeking to find out why and in what manner the universe is so orderly. The consequence has been the almost enunciation of an amplification of the "field theory" and almost as much newspaper attention as has been given to Scarlett O'Hara.

This has led the New York Times up to smugly quoting Professor Albert N. Whitehead in his observation: "You can not have first space and then put things into it any more than you can have first a grin and then a Cheshire cat to fit onto it."

That is no problem at all. Mr. Walt Disney could do it. And Mickey Mouse is the answer to the riddle of the Universe.

THE Motion Picture Research Council in its last bulletin cited with an air of alarum a report from a British publication which says it has found that 80 to 90 per cent of British school children in a tested group have gathered from the motion picture the impression that America is a land where bad English is spoken, where there are few art museums and where speed is carried to excess. Anyway, there can be no charge of important deception.

MR. ROUBEN MAMOULIAN, director, does not think the customer is always right, insisting that film theatre audiences are phlegmatically unresponsive, so he told an audience at a gathering held by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library. "The motion picture is an elephant, treated like a poodle," he holds.

WINTER is really over down in our canyon in Radio City when the skating rink is taken out of the sunken garden on Rockefeller Plaza. But Spring does not begin, in the opinion of most of the young men on the Herald's staff, until the first Rockette is discovered on the greenery of the Music Hall roof just three hundred feet below our window.

SPEAKING of Spring, there's a bit of release date, protection, clearance and zoning trouble in the brewing trade. Officially the organized brewers put bock on tap Monday. But two weeks or more ago Budweiser bock from St. Louis appeared at some of the better tap rooms, and along with it a local brew from outside the association. Thereupon came advertising suggesting that pre-release was unseasonal, unthinkable. For further merchandising antics, paralleling some in our own industry, regard the rule against miles per hour advertising in the motor trade and how the copywriters are indicating in what little time one can get from place to place.

Product Coming Up

The Warner convention in New York this week signaled the opening of the sales conference season, annual period of product plans, promises and announcements. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, planning an elastic schedule of 44 to 52 features, will convene Monday in Chicago; Republic has announced 50 features; Twentieth Century-Fox has selected April 3rd for its opening date in Chicago; Universal will announce 43 features and 14 westerns at three regional conventions.

Advance notices are in the story starting on page 12.

Unionize 16 mm at Fair

Agreements, "not in signed contract form, but virtually ironclad, nevertheless," have been reached with executives of the New York World's Fair, according to officials of New York Local 306, motion picture projectionists' union, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees. The agreements cover the use of projectionists for standard 35 mm machines, for 16 mm machines, and especially for socalled "automatic" 16 mm projection machines, of which there are to be, purportedly, several hundred at the Fair, which opens on April 30th. The Local 306 officers point out that the agreements constitute practically a monopoly for the union; and that, furthermore, there can be no dispute about their insistence on tending "automatic" machines, as the local has jurisdiction over the Fair area, and over 16 mm projection.

Stage Shows at Fair

New York's stage producers and managers, through the League of New York Theatres, have petitioned Actors' Equity for permission to present Sunday stage shows at the usual daily rate of pay during the World's Fair. Equity has referred the matter to a committee consisting of Edward Fielding, Franklyn Fox and Reed Brown, Jr., who will report back to Equity council next Tuesday.

James F. Reilly, executive secretary of the League, contends that the double pay now demanded by Equity makes Sunday shows impractical, and that during the Fair it would make more work for the actors and help to keep shows open. If the Sunday shows were sanctioned, Monday night performances would be omitted.

Although previous efforts to obtain Sunday showings have been voted down by the Equity membership, it is felt that this is a special case, as Sunday shows are being permitted at the World's Fair. Whether or not a referendum will be held on the subject will depend upon the report made by the committee.

Financial

Net profit of $268,209 for the last quarter of 1938 was reported this week by Columbia Pictures, which also listed profits of $34,596 for the last half.

Universal Pictures reports a profit of $157,990 for the quarter ended in January.

Eastman Kodak lists profits of $17,339,408 for 1938.

Columbia Pictures and Kodak both made application this week to the Securities and Exchange Commission for new stock listings.

Dividends were declared this week by Western Electric, Famous Players Canadian Corporation and Hamilton United Theatres, both of these circuits operating in Canada.

The week's motion picture financial news appears on page 16.

Story Purchases

During the month of February, 13 producers bought a total of 55 stories and plays to round out their product for the coming season. For the second month, Universal was the largest single purchaser, while originals led all other forms acquired for the seventh successive month.

An account of the month's acquisitions will be found on page 14.

Exhibitor Troubles

Most of the problems which worry theatre operators in the United States exist also for their British colleagues. In addition they have those difficulties which arise from the operation of the quota and the possibility of an acute product shortage. But ominous warning of new troubles which would overshadow all these was sounded by Sir John Anderson in the principal address at the annual banquet of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association Tuesday evening at Grosvenor House, London. His warning was of the need for serious and wholehearted cooperation in a war emergency. He envisaged the necessity of curtailing normal business, pointed out the dangers of large assemblies of people and the need to abolish brilliant signs and appealed for adequate training of theatre staffs in firefighting methods. Edward J. Hinge, elected president of the CEA at the meeting which preceded the banquet, promised the cooperation of the organization.

At the meeting there were many references to the widening breach between the circuits and the independents. Opposition to an increased quota was voiced and allusions were made to the service charge problem. Tributes were paid to Ken Nyman, retiring president.

The new president controls one of the largest independent circuits in England and has been chairman of the Northern Branch of the CEA.

Tax Defenses

A county court decision ruling the Pennsylvania chain store tax bill, affecting theatres, unconstitutional will be contested by the state administration it was reported this week. In New York exhibitors intensified efforts to perfect defenses against possible new state tax levies certain to evolve from Governor Lehman's emergency tax drive. A bill affecting operations of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was defeated in Arkansas but the Society faces other threats in Missouri and Oklahoma.

Details of these and other legislative measures of the week are on page 40.

Withdrawal

For the first time in recorded motion picture distribution activity, RKO-Disney interests are withdrawing a successful feature, "Snow White," in order to avoid overplaying by repeat bookings and such, with the intention of returning the film to circulation later as a "new release" with all of the sales and exploitation effort that accompanied the first release.

"Snow White's" commercial life to date at box offices is detailed on page 57.

Control in France

Approved by the Cabinet, the bill for reorganization and control of the film industry in France filed last week by Jean Zay, minister of education, was sent to the French Parliament for debate this week. As described in detail in Motion Picture Herald, February 4, the bill is modeled in some respects on the regulations applied in Italy and Germany. It includes a tax on all foreign films on which the French language is dubbed and regulation of program lengths, a clause designed to eliminate double features which would operate to exclude a percentage of American pictures. French exhibitors are opposed to a section which provides for close Government supervision of box office receipts. Representatives of the foreign departments of American companies reported that safeguards included in the Franco-American reciprocal trade treaty are sufficient to bar the bill in its present form.

Bad News

Extension of the U. S. admission and other "nuisance" levies will be the only tax legislation undertaken during the current session of Congress, it was forecast Tuesday by Speaker of the House William Bankhead. The admission tax is ten per cent on tickets of 40 cents and more.

General revision of the revenue laws, he indicated, will be deferred until next year, at least, and it is not likely even that any seriout attempt will be made this session to repeal the undistributed profits tax.

IATSE Moves in Campaign for Control of All Film Workers

Finally acting on its warning of last June to eventually effect unionization of the entire industry, the IATSE, American Federation of Labor motion picture union, this week threatened to strike in theatres and exchanges of major distributors where all workers are not IATSE members.

Furthermore, the IATSE is understood to have in mind bringing "pressure to bear" on major distributors to get them to stop the delivery of films to independent theatres which employ either non-union help or workers who do not belong to the IATSE.

Broadway heard reports this week that IATSE officials had already conferred with representatives of the majors. Neither side would discuss the situation, obviously the distributors' contractual commitments to independents stand as a most important factor in any attempt by the distributors to stop the product supply of independents employing non-IATSE help. One executive described the idea as "most fantastic," and others said it was "illegal," and belittled a possibility of a national strike.

The national IATSE met in Miami in mid-winter, when its directors resolved to carry out the pledge made last summer by George Browne, IATSE president, that all film processed or produced would eventually be handled by IATSE workers, either by those now in membership or new members to be taken into the ranks.

Tangible action is now being taken on both the Miami resolution and the Browne ultimatum, IATSE's biggest and strongest theatre local, No. 306, in New York, voting Monday midnight, at Manhattan Opera House, to authorize its officers and board of directors to call a strike in the majors' exchanges and theatres in New York which are not completely manned by "306" members, and to prevent distributors from supplying film to non-organized independent theatres.

The authorization was given by 1,800 of 306's 2,000 members, and was accepted by Joseph D. Basson, president, who presided. Indications are that the national IATSE may be enlisted, which would easily result in a national strike call in all majors' theatres and exchanges, possibly bringing in IATSE's thousands of members in Hollywood's studios and laboratories.

A similar national strike by IATSE was called some few years ago when the union called out its members in theatres of major companies as a result of a jurisdictional fight in Hollywood. Balaban and Katz (Paramount) theatres in Chicago, for example, were left dark for hours.

No date for final strike action has been set by "306" nor have negotiations been arranged.

In an interview with MOTION PICTURE HERALD, George Browne, national president, last summer, said: "Anything connected with the making or showing of motion pictures is in the jurisdiction of the IATSE." . . . "The (IATSE) movement in the motion picture industry is a part of the general labor movement, and has the same significance. In order to be effective, organized labor in the motion picture industry must substantially embrace all of the industry." (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, June 11, 1938, page 10.)

Film Facts

The annual compilation of facts and statistics concerning all phases of the motion picture industry was published this week by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. In the new and enlarged edition are included general statistics on the industry including those used by the United States Census Bureau in a recent report and by the International Motion Picture Almanac; sections on the membership, structure and functions of the MPPDA, and articles on the general plan of film distribution in use in the industry and on the exhibition structure. A special feature is a map showing the location of film exchanges and the boundaries of exchange areas. The Production Code is printed in full.

FOUR MORE CONVENTIONS LINED UP; UNIVERSAL, REPUBLIC SET PROGRAMS

MGM Delegates To Meet in Chicago Next Week; Others To Follow with Product Announcements in April

Warner this week opened the 1939-40 sales convention season, holding its annual meeting in New York, where it announced 48 features, four less than this year, cutting "B's" to 12 and increasing "A's" to 36. (See page 32.)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be the second to go into annual convention, opening Monday, in Chicago, where the usual elastic program of 44 to 52 features is to be announced. Col. H. A. Cole, for Allied; E. L. Kuykendall, for MPTOA, and Harry Brandt, representing nine independent units, will address the meeting on organized exhibitor problems of the day.

Republic this week announced 50 features, including westerns, and four serials for 1939-40, five more than this year. This list will include four $750,000 features on a $1,000,000 total budget increase. This year's low-priced "Showmen's Group" will be dropped. The company Wednesday announced four regional conventions, starting April 7th.

Twentieth Century-Fox set April 3rd to 5th as the dates and Chicago as the site of its 1939-40 sales convention calling in all salesmen and bookers, besides branch managers, division managers and studio and home office executives, led by S. R. Kent, president.

Universal has decided on 43 features and 14 westerns for 1939-40 and 66 shorts. It will hold three regional sales conventions, in April—one each in Chicago, San Francisco and an undetermined eastern city. The 43 features and 14 westerns compare with the 1938-39 program of 40 features, six westerns, five feature reissues and six western reissues.

Further adding to 1939-40 product is the purchase of 55 more books and plays for filming, by 13 producers in Hollywood. (See page 14.)

The position of the large producer-distributors on 1939-'40 programs is being determined with unprecedented rapidity, as evidenced by the foregoing tangible advancements made this week by five companies, adding further to the plans for new product and policies already reported since the first definite signs of new season's activity appeared four weeks ago.

The week's new planning rounds out furmitments and convention arrangements that appeared March 11th in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, pages 12 and 13, the highlight of which was an estimation of 489 to 503 features for the new year from the 11 large companies.

MPTOA ASKS BETTER QUALITY PICTURES

Improved product is asked by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in a statement signed by E. L. Kuykendall, president.

"There is considerable room for improvement," he said, "in supplying audiences with genuine entertainment.

"We think the studios know this and will be able to solve the problem presented, and that the really fine, intelligent pictures with a wide appeal will become more frequent."

The trend toward fewer "B's" and more "A's" is growing stronger.

On Wednesday Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced that its "15th Birthday Anniversary" sales convention will be held at the Palmer House in Chicago, on Monday, running through Wednesday.

The studio, home office, sales and exploitation staffs will be present.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, will preside and announce the product for 1939-40. This announcement will be made Tuesday.

Explaining the reason for MGM's invitation to the convention extended to Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied; Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA, and Harry Brandt, for independent units, Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director for MGM, declared: "Our company regards exhibitors as its partners and we want the advice of their leaders to help us formulate our policies for next year. This is not merely a gesture of good will," he continued. "This is a factual demonstration of our policy to be 'the friendly company.' "

MGM will announce four feature reissues: "Meeting on the Bounty," from 1935; "The Champ," 1931; "Rose Marie," 1936; "San Francisco," 1936.

Banquet To Close Session

Concluding the convention there will be a 15th anniversary birthday banquet at the Palmer House to be attended by the entire 250 delegates.

Among those who will attend from the home office and studio will be Nicholas M. Schenck, William F. Rodgers, Arthur Loew, Al Lichtman, Thomas J. Connors, Edward M. Saunders Joseph Vogel, Howard Dietz, J. A. Gove, Silas F. Seadler, W. R. Ferguson, Howard Strickling, Frank Whitbeck, Barrett C. Kiesling, J. S. MacLeod, Alan Cummings, William D. Kelly, Edwin W. Aaron, Charles F. Deesen, I. Leonard Hirsch, Harold Postman, Joel Bezahler, Irving Helfont, M. L. Simons, Arthur Lacks, Herb Morgan and Charles J. Sonin.

Samuel Eckman, British manager, will also attend, as will Walter Hayner, representing Canada.

M-G-M will announce 44 to 52 features for next season. This is the same number as scheduled for the last two years.

However, in 1938-39 the company will deliver more product than it has since 1936-37. In that year 44 features were delivered, last year 45 features, while in the current season M-G-M may release 51. Only one week's release was missed, for September 23, and production schedules assure full release up to the end of May, with three more months to go on the year.

Republic, like most others, is cutting down on lower-bracket pictures, increasing those in the higher brackets.

Herbert J. Yates, on Friday announced that Republic in 1939-40 would abolish low budget pictures, disclosing in Hollywood that the new schedule would include 60 features and westerns and four serials.

"Top" pictures—four "anniversary" specials—will be budgeted at $750,000 each. Others listed were six "De luxe Jubilee Specials," "16 "Jubilee Productions," eight Roy Rogers westerns, eight Gene Autry musical westerns and eight "Three Mesquiteers" westerns.

The low priced group of this year known as the "Showmen's Group" will be eliminated entirely.

Mr. Yates declared that the decision to make pictures of higher budgets will result in more than $1,000,000 additional production cost.

Mr. Yates, in Hollywood conferring with James R. Grainger, company president, and M. J. Siegel, studio head, said: "We are taking full advantage of manpower, improved trade opinion and the public's constant demand for pictures of greater scope and magnitude. Republic will definitely compete in price, quality and star value with other companies." He viewed with aides the rough cut of "Man of Conquest," highest budgeted Republic production to date.

Mr. Grainger left for New York Wednesday by way of Dallas and St. Louis, to make arrangements for four regional meetings in Houston, April 7, 8; Chicago, 11, 12; New York, 18, 19, and San Francisco 27 and 28. Southern delegates will arrive in Houston on April 6 to attend the world premiere of "Man of Conquest" at the Majestic.

Twentieth Century-Fox To Meet March 30th

With S. R. Kent, president, and Herman Wobber, sales manager for Twentieth Century-Fox progressing with 1939-40 product conferences with Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck and Sol M. Wurtzel in Hollywood, the company's home office is completing plans for the sales convention, which now has been set for March 30th through April 1st, at the Congress Hotel, Chicago.

Attendance at the convention will be the largest in many years, led by Mr. Kent, who will speak on April 1st, and Mr. Wobber, who will preside. Others to attend include Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres; Felix A. Jenkins; William Sussman, William C. Gehring and William J. Kupper, division managers; William J. Clark, short subjects sales manager; Martin Moskowitz, Jack Sichelman, Edwin H. Collins, Jack Bloom, Clarence A. Hill, Theodore A. Shaw and Harry Mersay, from the home office sales department; also Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity; Arch Reeve, advertising manager; Rodney Bush, Christy Wilbert and Morris Kinzler will go from the advertising and publicity department. The adsales department will be represented by Lee Balsly, national manager; Edward Hollander, Jerry Novat, Don Reed and W. W. Caldwell. Paul Terry, producer of Terrytoons, and Harvey Day, his business manager will attend.

Movietone News will be represented by Truman Tally, Edmund Reek, Vyvyan Donner, Lowell Thomas, Lew Lehr and Ed Thorgersen.

Also from the home office will be Roger Ferri, editor of New Dynamo, the company's domestic house organ; I. Lincer, traffic manager; Miss H. G. Baker, censorship department, and Percy Heiliger, legal department, will also attend.

Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution; Irving A. Maas, his assistant; Leslie F. Whalen, editor of the company's foreign house organ; Clay V. Hake, managing director of Australia; Arthur Ruscica, manager of Chile, and Arthur G. Doyle, manager of Japan, will attend from the foreign department.

All of the 52 films scheduled for 1939-'40 will be made on the coast, with the exception of two Gracie Fields films to be made in England.

Mr. Kent has said that the new production budget will be set in the present studio conferences. An increase of 10 or 15 per cent over the current season's figure has been discussed.

Darryl Zanuck is planning a possible 27 or 28 for next year, the balance to be made by Sol Wurtzel. Of the current product Mr. Zanuck is down for 24 and Mr. Wurtzel for 28.

Mr. Kent and Mr. Wobber and Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, will attend Paris and London conventions in May. Also, Mr. Kent and Hutchinson will sail for Rio de Janeiro for a South American convention, which will signalize greater attention to be given to Latin America. A sales meeting will also be held in Trinidad. This will be Mr. Kent's first contact with the Latin American market.

Movietone News forces will hold meetings in conjunction with the various foreign conventions. Truman H. Talley, head of shorts and newsreel production, will attend the European sessions.

Universal Plans 43

Universal's 1939-40 schedule is definitely set at 43 features, 14 western, 60 short subjects and the newsreel, it was disclosed Monday by William A. Scully, general sales manager, on his return to New York from coast product talks. The company's own producers will contribute 40 features and Harry Edington will deliver three for Universal distribution. The short subject schedule will consist of 52 single-reel subjects, 13 two-reelers and a three-reel patriotic subject titled "March of Freedom."

Three regional sales meetings will be held toward the end of April, one in an as yet undesignated eastern city, Chicago will have one and San Francisco the third. Final arrangements, however, will be made after Mr. Scully confers with Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president. At that time it will be decided whether the meetings will be for district and branch managers only, or for the entire sales force.

The production schedule for next season is an increase of three features over this year's schedule of 40 features, the increase being contributed by Mr. Edington.

Seventeen of the 40 will be in the top-bracket "A" class, Mr. Scully said, explaining that while Universal's budget for the new season had not been set, more money will be spent on production than was expended during the current season.

McConville in Mexico

J. A. McConville, Columbia foreign manager, left New York Friday for Mexico City, where he will conduct sales conferences with the company's Central American sales representatives. These include Charles Roberts, supervisor for Latin America, and S. Kusiel, manager for Mexico.

Mr. McConville also will visit the studios of Jose Luis Bueno, who is making three Spanish language productions for Columbia, and those of Jesus Grovas, who will make four pictures for Columbia. From Mexico, McConville will go to Havana, Puerto Rico and Jamaica, returning to New York in April.

MGM CITES HEAVY "PYGMALION" GROSSES

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reports it is satisfied with the box office performances to date of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," filmed in England, "under the eye of Shaw," and being distributed here by Metro.

When the company received the first prints it admitted that the picture presented some unique problems in merchandising, but now it reports that business has ranged up to 263 per cent over normal receipts, in many spots running ahead of such large MGM grossers as "The Citadel," "A Yank at Oxford," "Boys' Town" and "Test Pilot."

In Chicago, they said, "Pygmalion" registered 150 per cent above normal; in Buffalo, 136 per cent; Minneapolis, 124 per cent; Albany, 87 per cent; Dayton, 85 per cent; San Francisco, 80 per cent; Pittsburgh, 78 per cent; Philadelphia, 76 per cent; Rochester, 70 per cent; Memphis and Harrisburg, 69 per cent. Seattle brought 263 per cent above normal.

"Pygmalion" topped "Citadel" in 31 of 32 key cities, running as much as 100 per cent ahead in Chicago and San Francisco.

"A Yank at Oxford" was topped by 225 per cent in Chicago and Seattle. "Boys' Town" was beaten by 50 per cent in Chicago, and "Test Pilot" by 60 per cent in Chicago.

Over 550,000 paid admissions have been recorded to the Shaw picture at the Astor, Broadway, where it is now in its 16th week. Records there show that only "The Big Parade," which ran almost two years, at two-a-day, drew a greater attendance in a similar period.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, announced Saturday that his company will produce "Rip Van Winkle" for 1939-1940. The film will be based on the novel by Washington Irving and will be one of the top bracket pictures on next year's schedule.

Leslie Howard in 1939-40 will star, co-direct and co-produce for RKO Radio Pictures under a deal closed this week between the studio and Walter Futter. Futter and Howard will co-produce two pictures for RKO in England. The introductory picture will be "The Man Who Lost Himself," based on a story by H. De Vere Stacpoole, and will be ready for release late in 1939.

Independents Active

Independent distributors and producers, too, report progress on 1939-40 plans. Appended to the reports that follow, of highlights from the plans to date of such companies, are also the plans of companies engaged in the importing of foreign pictures.

Warwick Pictures announces deals set for the distribution of "Manhattan Shakedown," "Special Inspector," "Murder Is News," and "Death Goes North." Syndicate exchange is handling these films in up-state New York; "Pop" Korson, in the Philadelphia and Washington territories; Monarch exchange, in Pittsburgh; and Bernie Newman, in the Denver territory.

Imperial To Have 6

Imperial Pictures, Inc., will release a series of six subjects to be made by Frank P. Donovan, in Hollywood. Mr. Donovan will shortly complete the first of these, "Moonlight and Moonshine," based upon Ozark Mountain life.

Spectrum Pictures Corporation, in New York City, have arranged with Variety Distributors to distribute "Heroes of the Marne" in this country. It is a French-made picture.

Boris Morros returned to this country from Europe with the announced intention of remaking here, "at least eight" of the 22 French pictures he viewed in Paris and to which he obtained the "re-make" rights. A major company, name of which he did not disclose, will make the films for him on the coast at a cost of about $200,000 each, Mr. Morros asserted. He may also import some of the films, for distribution here, with the addition of superimposed English titles.

Buys French Film

Frank Kassler, in New York, has obtained the American distribution rights to the French film, "The Curtain Rises." The film is scheduled for opening, soon, at the 55th Street Playhouse, New York City.

Robert Aisner, French producer, plans four films per year at the Eastern Service Studies, New York City, with American actors and English dialogue, and with the "French touch."

Hoffberg Has "Ultimatum"

J. H. Hoffberg Company, in New York, will shortly release "Ultimatum," a French made picture, with Erich Von Stroheim and Dita Parlo. The film has a World War background, and is described by Hoffberg announcements as having obtained the endorsement of the King of Belgium, and to have had successful runs in Europe.

Principal Film Exchange, in New York, has acquired the New York territorial rights to the English talking version of "The Little Flower," originally produced in French dialogue, from the Sunray Films. William Grande of Pittsburgh will distribute this picture in the Pittsburgh territory.

Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn have obtained the American rights for distribution of "Katia," produced in France and starring Danielle Darrieux. It is Miss Darrieux's first picture since her appearance in Hollywood, in Universal pictures, the announcement claims; others in the cast are John Loder, Aime Clariond, and Marcel Simon, and the picture "received the most expensive production of any film ever made in France," the announcement says.

Educational Film Exposition

La Sociedad Educine, which is affiliated with the Museo Social of Argentina, is organizing a South American exposition of educational motion pictures, to be held in Buenos Aires in May. Museo Social is a social service organization with offices in Buenos Aires.

STORY INVENTORY FOR '40 PROGRAMS INCREASED BY 55 BOOKS AND PLAYS

Universal Largest Single Purchaser, with 11 Properties Columbia Buys "Tree of Liberty"; 2 Radio Scripts Among Stories

During the past month, Hollywood studios acquired 55 more books and plays for 1939-'40 filming for their distributors' commitments to exhibitors.

For the second successive month, Universal led all other purchasers in the literary mart, buying 11 original properties. Following closely was Columbia, with a series of nine stories in the "Five Little Peppers" series, bought for Edith Fellows, and "The Tree of Liberty," Literary Guild novel by Elizabeth Page.

Two from Radio

Two radio scripts were among the acquisitions, one purchased by RKO for Jean Hersholt, and one by Republic. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer bought the only play, Rachel Crothers' "Susan and God," while Paramount, among its nine purchases, numbered O. Henry's short story "The Double Dyed Deceiver."

As in the preceding six months, originals accounted for the largest single number of all types of properties, with 11 of the 13 producers buying 33 originals, or 60 per cent of all purchases made. Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia were the only two companies which did not acquire originals, both restricting their purchases to books.

The month's acquisitions, only two behind those of January, are an indication that 1939 may well be a banner year in the buying of properties for films. January, 1938, had a total of only 35 literary acquisitions, compared to last January's 57; and February, 1938, listed 38 as against last month's 55. The trend toward social themes has made the task of the story and dramatic editors more difficult, as suitable material for screen fare becomes harder to find in the writings of well known authors and playwrights. This has intensified the efforts to maintain contact with writers, agents and publishers, and made the buying more competitive, as well as acting as an inducement to producers to stock their vaults with material now.

The Properties

The month's purchases, with all available production credits, follow:

After School Days, original by Stephen Morehouse Avery and Frank Partos, purchased by Universal for Deanna Durbin.

American School Teacher, original by George Bricker and William Dover, purchased by RKO for Bob Burns. Jack Yellen will write the screenplay and George Haight will produce.

Back to Work, original by Abel Kandel, purchased by Universal.

Big Town, radio script by Paul Schofield, purchased by Republic.

Billion Dollar Racket, original by Stuart and Dorrell McGowan, purchased by Universal.

Black Gold, original and screenplay by Huston Branch, purchased by Samuel Goldwyn (United Artists).

Born to Hang, original by George Bruce, purchased by Arcadia.

Bowery Boy, original and screenplay by Sam Fuller, purchased by Republic.

Bright Victory, original by Val Burton, purchased by Universal.

Commercial Spy, original by Hugh King and Daniel Moore, purchased by Universal.

J. C. Clemmons Retires as Jefferson Amusement Head

Joe C. Clemmons, president and founder of the Jefferson Amusement Company, which operates 71 houses in East Texas, has retired as active head of the firm. After 30 years in show business, Mr. Clemmons says he thought it was time to "slow down and look around."

Sol E. Gordon, chairman of the board of directors, becomes the new president. He and Mr. Clemmons started the Jefferson Amusement Company in 1918.

INDIANAPOLIS INDEPENDENTS START LATEST SUIT AGAINST DISTRIBUTORS

Abram Myers in New York to Confer with Attorneys on Trade Practice Draft Awaited This Weekend

Self-regulation, "divorcement," trust suits and other regulatory matters aimed at distribution-exhibition practice retained their hold on trade headlines this week.

Another group of independents added to the long list of anti-trust suits pending against majors;

The Government filed a bill of particulars in its Chicago trust suit against Balaban & Katz and distributors;

The Government indicated it will take two months to compile a bill of particulars, ordered last week, in its New York case against majors, and added it was considering substituting a new list of individual defendants replacing those named originally who are no longer active in the defendant companies;

Again the distributors' trade practice drafting committee of lawyers was expected to have the program completed by the weekend;

Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, arrived in New York to confer with the lawyers on the draft;

Ed. L. Kuykendall, president of MPTOA, again accused "some distributors" of "holding back" the program. (See column 3.)

"No hope" was seen for the theatre "divorcement" bill pending in Kansas. It had been recalled from the floor of the Senate. A similar bill was killed in the state of Washington.

Conspiracy between majors and operators of three Indianapolis neighborhood houses is charged in a suit for $180,000 triple damages filed in federal court there by Herman and Sonia Golden, of the Golden and Parker theatres, who charge that pictures were withheld from them until their box-office value was gone, while the Rivoli, Emerson and Irving, all on the same section, received films on time. Losses from this cause, the plaintiffs assert, totaled $60,000. Defendants are Charles M. Walker and Alonzo E. Walker of the Irving; Joseph Cantor of the Rivoli and Emerson, and Vitagraph, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Paramount, United Artists and Columbia.

Chicago Suits Mark Time

The Chicago suit filed by independents against B&K and majors has been postponed until late in April.

The government's suit against the same defendants has been delayed for 30 to 60 days.

The Gary Theatres Company suit against B&K also is dormant.

A bill of particulars in the Government case against B&K and majors was filed Tuesday by Government attorneys. Defense has 20 days to answer.

Perusal of the bill indicates the Government apparently has abandoned its claim that there is a uniform clearance schedule in Chicago. The bill indicates that contracts between exhibitors and distributors form whatever clearance schedule there is.

Delay in New York Action

The bill of particulars ordered of the Government last week by Federal Judge William Bondy, in the Government's New York trust suit against majors, will take two months to prepare, delaying action on the case until fall. Effort will be made to obtain stipulation from the majors on certain of the facts in order to facilitate the trial and shorten the bill.

AMOS 'N ANDY MOVE TO CBS

The radio team of Freeman Gosden and Charlie Correll, widely known as Amos 'n Andy, on April 3rd will move to the Columbia Broadcasting System, under the continued sponsorship of the Campbell Soup Company. Since 1929 the team has broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company network. In 1930 Amos 'n Andy appeared in the RKO picture "Check and Double Check" and in 1935 they appeared in "The Big Broadcast of 1936" for Paramount.

It is expected that the Government will provide as general a bill as possible and that a further fight may be expected when the bill is served. Principally, the order requires details of the reported monopoly in dividing up territory and production.

In the United Artists demand, a request for the name of every independent who was said to have been compelled to pay four or five times the rental for a film because of overbuying by others, was granted by Judge Bondy. Also a list of independent exhibitors who were "compelled to license" U.A. films on a percentage basis.

The Government disclosed Tuesday that papers were being prepared to move for the substitution of new company individual defendants for those who were named defendants in the suit but are no longer actively associated with defendant companies. The substitutions are purely technical. Roosevelt became a director of United Artists after the suit was instituted.

The Government Tuesday submitted an order to Judge Bondy for permission to examine Edward C. Raftery, United Artists secretary, and Harry J. Muller, treasurer, on March 21, before W. G. Briggs, notary public.

The distributors' trade practice drafting committee of lawers now expects to have the program completed this week. Proposals for arbitration machinery were not finally set.

A meeting between the lawyers and Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel, started Thursday in New York, to discuss arbitration principles and procedure. Colonel H. A. Cole, Allied president, was also in town but was not slated to attend the meetings.

Allied at Syracuse March 23

H. M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for RKO, is to address a meeting of the New York State Allied's Syracuse unit, in that city, on Thursday.

State officers and directors are expected to attend the organization's luncheon at the Astor hotel, in New York City, on March 29.

Will Hays on Vacation

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Mrs. Hays, are spending a week's vacation in Nassau, the Bahamas.

Kuykendall Hits Majors' Tactics

Attempts by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to have the motion picture industry regulate itself in an orderly and equitable manner have for many years been retarded by some of the majors, according to a general bulletin sent out from organization headquarters in New York this week, over the signature of its president, Ed Kuykendall. The report touched on many of the major problems confronting the industry and recent court battles, such as the Interstate-Dallas Supreme Court decision.

Lack of Cooperation Charged

The statement charged the MPTOA had been "held back by the distributors, or some of them, refusing active and affirmative cooperation on the reasonable, well considered plans and proposals we have presented from time to time," and declared that the situation had "not been helped by those who persistently demand legislation and court decrees to control our business operations.

Mr. Kuykendall continued that adoption by the industry of a fair trade practice program and arbitration would have prevented institution of lawsuits, and agitation within the industry. He noted that the industry, with the exception of the short lived NRA Code, had been for ten years without any method of adjusting complaints; declared that the proposals submitted by the MPTOA were only those which would be submitted by "every responsible exhibitor"; that the organization had warned the industry of the present threatening situation; that action now may be "too late" to save the industry from regulations "imposed upon our industry . . . for political action."

His statement dwelt upon the Interstate decision (the United States Supreme Court denying the right of the distributor to set prices of subsequent runs) and declared that, from it, came "some rather disturbing ideas," and that, if it was as drastic as some interpreters made it, "this decree of the courts is not going to help the motion picture business, nor anybody in it."

On other current problems, Mr. Kuykendall's opinions were summed up thus: On the Neely Bill—"It would completely disrupt the motion picture business, arbitrarily double film rentals to small exhibitors, and put the smaller producing companies under a severe handicap; it will do more damage to small independent theatres and country town exhibitors than any body else."

On radio competition—"it is elementary that a person cannot be at home listening to the radio and in the theatre seeing a movie at the same time . . . the real trouble appears to be the misuse of screen talent by the radio."

On radio gossip commentators—"we see no excuse whatever" (for hostile commentators).

On the trade practice program—"nothing would do the industry more good, solidify its ranks and strengthen its position more than to put into immediate effect the cancellation provisions, score charge elimination, and set up the local boards to mediate disputes."

The bulletin was entitled, "Danse Macabre," which, in its idiomatic translation, means "Dance of Death."

COLUMBIA, KODAK, UNIVERSAL SHOW PROFIT; COLUMBIA LISTS NEW STOCK

Dividends Are Declared by Western Electric, Famous Players Canadian and by Hamilton United Theatres

Profitable operations were reported this week by Columbia Pictures, Universal Pictures and Eastman Kodak Company, Kodak supplying the motion picture business with a large part of the negative and positive raw stock used in Hollywood.

Kodak and Columbia financial activities also included application to the Securties and Exchange Commission at Washington for new stock listings.

Dividends were declared by Western Electric, Famous Players Canadian and Hamilton United Theatres, the latter two operating theatre circuits in Canada.

Western Electric's directors on Tuesday voted a dividend of 25 cents per common share, payable March 31st to stock of record on March 24th.

Famous Players Canadian declared a 25-cent dividend on common stock, payable March 31st to stock of record March 21st.

Hamilton United Theatres, headquarters in Toronto, declared a dividend of $1.50 per share on the seven per cent preferred stock on account of accumulations, payable March 31st to stock of record on March 15th.

Columbia's Earnings

For the six months ended December 31, 1938, Columbia's gross income from rentals and sales of film and accessories totaled $10,379,858.75, from which was deducted a total of $6,875,238.91; of which $6,219,465.22 was amortization of production costs, $446,434.65 was the share of producers and participants, and $209,339.04 was the cost of accessories and prints. In addition, general, administrative and selling expenses in the amount of $3,420,587.10 were deducted, leaving a net operating profit of $84,032.74. Other deductions brought the net profit to $34,596.79.

The earned surplus at June 25, 1938 was $4,098,680.16. From this, $25,677.26 was deducted for additional assessment of taxes applicable to prior years. Including the new net profits, this leaves $4,107,599.69, from which was deducted $103,130.92 for dividends on the $2.75 preferred convertible stock, and $120,148.34 on the common stock (in stock), leaving an earned surplus at December 31, 1938, at $3,844,320.43.

Current assets as of December 31, last, amounted to $12,656,899 and current liabilities were $1,610,131, comparing with $12,550,123 and $2,124,439, respectively, on December 25, 1937.

Application for registration on the New York Stock Exchange of 9,644 common voting trust certificates of Columbia Pictures Corporation, and for an equal amount of Columbia common stock, both upon notice of issuance, was filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission Monday by Harry Cohn, president, and voting trustees.

Application also was filed for registration of 11,554 shares of Columbia common stock on the New York Curb Exchange, also on notice of issuance.

EUGENE ZUKOR'S PRODUCTION STARTS

Last Friday, the cameras started rolling on the Paramount lot in Hollywood, for Eugene Zukor's first production, "North of Singapore," starring Anna May Wong.

Twenty-five years ago, Eugene's father, Adolph, one of the founders of the company, made his debut as a producer, with a picture called, "The Good Little Devil," starring Mary Pickford.

Eastman Kodak

Concurrently with the issuance of its annual report for 1938, showing a consolidated net profit of $17,339,408, the Eastman Kodak Company announced Tuesday a proposal to its stockholders to offer 225,092 common shares for subscription by them on the basis of one additional share for each 10 held, the price and record date of the offering to be made known definitely by the end of the month. A registration statement for the stock offering was filed Tuesday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Frank W. Lovejoy, president of the company, said that in the five years ended December 31, 1938, the company and its wholly owned subsidiaries spent more than $57,000,000 for new plant and equipment, or more than $24,000,000 in excess of about $33,000,000 of depreciation reserves provided from earnings in that period. "The board believes," he said, " in the light of past experience, that if the company is to maintain its position in the industry, it probably will be called upon in the next five years to make capital expenditures considerably in excess of depreciation reserves which will be provided from earnings."

Current assets on December 31 were $85,690,190, compared with $89,790,230 a year ago, and current liabilities were $20,207,029, against $24,197,120. Cash was $11,893,584, against $10,189,569, and inventories $47,860,011 against $50,112,595.

The company's net sales for the 53 weeks ended December 31, 1938, were $132,766,452 compared with $136,114,878 in the 52 weeks ended December 25, 1937, Eastman's record year. The decline in the value of the currency of certain foreign countries was cited as a reason for the decline. So far this year sales show an increase over the corresponding period last year, the report said.

Universal's Profit

Universal reports a net profit of $157,990 after all charges but before providing for Federal income taxes, for the 13 weeks ended January 28, 1939. This compares with a net loss of $388,797 for the 13 weeks ended January 29, 1938. The profit for the quarter follows a net of $161,929 in the final quarter of the company's last fiscal year.

Vode-Vision Suit Against AFM Awaits Weber Reply

Vode-Vision's suit in the New York courts for an injunction against the New York Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, and Joseph Weber, the national union's president, was expected to begin next week, should Vode-Vision fail to receive a reply by Friday from Mr. Weber to its demands that he permit New York musicians to make recordings for Vode-Vision.

The demands were made following a victory won in the New York courts by Opera-on-Tour, Inc., against the AFM, in a similar case. Vode-Vision uses recorded music and live talent; its one unit conducted a tour of Pennsylvania cities in the summer of last year; but union musicians were forbidden to make any further recordings, as a consequence of the AFM's opposition.

In the Opera-on-Tour case, Kenneth O'Brien, New York supreme court justice, ruled that, whether the AFM liked that type of music or not, there was no "legitimate" labor dispute involved. Vode-Vision expects to make this ruling the basis of its legal action. It also has filed a protest with the Department of Justice, which, up to this week, has not acted.

"They are free American citizens," said Mr. Weber, on Tuesday, when asked whether he would reply to the letter from Vode Vision's proponents. "They can do whatever they like." He said the demands had been referred to the AFM attorneys.

Film, Radio, Chairmen Chosen for New York Fund

J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been chosen chairman of the motion picture section of the Greater New York Fund, which is behind a drive to raise the $10,000,000 needed by the city's health and welfare agencies.

Leaders of other sections include Marcus Heiman, president of the United Booking Office, in the entertainment section, and William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Lenox Lohr, president of the National Broadcasting Company, co-chairman of the broadcasting section.

Dutch Restrict Salesmen

A Netherlands royal decree, in effect now, and lasting till March 1, 1941, provides that no foreign enterprises nor aliens may operate independently within the country, as "commercial agents," without the authority of the Ministry of Economic Affairs. A "commercial agent" is defined as one who acts as an intermediary in agreements between a party to which he is engaged and a third party; or a person concluding an agreement with a third party for the principal. The decree does not apply to salesmen who are "in the service of" their principals and thus do not operate independently. Film salesmen are reported to be in this classification. The act is thought to be aimed at the influx of commercial "bagmen" and entrepreneurs from adjacent countries.

1938 Gross Theatre Admissions Are Estimated at $943,000,000

Motion picture theatre admissions in the U. S. for 1938 are estimated at $943,000,000, compared with $1,050,000,000 in 1937, according to an analysis completed this week by the Wall Street house of Fenner & Beane.

"Inasmuch as the bulk of seating capacity is located in heavy population centers, motion picture theatre attendance and receipts tend to follow the curve of industrial employment, although at some lag," explains Fenner & Beane, adding: "Attenance in 1938 is estimated to have totaled 4,100,000,000 admissions, compared with an all-time peak of 4,400,000,000 in 1937*. Reflecting only moderate cuts in admission prices, the decline of theatre receipts was in little greater proportion.*

"Satisfactory earnings of theatre operating subsidiaries constituted an important stabilizing element in the operations last year of the major companies. Profits of the producing divisions followed a more erratic course. Although gross revenues are tied to theatre receipts through the fact that films are distributed primarily at percentage rentals, unusually high production costs had to be amortized during the early quarters of 1938 and net profits suffered accordingly," it was said.

"Currently, theatre attendance is estimated as running from 5 to 10 per cent in excess of its level a year ago, while admission prices are substantially unchanged. In contrast to an apparent shortage of films with outstanding drawing power in the summer months of 1938, more recent releases have been credited with a significant improvement in box-office appeal. Furthermore, while policies will be found to have varied as between individual companies, production budgets for the 1938-39 season are believed to have been made up on a more conservative basis and earnings statements from nearby quarters should benefit from lower amortization schedules.

With from 35 to 50 per cent of total film rentals being secured from the export market, the course of foreign affairs is an important factor in the outlook for producing companies. Nationalistic policies have tended to contract markets abroad in recent years, with Italy and Germany having been virtually eliminated. However, returns have improved from the more important British market. The Government's suit to compel divorcement of theatre operations remains as a second point of uncertainty, although the final consequences of a successful prosecution are unlikely seriously to affect equity values. Finally, the problem of securing pictures of consistently adequate drawing power under a more businesslike control over expenses remains unsolved," said the financial house.

Gordon Production Deal Made by RKO

George Schaefer, RKO president, announced Wednesday the consummation of a two-year producing-distributing arrangement with Harry Goetz and Max Gordon whereby Max Gordon's Plays and Pictures Corporation will produce two pictures in each year, all four to be based on well known stage properties owned by Mr. Gordon.

The pictures, all to be made at RKO's coast studio, will be financed jointly.

Although RKO has not concluded a pending deal for the stage play 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois," film rights to which are owned by Mr. Gordon, it is expected this will be one of the four.

Negotiations are under way between Harold Lloyd and RKO for a deal in which the bespectacled comedian would join that company in the capacity of a producer and star. Leaving New York for the coast Tuesday night, Mr. Lloyd said that the deal may be confirmed within the week.

This week brought no closer the expected end of the deadlock between films and stage with regard to the backing of Broadway plays by motion picture money. The tentative new agreement drawn up by Sidney Fleischer, Dramatists' Guild attorney, is still being considered by J. Robert Rubin, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vice-president; Jake Wilk, Warners eastern story editor, and Luise Sillcox, executive secretary of the Guild. The lack of success of the efforts at rapprochement may lead film companies to purchase plays through deals with Broadway producers.

Prutzman Elected To Universal Board

Charles Prutzman, New York attorney, was elected a member of the board of Universal Pictures at the annual stockholders' meeting in Delaware Wednesday, filling the vacancy created by the withdrawal of Charles R. Rogers.

Mr. Prutzman also was made a vice-president and general counsel. There has been no general counsel of the company since the resignation of Williard S. McKay. The New York law firm of Chadbourne, Hunt, Jaeckel and Brown served as special counsel in the interim, and Mr. Prutzman was assigned by the firm to handle the company's legal affairs. He resigned from the law firm Wednesday to devote all his time to Universal.

Other directors, including J. Cheever Cowden, chairman of the board, and Nate J. Blumberg, president, were reelected.

Mr. Cowden said the company has operated at a profit for the last six months and that the outlook was "most encouraging," with an increasing number of major pictures the remainder of the year.

Institute Pictures To Urge Tolerance

Historical Film Institute, a non-profit sharing organization declaring itself devoted to the advancement of racial and religious tolerance through motion pictures, has started functioning in New York, at 55 West 42nd Street.

The Institute will produce its own films and for the present intends handling its own distribution, the sponsors insisting that the messages it will convey in its films will be circulated "strictly in non-theatrical channels," such as schools and colleges, WPA educational projects, discussion groups and other similar forums. Actual operations will be delayed until the completion of inquiries, now being conducted, into the best methods of procedure, and treatment of subjects.

Active in 16mm Field

Directly concerned with the project are H. Threlkeld-Edwards, director of distribution; George D. Carrington, treasurer; Walter Niebuhur, technical director, and Miss Mildred Caldor, as secretary.

Mr. Threlkeld-Edwards was formerly with the Sir Wilfred Grenfell expeditions to Labrador, and of late has been reprinting 16mm films from 35mm, all for educational and other non-theatrical purposes. He is president of Commonwealth Pictures Corporation, New York, which purchases 16mm distribution rights from the large film producers, reducing their old 35mm features and then leasing or selling to film libraries and schools. He conducts a similar business through Edwards Productions, for which he has obtained 16mm rights to "Nanook of the North" and "The Silent Enemy," among others. He made "Silent Enemy" into a series of one reelers, entitled "Chico." These are rented in sets of four for classroom use.

Mr. Niebuhur is, and will continue as a director of educational films for the Sloan Foundation in New York.

Historical Film Institute was born out of the visit to Europe last summer of Hendrik Willem Van Loon, noted writer, who, on his return to New York, told friends about some of the "startling" incidents he observed abroad in racial and religious persecutions. Mr. Van Loon's friends persuaded him to make available for filming some of his books which were considered appropriate to teach tolerance in this country. To this the writer agreed, on condition that the films resulting be circulated on a non-profit basis and that they be confined to educational and other non-theatrical fields.

Conferences followed with Walter Niebuhur and with his brother Harold who is known as a "liberal" lecturer, and Historical Film Institute resulted. Financing will be done by private, unnamed sources.

The Institute will confine its films to three reels, starting off with a story based on Van Loon's "Tolerance," which will show the development of tolerance in the U. S. from the beginnings of the country. The Institute will then return to earlier ages, from Van Loon's "Story of Mankind." All production probably will be in the east.

$4,000,000 to $250,000

With only about $250,000 left of a reputed $4,000,000 earned in his younger days as "The Kid," Jackie Coogan this week agreed to settle his long standing suit against his mother, Mrs. Lillian Bernstein, on a fifty-fifty basis, each receiving approximately $125,000. Jackie's portion will consist mostly of non-income bearing real estate, and the rights to some of his films.

New Difficulty in Coast Unionism; Guilds Progress

But for one new development, the Hollywood labor situation appears to be clearing this week, as directors and producers were readv to sign a basic agreement, and as the writers and producers began negotiations for a new contract. The one new development was an intensification of the interfactional fight among the technicians' unions.

On Monday, the officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees suspended the officers of Local 37, including Joe Carpenter, president; Lew Blix, business representative; and Ed. Heim, financial secretary. Blix was then reinstated.

Sees "Sinister Influences"

George E. Browne, international president of the IATSE, was to arrive in Hollywood this week. He charged, through his representative, Frank Strickling, that "sinister influences" were at work in the local. Mr. Strickling requested, and obtained, a police guard for records of the union. However, A. Brigham Rose, attorney for Mr. Carpenter and other officers of the union, on Tuesday obtained a Federal Court order prohibiting Mr. Browne, or his representatives, from seizing records, cash, or offices of the local.

The "IA" representatives then obtained a modification of this order, permitting them to seize the union's physical properties. Mr. Rose has now filed suit against the Farmers and Merchants' National Bank, for $80,000 in union funds which the bank has refused to release.

Mr. Rose has further declared his intentions of seeking indictments by a grand jury against International officers for "labor racketeering," and for "lobbying."

Apparently acting on Mr. Browne's thesis about "sinister influences," Congressman William Schulte, of Indiana, who has been named, upon Mr. Browne's suggestion, head of the International investigating committee, left Hollywood Tuesday evening for Washington, where, he declared, he will ask for an investigation, possibly by the Dies Committee, of the "un-Americanism rampant in Hollywood unionism."

The technicians have been fighting the "domination" of the IATSE international officers and charging that it was, in effect, a company union. The IATSE some time ago, allowed the individual unions in Hollywood power to negotiate their own agreements with the studios, after withdrawing from a basic agreement with the studios.

Plot Is Charged

This week, attorney Rose was preparing amendments to the charges filed against the IATSE last November, with the NLRB, by Local 37. These amendments declare the IATSE officers have "trumped up" the present investigation in order to "resume dictatorial control"; and that IATSE hirelings are attempting to discredit the local's officials by circulating a petition in the studios, asking that the International officers take charge.

The pact between the Screen Director's Guild and the producers awaits signing this week, after approval by both sides. The pact is the result of a threatened strike by the Guild, after it had asked, for two years, for recognition, and for certain wage and hour conditions. Upon the threat, the producers, four weeks ago, immediately recognized the Guild as the bargaining agent, and entered negotiations, which are in their final stage. The main points of dispute were wage scales and hours, and freedom of initiative for assistant directors and unit managers.

The producers committee consisted of E. J. Mannix, Darryl Zanuck, Joseph M. Schenck, and Hal Wallis. The directors' negotiating committee was headed by Frank Capra, president of the Guild.

Board Hearing Delayed

Hearings before National Labor Relations Board trial examiner James C. Batten, in Los Angeles, on charges that the producers had violated the Wagner Act by refusing to recognize the Screen Writers Guild as the sole bargaining agent, and had used coercion against the writers, was put over till March 23 by Mr. Batten, following the surprise agreement to negotiations, last week, by the producers' attorneys. The first meeting between attorneys' negotiating committees was held Friday. This week the attorneys for the Guild abandoned their insistence upon the abrogation of the contract between the producers and the Screen Playwrights, Inc., as a condition to negotiation. This contract governs present writers' working conditions. Mr. Batten, in granting the adjournment till March 23, when both sides are to report their progress toward an agreement, pointed out that the board is prepared to go to trial within 48 hours, if an impasse is reached.

In New York, major producers are expected to sign the modification of contract agreements with the Screen Actors' Guild, by April 1. The original date for such modification had been January 1; this was extended at the time by Mrs. Florence Marsten, eastern director of the guild.

In New York City, expected to be signed this weekend is the contract agreed upon by Universal pictures and the Bookkeepers, Stenographers, and Accountants Union, Local 20940. The contract covers employees of those categories in the home office and exchange. Its terms: 10 per cent increase for employees of tenure less than 10 years; 15 per cent increase for those employed for longer than 10 years; two-year contract duration; further increases in salaries of five per cent after the end of the first year; present employees who are not members of the union, do not have to join; all employees subsequently hired by Universal must join the union within one week; 37½-hour work-week, with time and one-half for overtime; vacations, and sick leaves.

Stagehands' Agreement

Also in New York, the major circuits have signed a contract with the Local 1, stagehands, which runs to January 31, 1940. This covers union members employed in "first and second class" houses. Contract terms follow, in part.

For first class houses: head carpenter, head property man, and head electrician, $85.49 for a six eight-hour-day week; head equipment man, $80.34 per week; assistants in all departments, $76.22 per week; sound man, $82.60 per week; portable board man, minimum of $82.60 week; swingmen to receive one-sixth of the wage of the men they replace; overtime at $2.57 per hour for broken time and overtime.

Sues Time for $250,000

Suit against Time, Inc., by Lou Goldberg, general manager of the Major Bowes' amateur units, started in New York supreme court on Tuesday before Justice Ferdinand Pecora. Mr. Goldberg asks $250,000 for damages, and charges that in January, 1933, he proposed to Roy E. Larsen the idea of putting "The March of Time" on the air. Mr. Goldberg said this was done in 1934, but that he was not paid.

Ferretti to England

J. J. Ferretti, vice-president of U. S. Air Conditioning International Corporation, sailed Wednesday on the SS. St. Louis for England. Mr. Ferretti will also go to South Africa on the six weeks business trip.

Silverstone to Coast, Lubitsch May Go with UA

Maurice Silverstone, operating head of United Artists, and Charles Schwartz, board member and company attorney, arrived on the coast Tuesday to confer with United Artists producers on current and next season's plans. It is also probable that important meetings of the company's stockholders will be held there in view of the suit filed two weeks ago against the company by Samuel Goldwyn, co-owner, charging U. A. with breach of contract.

It is expected that United Artists' attorneys this week will make application for the transfer of Mr. Goldwyn's contract action from New York Supreme Court to Federal District Court. If the application is granted, the company's answer to the Goldwyn complaint will not be filed before April.

Discussion and possible completion of a deal by which Ernst Lubitsch, and others, may become producers at United Artists is also expected. If the Lubitsch deal goes through, the former Paramount producer-director would make three or four pictures annually for the company.

Grand National Has Three Ready

Three pictures have been completed on the coast, and are ready for release by Grand National, Jack Skirball, the company's vice-president and production chief stated in New York, on Tuesday. He added that three more pictures will begin work, shortly.

The three completed pictures are "Exile Express," with Anna Sten; "Everything Happens to Anne," with Heather Angel; and "Six Gun Rythm." The pictures to begin production soon are: "Miracle on Main Street," for which Mr. Skirball was scheduled to leave New York for the coast on Friday; "Seven Miles From Alcatraz," with Al Christie directing; and the Max Baer production.

There will be more product, financing of which is being arranged, Mr. Skirball said. There may be three additional features for release soon, it was pointed out, if the company adjusts its differences with coast producer Franklyn Warner.

There will be a meeting in Chicago next week, at which E. W. Hammons, president, and sales aides Morris Saphier, Sol Edwards, and James Winn, who have been studying the company's national sales position, will arrange the release schedule.

Currently, there have been reductions in the home office staff, and the national sales staff. Twelve national salesmen have been dropped, and 11 home office persons, mostly of the clerical staff, including Robert Savini, formerly in charge of re-issues for Atlantic Pictures, an Educational subsidiary, which was dropped in November; William J. Neary, general auditor, and Frank Ferris, cashier. Mr. Savini will devote his entire time to his post as president of Astor Pictures Corporation. The reductions are described as due to delay in product delivery.

WARNER BROS.' PROPOSED PROGRAM OF PRODUCTIONS FOR THE SEASON 1939 AND 1940

"QUALITY IS NOT A PASSING FASHION"

The foremost thought in Warner Bros.' minds at all times is to make good pictures, to present these pictures with the strongest showmanship and merchandising possible, and to offer them on a fair "live-and-let-live" basis. This, we believe, is the type of fair practice which has given Warner Bros. their enviable position in the industry today.

The success of Warner Bros. pictures this season, their success in the new season to come — and in the seasons that will come after it — represents a good deal more than is apparent to the appraising eye. The reason for our present position lies deep beneath the surface of an edifice which 29 years of careful construction has at last brought to completion. Development was sure, the goal inevitable, because an unswerving sincerity of purpose was its foundation! That purpose — not merely to make motion pictures but to make motion pictures as fine as they can be made — has now matured to its fulfillment. This we believe is clearly apparent in the productions we have listed as an indication of the material which, allowing for the exigencies of production, we contemplate producing for 1939-40.

Yes, these are great attractions, unquestionably the greatest we have put forth in one season, but to us of Warner Bros. they are the materialization of our company's motivating thought, "Quality Is Not a Passing Fashion." Now that the quality we have built toward and planned for has been attained, it is inevitable that it will continue.

PAUL MUNI
☆ THE LIFE OF BEETHOVEN ☆

A distinguished addition to Paul Muni's memorable characterizations. The genius of the most revered figure in music . . . his defiance of Napoleon in an age when liberalism was heresy . . . the women who resented his passionate intensity and eccentric manners . . . the tragedy of deafness in his later life . . . and the solace he found in music as immortal as his own soul . . . A stirring life none but Muni could re-create!

ERROL FLYNN
☆ THE SEA HAWK ☆
with OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND

The author of 'Captain Blood' and its star! Dashing leader of Rafael Sabatini's saga of the Beggars of the Sea. The days when England's only navy was a colorful clan of adventurers who swept the Atlantic. Produced on a scale more spectacular than 'Captain Blood'!

BETTE DAVIS
☆ THE OLD MAID ☆ WITH MIRIAM HOPKINS AND HUMPHREY BOGART

The Pulitzer prize-winner and 2-year stage success. To be directed by Edmund Goulding who directed Bette Davis in her Academy Award picture, 'Dark Victory'.

JAMES CAGNEY AND GEORGE RAFT
☆ INVISIBLE STRIPES ☆

Adapted from Warden Lawes' flaming best-seller. The most powerful theme since 'Angels'! Not a prison story . . . but the tortured drama of 'after prison' . . . the invisible stripes a 'timer' wears forever. A tremendous opportunity for this dynamic new team.

BETTE DAVIS
☆ ALL THIS AND HEAVEN TOO ☆

In Production now

Biggest book-scoop in 5 years! Apace with 'Gone with the Wind' in all quarters! The soul-stirring story of the girl who became the world's most notorious name, brings another 'Victory' to the screen's greatest actress.

JOHN GARFIELD
☆ DUST BE MY DESTINY ☆

As timely as it is real. Garfield, sentenced to vagrancy in a penal workhouse, escapes to marry the girl he loves—and is forced to live a fugitive life. The amazing manner in which he wins a new trial and freedom will awaken every citizen to the needs of victims of narrow-minded 'justice'.

☆ JOHN DILLINGER, OUTLAW ☆

Protest

The newspapers' Dillinger headlines in themselves make as exciting a story as could be fictionized. But add to this the human story of an average boy sent to the penitentiary — by mistake — before he was 20 . . . and the 9-year lesson behind bars that turned him into a ruthless animal, fascinating to women but feared by friend and foe until death — and you have some idea of the impact you can expect in the show.

JAMES CAGNEY
☆ THE STORY OF JOHN PAUL JONES ☆

[illegible]

The stranger-than-fiction biography of the Scotch pirate who became the 'Father of the American Navy'! Mighty armadas, great sea battles, tender romance . . . produced on a scale in keeping with its spectacular setting. Picture Cagney as that fiery scourge of the seas whose daring conquest led America through the stormiest naval encounters of the revolutionary war!

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
☆ THE MOON AND SIXPENCE ☆
BY W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM

A story with the world for its background and the creator of 'Of Human Bondage' for its author! The most dynamic role yet brought to the screen by Robinson!

☆ THE LIFE OF KNUTE ROCKNE ☆

[illegible]

There are 80,000,000 football tickets bought every year—and every one is a herald for this show. Based on the autobiography of the immortal coach. Screen's first document of this great American, his background, his work, his rich humor, the unforgettable heritage he left. To be produced with the cooperation of Notre Dame University.

☆ THE BISHOP WHO WALKED WITH GOD ☆
BY QUENTIN REYNOLDS

European situation made this improbable

Based on the life of Martin Niemoeller, the fighting minister called the greatest enemy of the totalitarian states. Every newspaper in the country has headlined his great struggle . . . now Warners will have it screaming on celluloid!

Joined Hitler — Volunteer.

ACADEMY AWARDS

WARNER BROS.
THIS YEAR

The long list continues on the next page . . .

ERROL FLYNN
☆ THE ADVENTURES OF DON JUAN ☆

The title tells all! Expect more adventure than 'Robin Hood'. The story of the world's most famous lover will be filmed on a matchless scale by the artisans who have given you such epics as 'Robin Hood', 'Anthony Adverse' and 'Juarez'.

☆ BATTLE OF CITY HALL ☆
THE DEAD END KIDS

The 'Kids' come off the streets and reform! So picture what goes on when they take over City Hall! Here's comedy and drama — and a story to top 'Crime School' for suspense-filled action!

☆ DISRAELI ☆
CLAUDE RAINS

The 'Zola' of England. More stirring now than ever because of its up-to-the-minute theme of dictators, land grabs, persecution. A really important screen document.

☆ EPISODE ☆ with
PRISCILLA LANE AND JEFFREY LYNN

The sweethearts of 'Four Daughters' and 'Darling Daughter' are set for big things this year and this is one of them. Priscilla plays a music student and Jeff just plays — but how!

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
☆ THE STORY OF DR. EHRLICH ☆

Another 'Pasteur' . . . and another great life that triumphed over ignorance and persecution to give the world the cure for its most dread disease! Another big 'first' for Warners and another great biographical drama for the screen.

☆ WE ARE NOT ALONE ☆

Another best-seller scoop from the pen of celebrated James Hilton! We are not alone when we say this is one of the most important stories to be filmed.

Paul Muni

☆ CAREER MAN ☆
JEFFREY LYNN AND ANN SHERIDAN

A brand new entertainment angle — the first story of the U. S. Diplomatic Corps! The Spanish revolt, European intrigue, the armament race, international espionage, pack it with 1939's most original brand of screen dynamite!

JAMES CAGNEY
☆ THE WORLD MOVES ON ☆

From the pen of world-syndicated Mark Hellinger comes this stirring kaleidoscopic view of America's most dangerous days! The pre-war teens, the lush twenties, the jittery thirties all woven into a thundering cavalcade of adventure!

EDWARD G. ROBINSON
☆ BROTHER ORCHID ☆

The nation's orchids went to Colliers for this unusual magazine serial. An entirely new and different Robinson portrayal! The hilarious story of a mobster who hides out in a monastery and learns to like it.

JOHN GARFIELD
☆ FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES ☆

The success of 'Magnificent Obsession' and 'Green Light' assures the latest Lloyd C. Douglas novel instantaneous approval! Its heart-gripping theme is timed to perfection to further this great new star's ever-increasing following.

☆ FOUR WIVES ☆
A SEQUEL TO FOUR DAUGHTERS
with the same cast

The long-awaited follow-up to 'Four Daughters' written by the same author, Fannie Hurst, and filmed by the same director with the same lovable stars. The girls have become women but the same rich drama and heart-warming appeal assure it of the same universal acceptance!

☆ GIVE ME A CHILD ☆

We earnestly believe this to be one of the most human themes that it has been our privilege to offer. Two prominent stars now being selected will portray the stirring leading roles.

Father Duffy

☆ EYES OF THE ARMY ☆

Each year Warner Bros. dedicates part of its program to America's great Services and Military Institutions. 'Eyes of the Army' takes its important place besides 'Wings of the Navy', 'Submarine D-1', 'Devil Dogs' and the others.

☆ THE TANKS ARE COMING ☆

First and only film of Uncle Sam's mechanized cavalry! In keeping with Warners' authentic 'service' policy, it will be produced on the actual scenes of operations with the full cooperation of the United States Army.

☆ A SEQUEL TO BROTHER RAT ☆

And [illegible]

Same stars, same author, same setting, same director collaborate to bring in another lightning-paced picture big enough to top its predecessor!

☆ BURNING DAYLIGHT ☆
BY JACK LONDON

Unquestionably London's most gripping adventure story . . . with all the roaring action of America's fiercest era! Mighty days of the Klondike, wicked nights of the Barbary Coast live again in a magnificent red-blooded romance.

FRED MacMURRAY and PAT O'BRIEN
☆ THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH ☆ with ANN SHERIDAN, RONALD REAGAN, FRANK McHUGH and ALLEN JENKINS

You can't beat the Irish and you can't beat the heart appeal Warners have put into this one! Get set for a new high in hilarity when these harps start swinging!

☆ ON YOUR TOES ☆
WITH ZORINA AND AN IMPORTANT MALE STAR

Rodgers and Hart wrote it—N. Y. held it for 2 years—now it zings to the screen with the most sensationally publicized dancing star in years—the talk of the country, star of the legit season's musical hit, 'I Married an Angel'.

☆ THE DESERT SONG ☆

Postponed [illegible]

A mass smash on two continents, it boasts Sigmund Romberg's world-remembered music, an action-crammed story, hundreds of daredevil horsemen, the most spectacular desert scenes ever filmed! To be produced in Technicolor with a great singing star.

Elizabeth Essex

BETTE DAVIS AND ERROL FLYNN
☆ THE KNIGHT AND THE LADY ☆

Maxwell Anderson's memorable Theatre Guild production brings Bette Davis to the screen in the famous love story, with Errol Flynn as the hero who defied the world for a queen's love!

Warner Bros. Pictures Are "Bench-Made"
Because It's Fair to You!

There is no "Assembly Line" at Warner Bros. No properties this important can be "rushed through" to meet release dates. Only because we are prepared as is no other company—with our background of high-quality production, and the vast resources of our studios, the world's largest, is this policy possible. Our current program definitely demonstrates that this exclusive method—and this method solely—assures the consistent delivery of successful motion pictures for the future, as in the past.

The list goes on . .

☆ AND IT ALL CAME TRUE ☆

with

JAMES STEWART, ANN SHERIDAN and HUMPHREY BOGART

The prize-winning novel by Louis Bromfield becomes a major addition to the record number of prize novels on the Warner story list!

☆ DEAD END KIDS AT COLLEGE ☆

From 'Crime School' to college and are they a pain in the seat of higher education! Fans called their basketball game in 'Angels' one of the year's funniest episodes—so you know what to expect when they take up football . . . and everything else in sight.

☆ YOU CAN'T ESCAPE FOREVER ☆

BY THELMA STRABEL

One of the most important Cosmopolitan Magazine stories of the past 3 years. Played against a background of Paris, Cannes, Switzerland and the U. S., this is one of the most extraordinary romantic dramas on our program.

JOHN GARFIELD AND ANN SHERIDAN

☆ TWENTY THOUSAND YEARS IN SING SING ☆

'Twenty Thousand Years in Sing Sing' and twenty thousand thrills on the screen! From the pen of Warden Lewis E. Lawes! A behind-the-scenes story mighty with the clash of men, to be advertised and publicized as sensationally as it will be filmed!

☆ 4 SECRET SERVICE STORIES ☆

BY W. H. MORAN, EX-CHIEF U. S. SECRET SERVICE, WITH RONALD REAGAN

This series is building every second. Headline scoops and straight-from-the-files stories of espionage will inspire four more action-packed shows for the coming season!

WARNERS ANNOUNCE 48: 24 IN "TOP BRACKETS", 12 CLASS "A's" AND 12 "B's"

Reduction from 52 Last Year Concentrates Attention on "A" Product, First 1939-40 Sales Convention Is Told

The 1939-40 sales convention season started officially this week when Warner Brothers-First National-Vitaphone took the lead in annual session at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York. Production executives from the studio in Burbank, officials from the home office in New York, and district and branch managers from the field met to determine policy and product for the new year.

The highlight of the Monday-Tuesday meeting was the detailing of product planned for the company's exhibitor customers. Cutting its present season's program from 52 features to 48 for next year, Warners promise the biggest number of "A" pictures in its history, a total of 36, the remaining 12 to be in the "B" class.

Aiming at Single Bills

Pursuing its recently adopted policy to weaken the hold of double features, the company is aiming both its new long-film and short subject product toward single bills, and for this reason decided on the 36 "A's", 24 of them, to take budgets that will be twice the usual investment.

All 36 "A's" will be sold on percentage, from 20 to 35%. The 12 "B's" will go out on flat rentals. The shorts will be sold independently and separately from features. No deductions will be allowed for films shown on double bills, it is understood.

"Double bills force 'B' pictures," Jack L. Warner, production chief, told the delegates, "and if it were not for the deep-rooted dual bill situations in many territories, Warners would not designate any for that class."

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, announced that the company's sales have increased more than 17 per cent since January 1st, compared with the corresponding ten weeks of 1938. Mr. Sears said action will be emphasized in the new product.

The delegates were told that the first Paul Muni 1939-40 starring picture will be "The Life of Beethoven," following his portrayals of "Pasteur" and "Zola" and the forthcoming "Juarez."

There will be at least three starring vehicles for Bette Davis, three for James Cagney, three for Edward G. Robinson, three for Errol Flynn and three for John Garfield. Among the borrowed stars who will appear in Warner Bros. pictures are Zorina, George Raft, James Stewart, Fred MacMurray, Jean Arthur and Miriam Hopkins.

The Pictures

The full list of pictures announced is as follows:

The Sea Hawk, from the book by Rafael Sabatini, starring Errol Flynn with Olivia de Havilland.

The Life of Beethoven, starring Paul Muni.

The Knight and the Lady, co-starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn in a production based on the Broadway play by Maxwell Anderson dealing with the story of Queen Elizabeth.

By Staff Photographer

Gradwell Sears, sales chief, and S. Charles Einfeld, in charge of advertising and publicity.

All This and Heaven Too, from the novel by Rachel Field, starring Bette Davis with George Brent, who appear together also in "Dark Victory," shortly to be released.

The Old Maid, from Edith Wharton's story, co-starring Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, and featuring Humphrey Bogart.

Brother Orchid, starring Edward G. Robinson in Richard Connell's story of a racketeer and ex-convict.

The Moon and Sixpence, from W. Somerset Maugham's novel, starring Edward G. Robinson.

Sequel to "Four Daughters"

Four Wives, a sequel to "Four Daughters," by Fannie Hurst, bringing together again the cast of the latter picture—the Lane Sisters (Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola), Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran.

20,000 Years in Sing Sing by Warden Lewis E. Lawes, starring John Garfield, with Ann Sheridan.

The Life of Knute Rockne, the biography of the football coach.

John Dillinger, Outlaw, life story of the criminal.

Battle of City Hall, with the "Dead End Kids," Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan and Ann Sheridan.

Episode, a modern comedy featuring Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn.

On Your Toes, adapted from the Rodgers-Hart musical comedy that ran for two seasons on Broadway. Two stars will head the cast, one of them being Zorina, by arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn.

You Can't Escape Forever, from the Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Thelma Strabel; a romantic comedy with backgrounds of Paris, Cannes and Switzerland.

And It All Came True, by Louis Bromfield, with James Stewart, Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart.

Dust Be My Destiny, from the novel by Jerome Odlum, starring John Garfield.

Disraeli, a re-make. Claude Rains will be starred in the title role of the Prime Minister.

The Desert Song, from the light opera of which the book and lyrics were written by Itto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II and Frank Mandel and the music by Sigmund Romberg.

The Story of Dr. Ehrlich, starring Edward G. Robinson as the genius of medicine.

The Adventures of Don Juan, starring Errol Flynn.

Eyes of the Army, a picture produced with the co-operation of the War Department which will center around the U. S. Army's "Flying Fortresses."

We Are Not Alone, from the novel by James Hilton, author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Give Me a Child. Its main background will be the maternity ward of a metropolitan hospital.

From Douglas Novel

Forgive Us Our Trespasses, from the novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "Green Light" and "White Banners," with John Garfield.

Three Cheers for the Irish, comedy-drama with Pat O'Brien, Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan, Allen Jenkins, Frank McHugh.

"The Dead End Kids at College, in which the young "hoodlums" will go academic.

The Story of John Paul Jones, starring James Cagney in the role of the American naval hero. The story is by Clements Ripley.

Burning Daylight, from the story by Jack London.

The Bishop Who Walked With God, based on the life of the German who is now in a prison camp, the Rev. Martin Niemoeller. The author is Quentin Reynolds.

Career Man, story of the United States State Department and the Diplomatic Service, by Warren Duff. The lead will be played by Ann Sheridan and Jeffrey Lynn.

The Tanks are Coming, in which the United States Calvary—equestrian and mechanized—will be depicted.

The World Moves On, starring James Cagney in a story by Mark Hellinger—a story of America before, during and after the World War.

A Sequel, as yet untitled, to "Brother Rat," with the same cast that was seen in that picture—Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, et al.

Four Torchy Blane pictures, carrying on the adventures of that reporter.

Four Nancy Drew stories, persenting Bonita Granville and Frankie Thomas.

Four Secret Service pictures, with Ronald Reagan; with the cooperation of W. H. Moran, ex-chief of the United States Secret Service.

Besides the players already named, the list of actors and actresses to be seen in the productions includes John Payne, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Johnnie (Scat) Davis, Gloria Dickson, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Tom Kennedy, Margaret Lindsay, John Litel, Lya Lys, Barton MacLane, Henry O'Neill, Maxie Rosenbloom, James Stephenson, Rosella Towne, Marie Wilson and Maris Wrixon.

Directors include Lloyd Bacon, William Clemens, Michael Curtiz, William Bieterle, Ray Enright, Edmund Goulding, William Keighley, Anatole Litvak, Terry Morse, William McGann, Lewis Seiler and Noel Smith.

The production staff under J. L. Warner is headed by Hal B. Wallis, associate executive in charge of production.

Most Shorts in Color

More than one-half of Vitaphone's short subjects releases will be in color, Norman H. Moray, Vitaphone short subjects sales manager, and Sam Sax, Vitaphone studios production chief, told the convention Tuesday.

Eighteen two-reel productions and 68 of single reel length will comprise the total of Vitaphone releases for the coming year, a reduction from the 134 of this year.

BIOGRAPHIES GIVEN HIGH PLACE

The 18 two-reel subjects, to be released as Broadway Brevities, with eight in color, will be further grouped as follows:

Four Cavalcade of America, in color and under the personal supervision of Jack L. Warner. The titles are: "Nathan Hale," "The Father of His Country," "The Monroe Doctrine" and "Freedom of the Press."

Four All-Star Musicals, in color, with Charley Foy and Fritz Feld; one a musical with a western background, another with a sports atmosphere.

Four All-Star Comedies, in black and white.

Six black and white two-reel musicals with stellar names from stage, screen, radio and night club fields: "Ice Gaieties," "Minstrel Show," "Hollywood Doubles," one starring Hal Le Roy, a Kiddie Revue, and an All-Girl Revue.

The 68 one-reel films will be released in the following series: 26 Merrie Melodies in color, produced in the West by Leon Schlesinger, who also produces the Sixteen Looney Tunes, black-and-white cartoons with Porky Pig and Daffy Duck.

The remaining one-reelers will be released under the following series titles:

Ten "Melody Master" Bands, six Vitaphone Varieties, and ten Color Parades, including six "Mechanix Illustrated" shorts and four specialties gathered by the Vitaphone "Roaming Cameraman," both groups in natural color.

2,000 to 4,000 Feet Color Subjects

Warner Brothers plant to release in 1939-40, apart from the regular Vitaphone short product, at least 12 short features running from 2,000 to 4,000 feet in length, on the order of the historical short subjects now being released by the company, such as "Give Me Liberty," "The Declaration of Independence," and "Lincoln in the White House." These shorter features, it is believed by Warners, "mark an important stage in the gradual solution of the much discussed double feature problem."

Shorts production will be shifted to the coast at the end of this month, with Jack Warner supervising. Most of the shorts have been made at the Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn.

The studio will not be closed but will be available to outside producers. The studio employs about 200 persons.

WARNER DEBENTURES EXCHANGE BY MAY 1

May 1 was announced as the new date for depositing Warner six per cent convertible debentures, maturing on September 1, of this year, for debentures due in 1948. March 15 had been the previous deadline. The directors of the company have the power to order further extension of this time limit.

Up to Monday, the debentures registered thus for exchange totalled $19,331,000. Warners has outstanding a total of $25,827,000 in certificates of deposit and debentures.

Sam Sax, production chief of Vitaphone shorts and in charge of the Brooklyn studio, will go to England April 21st to take charge of the company's British production at Teddington studios. Jerome Jackson, who has headed production there for the past year, is negotiating a settlement of his contract and plans to sail Saturday for London.

Following Jack Warner's explanation of the pictures promoted for 1939-40, at Monday's session, Mr. Sears declared it to be "the most ambitious program in the history of the company, and the most comprehensive of all forms of screen entertainment."

Disclosing the 17 per cent increase in sales, Mr. Sears said: "This is a valuable barometer of general conditions, and I think we can anticipate a continual improvement.

"The prosperity of the motion picture industry depends on outstanding pictures," he continued, "and so far as Warner Brothers are concerned, we are looking forward to 1939-40 as one of the most successful. This optimism has its chief foundation in our optimism about the United States in particular and the civilized and sane nations of the world in general."

Continuing his report on Warner selling, Mr. Sears further disclosed that with six weeks remaining before the conclusion of the sales drive to wind up 1938-39 activity, a 25 per cent increase in collections and billings has been counted over the same period in the 1937-38 drive. Still to be delivered in the final weeks of the drive are "Oklahoma Kid," "Adventures of Jane Arden," "Blackwell's Island" and Dodge City."

Motion pictures and the public that supports them have both come of age; they have grown up together, influencing and educating each other, declared Jack Warner in his address to the delegates.

"Many of the best pictures of nine and ten years ago would be laughed off the screen if they were shown today," he continued. They used to say with great self-satisfaction that they were deliberately making pictures for 14-year-old minds. I'm afraid some of them are still doing that."

Trade practice problems and a discussion of the company's new selling plans both were subjects of the business meetings—the nature of which, however, was not disclosed from within the locked doors of the private conferences.

S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, with headquarters in California, presented the Warner Brothers exploitation plans both for product remaining on this season's commitments and for that planned for the next.

He said that with the largest advertising budget ever set up by the company, 98 per cent will be for newspaper space.

The coming film season of 1939-40 will be notable for promotional campaigns, said Mr. Einfeld. "The significant themes now being treated on the screen lend themselves to energetic promotion."

Harry Warner's Message

Mr. Einfeld read a telegram containing the convention message of Harry M. Warner, president, from the Burbank studio, in which he thanked those within the organization for their "fine work" in the past year and expressing his feeling that "an even greater year lies ahead of us."

"With no exception, we have the properties, the stars, the writers, the directors and technical staffs necessary to lead the entire industry—and that is just what we are going to do," he continued, adding: "We can take pride in the motion picture business today as never before, for it has become an international power."

Mr. Warner singled out Mr. Sears for commendation, noting that Mr. Sears "fully shares the spirit that has led my brothers and myself to build up this business."

The delegates also heard from Major Albert Warner, vice-president and treasurer; Carl Leserman, assistant general sales manager; Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres; Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian sales manager; Ben Kalmenson, western and southern sales manager; Norman H. Moray, sales manager of Vitaphone short subjects; Sam E. Morris, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; Joseph Hummel, general foreign sales manager; Jacob Wilk, story editor; Sam Sax, production chief of the Brooklyn Vitaphone studios; Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising-publicity in the east.

Others from the home office executive staff on hand were A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges; Arthur Sachson, in charge of the playdate department; H. M. Doherty, auditor of exchanges; Stanley Hatch, advertising accessories sales manager, and I. F. Dolid, assistant to Short Subject Sales Manager Moray; J. Hazen, vice-president; S. Carlisle, comptroller; R. Perkins, head of legal department; Herman Starr, vice-presidentt; H. S. Bareford, attorney.

District managers were: Ed Schnitzer, east; R. Smeltzer, central; Rud Lohrenz, midwest; Fred Jack, south; W. E. Callaway, west, and Wolfe Cohen, Canada.

"Dodge City" Premiere April 1 in Dodge City

"Dodge City," Warner Brothers' color picture, will have its premiere April 1st, in Dodge City, Kans., with elaborate ceremonies and publicity.

That day is a holiday in Dodge City. The Governor, the state legislature and the city officials had requested Warner Brothers to stage the premiere in the city. The city will be decorated in frontier-day style.

Every theatre in the city will play the picture on April 1st. There will be a nation wide radio hookup. Trains with special coaches will arrive in Dodge City, one from Hollywood carrying the film's stars and Warner executives, the other from New York carrying Warner executives and newspaper, magazine and business publication representatives. The Governor of Kansas will issue the invitations to the newspapermen, and will commission them in the state militia.

Bernhard Holds Zone Meeting for Circuit

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, presided over the regular quarterly meeting of his zone managers and home office executives on Monday and Tuesday. Those attending, who also were present at sessions of the sales convention, included: zone managers James Coston, Chicago; Nat Wolf, Cleveland; I. J. Hoffman, New Haven; Don Jacocks, Newark; Moe Silver, Albany; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; Harry Kalmine, Pittsburgh; John Payette, Washington; Herb Copelan, Atlantic City.

Home office theatre executives included: Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Leonard Schlesinger, Frank Phelps, Nat Fellman, W. C. Patterson, Abel Vigard, W. Stewart McDonald, Harry Rosenquest, Louis Kaufman, Frank Cahill, Herman Maier, Harry Goldberg and Harry Mayer.

Coincident with the Warner Brothers annual sales convention, Ralph Kinsler was named branch manager at Cincinnati and Henry Herbel was promoted to district manager at Chicago.

Mr. Kinsler's experience, all in Cincinnati, includes positions as assistant booker for Universal, booker and salesman for Fox, salesman and office manager for First National, association with RKO, district manager for Grand National.

Henry Herber, Warner San Francisco manager, named to the district managership at Chicago, succeeded Rud Lohrenz, who is expected to have charge of a larger district, with headquarters at Kansas City. Mr. Herbel was tendered a "farewell" luncheon last Friday at the Empire hotel, San Francisco, by exhibitors and exchangemen.

"BIG HELP"

For years I have read in Motion Picture Herald "What the Picture Did for Me" and I must say that it has been a big help to me. I think that every exhibitor should read it very carefully.

Enclosed you will find information on several features and short subjects that I have played. I also hope that I will be able to send you lots more in the future.

Thanks again for running this department in Motion Picture Herald.

Bell & Howell In Film Deal

The Bell and Howell Company, Chicago, has acquired 18 features, 10 of which are from Universal, and 15 short subjects for distribution through the company's Filmosound Library. The films formerly had been available through Eastman-Kodak's Kodascope Library. The switch was occasioned by the Eastman Kodak transfer of film rental activities to Bell and Howell.

The change, which becomes effective March 31st, adds to the 27 features, three serials and 55 short subjects already handled for Universal by Bell and Howell. The features are "Show Boat," "My Man Godfrey," "Imitation of Life," "Magnificent Obsession," "The Good Fairy," "Once in a Lifetime," "Diamond Jim," "His Night Out," "My Pal the King" and "Three Kids and a Queen."

The 15 short subjects include Oswald Rabbit Cartoons, Lowell Thomas Travelogues, Mentone Musicals and several comedies. Also acquired were eight independent features heretofore distributed by Kodascope. They are "Paradise Island," "Thorobred," "Murder at Midnight," "X Marks the Spot," "Drums of Jeopardy," "Fighting Thru," "Two Gun Man" and "Arizona Terror."

FCC Nears End of Air Investigation

Individuals and organizations outside of radio who have complaints against networks broadcasting as now constituted were given an opportunity this week to disclose their feelings before the Federal Communications Commission at Washington.

Speeding up its investigation of network operations, the FCC committee studying monopoly announced that beginning Tuesday—just four months to the day after the opening of the hearings—it will receive testimony from witnesses other than broadcasters, networks or transcription companies.

Seven individuals and organizations were slated to appear, having asked for time last September, when the hearings were announced. All of them say they have complaints against broadcasting in general or against either the networks or the FCC.

Leading the list of appearances was the American Civil Liberties Union, which complained of unfair treatment by broadcasters, but similar complaints are expected to be filed by representatives from John Lewis' Congress of Industrial Organization.

Others to be heard include the American Guild of Musical Artists, Norman Baker, former radio station operator; L. L. Coryell and son, one-time applicant for radio construction permit; the Independent Radio Networks Affiliates and the National Committee on Education by Radio.

As it entered upon the last of its network hearings, last week, the commission was told by Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, that legislation must be enacted providing for long-term broadcasting licenses before that branch of the radio industry can achieve financial stability.

Hearings relating to ultimate and multiple ownership of radio stations will be held by the monopoly committee of the Federal Communications Commission during the week of March 28th. Under ultimate ownership the committee will seek evidence regarding ownership of stations which has been concealed or not fully disclosed. Multiple ownership is concerned with the ownership of two or more stations by the same interests.

The resignation of Eugene O. Sykes as a member of the Federal Communications Commission was received at the White House this week. Mr. Sykes, one of the original members of the Federal Radio Commission, predecessor to the FCC, recently made known he planned to retire to go into private law practice.

New allocations, to become effective April 13th, were announced this week by the Federal Communications Commission for the radio services using the frequencies from 30,000 to 300,000 kilocycles. A feature of the allocations is the ratification of the reservation of 19 bands for television made October 13, 1937, with the provision, however, that in three of the bands, general or specific research and experimentation also may be carried on so long as such work does not result in interference to any television station.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Spring Clean-Up

Production work at this season is mainly devoted to cleaning up the odds and ends on the years' programs. Practically all studios have all the pictures announced on the 1938-39 schedule either completed or in work. The condition at MGM is typical of almost every other lot. There all pictures scheduled for release up to July 1, have been finished or will be completed shortly. Warners, 20th Century-Fox and Paramount are similarly situated. With only isolated exceptions, the six pictures started during the past week and the eleven finished will be released not later than mid-July.

Of the half dozen starters, only "Little Mother," RKO-Radio, promises to be more than stock stuff. This number will star Ginger Rogers with David Niven, Charles Coburn and Frank Albertson heading the cast. RKO-Radio started two other pictures. Lupe Velez is the top name in "Girl from Mexico," in which Leon Errol, Donald MacBride and Linda Hayes will also be seen. "G-Dog," will feature Ace, the dog seen in "Blind Alibi" and "Picardy Max," in a story that also involves Tim Holt, Virginia Weidler and Frank M. Thomas.

Paramount Starts Two

Two productions were started at Paramount. "Mr. and Mrs. Bulldog Drummond," a series picture, will again present John Howard and Heather Angel with H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive, Elizabeth Patterson and Eduardo Ciannelli. The second, "North of Singapore," will be a vehicle for Anna May Wong, J. Carol Naish, Anthony Quinn and Eric Blore.

Universal began work on "For Love or Money," in which June Lang, Robert Kent and Richard Lane will be featured.

Potentially important pictures appear with greater frequency in the completed list. The 20th Century-Fox quota of three are in the big attraction class. Heading the list is "Susannah of the Mounties," a Shirley Temple special which will feature Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood, Moroni Olsen, J. Farrell MacDonald, Martin Goodrider, Charles Irwin, Mala and a tribe of Indians. Almost equally important is "Rose of Washington Square," a biography of Al Jolson's stage career and a cavalcade of American music from the turn of the century. It will present Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Jolson, Charles Wilson, William Frawley, Hobart Cavanaugh, Moroni Olsen, E. E. Clive and Louis Prima and his orchestra. The third picture, "The Gorilla," will feature the Ritz Brothers with Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill, Anita Louise, Patsy Kelly, Edward Norris, Wally Vernon and Joseph Calleia.

"U" Completes Pair

Two productions were finished at Universal. Bing Crosby is the star of "East Side of Heaven," in which Joan Blondell, Mischa Auer, Irene Hervey, Jerome Cowan, Joe King, C. Aubrey Smith, Wade Boteler, Hooper Atchley, Lloyd Ingraham, Douglas Wood and Arthur Hoyt will also be seen. Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Joy Hodges, Eddie Quillan, Juanita Quigley and Bennie Bartlett are featured in "The Family Next Door."

Republic finished "Street of Missing Men." Charles Bickford, Guinn Williams. Tommy Ryan, Harry Carey, Nana Bryant, Mabel Todd, John Gallaudet and Ralph Graves are the principals. "Frontier Express," in which Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Raymond Hatton and Monte Blue are featured, also wound up.

LOCATION PREVIEW TREND AT PEAK

The Hollywood trend toward location previews, started last year and found productive of nationally beneficial publicity for "The Buccaneer" and other pictures, may be said to have hit a new high with announcement of two such projects in the bigger-and-better class which will keep Hollywood correspondents from wearying of the climate for the better part of a week.

Twentieth Century-Fox celebrities and members of the press are to entrain on March 28th for San Francisco where they will attend the preview of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell", first feature picture to be exhibited at the Fair, on the 29th, returning next morning.

Warner Brothers' celebrities, guests from other studios and members of the press will entrain on the evening of March 30th for Dodge City, Kansas, to attend the preview-premiere of "Dodge City" on April 1st, returning on the 3rd.

"Streets of New York" was completed at Monogram. Jackie Cooper is the star. Support includes Marjorie Reynolds, Martin Spellman, Dick Purcell, George Cleveland and Sidney Miller.

Columbia marked "Missing Daughters" off the active list. It will present Richard Arlen, Rochelle Hudson, Isabel Jewell, Marian Marsh, Lorna Gray and James Craig.

MGM finished "The Kid from Texas." Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Anthony Allan, Jessie Ralph, Buddy Ebsen and Virginia Dale are the principals.

"Sorority House" finished at RKO-Radio. Anne Shirley, James Ellison, J. M. Kerrigan, Helen Wood, Barbara Read, Adele Pearce, Doris Jordan, Margaret Armstrong, Sherrie Overton and June Storey are the players.

Paramount's contribution to the completed work is "Man About Town." Jack Benny and Dorothy Lamour are the headliners in the cast.

Biblical Pictures

Episodes, incidents and personalities which appear in the pages of the world's best selling book, the Bible, will be the subjects of many pictures scheduled for the 1939-40 production programs.

Warner Bros. have already announced plans for a series of ten single-reelers, in black and white, based on the Ten Commandments. The shorts will be predicated on the Divine Law, but will have modern significance and, other than by the way of introductory allusion, Biblical characters will not be used. Gordon Hollingshead will produce the series and different players will be seen in each subject.

Cecil B. DeMille is considering six stories for his next production and one of these, based on the Biblical character, Esther, has the inside track for early filming. Bible students know that this story concerns a Persian king, Ahasuerus, and Esther. Their story is the basis for the celebration of "Purim." The king was about to give a feast and, when his wife refused to attend, he divorced her. To find a successor, he held a contest which was something like a modern beauty parade and Esther, the most beautiful woman in Persia, and a Jewess, was the winner. Through her marriage to Ahasuerus came about the deliverance of the Hebrews from Persian domination.

Another Biblical subject will be made by Cathedral Films and Rev. James K. Friedrich. Dr. Friedrich, an Episcopalian minister, who is John T. Coyle's production associate, has a twofold purpose. His first is to produce a series of serious subjects, based on Biblical parables which he admits will not be amusing, but which he is convinced will be entertaining. The first subject will be based on the parable of the Good Samaritan, wherein Christ, in confounding the scribes who were harassing and endeavoring to trap him, pointed out to mankind who its neighbors were. Dr. Friedrich's second and more ministerial purpose is expressed in his own words, "The movie is the modern way to reach the masses."

Of more direct significance to exhibitors, however, is the fact that Dr. Friedrich's plan has been seconded by Elmer Rhoden, and that the executives of two major companies are conferring with him in regard to distribution rights.

'The Perfect Tribute'

To capitalize on the current interest in Abraham Lincoln, both as a stage and picture attraction, MGM will re-issue "The Perfect Tribute," a two-reeler produced about four years ago, which deals with an incident in the life of the Great Emancipator. The short stars the late Chic Sale in the role of Lincoln. When first shown, "The Perfect Tribute" won the commendation of many patriotic organizations inasmuch as its highlight is based on Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. The re-issue will be printed in sepia-tone.

Record Broken

In her short but busy five-year career, Jane Withers has never been tardy or absent while a picture has been in production. Jane was just as proud of her record for regularity as are other boys and girls who set up records of never missing school or being late. But the other day she became an influenza victim. Production of "Police School" had to halt temporarily. But, unlike other more temperamental or fragile stars, she was back on the job the next day, regretful that her record had been broken.

EXHIBITORS RENEW LEGISLATIVE FIGHTS

Pennsylvania State Attacks Court Ruling Chain Store Tax Is Unconstitutional

Two outstanding developments appeared this week in the battle between exhibition interests and state legislators seeking new ways to tax or restrict the industry.

The Pennsylvania state administration indicated its intention to fight a county court ruling that the chain store tax, affecting theatres, is unconstitutional.

New York exhibitors intensified their defensive maneuvers against state interference, while realizing Governor Lehman's "emergency tax" drive seriously concerns them.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers benefited by the defeat of a hostile bill in Arkansas, but faced this week new bills aimed at it in Missouri and Oklahoma.

State Files Exceptions

This week, in Pennsylvania, John Y. Scott, counsel for the state, filed exceptions to the rulings by County Judge William Hargest, in Dauphin county court, that the state chain store and theatre levy tax is unconstitutional. An appeal to the state supreme court is expected soon.

The tax was based upon a graduated scale of $1 to $500, according to the number of units in the chain operated within the state. The fight against the tax was started by American Stores, and joined by Warners three state subsidiaries, the Stanley Company of America, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Warner Brothers Theatres.

Pennsylvania's governor, Arthur H. James, who previously had intimated that no more taxes would be levied this year, took a neutral stand when asked about a new tax plan before the House, for a levy on admissions to all amusements, including theatres, amounting to one per cent on every 25 cents, or fractional part of that amount. This tax was expected to yield about $3,500,000 per year.

There are two other new bills in the Pennsylvania House: one, for 15 per cent of the prize money in Bank Night, in theatres; the other, requiring a $100 fee for Bank Night in theatres, and a $15 fee for the same game in clubs, churches, and lodges.

Theatre Owners Making Survey

The United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania is conducting a survey of taxes.

In New York, observers at the legislative session in Albany feel that theatres will escape a proposed tax of one dollar per $1,000 of assessed real estate valuations. However, abandonment of this form of taxation was expected to lead to the imposition of sales or amusement taxes.

Harry G. Kosch, attorney for New York Allied, issued a bulletin calling attention of the members to six bills under consideration, which affect theatres; and asking members to contact their representatives.

Would License Agencies

Also, before the New York legislatures are the Ostertag employment agency bill, providing for licensing of such agencies at $50 for New York City and $25 elsewhere, and making no exception for theatre circuits of more than 20 houses which book vaudeville; the Butler Bill, giving persons who claim they have been discriminated against in theatres or other places the power to file civil action; another Butler bill asserting the legality of admitting children under 16 years of age, to theatres.

The anti-ASCAP bill in Arkansas was defeated in the House on Friday. The measure, imposing prohibitory restrictions on the society, had passed the Senate.

Senator Hearne has introduced an anti-ASCAP bill in the Oklahoma legislature, and Senator Hamlin has done the same in the Missouri Senate.

North Dakota Dilemma

In North Dakota, hearings were held on Monday before Governor John Moses on an anti-ASCAP measure which had passed both houses but was declared unconstitutional by the State Attorney General. Regardless, the Governor will sign the measure. E. C. Mills, chairman of the copyright society's administrative board, was to be heard by the Governor, in opposition to the bill.

Following are some of the highlights in the state legislative situation this week:

ARKANSAS: The legislature has adjourned. Besides defeating the anti-ASCAP bill, it defeated several bills to tax chain theatres.

CONNECTICUT: The House and the Senate have rejected two-men-in-a-booth bills. This is the seventh time union pressure for this type of law has been defeated. An act, specified by title alone, the text to follow, presumably this week, has been filed, asking for "taxation of amusements." The finance committee will hear the act, at an unspecified date.

OKLAHOMA: The Attorney General's office drew up a bill asking for a board of censors, at the bequest of Representative Flanagan.

From Oklahoma also, but not from the state legislature, comes news that Congressman Wesley Disney of the First Oklahoma district intends to introduce a bill in Congress authorizing a Will Rogers stamp issue.

Divorcees' Bills Attacked

ILLINOIS: Ready is Representative William F. Gibbs' bill to bar pictures in which appear actors or actresses who have been divorced more than once. Last week, Senator Heckenkamp and Representatives Retlak and Warfield offered bills, since referred to committees, for taxes on chain stores. The bill refers only to retail stores; nevertheless, exhibitor circles fear hearings may produce amendments to include theatres.

MAINE: Hearings on a local option bill to legalize Sunday motion pictures and repeal the state's 'Blue Laws" were attended, in opposition, this week, by ministers, and by representatives of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. These same groups are also urging the legislative legal affairs committee to endorse a bill to make more stringent the existing "Blue Laws" and to increase the penalties for violation of such, from $10 to $100.

VERMONT: Towns and cities, voting for Sunday motion pictures after a recent legislative enabling action, were Springfield, Burlington, Pownal, Readsboro, Whitingham, Wilmington, Bennington, St. Albans, Brattleboro and St. Johnsbury. The vote applies also to other forms of amusement, picture shows being allowed in the towns mentioned, after 6 P. H. In all places, the vote was heavily in favor of the new practices.

In ONTARIO, the House of Commons, at Ottawa, has passed, at the first reading, a bill to establish a national film board for review and reports on Governmental films and to perform "any other duties assigned to it."

Legislators Are Attacking Games

Legislators this week attacked chance games on several fronts while in Iowa a bill recently submitted to the legislature which would legalize Bank Night had been recommended for passage and another bill to outlaw Bank Night in that state has been killed. A bill to outlaw games was introduced in Wisconsin while steps were taken to ban the games in Montana, Indianapolis and New Haven.

The Iowa Ways and Means Committee recommended passage of the bill licensing Bank Night and other chance games. As originally introduced the bill would license the games by placing a 10 cent tax on all tickets sold for chance purposes. The committee reduced the per ticket tax to five cents. The estimated revenue of $1,500,000 per year would go to old age assistance.

The police regulations committee killed the bill which would outlaw Bank Night in Iowa by recommending indefinite postponement. The proposal would have made illegal all chance games by redefining the state lottery laws.

The Wisconsin bill outlawing chance games fixes a minimum penalty of six months in jail or a $500 fine or both. The attorney general's office recently ruled that the state lottery law is confusing and pointed out that juries in several cases have refused to convict defendants prosecuted under the lottery law.

The first attempt to ban games in Montana was made this week when Edward Dussault, prosecuting attorney, filed a complaint in federal court in Missoula asking that the Fox-Missoula Theatre Corporation be restrained from conducting Bank Night or any other alleged lotteries.

Members of the Indianapolis Board of Safety have taken steps to halt Bingo in that city following a ruling by David M. Lewis, Marion county prosecutor, that the game is a form of lottery.

Samuel E. Hoyt, Connecticut State Attorney, has ordered state police to shut down on all Bingo or other "charity" games in New Haven County. The games have been flourishing despite a state supreme court decision last summer declaring them illegal. A bill is before the legislature attempting to reinstate Bingo for charitable and volunteer fire organizations only, but theatres opposed such discriminations at the Hartford hearing recently.

The Mercer County, N. Y., grand jury this week held in a presentment that there should be no police interference in the operation of Bingo games, provided that the prizes consisted of merchandise and the operators were persons of "repute and responsibility." However, Prosecutor Dunn has ordered police chiefs throughout Passaic County, N. J., to see that no more Bingo games are held in the county.

A group in Albany, N. Y., is working for a state-wide vote on gambling.

Moore To Manage Warner Houses

Byron F. Moore, general manager of Standard Theatres, Inc., in Oklahoma City since September 1st, announced his resignation on Monday, and will take charge of 24 Warner Brothers theatres in Pittsburgh. Mr. Moore had previously managed the two Strand theatres in New York's Manhattan and Brooklyn for Warner Brothers.

Fifty-eight features were made in Mexico in 1938, contrasted with the 40 which it had been thought would be the maximum due to labor troubles during the summer.

Mexico began making talking films in 1931, starting with two features.

"Mornings are SWELL!"

"Afternoons are GRAND!"

"Nights are SENSATIONAL!"

TRIPLE FEATURE BATTLE IS AVERTED IN CHICAGO

Independents' Trend Toward Use of Three Features Halted by Balaban & Katz Threat

by WILLIAM CROUCH in Chicago

A battle of triple features in Chicago theatres was averted last week when Essaness dropped their three-feature policy at the Woods theatre in the Loop and the Sheridan theatre on the north shore.

Halted by Competition Threat

For some weeks several Essaness theatres and some independents have been playing triple features from time to time. The last few weeks so many independent houses adopted the idea that Balaban and Katz started the triple policy in several of their theatres. The condition grew to such an extent that Balaban and Katz is understood to have threatened to extend the policy to all their neighborhood houses.

In the Loop the triple-feature policy at the Woods caused no great flurry of excitement after the first few days. Lack of attractive product to make up a substantial program of boxoffice value was the cause for a lack of profitable business. Attendance at the Woods picked up some with the new policy but the turnover was so slow it failed to mean anything at the boxoffice.

Price Situation Serious

Currently the Oriental with double features and vaudeville is doing well as is the B. & K. State-Lake with a choice of product over the Oriental plus eight acts of vaudeville. Both houses are operating at a 40c top price policy.

Two features and vaudeville at the Oriental are cutting into the Palace grosses heavily it is reported and also into the Chicago theatre grosses. These two houses charge a top price of 75c. Also getting 75c are the Roosevelt, United Artists and Apollo. These theatres do not have vaudeville.

Business has been off considerably in the Loop of late and the price problem is thought to be the major cause.

The United Artists theatre with its 75c top and the Roosevelt with the same scale have found it hard to compete against the theatres that charge no more for vaudeville and pictures, and in many cases not as much. Patrons who can't understand why they should pay 75c to see a feature that is no better and often not as good, when they can see both a picture and vaudeville, are becoming so numerous that the boxoffice feels the change in attitude.

Currently the theatremen are considering setting back the hour for the end of the early bird matinee change in prices. Presently the time change is one o'clock.

A number of exhibitors point out that the showing of double features in the Loop at the McVickers, three weeks after they get a first run downtown, at bargain prices and the doubling of two big pictures at the outlying neighborhood theatres shortly after they have closed in the first run Loop theatres, is the cause for poor business downtown.

SMPE Mid-West, Pacific Sections Elect Officers

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has recently elected officers of its Mid-West and Pacific coast sections. In the former section, S. A. Lukes is chairman, G. W. Baker, secretary-treasurer, J. A. Dubray, manager with term expiring December 31, 1939, and O. B. Depue, manager with term expiring December 31, 1940.

In the Pacific coast section, L. Ryder is chairman, A. F. Edouart, secretary-treasurer, C. W. Handley, manager with term expiring December 31, 1939, and W. Miller, manager with term expiring December 31, 1940.

RKO Plan Awaits Bondy's Approval Of New Directors

Confirmation of the amended plan for reorganization of RKO by Federal Judge William Bondy now awaits his approval of the 13 directors submitted to him by the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the reorganization plan. Hamilton C. Rickaby, Atlas attorney, had proposed Raymond Bill, publisher, as the member of the board representing independent interests holding RKO securities, to take the place of Ferdinand Eberstadt. The Independent Stockholders' Committee has voted favorably upon Mr. Bill.

Judge Bondy has adjourned hearings until April 11, but indications are that he will hand down his opinion on final consummation of the plan before that date, with some quarters expecting action before the end of this week.

The plan's confirmation would bring to an end reorganization proceedings which have been in progress since February, 1933. If the plan is approved as it now stands, holders of RKO debentures would receive, for every $100 principal amount of claims, one share of six per cent $100 par preferred stock, and five new shares of common stock, with the option of taking 43/100ths of a preferred share for the five shares of common.

Holders of the present common stock would receive one new share of common for every six now held, together with warrant rights to purchase new common shares for five years at the rate of half a share for every six held, at $10; or for 10 years at $15 a share. Unsecured creditors will receive 10 new common shares for every $100 principal amount of their claims.

Rockefeller Center, which has a $9,150,000 claim arising from contracts for the construction of the Center Theatre and the Music Hall, would receive 415,000 new common shares in settlement.

Trop Leaves Sherman

J. D. Trop has relinquished his vice-presidency of Harry Sherman Productions, disposing of his holdings to Mr. Sherman, and is negotiating another production deal. Mr. Trop was associate producer of the Hopalong Cassidy series of features and recent Zane Grey specials, including "Heritage of the Desert."

British Exhibitors File Protests on Increase in Quota

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

In a memorandum to the Film Council on the quota situation the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has expressed its opposition to increases in present schedules. The organization conceded that the distributors have made a genuine effort to produce quality films and lamented the complete lack of independent production.

Independent Production Sought

The memorandum insisted on the necessity for extra films produced independently and foresaw a decrease in imports as certain to follow any increase in the quota schedules. The statement hinted at the possibility of asking the Films Council to retain the present exhibitor quota of 15 per cent instead of increasing the amount this year as provided for in the Films Act.

The Films Council is reported prepared to consider a new plan for a fractional quota presented by the representatives of the documentary film producers, probably with the approval of the Kinematograph Renters' Society. The plan aims at obtaining fractional registration for films costing a fraction of the set minimum, approximately $40,000. It is believed that the plan would have the general approval of the trade.

At a meeting early this week independents within the London and Home Counties branch of the CEA agreed on the policy to be followed by the new independent subcommittee of the organization. Terms concerning non-collective booking agreements and contracts also were decided.

The committee meeting preceded the annual CEA meeting on Tuesday, details of which are on page 9.

U. S. Cooperation Gaining

Evidence of closer cooperation between American and British film interests during the coming year and a forecast of greater use of the reciprocity clauses in the Films Act were brought out in a discussion of the film situation in the House of Lords last week. Viscount Bridgeman, director of the Denham Laboratories, called attention to the decrease in English production and agreed that the English "quickie" is dead. He claimed the majority of films made were sponsored by American interests and cited the fact that eight studios have made no films for the last 12 months because of no money available from British sources.

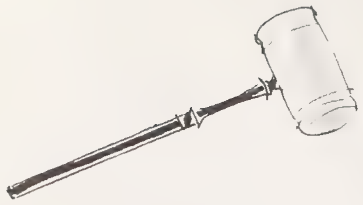
Film Exports Increase

Exports of exposed positive film for January last was 1,932,949 feet against 1,874,152 feet in 1938 and 1,963,567 feet in 1937. Values were: £12,054 ($60,270) in 1939; £11,376 ($56,880) in 1938; £10,175 ($50,875) in 1937. Values of films of all other descriptions exported in January were: £20,874 ($104,370) in 1939; £26,800 ($134,000) in 1938; £31,567 ($157,835) in 1937.

Imports of exposed film showed a considerable increase. January this year was 1,890,222 feet against 914,269 feet last year and 2,053,715 feet in 1937. Values were: £14,647 ($73,235) in 1939; £7,218 (36,090) in 1938; £15,048 ($75,240) in 1937. Footage of blank film imported in January last, was 5,822,439 feet against 7,853 feet last year and 5,885,221 feet in 1937. Values were: £21,228 ($106,140) in 1939; £19,218 ($96,090) in 1938; £24,617 (123,085) in 1937.

Imports of films of all other descriptions were valued at:£43,204 ($216,020) in 1939; £56,269 ($281,345) in 1938; £49,892 ($249,460) in 1937.

NOW IS THE SILLY SEASON WHEN YOU MUST KEEP YOUR WEATHER-EYE PEELED!



Those annual sales conventions are on. The boys are getting pepped up. The announcement books are being gilded.

Take my advice:

Demand

1–That the company delivered its past promises.

2–That the salesman's statements have a basis in fact, not merely in enthusiasm.

3–That the company is helping you making money.

4–That its stars and pictures mean something–Summer, Winter, Spring and Fall–and Summer again.

AND KEEP YOUR EAR CLOSE TO THE GROUND!

Remember: Most companies can only shout before they deliver. The sale is one thing to them, the product another.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

GROVER WHALEN started something when he buried a "time capsule" at the World's Fair grounds in New York, containing printed, written, painted and film records of this age, to be opened five thousand years hence, or thereabouts.

The other day another such "time capsule" was buried in the foundation of a New York fur store, containing such diverse items as a history of the fur industry, photographs, motion picture films, booklets, vials containing precious furs, and, finally, the left hind foot of a rabbit. The capsule is now under the subcellar of the new six-story building which Jaeckel, the furrier, is erecting at 10 East Fifty-seventh street, N. Y. C.

The internment of the cylinder was accomplished with extensive ceremonies in which Grover A. Whalen, Lily Pons, Captain William J. Pedrick, president of the Fifth Avenue Association; Hector Bolitho, British essayist and biographer; and persons prominent on the stage and screen, participated.

Mr. Whalen gave the signal for the sealing of the cylinder after the contents had all been deposited in it. The written documents had all been prepared on permanent rag paper. These included statements from Mr. Whalen, Captain Pedrick and others.

Other items in the cylinder are a model of the World's Fair trylon and perisphere, a reel from the United Artists picture, "Vogues of 1938," for which Jaeckel designed the furs; a history of furs from the Bettmann Archives; a history of the House of Jaeckel, a telegram from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, photographs and drawings of the uses of fur, photographs of stage and screen stars wearing fur coats. Mr. Bolitho's biography of King George VI., copies of Jaeckel advertisements of 1919 and 1939 showing contrasting styles, and, of course, a statement to the finders of the cylinder to tell them what it is all about.

Major H. F. Jaeckel, Jr., oldest of the sons of the firm's founder, and its executive vice-president, had charge of the ceremonies and three generations of the family were represented among the spectators.

Actual start of filming of "Gone with the Wind"—after all these years, caused Ted Emerson, advertising director for the Blank-Tri-States Circuit in Omaha to take pen in hand and write as follows:

Blow all the whistles and ring all the bells—
The hot-shot producer, David O. Selz',
After combing creation from Yap to Sahara,
Has landed a gal to play Scarlett O'Hara.

Let the tidings be broadcast by land and by sea
That young, irresistible Vivien Leigh,
Who's hardly a star, not more than a starlet,
Has been chosen to act as the cinema Scarlett.

Hitler may rant and Mussolini may rave,
The Russian may live and die needing a shave,
But what does it matter, folks, now that they've found
A girl to play Scarlett all wired for sound.

From the Royal Blue Line, self-styled "largest sight-seeing bus company in the world," comes the announcement that it will name its 500 buses after prominent contemporary figures in the world of swing, stage, screen, radio and night clubs. The "Flag-Ship Bus" of the fleet is going to be called the Benny Goodman World's Fair Express. It will be launched in front of the Hotel McAlpin, off Herald Square, New York, on April 30th and civic officials, including Mayor LaGuardia, are going to be invited to attend the christening of this, the first bus to start the World's Fair sight-seeing service.

Some of the other Royal Blue buses are going to be named after Eddie Cantor, Gracie Allen, Dick Powell, Parkyakarkus, Bing Crosby, Charlie McCarthy, Carole Lombard, Frances Langford, Orson Welles, Paul Whiteman, Hedy LaMarr, et al.

We can imagine a nice state of affairs around the bus terminal when the head bus mechanic starts bellowing orders to "Jack-up Carole Lombard," "Drain Dick Powell's crank-case," "Put a new spark-plug in Hedy LaMarr," or a new piston in Gracie Allen.

Entirely non-Hollywood, a most touching motion picture is now going the rounds of private circles, showing highlights in the life of Helen Keller, who, at age two, contracted sickness that resulted in her blindness and deafness, yet did not deter her from reaching most exceptional intellectual heights.

The film is principally a series of still pictures showing events in her remarkable career, starting shortly after her birth in 1880. The daughter of a captain in the Confederate Army during the Civil War, she is shown growing up to the dramatic day when she started to hold her fingers over the nose, mouth and throat of her teacher as she talked in order to feel and imitate the vibrations caused by the voice.

Some guest will take you bye and bye.

The international note is sounded by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in their new "Americanism" film, "Let Freedom Ring," which ends up with Nelson Eddy singing "My Country 'tis of Thee." This, of course, has the identical music as the English "God Save the King." So, the English and Canadian versions of "Let Freedom Ring" have been changed to have Mr. Eddy sing "The Star Spangled Banner," instead.

PRESS agency or no, it's still a good story. And it leads right to the broken heart of Irving Sindler—well, his heart was nearly bruised, if not actually broken.

Seems that after 17 years as property man for Goldwyn in Hollywood he was faced with a problem which has baffled the ingenuity which has won him fame as one to whom nothing is impossible.

In other words, in the production of Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights," which Goldwyn currently is making with Merle Oberon and Laurence Oliver as co-stars, Irving Sindler found no way to get his name on the film. That would spoil a record of long standing. Sindler cherished the renown as the one property man who always wangled by fair means or foul some screen credit.

In "Stella Dallas" his name blazed before the cameras on the side of a warehouse as "I. Sindler and Company, Belts and Buttons." For Goldwyn's production "The Cowboy and the Lady," Sindler concocted a bottle label which earned a closeup on the inscription "I. Sindler and Son, Imported Bay Rum."

It is even said that one of the martial banners carried by the Kublai Khan's horsemen in "Marco Polo" bore the Chinese translation of Sindler's name. He personally will neither confirm nor deny the report.

But "Wuthering Heights" offered no scope for Sindler's fetish. There have been no urban scenes where a sign could be posted. Prominent trade-marks were a thing unknown in the picture's period around 1830.

He is said to have even pondered the possibility of sky-writing over the company's 450-acre location plot in Conejo Hills. He was that desperate.

For all his urge to get the one word "Sindler" indelibly printed on the film, Irving almost passed up his lone possibility. He could have chiseled his name on a headstone in the graveyard adjoining the church in which Merle Oberon and David Niven took cinematic nuptial vows.

He shied away from the gravestone at first. He just couldn't do that, he thought. But Irving Sindler had no other choice and his name will go on a gravestone.

An RCA phone intercommunicating system installed between the cashier's booth and the manager's office of a Phoenix, Arizona, theatre defeated an attempt to pass off a counterfeit $5 bill.

Business was brisk at the Fox Phoenix the other day when a woman approached the cashier to purchase a ticket with a bill which the cashier suspected was spurious. The resulting conversation was heard through the phone system by Manager Louis B. Christ in his office.

Hurrying to the booth, Mr. Christ questioned the woman, who thereupon produced a good bill, bought her ticket and entered the theatre. The manager phoned FBI agents, but before they arrived the woman had disappeared.

The Oklahoma Kid

(Warner Brothers)

Western

This is a western, a superior western. It could be called a saga of the emergence of Oklahoma, and particularly Tulsa, from Indian territory to a commonwealth, one of the States. But then so are a lot of other westerns concerned, like this, vaguely, with historical matters. Also, like the others this depends on action and more action to make its point and the point is entertainment.

This season has seen an increase in the production of westerns on the big scale. And when the final count is tabulated at the end of the season and analyzed "The Oklahoma Kid" should rate pretty close to the top of the list. Where westerns are accepted as the better entertainment this should prove substantial box office. It, too, should draw many who ordinarily are not patrons of this type of film.

The picture stars James Cagney, a cynical Cagney in a portrayal which seems to be entirely of a piece with one's impression of the "Oklahoma Kids" of the wild west. It is an able performance and he completely dominates the picture as he has many others. Humphrey Bogart is seen in one of his typical villain roles, a role incidentally which Bogart seems to revel in for he plays it to the hilt. Donald Crisp adds dignity to any role. Here he is the understanding and honest judge in the midst of lawlessness, greed and hatred. What little romance there is to the film is capably handled by the increasingly popular Rosemary Lane.

The film has been photographed with a sepia tint and stems from the combined efforts of some four writers and Lloyd Bacon, the director. The direction is good, the screenplay typically western with a few more trimmings than the average but the real force of the production is Cagney. He makes the difference.

"The Oklahoma Kid," as he is familiarly known to the Oklahoma pioneers, is the black sheep of the "Kincaid" family. Old man "Kincaid" and another son are set on establishing a city in the territory. "Whip McCord" establishes himself with the "Kincaid" settlers and sets about controlling the growing city. Meanwhile "The Kid" holds up the "McCord" gang and takes the money from them that they stole from a stage coach driver. However, the "McCord" gang set the sheriff on his trail and a price on his head.

"The Kid," regardless, comes and goes as he pleases. When "Kincaid" tries to oust "McCord" from control of the city "McCord" frames the old man and has him convicted on a murder charge. Three of "McCord's" henchmen take the law in their own hands and hang the old man. "The Kid" hunts down each of the three and kills him. In a rousing bit of melodrama "The Kid" meets up with "McCord" in the latter's saloon and after a thrill-packed fight in which "McCord" is killed the film draws to its conclusion, save for a final meeting of "The Kid" and "Jane."

The picture was reviewed at the Strand theatre in New York. A capacity house gave evident demonstration of its approval of the Cagney performance and the film during and after the show.—Paul C. Mooney, Jr.

Midnight

(Paramount)

Facetious Comedy

The slogan, "If it's a Paramount picture, it's the best show in town," is meaningful as a recommendation for "Midnight." Subtle, provocative, the picture is a laugh fest that pops like a bunch of firecrackers from beginning to end. It's the smartest, gayest and liveliest picture Paramount has turned out in a long time, if ever before, and screen merchandise the like of which is made available to exhibitors only rarely. The production might quickly be described as caviar and champagne amusement, stimulating to appetites long accustomed to a ham and egg diet. If the uproarious preview audience reaction may be accepted as indicative of what to expect when the picture goes into general release, it behooves those who have it booked to start immediately devoting their best showmanship talents to creating a market for it. There is plenty of material with which to work.

The title is an exploitation asset. The stars and principal support players are names of established value. Claudette Colbert is seen in the best performance of her career. John Barrymore's contributions are masterful demonstrations of histrionic ability. Don Ameche proves his right to high rank as a screen actor. Their work is superb. The performances of Francis Lederer, Mary Astor, Hedda Hopper, Elaine Barrie, Rex O'Malley, Monty Wooly and Armand Kaliz may be summed up in one phrase, artistic and audience-pleasing.

Since a show is its own best showmanship, it might be well to consider that quality here. The main thing in "Midnight" is comedy, all kinds of it. It's situation comedy, character and dialogue comedy, farce, melodramatic and sympathetic comedy.

An American girl, flat broke, is stranded penniless in Paris. She brushes off a taxi driver, who would be helpful, easily. A bit of a golddigger at heart, she doesn't find much chance to dig. Then, all of a sudden, she has a fairy godfather who hands out swank apartments, expensive clothes, shiny limousines and cash lavishly, for all of which his only expectancy is that the 1939 Cinderella will charm a prince who is trying to lure his wife away from him. Complications ensue, however.

Scattered through the dialogue are many snappy speaking lines which should make lively ad copy. Likewise scattered through the action are many choice acting bits, all of which have been calculated to infect spectators with hilarity.

There's a wealth of stuff to sell in cast and story and much that has saleable value in other details. Producer Arthur Hornblow gave the property the benefit of handsome staging. Artistic settings and backgrounds make the film look the distinguished amusement it is. In directing the show, in putting together in the right ways all the things that exhibitors know are necessary, Mitchell Leisen has done a masterful job. People will go to theatres for a long time before they will again see a cleverer picturization of so smart yet appealing story as this Edwin Justus Mayer and Franz Schulz original for which Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder did the screen play.

Previewed March 8th at the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. Beginning about the third or fourth minute, the audience started to laugh. The uproar drowned the dialogue many times. It was still going on at the finish.—GUS McCARTHY.

Zenobia

(U.A.-Roach)

Hardy-Langdon Comedy

The first picture in which Harry Langdon appears with Oliver Hardy in place of Stan Laurel is, in view of the wide news mention made of the Hardy-Laurel separation, something of a "must see" on any theatregoer's list. Clearly the first thing to tell the customers about "Zenobia" is that it's that picture. There is plenty more to tell them, including the news that Billie Burke, Alice Brady, June Lang, Jean Parker, J. Farrell MacDonald and Step'n Fetchit are among the substantial personalities also present in the cast, and Hal Roach, wise in his veterancy, has taken steps to see that showmen presenting the picture boldly as the first Hardy vehicle minus Laurel will be in no danger of an audience kick-back from such billing.

A less experienced showman than Mr. Roach might have been expected, as no doubt he was, to simply substitute Mr. Langdon for Mr. Laurel, as a baseball manager substitutes a pitcher in the ninth inning, and leave him on his own. Mr. Roach proceeded differently. He made of "Zenobia" a quite different kind of comedy, pairing Messrs. Hardy and Langdon only intermittently in the action, and he furnished all those first flight supporting players with plenty of material for individual and collective entertainment. He has thus made it impossible for "Zenobia" to be directly compared with any Hardy-Laurel comedy, favorably or otherwise, and has started the Hardy-Langdon series off on a new note.

"Zenobia" derives, by way of a Corey Ford screenplay, from a short story by H. C. Bunner concerning an ailing elephant treated in an emergency by a small town doctor whom she thereafter follows about like a faithful dog. Since the doctor is in some distress at the moment by reason of his daughter's engagement to the local society leader's son, and by that ungentle lady's opposition to the match, the elephant's persistence in following him into court room, mansion and divers buildings which tumble down forthwith, embarrasses the earnest physician and father no end. Well along toward the finish, the picture turns serious while a kinky-haired pickaninny recites the Declaration of Independence in a manner that straightens out the plot kinks and brings ringing applause from the audience. Then it turns out that the elephant has been following the doctor all this while so as to have him on hand when the stork should arrive. Mother, babe, doctor and audience are doing nicely by fadeout time.

To Gordon Douglas, former "Our Gang" comedy director moved up here to direct this unique production as his first feature picture, congratulations are definitely due. The film is likewise an achievement for A. Edward Sutherland, the former director, here bowing to the industry as a producer. The period is 1870, the setting is a small town in the Old South and the humor is of the kind the whole family can appreciate.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Calif., where a general audience responded with genial laughter to the whole and with a burst of applause to the Declaration of Independence sequence.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced by Hal Roach. Distributed by United Artists. Producer, A. Edward Sutherland. Director, Gordon Douglas. Screenplay by Corey Ford. Story by Walter De Leon and Arnold Belgard, from "Zenobia's Infidelity," by H. C. Bunner. Release date, April 21, 1939. P. C. A. certificate No. 5022. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 73 minutes. Danger Island

(20th Century-Fox)

"Mr. Moto" vs. Smugglers

Deep, double dyed-in-the-wool mystery melodrama with all the necessary trimmings and hilarious comedy are the entertainment and showmanship substances of "Danger Island," a "Mr. Moto" story. The show's exploitation quality is supplemented by the name values of Peter Lorre, Jean Hersholt, Warren Hymer, Douglass Dumbrille, Leon Ames, Charles D. Brown, Paul Harvey, Amanda Duff, Robert Lowery, Eddie Marr and Harry Woods. Unquestionably the best "Mr. Moto" up to the time of this writing, the picture's entertainment value comes pretty close to matching the best "Charlie Chans" in which Warner Oland was starred. There is much for both the mystery fans and the general audience.

Headquartered in Puerto Rico, diamond smugglers are playing hob with the legitimate trade. "Mr. Moto," to whom "Twister" attaches himself, is called in to break up the ring. Up against a crowd, individual members of which do not know who is honest or dishonest, bedeviled by native superstition, "Moto" is always in a melodramatic dilemma. Meanwhile "Twister" is the source of continuing nonsensical comedy. Unable to make headway, "Moto" reverts to posing as a crook. Through this bit of theatrical mechanics, he finds evidence that leads to the brains of the gang whose identity, incidentally, is absolutely concealed until the final moment.

Previous "Mr. Motos" have proved that there is a favorable market for this series.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. Patrons of this house, who have seen so many advance showings of secondary product that they consider themselves professional critics and are not loath to express opinions, had nothing but commendatory comment for "Danger Island."—G. M.

Produced and distributed by 20th Century-Fox. John Stone associate producer. Directed by Herbert I. Leeds. Screenplay by Peter Milne. Based upon story ideas by John Reinhardt and George Bricker. Within the Law

(MGM)

Melodrama

The direct appeal of "Within the Law" is to women. Yet the production is not without values which experience has taught are of interest to men. This adaptation of Bayard Veiller's play is entertainment that seeks to influence the more sympathetic emotions. Plot construction and amplifying details make use of three standby theatrical qualities, persecution, desire for revenge and love interest, to accomplish this purpose.

Played on the stage countless times by touring troupes, professional stock companies and amateurs, it has been made as a picture thrice. Only the very young generation can be unfamiliar with the story. Yet because of its theme and the character it persecutes and heroizes, it has often been referred to as "the shop-girl's delight."

Unjustly jailed, shop girl "Mary Turner" becomes a bitter woman. Determined to revenge herself upon "Gilder," who wrecked her life, "Mary" studies law determinedly and, upon release, becomes high priestess of a criminal gang headed by "Joe Garson." Following her advice of always keeping within the law, taking advantage of its loop holes and confounding police and prosecutors by legal trickery, the gang waxes wealthy. Even though "Gilder" is hurt financially, "Mary" visions complete triumph when she marries "Richard Gilder." Jealousy, however, inspires "Garson" to attempt an outside-the-law crime in which "English Eddie" is killed and in which "Mary" finds herself and husband implicated.

"Garson," however, still loyal to "Mary," confesses his guilt, which absolves her, and when she realizes that the true path to happiness lies within the law, "Gilder," who has more than paid for the mistake he made, relents, begs the girl's forgiveness and a new life dawns for "Mary."

Previewed at the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. It was evident that the older portion of the audience was thoroughly familiar with the story and knew what was going to happen all the time. The younger segment, nevertheless, seemed to find the subject entertaining.—G. M.

The Mystery of Mr. Wong

(Monogram)

Crime Melodrama

Excitingly told, with plot complicated enough to suit the most critical followers of crime melodramas, "The Mystery of Mr. Wong" is a welcome addition to the series of pictures Monogram is making from the widely read Hugh Wiley magazine stories.

Again presenting Boris Karloff as the Chinese criminologist, the story takes him through a maze of crimes activated by the desire of a group of Chinese to recover a stolen gem, and the craving for revenge of a man whose sister was driven insane by her husband.

The clues are skillfully entangled by William Nigh, the director, and Scott Darling, screenplay writer. Exhibitors playing the previous "Mr. Wong" pictures may gauge audience reaction in advance but "The Mystery of Mr. Wong" is a more facile characterization of the Chinese detective than has been realized by millions of class magazine readers.

Love Affair

(RKO Radio)

Comedy-Drama

"Love Affair" starts out as a facile sophisticated comedy. During its unfolding, the story shifts tempo and becomes a straight love story of a woman and a man regenerated by their mutual desire to merit each other's affections. The culmination of their romance finds them facing the future together, she an invalided victim of a motor car accident and he an artist of equally uncertain future.

The picture's innate appeal is to women, and most particularly to those women who dote upon the love confession type of magazine. For marquee purposes, exhibitors playing "Love Affair" have as material of first consequence the names of Charles Boyer, polished actor whose deliveries have yet to prove ineffective and whose American pictures, the last of which was "Algiers," have won him a sizable following, and of Irene Dunne, who returns to the screen in this as a charming young woman of indefinitely identified income. It is her first picture since "Joy of Living," made by the same studio some time ago. Supporting the top pair are Maria Ouspenskaya, Lee Bowman, Astrid Allwyn and Maurice Moscovich.

Leo McCarey did a triple job on "Love Affair," producing and directing in addition to collaborating with Mildred Cram on the story. Delmer Daves and Donald Ogden Stewart wrote the deftly integrated screenplay.

Miss Dunne sings two songs, "Wishing," by B. G. DeSylva, and "Sing My Heart," by Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler, both of which have commercial possibilities.

Sailing from Europe to New York, "Michel,"

Lure of the Wasteland

(Al Lane Pictures)

Western

The industry has been making and exhibiting westerns for years. Doubtless it will continue to do so. Generally, whether expensively or economically produced, all adhere to a specific formula. Anything introduced into them in the way of apparent novelty is more or less but a face lift. In other words, it's the same thing with a bump lopped off here and a low spot pushed up there.

Anything that could have been said about any western may be said about "Lure of the Wasteland." It's an action adventure picture and no one will deny the record that a great many people like this kind of entertainment. They have certain preferences, but usually they don't care very much who is in the cast as long as the full quota of heroics, fighting, riding, loving and seeing that the villain gets his just deserts comes up on the screen. "Lure of the Wasteland" has all the props, including the cowboy songs. It is in color.

Trouble in Sundown

(RKO Radio)

Western, with Music

"Trouble in Sundown" is the third in the new series of RKO westerns starring George O'Brien, number four figure in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME poll of money making western stars. The high quality of story content, along with the sustained skill of director David Howard and producer Bert Gilroy, who have collaborated on the pictures for some time, make this latest effort the epitome of entertainment, insofar as outdoor action pictures are concerned. Added appeal is found in the complicated plot.

O'Brien, active as ever in this, is supported by Rosalind Keith, Ray Whitley, Chill Wills, Ward Bond, Cyrus W. Kendall, Howard Hickman, Monte Montague, John Dilson and Otto Yamaoka. Oliver Drake, Dorrell and Stuart McGowan, all widely experienced in out door action pictures, adapted the story of Charles F. Royal. To Drake and the McGowan brothers goes the credit for a tale excitingly told free from cliches, and graphically depicted.

"Clint," stumbling upon a bank robbery, manages to get clues which would clear the banker of complicity. Notwithstanding the fact that he is in love with the banker's daughter, his suspicions are directed toward the banker until following events open his eyes. In a scene which would do credit to various crime melodramas of extended budget, "Clint" solves the mystery.

Sergeant Madden

(MGM)

Police Melodrama

This is a story of "New York's Finest," with Wallace Beery playing the finest of the lot and Alan Curtis playing, as his son, the exception that proves the rule. The subject is a natural for exploitation in collaboration with the police of that or any other city and, although not a big picture in the sense that MGM usually employs the adjective, it has the human touch and plenty of point.

The Beery performance is up to his serious standard, humor having little part in the picture, and the Curtis portrayal of a "copper with the taste of blood in his mouth" is memorable. Laraine Day is both fair to behold and capable as the girl in the story. Tom Brown and Fay Holden are the other principals of name value.

Based on William A. Ullman's story, "A Gun in His Hand," Wells Root's screenplay is facile in a formal way. Josef von Sternberg's direction is businesslike beyond any of his earlier efforts. J. Walter Rubin's production was for substance rather than show. Resulting in a solid film.

The star enters the picture as an honest copper whose son's ambition to distinguish himself in the department prompts a too ready resort to firearms. A vengeful gangster frames the boy, and his father resigns from the force in shame after the son escapes from a train bound for Sing Sing and takes up a life of crime. In ultimate contrition the boy permits himself to be killed by police bullets in order that his father, wife and newborn son may be saved further disgrace.

Heritage of the Desert

(Paramount-Sherman)

Western

Zane Grey has written many fine outdoor action adventure stories. Harry Sherman's present day reputation is founded on his ability to produce high class outdoor action pictures. This author-producer combination is assisted considerably by the screen play writer, Norman Houston, the dialogue writer, Harrison Jacobs, the director, Lesley Selander, cameraman Russell Harlan and a capable cast, Donald Woods, Evelyn Venable, Russell Hayden, Robert Barrat, Sidney Toler, C. Henry Gordan, Willard Robertson, Paul Guilfoyle and Paul Fix.

"Heritage of the Desert" is not an ordinary western picture. Expert photography of beautiful backgrounds keys the entertainment and exploitation class. There is an appealing love story. There is plenty of melodramatic instance and event. Sometimes the film has a spiritual quality, but comedy has not been neglected. Action, suspense and surprise have been included in abundance, and all elements have been intelligently welded.

Well turned performances make the plot and its amplifications believable, understanding and entertaining.

King of Chinatown

(Paramount)

Melodrama

Modern American gangsterism and ageless Chinese customs come to grips in "King of Chinatown" and the gangster force meets with defeat. The picture is straightaway melodrama that makes use of the complete routine of ten-twenty-thirty cent theatrical properties. Comedy fulfills an important function and a love story is included, but murder, torture, disaster and sudden death are the elements relied upon to give the piece its strength.

Vivid fiction, the show pits a suave but ruthless racketeer, played by Akim Tamiroff, against Anna May Wong, nurse and daughter of a merchant (Sidney Toler), leader of the Oriental colony in an American city.

For a time it appears that Tamiroff will succeed in imposing his will upon the Chinese and their friends, but confronted with a philosophy of almost eternal patience, long suffering yet fully aware that it will triumph in the long run, he meets the fate of those who ram themselves against a stonewall.

Hardly of the caliber of entertainment that will appeal to thinking people, the production, however, has plenty of dynamic action and pointed dialogue that may cause it to appeal to those who wish only diversified entertainment.

Previewed at the Stadium theatre, Los Angeles. Patrons of this house, to whom an advance showing is an unusual treat, evidenced only casual and routine interest. However, the picture was not designed to serve in anything but sustaining capacity.—G. M.

Spain In Arms
(Film Facts, Inc.)
Propaganda Film

This 80-minute film opens with scenes of Spain before the civil war. Farming, manufacturing, works of art, and public buildings are all depicted in about the first ten minutes of the reel.

The Loyalist army is shown in its first uprisings against the government. Churches are burned, skeletons of nuns are dug up and left at the entrances of the ruined churches, the police are powerless and anti-Loyalists are executed. Meanwhile the Nationalists, under General Franco, have organized and Franco starts his march from the south, regaining control of the Alcazar, driving the Loyalist army from University city, continuing north and returning to the east to divide the Loyalist army in half. During the march many scenes of war and death are presented.

The final scenes show the Nationalists in possession of most of Spain with General Franco planning reconstruction of the country left in ruins by the retreating Loyalists. Community centers are established to feed the poor. Industry is shown as improving and exports climbing.

The National Legion of Decency classified this production separately, with this observation: "A documentary film containing propaganda for the Franco side in Spain."

The picture does not carry a Production Code seal. GEORGE SPIRES.

The March of Time (No. 8, Vol. 5)
(RKO Radio)
Background for War: the Mediterranean

Scooped from the old print of the daily headlines, the material documented in the latest release by the makers of the March of Time concerns a situation that may become the newest powder keg of world crisis. With a complete reportorial grasp of the troublesome subject, the globe trotting camera localizes the French African settlement of Tunisia, where Benito Mussolini is pictured in the role of savior to the Moslem infidels in their efforts to break away from white man domination. The real motive behind the Italian philanthropy is suggested in Mussolini's desire to gain full control of the Mediterranean and thus block Britain's path to the Suez Canal and the Indian possessions. The closing sequences are devoted to France's efforts to counteract the anti-French bias. There are glimpses of Premier Daladier's inspection of the troubled spot and the military preparations being made there in the construction of a second Maginot line. Running time, 18 minutes.

MARCH OF TIME PLAYS TO 30 MILLION—RKO

When March of Time enters on its fifth year next month, it will play to an estimated world audience of thirty million people in more than 11,000 theatres, according to RKO. This contrasts with the 400 theatres in which it opened four years ago.

Within the last year, March of Time has added its 38th country to the list of nations where it is seen and a Dutch version to its already existing French, English, Spanish and Canadian editions.

Snow Falls

Skiing

The camera takes the audience to Switzerland and France where the ski champions of Europe enjoy the winter sport. The novice is shown learning the fundamentals of skiing under capable guidance of an instructor, while the more learned in the art try their hand at slalom and downhill racing and ski jumping. The spills of the champions as well as those of the novice add humor to the reel and excellent photography puts this short in a class with only the best.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Radio

From the birth of radio, this short follows the various phases through which it has passed to its present day use. A trip, with an audience, through the NBC studios is the highlight of the film. The guide shows how sound effects are produced and takes the audience into a studio during the final rehearsal. The efforts of arranging a program before it goes on the air, including a conference of department heads and the cooperation of all divisions to keep the broadcast running smoothly, is clearly depicted. Excellent photomontage by Slavko Vorkapich put the finishing touches on this entertaining and instructive short.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Newly elected officers of the Pacific Writers Club, in Hollywood, are Milton Cashy, commodore; Lee Tracy, vice-commodore; Max De Vega, rear commodore; Captain Noyes Dawley, fleet captain; E. H. Hansen, port captain; Gordon MacLean, secretary; and Ray Kellogg, treasurer.

Tri-Color Company Formed

Tri-Color Corporation has been formed in Dover, Del., to deal in motion pictures, with a capital of $540,000 and 1,000 shares, no par value. L. H. Herman, Walter Lenz and L. E. Gray of Wilmington are the incorporators.

Glen W. Dickinson, head of Dickinson Theatres, operating 35 theatres in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa, said in Kansas City Tuesday that there still is nothing definite to report concerning his selling out to the Griffith circuit. That he is dickering for the sale of all or part of his circuit, however, he did not deny. Unconfirmed reports indicate that Griffith is interested in other houses.

Regional "Gateway" Winners Are Chosen

New York regional winners in the talent search conducted for RKO by Jesse Lasky were reduced from 51 to two at a tryout last week after a press luncheon at the Hotel Roosevelt. The two regional winners, Dorothy Davis and Charles Ruppert, will compete in subsequent eliminations to find the finalists, who will be given the names of John Archer and Alice Eden, and featured in the RKO film "Career."

At the luncheon, the contestants were addressed by Ralph Rolan, president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers; Arthur Willi, RKO talent scout; Bryant Washburn, Edward Arnold and Marie Ouspenskaya. Among those present from the RKO studio and home office were Ned Depinet, vice-president; Jules Levy, sales manager; John O'Connor, vice-president and general manager of RKO theatres; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity; Rutgers Neilson, of the publicity department, and Rufus LeMaire, assistant to Pandro Berman.

MGM Reorganizes Branch

Herbert W. Genter, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salesman in Pittsburgh, has been transferred to the Kansas City exchange as office manager. He succeeds Joseph Markowitz, transferred to the Atlanta branch as salesman in the Florida territory. Edwin J. Moriarty has been promoted to office manager in Pittsburgh, replacing Milton Brauman, who succeeds Mr. Genter. John Zomnir succeeds Mr. Moriarty as Pittsburgh first booker, with Max Schabason advanced to second booker and Irvin Jacobs to third booker. Frank Jelenko, New Orleans salesman, goes to Philadelphia in the same capacity.

Warners Adding Prints

Ten additional prints on "big pictures" will be placed in circulation in the New York territory by Warner Brothers, it was announced this week, following conferences of Edward Schnitzer, Warner eastern district manager, and A. W. Schwalberg, in charge of theatre operations, with Leon Rosenblatt and Julius Charnow, of the Independent Theatre Owners. The ITOA had complained of delay in bookings occasioned by lack of prints.

Twentieth Century-Fox at Fair

March 29th has been proclaimed as "Twentieth Century-Fox Day" at the San Francisco World's Fair as a tribute to Darryl F. Zanuck's production "Story of Alexander Graham Bell." The film will be the first to be shown at the Fair and there will be a special preview on March 29th at the Fair grounds with a special train carrying Hollywood correspondents as guests of the company and Fair.

Frank J. McCarthy, eastern sales manager for Universal, has promoted W. M. Richardson from Charlotte branch manager to a special assignment under district manager Harry D. Graham in Atlanta. Paul Baron, acting branch manager in Washington, will take the place of Mr. Richardson in Charlotte. B. B. Kreisler, salesman at Boston, will become acting branch manager in Washington, pending the return of Nate Sauber, who is ill.

OMPLETE CAMPAIGN TO ZENOBIA CONTEST,
ORPORATION, 729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

LEGION CONDEMNED FIVE IN YEAR, ALL "SEX FILMS"

"Remous" Appeal Turned Down; "Birth of a Baby" Case to Virginia Supreme Court

Five features were condemned in 1938 by the Legion of Decency and all five were of the "sex-film" type.

In the same period the Legion did not turn down in entirety any pictures produced by members of the organized industry committed to self-regulation of film standards under the Production Code Administration.

The five "sex films" rejected by the Legion in the last year were: "Assassin of Youth," B.C.N. Productions; "Club des Femmes," made in France, Mayer-Burstyn; "It's All in the Mind," B. B. Ray Productions; "Lie of Nina Petrovna," made in France, Lenauer-International; "Marriage Forbidden" (new title of "Damaged Goods"), distributed by the old Grand National, and "Race Suicide," De Luxe Company.

13 Others Condemned Since 1936

Thirteen additional features have been condemned in their entirety by the Legion since it started reviewing in 1936. All of them were likewise of the "sex" film, or "hygiene" variety. Eight of them were made in Europe, the remaining five in the U. S., and all of them were distributed here by "independents" not aligned with the organized industry's voluntary Production Code.

The 13 included "Adolph Armstrong" (Swedish), Svensk Film Industri-Scandinavian Talking Pictures; "Amours de Toni" (French), Metropolis Films; "Carnival in Flanders" (French) Tobis Film; "Damaged Lives" (reissue), Welden Productions; "Ecstasy" (Czechoslovakian), Eureka Films; "Elysia," Bryan Foy Productions-Master Arts; "Gambling with Souls," Jay Dee Kay Productions-Kendis Films; "Living Dangerously" (British), Gaumont-British; "L'Orage" (French), Andre Daven Productions-Tri-National Films; "Lucrezia Borgia" (French), La Compagnie du Cinema-European Films Corporation; "Pitfalls of Youth," HER Laboratories; "Private Life of Henry VIII" (British-reissue), London Films-Gaumont British; "Slaves in Bondage," Jay Dee Kay Productions-Kendis Films.

Two pictures were given "separate classifications" in 1938: "The Birth of a Baby," Special Pictures Corporation, because it was "unsuitable as entertainment for general theatrical exhibition"; and, "Blockade," Wanger-United Artists, on the grounds that "many people will regard this picture as containing foreign political propaganda in favor of one side in the present struggle in Spain."

535 Features Reviewed

In 1938, the New York office of the National Legion of Decency reviewed 535 features. Of these, 456 were domestically produced, 79 were produced abroad, the foreign films being in nine languages.

Of the total number of features reviewed, 332, or 62 per cent, were rated Class A—Section I, Unobjectionable for General Patronage; 164, or 31 per cent, were rated Class A—Section II, Unobjectionable for Adults; 32, or six per cent were rated Class B. Objectionable in Part; five, or one per cent were given Class C rating —Condemned.

Monogram Pictures was the only company among the 11 large distributors which did not have a single "Class B—Objectionable in Part" rating in the year.

NEBRASKA SOLONS ENDORSE "PACIFIC"

Cecil B. DeMille has been notified that the Nebraska Legislature has passed a resolution endorsing his Paramount production, "Union Pacific." Introduced by Amos Thomas, W. H. Diers and Charles F. Tvraik, the resolution recommended that the members of the legislature give their "complete approval and support to this noble historical film and express their appreciation to all persons responsible for the production thereof."

The resolution followed announcement from Hollywood that the world premiere of the picture would be held at Omaha, April 28, and that civic, business, church, school and labor groups were joining forces to make the attendant three day celebration one of the most spectacular of motion picture premieres.

Class B ratings were given to one Columbia picture (of 50 reviewed); three First Nationals (of 25 reviewed); two MGMs (45 reviewed); three Paramounts (49 reviewed); two Republics (37 reviewed); two RKOs (44 reviewed); one United Artists (19 reviewed); four Universals (46 reviewed), and one Warner (29 reviewed), these representing but six per cent of the total of 535 reviewed during the year.

"Remous" Appeal Denied

Despite Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays' presentation of the dangers in censorship going far afield, the New York State appellate division in Albany last week upheld Irwin Esmond, motion picture director, and the Board of Regents in their refusal to license the second revised version of "Remous." The vote was four to one. Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn hold distribution rights.

Presiding Justice James P. Hill and Justice Christopher Hefferan concurred in the opinion that the Motion Picture Division may ban as immoral films "dealing with social sex problems, human biology or the procreative function even when not obscene or indecent."

The other majority opinion, read by Justice F. Walter Bliss, with Justice Daniel V. McNamee concurring, held that "Remous" is "open to the construction placed upon it by the motion picture director. The plot is materially the same as 'Ecstasy,' sustained on appeal," in which the subject of impotence was held "not fit subject matter for screen display."

"Remous," originally submitted for New York censors' licensing by Kurt Laemmle, is a French-made picture, which, after rejection, was approved with eliminations and licensed, as was an English dialogue version known as "Whirlpool." Later, Director Esmond, in reviewing a second revised version, held that the theme of impotence came within the meaning of Section 1082, State Education Law, and subsequent appeal to the Board of Regents was upheld.

"Birth" Ban Up on Appeal

Lower court rulings in favor of the showing of "The Birth of a Baby" will be considered by the supreme court of appeals of Virginia in hearing the cast of the City of Lynchburg and R. W. B. Hart, city manager, against the film.

Despite the fact that he won in Judge Aubrey E. Strode's court in Lynchburg. Willis Grist, manager of the Paramount theatre there, decided not to put the picture on exhibition pending decision by the appellate tribunal.

City Manager Hart previously had ruled that the film could not be shown in Lynchburg. Judge Strode last month held that the city does not have the power to ban motion pictures approved by the state division of censorship. The Virginia censors were forced by an order by Judge Julien Gunn to issue a license for the film to be shown in Richmond in January.

In the appeal just allowed it is expected to be argued whether a Virginia city, whose charter gives it regulatory power over motion pictures, can prohibit the showing of a film licensed by the censorship division.

"Shame" Brings Charges

Charges of showing indecent pictures were booked against Earl Condon, assistant manager of the Regent theatre, New Orleans, following exhibtion of "Shame." Charged with Mr. Condon was Edward Sonney, Dallas, distributor.

More Censorship Bills

Added to the censorship bills already introduced this legislative season in Kansas, Oklahoma, Delaware, Arkansas, Iowa, Michigan and Missouri have come new bills in the Jersey and Oklahoma legislatures.

A bill in the New Jersey Assembly, offered by Assemblyman Kerner, for a three-man censor board, has been referred to the ways and means committee, of which Kerner is the head. The bill would provide for the payment of $4,500 per year to each board member, and would empower them to rule on motion pictures and stereopticon slides.

The Oklahoma bill is the second such this season. It was introduced by Representative Cooper, and would set up a "board of film inspection."

In Kansas, the bill to abolish the state board of review was killed Monday by the House committee.

National Decency Legion Classifies Twelve Films

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, six were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Almost a Gentleman," "Ice Follies of 1939," "I Was a Convict," "Sundown on the Prairie," "Trouble in Sundown." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Bouquets from Nicholas" (French), "I'm from Missouri," "Let Us Live," "Midnight," "My Son Is a Criminal," "Sudden Money." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Champs Elysees" (French).

Bader Joins MCA Artists

David A. Bader has closed his story agency, known as Literary Corporation of America, to join MCA Artists, Ltd., as executive assistant to David Diamond, head of the MCA story department. Mr. Bader has taken with him to his new post his library and lists of plays and books, as well as a number of American and English writers.

Mel Hulling has been appointed West Coast district sales manager for Monogram and will also serve as home office representative at the studio.

"SNOW" WITHDRAWN TO PAVE WAY FOR SECOND RELEASE LATE IN '39

Avoidance of Over-play by RKO-Disney Part of Plan to Return Film to Circulation in New Selling Effort

Behind the recent bare announcement by RKO-Disney that "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be withdrawn from theatre circulation on Saturday midnight, April 29th, lies a plan, of unprecedented nature, whereby a producer and his distributor aim to prolong the life of a successful box office performer by cutting short its normal bookings to avoid over-playing, they returning the picture to circulation some months later virtually as a new release with all the ballyhoo and publicity whoop-te-do that accompanied the first, again starting at first runs the country over.

Christmas Release Set

The return to circulation will be timed for the holidays at the end of the year, a period which the "Snow White" interests believe to be the most appropriate in view of the nature of the subject, as proven, they say, by the two successful holiday periods enjoyed by the world's first feature-length cartoon in 1937 and 1938.

"Snow White's" return late this year, of course, will have some competition, with the arrival at about the same time of the world's second feature cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels," now being produced in Florida by Max Fleischer for Paramount, and also the appearance shortly thereafter of the third feature cartoon, "Pinocchio," from Walt Disney.

With "Snow White" playing to close to 9,000 U. S. bookings, in its first playoff, representing virtually all of the "cream" runs, RKO-Disney believe that rental revenue that might now accrue from small subsequents and from repeats from the prior runs would not be nearly as much as the grosses anticipated from a fresh release months after the impending withdrawal.

Impressive Records Claimed

This marks the first time of record where a distributor has deliberately withdrawn a successful picture from circulation before saturation; the first time that one will be re-released, not as a reissue, but with all of the fresh effort usually given to a brand new release; the first time that repeat bookings have been refused; the first time where a strict single-feature policy prevailed and a strict prohibition made to apply to any and all of the usual "inducements" by theatres, such as giveaways, chance games and other "artificial stimulants."

By the time "Snow White" finishes its first "play-off"—meaning on its first round of the world—by April 29th, it will have grossed more than $8,000,000 in rentals for the distributor-producer, as follows: $4,000,000 in the U. S., $1,750,000 in England, $500,000 in France and $1,750,000 in the 43 other countries where the picture has circulated.

Considering the picture's $8,000,000 world rental return to date, the picture probably has grossed close to $16,000,000 in admissions, a total arrived at by figuring on the general 40 to 50 per cent rental charge prevailing. On the basis of $4,000,000 gross rentals and the probable $8,000,000 gross admissions for the 8,000 playdates in this country, an average admission income could be figured at $1,000 per theatre and an average rental income of $500 per house—for the U. S. exhibitions.

A better comparison of the history-making, 12-month box office and playdate performance can be gleaned from the fact that, generally, a feature picture considered as "doing well" over a normal life of circulation, running from two to two and a half years, has about 10,000 playdates grossing $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

"BLANCHE NEIGE ET LES SEPT NAINS"

For reasons strategic in location and language, the French version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", noted in the story herewith, will have its American premiere at the Waldorf theatre, New York City, on April 8th. This theatre is located one block from the Radio City Music Hall, at which the English version had its premiere, and to which foreign and domestic visitors to the New York World's Fair, opening April 30th, are expected to flock, as part of their tour of New York. Expected to be attracted by the novelty of the dwarfs speaking French are not only these visitors and those in the New York area who saw it in English, but also the estimated 50,000 French persons, 100,000 students of French, and more who are familiar with the langauge, in New York City.

The film to date has been sold as a special.

Cost Put at $2,400,000

"Snow White" cost Walt Disney $1,700,000 to make, and the several hundred color prints and distribution costs added another estimated $700,000, for a total cost of about $2,400,000. The financing of production extended over four and one-half years, a credit arrangement never before equalled on a single picture. The bank loans have been entirely liquidated.

The Disney staff was more than doubled during the period in which the picture was in work. The studio employed about 300 in 1934 and about 900 in 1938. All were specialists in some definite phase of animated cartoon production and in order to keep them busy after "Snow White" had been completed, several shorts were kept in work simultaneously. Eventually, the Disney studio found itself ahead of schedule for the first time in its existence. It turned again to features, three of which are in work now and a fourth, which will make use of Leopold Stokowski and a symphony orchestra, will start during April. Of those in work, "Pinocchio" will be the first to be completed, some time next winter. Following it will be "Bambi" and "Alice in Wonderland."

Separate distribution deals will be made for the features now in work. Offers have been received from several distributors already, but arrangements are nowhere near a final stage. Disney's short subject distribution deal with RKO expires next year.

The book version, Disney edition, of "Snow White" sold at the rate of 50,000 copies a day, reaching a total sale figure of 22,000,000, and selling at from 10 cents to $2.50 the copy.

One hundred and forty-seven manufacturers were licensed to manufacture 2,138 individual products which ranged from dolls to foundation garments. Sixteen million five hundred thousand "Snow White" drinking glasses were sold and over 2,000,000 dolls.

"Snow White" was the first sound picture to be translated into a "talking book" for the blind.

The picture has played in 43 countries, and "there has been no instance in any country where the first run did not break all time records for both attendance and receipts," according to RKO.

The picture ran five weeks at the Music Hall where it played to 800,000 people, grossing $630,000.

"Snow White" has been recorded in 10 different languages and each version had a different "Snow White" and different dwarfs. None of the speaking characters in the picture appeared in any two versions.

The government of Czecho-Slovakia removed the tax on tickets "in appreciation of Walt having made a version in the Czecho-Slovakian language," RKO says.

The original drawings were exhibited in art galleries throughout the world and "sold along with the paintings of the masters." Lord Duveen, British collector, purchased sets for his home. One of the original scenes from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," painted on celluloid, was hung in the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art last month.

The producer received honorary degrees from Harvard, Yale and the University of Southern California for "Snow White."

The film was the subject, innumerable times, of political cartoons the world over.

Millions of letters have been received by Disney asking him whether there were any live characters in "Snow White."

Dopey got more fan mail than all the "Snow White" other characters put together.

Disney has amassed a detailed breakdown of population groupings, language elements and reactions, and general exhibition and exploitation conditions, both here and abroad, using three outside surveying services to gather this data. These conditions have been determined so as to plan later when other Disney feature cartoons arrive.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in French, direct from 31 weeks' engagement at the Champs Elysee Theatre in Paris, will be released in the principal cities of the United States shortly. The title of the film in French is "Blanche Neige et les Sept Nains," and "this marks the first time in the history of motion pictures that an American made film has been brought back to this country and re-distributed in a foreign language." Many scenes had to be re-animated in the making of the French version, including the one in which Snow White bakes a cake for Grumpy; the bed scene in which the dwarfs first discover their visitor, and all the titles.

Censor Trouble

The picture went unmolested by the censors throughout the world except in England and Holland. Running true to form, the British Board of Film Censors proved to be its greatest obstructionists. They were shocked by the "horror" of the scene in which the trees reached out to grab Snow White as she raced through the forest, and ordered it scissored out. They also ruled that children under 16 years could not attend the picture unless accompanied by their parents. Still the film ran for a record-making thirty-five weeks at the New Gallery Theatre in London. On the other hand, the Canadian censors lifted during the run of the picture, an eleven-year ban in the Province of Quebec prohibiting those under 16 from attending movie theatres.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

The Gracie Allen Murder Case

(Paramount)

Comedy

Warren William will be in this picture with Gracie Allen. His screen identity is "Philo Vance." The title does not belie the production's story content. It will start out just as all complicated and baffling murder mystery melodramas do. But it will not maintain that tone very long. In fact what will happen in the picture might be most quickly and completely described as a farce burlesque and satire on all spine-stiffeners and music tinglers. Dithery Gracie will make her entrance and then everything will happen from the reverse angle.

Here's an advance digest of some of the major occurrences (not counting the ad-libbing and improvising that is going on while the film is in work. Gracie makes a hopeless jumble of all the clues, but she does solve the case. In the meantime she will have sent the hero to jail, the police to the insane asylum and while doing this will fall in love and become sentimentally sympathetic for the murderers. The dialogue that has been prepared and the situations devised are witty and hilarious.

Miss Allen and William will dominate the show, but they will have plenty assistance from Kent Taylor, Ellen Drew, Jerome Cowan, Judith Barrett, Conald MacBride, H. B. Warner, Horace MacMahon and vaudevillians Shaw and Lee in making the piece amusingly funny.

Alfred E. Green is directing the George Arthur production.

Release date: Not determined.

Lucky Night

(MGM)

Comedy-Romance

Exhibitors will have two of 1938's ten box offices leaders to talk about, Robert Taylor and Myrna Loy. They also will be able to promise the public a crazy-quilt, slap-happy comedy story. Miss Loy has had much experience in comedy; Taylor's venture into the realm of farcical foolishness is new to him and a decided departure from "Camille" and "Three Comrades," as well as "The Crowd Roars" and "Stand Up and Fight."

"Lucky Night" (appropriately titled) will be a two-person show. Although newcomer Bernard Nadell, funnyman Douglas Fowley, Henry O'Neill, Bernardine Hayes, Cladys Blake and Charles Lane will be concerned at time, Miss Loy and Taylor will be in practically every scene and sequence.

The heroine, tired of lolling in luxury, picks up with a happy-go-lucky play boy who is broke and in debt. They can't pay for dinner, but win a slot machine jack-pot. They get a $1,000 reward for capturing a badman, win a big roll in a gambling den, pay off the boy's debts, try to drink each other under the table, and wake up married. The hero gets a job, but wants to make every day a holiday, an arrangement at which his wife rebels. She goes home to papa, is followed by her spouse, who convinces his father-in-law that he has the correct philosophy for living. When his daughter returns she is greeted with remarks about idiots who haven't sense enough to hang onto what they want after they have found it. Thereupon the daughter decides that every day might just as well be a holiday.

Norman Taurog turns from directing juvenile features, such as "Boystown," to grown-up material.

Released: April 14, 1939.

The Kid from Texas

(MGM)

Comedy-Romance

"The Kid from Texas" is the second of a series of sports backgrounded pictures which MGM is making with Dennie O'Keefe the star. "Burn 'Em Up O'Connor" was the first.

Basically it is a comedy romance with the thrill of wild west adventure and polo. It concerns the exploits of a cowhand who crashes society, beats it at its own pet game and runs off with the prize debutante. Of the many picturesque episodes, that in which the hero saves a hard-pressed rodeo carnival by staging a polo match between cowpunchers and Indians promises to be the most exciting and amusing.

With Dennis O'Keefe, remembered also for "Bad Man of Brimstone," "Hold That Kiss," "Vacation from Love" and "The Chaser," is Florence Rice, last seen in "Sweethearts" and "Four Girls in White." They will be backed up by Anthony Allan, who played opposite Luise Rainer in "Dramatic School"; Jessie Ralph, long time comedy trouper; Virginia Dale, one of the glamour girls in "Idiot's Delight"; Buddy Ebsen, Robert Wilcox, Jack Carson, Helen Lynd, J. M. Kerrigan and Tully Marshall.

The picture is being directed by S. Sylvan Simon, who was in charge of "Four Girls in White," and formerly was at Universal, where he did "The Road to Reno," "Prescription for Romance," and others.

Release date: March 31, 1939.

Hell's Kitchen

(Warner)

Comedy-Melodrama

The title suggests it, but "Hell's Kitchen" will not be a gangster melodrama. True, one of the leading players was a gangster, as were his henchmen, but the real entertainment appeal rests in the comedy.

The ex-gangster turns respectable for personal and business reasons. He contributes to an orphans' home, then learns that the institution's superintendent is making a racket of soliciting donations. The former bad man muscles in, but the inmates, the "Dead End" kids being featured as the leaders, get under his skin. He makes life happy for them but his business adviser falls in love with a teacher. They expose the superintendent and make things tough for his chiseling partner as both go to jail.

Ronald Reagan, Margaret Lindsay, Stanley Fields, Grant Mitchell and the "Dead End" lads will be featured. The supporting roster is made up of Warner stock company players.

Crane Wilbur wrote the original screen play. E. A. Dupont and Lewis Siler share the director credits.

Release date: To be determined.

Sorority House

(RKO Radio)

Sorority Exposé

While "Sorority House" is not being produced along the same pretentious lines, its story essence will be somewhat similar to that which was the spirit of "Stage Door." Many college co-eds will be seen; three, Anne Shirley, Barbara Reed and Adele Pearce, will be featured. The locale is a fictitious mid-west university and the time is modern.

Thematically the photoplay will present a picture of some college sororities and their snobishness. Mainly it will concern the experiences of three girls who dream of getting a bid to join a sorority. All are poor, but each is dazzled by the glamour and social prestige which such an invitation means. The heroine, made a victim of an unfair even if well intended hoax, is thrilled to receive a bid, but when she learns what the sorority really stands for she rejects it. Woven into the main theme is a campus romance and for a secondary value the picture will illustrate the sacrifices the girl's father makes to satisfy his daughter's happiness.

James Ellison will share the romantic love story counterpart with Miss Shirley and in addition to Miss Reed and Miss Pearce the other principals are J. M. Kerrigan, Helen Wood, Doris Jordan, Margaret Armstrong, Sherrie Overton and June Story.

The production is adapted from the play "The Chi House," with screen play credited to Dalton Trumbo. John Farrow is directing.

Release date: Not determined.

Fixer Dugan

(RKO Radio)

Circus Story

Two players once prominent on Hollywood scene, Lee Tracy and Peggy Shannon, are the stars of "Fixer Dugan." A third important name value is Virginia Weidler, who did outstand work in "Men with Wings," "Out West with the Hardys" and "The Great Man votes." Tracy came from the stage to be featured in many pictures, but after "Sutter's Gold" he became inactive until reengaged by RKO-Radio for "Behind the Headlines" and "Criminal Lawyer." Miss Shannon was one of the numerous candidates from whose ranks a successor to Clara Bow was to be chosen. She, too, was absent from the screen until appearances in "Blackwell's Island" and "The Adventures of Jane Arden."

For the most part the supporting players are members of the studio's stock company, Rita LaRoy, William Edmunds, Bradley Page, Jack Arnold, Ed Gargan.

A Cliff Reid production, the picture will be the 23rd which Lew Landers has directed for the company. The story is from an original screen play by Paul Yawitz and Bert Granet, collaborators of "Affairs of Annabel" and "Go Chase Yourself."

Thematically, a love story is told against the background of a dingy circus which is not doing very well in its midwestern tour. As all the thrill, glamour and sensationalism of a circus story are illustrated in production detail, the plot concerns the efforts of the circus "fixer" (Tracy) and lion tamer (Miss Shannon) to be made the guardians of an orphan (Miss Weidler).

Release date: To be determined.

Calling Dr. Kildaire

(MGM)

Romance, Mystery

Two facts, originating from sources generally as widely separated as the North and South poles, stand "Calling Dr. Kildaire" in good stead. Next to the "Judge Hardy's," MGM considers the "Dr. Kildaire" series its best bet in the all-family entertainment field. It is giving the pictures the same kind of mounting, casting and qualities that it does the "Hardys." Reports from exhibitors on "What the Pictures Did for Me" unanimously call "Young Dr. Kildaire" a good picture. Such enthusiastic expression as "deserves your best playing time," "should please everywhere," "first surprise of 1939" and "play this by all means" run through the reports.

"Calling Dr. Kildaire" will have the same stars and principals, Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lynn Carver, Nat Pendleton, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn and Walter Kingsford. Jo Ann Sayers will be missing from the cast, but Laraine Johnson, Lana Turner and Marie Blake are added. Harold S. Bucquet again was assigned to direct, and the property comes under the production guidance of Lew Ostrow, who was in charge of "Young Dr. Kildaire." The story told is a combination of the elements that were the spirit of the first production, comedy, romance, mystery melodrama, suspense. The relationship between "Dr. Gillespie" and "Kildaire" is the same. It appears, however, that complicated romance and baffling mystery will be more heavily emphasized.

Apparently "in wrong" with "Dr. Gillespie," "Kildaire" involves himself romantically with three girls, and performs an unethical operation which he knows will mean the end of his career if it is ever reported. To save his own reputation and reinstate himself in "Gillespie's" good graces and prove his right to love the real girl, he turns detective to solve a crime and clear his record.

Release date: April 14, 1939.

Back Door to Heaven

(Paramount)

Episodic Melodrama

Production of "Back Door to Heaven" was in the east, at the Astoria studio on Long Island. It was produced and directed by William K. Howard.

Mr. Howard was the director of "Fire Over England" for London Films. His Hollywood credits include "Princess Comes Across," "Mary Burns, Fugitive," "Vanessa," "Evelyn Prentiss" and "Power and the Glory." Howard wrote the original story and John Bright and Robert Tasker did the screen play.

The basic idea of the story is not new, neither is the episodic manner in which it is developed. But neither has been attempted on the screen for some years. Thus it steps a little out of rote and routine. Several members of the graduating class of a mid-west high school, before starting out in life, make a date to meet again ten years later. When they get together again one is an itinerant lawyer, another a night club dancer, one is a disgraced ship's captain, the fourth is a bank president and the fifth is a fugitive from a prison death house. Each tells the story of his career and the episodes that led each to his present status is simultaneously pictured. Each career story is packed with melodramatic and romantic incidents that promises to result in engrossing human interest entertainment.

The cast will be headed by four players who at one time or another have been prominent in the Hollywood scene. These are Wallace Ford, Aline McMahon, Stuart Erwin and Patricia Ellis. The balance of the cast features people who are comparatively unknown to picture theatre-goers and who, in the main, have made their reputation on the legitimate stage in New York.

Release date: April 14, 1939.

Streets of New York

(Monogram)

Melodrama

"The Champ" made Jackie Cooper a star Popular for some time, he went into eclipse. But a series of pictures, "White Banners," "Newsboys' Home," "Gangster's Boy," "That Certain Age" and currently "The Spirit of Culver," have served to bring him back. Again he has become an important box office name, particularly to juvenile theatre-goers.

In "Streets of New York" he will be seen in a type of role that should be strongly appealing to lads of and about his own age. Ambitious to be a lawyer, he runs a newsstand by day and goes to law school at night. Particularly friendly to a crippled boy, whose life he makes easier, he wins the friendship of a judge when he saves his pals from trouble with the law. When his elder brother, a public enemy, goes beserk he turns him over to the police. But in a stirring death house sequence, he makes peace with his brother and under the judge's sponsorship renews his struggle for education to become a lawyer.

Most of the boys who will be seen with Cooper are not well known with the exception of Martin Spellman, who was in "Boys Town" and "I Am a Criminal." Adult members of the cast are George Cleveland, R. E. O'Connor, R. E. Keane, Dick Purcell, presently in "Blackwell's Island," George Irving and June Martel.

Robert Andrews prepared the original screen play and the production is being directed by Jack Mintz.

Release date: March 29, 1939.

Mystery of the White Room

(Universal)

Crime Club Production

Six preceding releases have demonstrated the entertainment and exploitation worth of the "Crime Club" series pictures. Unlike the current run of series productions, the "Crime Clubs" do not always feature the same principals. They are not written by the same authors or screen play writers. They do adhere to a melodramatic trend, however and all over adapted from "Crime Club" mystery novels. No departure from the general formula will be made in the case of "Mystery of the White Room."

The story's locale is a hospital. Doctors, nurses, patients and police are the personnel involved. While there will be no lack of romantic and comic amplification, the basic plot concerns a young doctor who stepped into a murder case which, in precipitating several deaths, baffled the police. Proving himself as adept a detective as he was a skillful surgeon, the young doctor solves the case in which he himself was involved as a chief suspect.

Bruce Cabot will be seen in the role of the doctor. He will be supported by Helen Mack, Constance Worth and Joan Woodbury, all of whom are nurses and all of whom are involved in the story's mystery melodrama. Comedy contrast will be taken care of by Tom Dugan and Mabel Todd, who will be remembered for "The Cowboy and the Lady." Other important parts have been assigned Roland Drew, Addison Richards and Tommy Jackson.

While Alex Gottlieb did the screen play, story basis for the production is a "Crime Club" novel, "Murder in the Surgery," written by Doctor James G. Edwards. The picture is being produced by Irving Starr and direction was assigned to Otis Garrett, who made three earlier numbers in the series.

Release date: March 17, 1939.

Hero for a Day

(Tentative Title)

(Warner)

Crime Melodrama

About the middle of 1931, Warner Bros. produced "The Star Witness." With some attention toward modernization and a few alterations in plot amplification, "Hero for a Day" (tentative title) will repeat the story of the war veteran who was courageous enough to beard gangdom in its den, appear on the witness stand to give evidence that convicted the gang leaders who had held a city in terror. Charley Grapewin now assumes the role Chic Sale created.

Besides Grapewin, the studio has made available Jane Bryan, Henry O'Neill, Elizabeth Risdon, James McCallion, Dickie Jones, John Gallaudet and Don Douglas. The support includes a half dozen players who once were prominent in pictures.

The screen play for the present version of Lucien Hubbard's story was prepared by Lee Katz. Crane Wilbur is directing. There will be a straightforward plea for rugged Americanism as a highlight of the climactic sequences.

Release date: To be determined.

James Johnson has resigned from the Twentieth Century-Fox advertising department to join Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn, advertising agency, as an account executive.

Mexican Producer Decries American "Booking Tactics"

"Block booking methods" of American distributors are blamed by Juan Pezet, general manager of the Association of Motion Picture Producers of Mexico, for the "drastic" attitudes of the Mexican government towards U. S. distributors, and for that government's granting of "substantial" rebates in taxes to Mexican exhibitors who show Mexican product. Mr. Pezet was in New York City last week, to arrange with the Mier Brothers the worldwide release of his latest production, "El Cobarde." He left on Saturday for Mexico City.

Mr. Pezet claimed that the American "methods" had resulted in 23 Mexican films undated, up to last October. The government's virtual subsidization of Mexican exhibition, he asserted, resulted in the showing of 16 of the mentioned films, up to December.

The Mexican producer admitted the realization among Mexicans that any attitudes to be taken must not be "too" harsh. "We realize," he said, "that we must work hand in hand with Hollywood; at least for the time being, because of the limited output of our studios."

Mr. Pezet claims that Mexican films gross more when handled by Mexican distributors, rather than American.

Catholic Charities Names Motion Picture Committee

The Motion Picture Committee of the 1939 Catholic Charities Drive this week was announced by its chairman, John J. O'Connor, general manager of RKO Theatres. The committee consists of Harry D. Buckley, Pat Casey, H. M. Doherty, E. C. Grainger, J. R. Grainger, Austin C. Keough, E. L. McEvoy, Charles E. McCarthy, Joseph McConville, C. B. McDonald, John Murphy, Wm. J. Neary, Dennis F. O'Brien, Charles L. O'Reilly, P. A. Powers, Wm. T. Powers, Martin Quigley, Wm. F. Rodgers, George J. Schaefer, William Scully, Gradwell Sears, George Skouras, W. G. Van Schmus, Frank C. Walker, treasurer; George C. Walsh and George W. Weeks.

Catholic Charities, the central and coordinating body for 216 hospitals, institutions, welfare and other agencies in the Archdiocese of New York, was founded in 1920 by the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes, the "Cardinal of Charity." In tribute to him, this year's campaign, by resolution of the Cardinal's Committee of the Laity of the Archdiocese will be known as the Cardinal Hayes Memorial Appeal.

Contributions may be sent to any member of the committee for forwarding checks being made payable to Frank C. Walker, treasurer.

RKO Pathe has signed Baron Carl von Ripper to work on the re-enactment of Nazi activities for the company's feature length picture "Unknown Patriot." According to RKO Pathe Baron von Ripper spent seven months in a concentration camp in Germany.

"Lost Plays" to Be Published by Princeton Press

One hundred "lost plays," hitherto unpublished and covering a century and a half of the American theatre, are included in a series of 20 volumes planned for publication by the Princeton University Press in cooperation with the Authors League of America, the Dramatists Guild and the Rockefeller Foundation. The first volume will be published in late fall if sufficient subscriptions are received this spring to warrant publication.

Barrett H. Clark, critic and historian of the theatre, is general editor of the series. The project is said to have the endorsement of Robert E. Sherwood, president of the Dramatists Guild; Hendrik Willem Van Loon, president of the Authors Guild; Cecil B. DeMille, Paramount producer, and Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College and of the New York State Historical Association.

Among the playwrights represented in the collection of "lost plays" are Royall Tyler, John Howard Payne, Dion Boucicault, Bartley Campbell, Silas Steele, J. M. Field, Leonard Grover, Henry C. DeMille, Charles Hoyt, Lester Wallack, Frank Murdock, David Belasco, George Henry Boker, Steele MacKaye, J. J. McCloskey, Julia Ward Howe and more than a score of others. Twelve nineteenth century melodramas are included.

The sponsors of the work say the plays "are not offered as artistic masterpieces . . . but each was a significant part of American culture, reflecting and in some cases influencing the thought of the country." The editors point out that only an insignificant fraction of the total number of American plays has survived. The new series is presented as "not only a cross-section of the American theatre but an epitome of the ideas and customs, opinions and philosophies, of the American people through almost a century and a half."

McGuire Quits Committee

P. A. McGuire this week resigned from the Projection Practice Committee. A resolution was adopted by the committee expressing regret at Mr. McQuire's resignation, extending him an invitation to attend the meetings of the committee whenever he may so desire and praising his activities on the committee, which he helped to form.

Benny Trial Postponed

The trial in New York of Jack Benny, radio and film comedian, on an indictment charging him and Albert N. Chaperau with smuggling $2,131 worth of jewelry into the United States has been postponed until April 3rd by Federal Judge John W. Clancy at the request of the prosecution.

Columbus Film Planned

A feature based on the life of Christopher Columbus is planned by Abel Gance, French producer. Exteriors will be shot on Spanish soil.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant —We brought this back with a personal guarantee and we were justified as we had very good house. In our estimation, there have been few comedies that rank with this one. Played January 7.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Crime School Kids"—What a wallop this one packs. Not a single adverse comment during the run. Business not up to average but we have never used this type of a picture before on a Sunday change. Probably would have pulled as well on a Friday-Saturday change. But it still remains one of the season's outstanding offerings. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 26-28.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, "Crime School Kids"—Cagney should have received the Academy Award on the electrocution scene. By all means play it. Played February 19-21.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

BROTHER RAT: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman—A good picture in which the supporting cast stole the picture from the stars. Morris did not have a sympathetic role, and Priscilla did not have a part worthy of her talents. Eddie Albert was outstanding in his role and Jane Wyman had equally as good a part as Priscilla. Running time, 89 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COMET OVER BROADWAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—It's a shame to waste talent and film on such a shoddy production as this proved to be. Pleased very few patrons. Thanks to a good second feature, the situation was not a complete washout. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 15-16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville, Dickie Moore—A real home, down-to-earth picture with one of those Alger story or Cinderella story endings. Very seldom does a story end in a manner that tickles an audience as this does. Do the kids whoop it up when Dickie Moore falls heir to the house in which the shrewish aunt lives and when he comes to take possession. This pleased old and young and on a Sunday of a big snowstorm this drew average business when we expected it to be below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

PATIENT IN ROOM 18, THE: Patric Knowles, Ann Sheridan—This satisfies as one of those "Who Done It" mystery stories. Locale in a hospital. You know by this time what a picture like that does for you and it is a good picture of its type. This was doubled with "My Bill."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Grand National

TRAILING TROUBLE: Ken Maynard—Fair western picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CHASER, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Lewis Stone, Ann Morriss—This vividly pictures the accident racket in which smart crooked lawyers collect for fake accident claims. But for downright bad casting this takes the leather medal. Imagine casting Lewis Stone as a drunken doctor who works in a crooked manner with the crooked lawyer. Just think of the kindly Judge in the Judge Hardy family pictures given a role like that. The drawing power of this was about what it deserved, below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CITADEL, THE: Robert Donat, Rosalind Russell—If any small town can make any money on this type of picture, they have a majority of intellectuals.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—A few more of these and Joe E. Brown might just as well fold up.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

FLIRTING WITH FATE: Joe E. Brown, Leo Carrillo—Joe E. Brown is still good at the box office. Here public demands some of this comedy. Better than average business. Running time, 70 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Lawrence, Iowa. General patronage.

FOUR GIRLS IN WHITE: Florence Rice, Una Merkel, Ann Rutherford, Alan Marshal, Kent Taylor —This hardly ranks as pleasant evening's entertainment. While there are some moments of comedy, the general grimness of the operating room scenes overshadows the picture and left the audience in a depressed state. Operations are not pleasant to say the best and had the footage been shorter in these scenes and more comedy for relief the picture would have been much better for all concerned, for it did not do business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franciska Gaal, Franchot Tone, Reginald Gardiner, Walter Connolly—Franciska Gaal, the little Hungarian star, certainly makes good. She has a charming personality and, what is very rare in foreign stars, she speaks distinctly. Franchot Tone gives his usual excellent performance while Walter Connolly as the heavy father furnishes plenty of comedy. The story is fantastic, one of those "it couldn't happen here" stories but the excellent cast puts it over. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 24-26.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

GIRL DOWNSTAIRS, THE: Franchot Tone, Franciska Gaal, Reginald Gardiner, Walter Connolly—Just another picture. Good for better end of double. Running time, 65 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Milizia Korjus—Unfortunately, this situation has too few interested in such pictures as this. No business but still we are glad to run such fine productions for those who enjoy them. All the time worn adjectives can be applied to this one. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 22-23.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Milizia Korjus—A wonderful picture. Don't know what day in week you could use it for small towns. If you depend on rural patronage, lay off of it. The few we had enjoyed it. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 22-23.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet, Milizia Korjus—Grand picture for the upper class. Did fair business. Running time, 104 minutes. —J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

HONOLULU: Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Here's one for the gods. Swell entertainment. Gracie Allen never was better. Clicked solid on extended runs. Running time, 84 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut—This is not a small town picture. Those who saw it were divided in their opinion. The majority did not like Shearer in this role. Business was very disappointing. If you could get it at a lower allocation would suggest mid-week bookings. Running time, 107 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT: Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Burgess Meredith, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut—Good B product only. Would not stand up under extended runs. Pleased to very small business. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Joseph Schildkraut, Gladys George—I was prepared to take a real nice loss on this because we very seldom make expenses on a percentage picture and from reports on this, that is, the drawing power of this in many spots, expected the loss to be more than usual considering the terms I had to play this on but the way this drew at the Myrtle was a pleasant surprise. Far better than expected. As to the quality of the picture no one commented, but I am quite sure that our patrons felt that they had their full money's worth and one would have to be very hard to please not to find interest in this costly, colossal, magnificent picture. For a change we ran this 145 minute picture single.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Excellent. The best "family series" on the market today. The Hardy Family and their "down-to-earth" stories will thrill your audiences. They will laugh, cry and enjoy to the utmost this picture. Rooney is tops. Stone very good and an orchid to the man who can "hold his own" all of these years as an actor. (A major role at that.) It's swell entertainment from start to finish and I for one claim it is tops. A "different" plot, believe it or not. Guaranteed to have them rolling in the aisles one minute and hauling out the good old "weep rag" the next. You can't afford to miss this picture even if it means taking the night off and going to the opposition house to see it. 'Nuff said. It is tops. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

OUT WEST WITH THE HARDYS: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler—Say, you mugs! When you get anything better, just let me know. Big at box office. Running time, 75 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter, Harry Barris, Hattie McDaniels—The answer to this exhibitor's prayer, and I had to compete with basketball tournaments on the east and west Friday and Saturday, and Sunday was the coldest night of the winter. Joan Crawford is very popular with my patorns. Margaret Sullavan is winning many friends by her fine acting. Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young and Fay Bainter are very good, while Harry Barris goes to town with his "Farmer in the Dell" song. And, of course, I can't leave out Hattie McDaniels, who leaves the audience in roars of laughter at the final fadeout. This ought to please in any spot. Photography and recording very good. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 17-19.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—Joan Crawford is washed up. No drawing power. —R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

SHINING HOUR, THE: Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter—Good picture for any man's house. Miss Crawford not what she was in past but still draws better than program picture. Running time, 75 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

SPRING MADNESS: Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan, Burgess Meredith, Ruth Hussey, Ann Morriss, Joyce Compton, Jacqueline Wells—And we nearly eliminated this after reading some of the comments. Decidedly entertaining with some exceptional support. Leads are very good, story was different and where did MGM get all those starlets? Ruth Hussey is swell, Burgess Meredith very outstanding, Ann Morriss a dream and Joyce Compton and Jacqueline Wells

REPRINT FROM MOTION PICTURE DAILY
MARCH 14, 1939

HOLLYWOOD, March 13.—This is Claudette Colbert's best comedy since "It Happened One Night" and as much better than that Academy-immortalized classic as the cinema of 1939 is better than the cinema of 1934. This is, in fact, just about the best light comedy ever caught by a camera, as of the glad evening of March 8, 1939, when a cross-industry turnout enjoyed its preview screening with that wholesome, whole-hearted enthusiasm which, about once a year, erases company boundaries, banishes professional prejudices and makes of a top-flight Hollywood audience a mere theatreful of completely contented film fans for a night. It takes a pretty fine piece of entertainment to do that.

There is much about "Midnight" to gratify not only Miss Colbert and the general public but also Paramount and the general industry. There have been doubts in various quarters during recent years as to whether it is possible for the screen, under modern conditions, to deliver to the whole public a really smart, sophisticated comedy, suitable for family consumption and yet completely satisfying to adult and minor, metropolitan and agrarian, in content, execution, in individual detail and total result. Paramount has persisted in the theory that it can be done, despite certain disappointing efforts to do it, and Paramount herewith not only proves its theory triumphantly but supplies the industry a fine working model for guidance in achieving this difficult but delightful end.

Miss Colbert's performance is unquestionably her splendid best, but this is no one-performance picture. She has as companions in comedy the matured John Barrymore in fine fettle, dashing Don Ameche in a role fitting his ebullient phase perfectly, Francis Lederer and Mary Astor with precisely appropriate assignments, Hedda Hopper, Elaine Barrie and Rex O'Malley in superbly handled secondary parts which add roundness and reality to the swiftly spun narrative. There isn't a dull instant.

The screenplay by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, an expert script packed with brilliant dialogue, is from a story by Edwin Justus Mayer and Franz Schulz. It starts with arrival of Miss Colbert in a rainy Paris in evening dress without hat, wrap, baggage or money, and proceeds from there by a design too intricate and amusing for condensed synopsis. It is fast but not headlong, so funny in spots that whole minutes of dialogue are lost in audience laughter and so steadily humorous as to make its 90 minutes seem as 30. It never gets out of hand nor out of line.

Arthur Hornblow, producer, and Mitchell Leisen, director, have many a fine picture behind them. They may have many more before them. This is one fine enough to carry their names on into tomorrow's lists of great artists if they never do another.

Running time, 90 minutes. "G"*

System Restored Day After Flood Hits N. E. Theatre

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"When the flood and tidal wave of last September hit Providence, doing untold damage to theatres here in Providence, our Fays Theatre was flooded to an average of twelve feet in the auditorium," declared Edward M. Fay, prominent owner-exhibitor.

"I notified A. W. Hyde, our local Altec service inspector, that some DC power would be available. Although the flood was still raging, Altec rushed equipment by truck from Boston and from New York by plane, and the very next day, Altec had set up temporary apparatus and notified me that the system was ready to operate.

"Since the flood, other services that Altec has performed have paid for my service agreements for some time to come."

certainly filled their roles to perfection. Running time, 67 minutes. Played February 24-25.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SPRING MADNESS: Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan, Burgess Meredith—Nice program picture that did fair at box office. Running time, 67 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Excellent action picture which pleased all and did extra business. Very good for small town. Played March 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—One grand show that not only pulled extra business, but pleased the patrons mightily. Plenty of rough stuff with Taylor handing a nice surprise to his fans, who thought he couldn't "took it." Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 12-14.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Barton MacLane—Nothing wrong with this. Give us more. This will stand all you can give it. Running time, 95 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

SWEETHEARTS: Jeannette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Florence Rice, Frank Morgan, Mischa Auer—Too much singing. However, a grand production and should be run in any theatre. Did fair business. Running time, 115 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo—A good picture and did average business. Good business for an old picture. Both stars played excellent parts. Two days run. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 12-13.—Marshall Rooks, Texas Theatre, Troup, Texas. General patronage.

YOUNG DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lynne Carver, Jo Ann Sayers—Played to almost a packed house and with a very favorable audience reaction. For a good interesting "doctor" picture with a good cast, although not a "big name" cast, play "Young Dr. Kildare" and then sit down and pat yourself on the back for making a very wise move. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 4.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

GANGSTER'S BOY: Jackie Cooper—Nothing big but it held my patrons. Everyone liked it. Several snappy tunes in this. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 27-28.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Anne Nagel—A fine picture that pleased and did business. Played it Sunday and Monday to excellent Sunday business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

ARKANSAS TRAVELER, THE: Bob Burns, Fay Bainter, Irwin S. Cobb, Jean Parker, John Beal—It's old but it's still good. Pulled and pleased above average. These homey, down-to-earth pictures fill a spot in any theatre's program and are welcomed by our patrons. Running time, 83 minutes. Played February 5-7.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

ARREST BULLDOG DRUMMOND: John Howard, Heather Angel—Not entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Good comedy suitable for family trade. Did only average business. Played February 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DR. RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle, Beatrice Lillie—Just fair. Played to Sunday midnight. Kept us in the red.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

IF I WERE KING: Ronald Colman, Frances Dee, Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew—Don't mean a thing at the box office. Had a few intellectuals and lost money.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

KING OF ALCATRAZ: Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, J. Carroll Naish—Don't know where they get the name. Might get by with a double feature on an off night.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

KING OF ALCATRAZ: Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, J. Carroll Naish—Nice little picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Ann Gillis, Robert Kent, June Travis—Best way to use this would be a free matinee for kids.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn—Good. Business OK. Hope Lloyd makes another soon. Some good comedians in this picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SONS OF THE LEGION: Donald O'Connor, Billy Lee, Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley—Very good. Three bells and two jingles. It's a natural with towns that have a "Sons of the Legion" organization. A good program picture anyway, with a host of splendid tieups, etc., with Legion. Mark my words and play it. Any such patriotic picture such as this can't help but go over with the masses. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—Very, very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—One of the most outstanding dramas of the season. This picture contains all one could desire: romance, action, comedy and pathos. With such stars as Raft, Fonda, Barrymore, Lamour and Platt it couldn't be anything else but tops. It certainly went over with a bang here. Raft, Fonda and Tamiroff supply plenty of action for their fans. Barrymore in his characterization of the loquacious editor is peerless. Dorothy Lamour gets away from her "typed" glamorous personification and it does her good. Top flight star is "Slicker," the seal. He'll win any audience. This picture is the realization of the theatre owner's dream of good box office. Dust off and hang out the occasionally used SRO sign on this one. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 4.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

ZAZA: Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr—A very excellent picture that had no draw. The same story in modern dress might have done some business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

COME ON, LEATHERNECKS: Richard Cromwell, Marsha Hunt, Bruce MacFarlane—This is a very satisfactory Leatherneck picture; in other words, the title tells you what to expect. A picture in which the marines do their stuff, and they sure do it efficiently and thrillingly and fills the bill nicely where they want action, some laughs and a very exciting finish. This was doubled with Jane Withers in "Rascals."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOME ON THE PRAIRIE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Average Gene Autry which pleased all. Good business. Played March 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Autry is still top western star in this town. Everyone liked this one. Has more action than the average Autry picture. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 22.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

STORM OVER BENGAL: Patric Knowles, Richard Cromwell, Rochelle Hudson—A nice action drama that pulled very well and pleased the patrons. Used as the second half of a double bill. It proved far more entertaining than the main feature. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 15-16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN JAMBOREE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Jean Rouverol—Perfect entertainment. Business not up to standard due to the bad weather and the epidemic. Not fault of the picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BORDER G-MAN: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—Business conditions are probably responsible for the fact that our westerns are not drawing this year. Played January 21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CONDEMNED WOMEN: Sally Eilers, Anne Shirley, Louis Hayward—Not an outstanding picture by any means but pleased those that saw it. Has enough action to keep an audience interested. Running time, 77 minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

GREAT MAN VOTES, THE: John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler—Just a picture to small business and small entertainment. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LAW WEST OF TOMBSTONE, THE: Harry Carey, Jean Rouverol, Tim Holt, Evelyn Brent—Good western and drew very well. When you want good acting, Harry Carey can do it. Running time, 72 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

MAD MISS MANTON: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Whitney Bourne, Frances Mercer—This clever comedy pleased all who attended. Business was about normal. Played February 18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Always a favorite here, McLaglen holds the interest. Better suited for Friday and Saturday. Lots of action. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 1-2.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY AT THE CIRCUS: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, Edgar Kennedy, Spanky MacFarland—A darn good Bargain Nite show. Lots of action and the kids eat it up. Running time, 68 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

Spectrum

SONGS AND BULLETS: Fred Scott, Al St. John—Fred Scott should make good as a western star. He has the right build for westerns and a fine voice. But no matter how good a voice a star has it will move no draw for western fans unless they deliver good western material. In many cases the singing slows up the action. For the most part it would be best to forget the singing in westerns unless it is group singing by cowboys or hillbilly groups. To get back to "Songs and Bullets," it is an acceptable westtern, and Fred Scott can go places with the right material. Al St. John is a good Pard as the comic relief. This was doubled with "That Certain Age."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALWAYS GOODBYE: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Binnie Barnes, Ian Hunter—I picked this up in place of a current attraction and while it is a good enough picture, it set an all time low record for two-day run. More of a woman's show and really not as good as I thought it was going to be.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN (reissue): Will Rogers, Mickey Rooney, Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable, Louise Dresser—Well, here's a picture that keeps the wolf from the door. Did some unexpected business on this one. Rogers' pictures still seem to please and what pleases us most, a lot of satisfied customers. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 24.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

DOWN ON THE FARM: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Louise Fazenda—Above average Jones Family feature, especially adaptable to rural communities. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Tyrone Power, Alice Brady—Played this very late. A splendid production that was ruined for us by a very poor print. So badly cut up the dialogue was ruined. Personally thought this much superior to "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Much better story and far more interesting. Had quite a few complaints about the fire scenes being too dark. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 10.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott, Henry Hull—What a picture! What crowds! What a fool I was to play it three days instead of five. My hat's off to Fox for this greatest money maker in years. This makes two bell ringers in a row for the number one company. People who have never been in our theatre before came out see Jesse and they were not disappointed. This picture will please every type of patron and it won't be hard to get them in to see it. Every member of the cast turned in fine performances with Henry Hull and Henry Fonda almost stealing the picture. It is certainly a joy to play one like this as you not only make some money but new friends as well. You can forget all the records you have when you play "Jesse James." I would like to shake the hand of Darryl F. Zanuck for this great picture and I extend congratulations to Mr. Zanuck and everyone connected with the making of this fine production.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly, Randolph Scott, Henry Hull—A grand, grand picture. Give this all the time you can and step on it for she clicks all the way everywhere. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—Better than "Little Miss Broadway." In fact, nothing wrong with it at all. The business was terrible, partly due to a mild epidemic of flu. Did not gross film rental. Expect to bring it back for one night and recoup part of my loss.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

JUST AROUND THE CORNER: Shirley Temple, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell, Armanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson—This little lady is still good and still does business. Running time, 71 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers, Gloria Stuart, Henry Wilcoxon, Helen Westley—Our audience reaction was favorable. Fair business only as people had to struggle to reach theatre because of blizzard. Played January 2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—One of the finest pictures it has been our pleasure to play. Walter Brennan outstanding in one of the greatest roles of his career. You can't say too much for "Kentucky," as it has everything that goes to make up a fine picture. Again the number one company delivers a top money maker that makes you glad you're in this business.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, Walter Brennan—Very good. The story is human and intensely interesting. Walter Brennan tops the cast but that is no deterrent for they all were good in their roles but as the crotchety old retainer he stood out above the rest. It is mass entertainment at its best. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew, Arleen Whelan, C. Aubrey Smith—We thought this a wonderful picture. No business.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre. Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Joan Davis, Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton—Very good with the Ritz Bros. at their best. Nat Pendleton can't be beat. Let's see him more often in big roles.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Arthur Treacher—I had the pleasure of seeing this fine picture at a screening and personally consider it one of the best pictures I have ever seen. I urge every exhibitor to see it before playing it. This is a different Temple picture, and the little girl certainly puts it over. See it and call my hand if I am wrong.—L. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Mary Maguire—Interesting story but terrible at the box. office. It's just another of those "quickies" for dual billing. When, oh when, will the producers start making pictures which are not intended for fillers like shorts? Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 22-23.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Robert Wilcox, Robert Kent, Borrah Minevitch's Gang—I would call this a good Jane Withers picture. To call this a Jane Withers picture is not quite telling it all. It as as much Borrah Minevitch and his gang's picture as it is Jane Withers'. Without Borrah Minevitch and his gang this picture would not be quite the same. They are a clever, talented group and could be used to advantage in other pictures. The picture pleased and drew better than average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SAFETY IN NUMBERS: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington—As usual the Jones Family pleased. Business was normal. Played January 14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SLAVE SHIP: Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney, Elizabeth Allan—Another old timer we thought would do some business judging by some of the rave reports but it sure was a disappointment. Title seemed to scare off the women, and the men that saw it didn't seem to be very enthused either. The print wasn't in very good shape. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 3.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHT, PLACE AND SHOW: Ritz Bros., Ethel Merman, Richard Arlen—Pass this one up. No business. We notice most reports on this have been the same, no business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

SUBMARINE PATROL: Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Preston Foster, George Bancroft—A good picture for any time. Business good. Running time, 95 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—A high class attraction to the lowest Sunday business on record. 20th Century's box office hits are certainly a long ways apart this season. Will have to do phenomenal business on "Jesse James" to come out on their contract. This picture and "Marie Antoinette" tend to prove that Tyrone Power is not a box office champion, certainly not in the smaller situations.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SUEZ: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Annabella—A fine picture which hit a blizzard and naturally the box office suffered. Think Annabella stole this picture. Give us more of her pictures. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TAIL SPIN: Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis, Charles Farrell—Plenty of thrills and excitement. Good for small towns and big enough to stand alone on your best nights. Nancy Kelly steals the honors but the girls were all okay. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 27-28.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

UP THE RIVER: Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Preston Foster, Arthur Treacher—This was a good Saturday night show and did above average business. Running time, 75 minutes.—J. A. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr, Sigrid Gurie, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—One of the best "unusual type" of motion picture that it has been my pleasure to see for quite some time. My audience reacted to this one very favorably. It has a surprise ending, too. Splendid acting by Charles Boyer, Sigrid Gurie and Hedy Lamarr. I think you all deserve to take a bow and the applause of the whole country. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr, Sigrid Gurie, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—Comments were mostly very good but weather conditions were only fair and business was terrible. Hardly grossed film rental.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—Do not believe this deserved the somewhat numerous kicks it received in these columns. We played it on Friday-Saturday change and not a single squawk. Several remarked that it was very good and we thought the same. Contrary to reports, the story is not hard to follow and it is very timely now. Good entertainment all the way with a smash finish.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—Very fine picture. Does not have the popular appeal for a small town like mine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DRUMS: Sabu, Raymond Massey, Raymond Livesey, Valerie Hobson—More kicks on this than anything we have run for many months. Too English. The third night's business set a new house record, less than $5 gross! The word-of-mouth advertising must have been pretty bad. A very few said it was OK.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTOR JOINS REPORTERS

One new contributor and three others who have not made reports in some time are among exhibitors whose opinions appear in these columns. The newcomer is

J. F. HEARD, JR., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga.

The three prodigal contributors are:

LEW BREWERTON, Capitol Theatre, Rayond, Alberta, Canada

J. A. FAIR, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa

E. F. INGRAM, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

Mr. Brewerton's reports appeared last week. The others are listed in these pages.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Nancy Carroll, Eugene Pallette—The title must have kept them away, as the picture was very good and weather conditions the best this winter. Receipts were the second lowest mid-week total we have had in the 18 months we have run here.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—This pleased just about 100% and had many comments all of the type we like to hear. The best from U. A. so far this season. Ralph Bellamy is especially good in the part of the police inspector. The story is heavily coated with comedy and that is what most everyone goes for nowdays.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Your patrons will like this picture. Played it day and date with Des Moines. They all went away pleased. A mighty good Sunday picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 26-27.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

YOUNG IN HEART, THE: Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Paulette Goddard, Roland Young, Billie Burke—Here is one of the season's most satisfactory pictures to screen. But the gross was far from satisfactory. Swell cast, swell story and first class production throughout, but we could not get our patrons interested. Paulette Goddard is a welcome addition to the screen and should develop a valuable following. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 19-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK BANDIT: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—Although the weather was not unseasonable, we fell way down at the box office on this. Played February 11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

DANGER ON THE AIR: Nan Grey, Donald Woods, William Lundigan—The title misled our patrons and business was below normal. Played January 28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GHOST TOWN RIDERS: Bob Bayer, Fay Shannon—The first and last Bob Baker we ever hope to play. If we could have set in another picture on short booking would have done so. Running time, 54 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS EXCITING NIGHT: Charles Ruggles, Ona Munson—Unusual to say the least. In fact, a little bit too unusual. My patrons thought this picture a bit too silly and lacking a real good plot. Sorry to say we had a few complaints and walkouts on this one. Can't honestly recommend this picture as being good. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LAST EXPRESS, THE: Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent—A fair "B" picture. It passes by an hour of fairly good entertainment. Especially good for those Saturday night audiences. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 4.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

LAST WARNING, THE: Preston Foster, Frank Jenks, Frances Robinson—O. K. film fare. Used as surprise feature, it pleased. Nothing outstanding but will entertain generally. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 17-18.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mischa Auer, Helen Broderick—Just fair to small houses. Very little entertainment. Hardly pleased. Running time, 72 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—With fine weather we drew somewhat better than normal for this action picture. Played February 4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carroll—I can only add my portion of praise to this delightful picture and it is every bit as good as they say it is but the drawing power for us was not quite so good. Perhaps, due to the flu epidemic which was given much publicity, so let us blame this rather than the picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carroll—Very, very good. This picture is a credit to Deanna Durbin and Universal both. And Deanna Durbin is a credit to the picture and Universal. Our hat is off to you both. With more such splendid pictures, actresses and producers, this theatre business would be a much pleasanter one. Play it by all means. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

THAT CERTAIN AGE: Deanna Durbin, Melvyn Douglas, Jackie Cooper, John Halliday, Irene Rich, Nancy Carroll—Played this late. Good material is so scarce. Good B product didn't stand extended run but entertaining all the way. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Did not pull in the proportion it pleased. A dandy comedy that deserved a better box office showing than it received locally. Those who came were well repaid and comments were all to the good. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 17-18.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HARD TO GET: Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Charles Winninger, Allen Jenkins—Just an average picture to small business. Miss de Havilland never was more attractive than in this role. Charles Winninger always gives a good performance and Dick Powell is well liked but this story is a little weak for such a good cast. Running time, 79 minutes. Played Febrary 24-25.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

AIR EXPRESS

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gloria Dickson, Gale Page, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—An answer to a showman's prayer. A beautiful picture crammed full of action that brings them in and sends them out satisfied. Good any day of the week. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gale Page, Gloria Dickson, Janet Chapman, Allen Jenkins—Very good action drama photographed in color which adds much to the picture's effectiveness. Pleased the patrons and pulled extra business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 24-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

KING OF THE UNDERWORLD: Kay Francis, Humphrey Bogart—Another gangster picture to add to the list of many that have come through this season. I hope they get them all killed off. It's getting so that when you have one of another subject, you have to advertise not a gangster picture or they figure that you are slipping one in on them. Warners have done a swell job of killing off Kay Francis and this one won't help her any.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NANCY DREW, DETECTIVE: Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas—Used as a surprise prevue feature, this gave splendid results. These two youngsters gave the patrons many hearty laughs and a few thrills. If the next of this series holds to the level of this, patrons will welcome the picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Febrary 24-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—The old hackneyed story of the girl and boy reporter. Ask me how many times it has been done? I wouldn't even guess. But I know well that it has been done too many times. When they run out of ideas they produce a newspaper story and the audience groans.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OFF THE RECORD: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Bobby Jordan—Fairly good newspaper yarn which did only average business. No complaints. Played February 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OVER THE WALL: Dick Foran, John Litel, June Travis, Dick Purcell—Only fair. Warden Lawes reveals all (so advertisements state). Wonder what it was? We missed it. Just a fair program picture and nothing more.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, John Litel—Perfect entertainment but failed to do the business anticipated. Very disappointed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Good. Will stand up. Aviation picture always click. Pleased generally. Running time, 89 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AUTO CLINIC: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Very clever.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, No. 1: College Songs—College songs for a college town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, No. 2—A very fine issue of this excellent series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamost, Iowa. General patronage.

THREE MISSING LINKS: Three Stooges—One of the best for the Stooges. Kept patrons in an uproar. Running time, 17 minutes.—J. F. Heard, Jr., Strand Theatre, Washington, Ga. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAIN'S CHRISTMAS, THE: Captain and the Kids—These cartoons aren't so hot.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

DOUBLE DIVING: Pete Smith Specialties—Too long on one subject. It should have been divided and more diversified. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL FAIR AT THE FAIR: Color Classics—It's a fairly fair short. Get it? Pun. Running time, eight minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

ALWAYS KICKIN': Color Classics—Good color cartoon which pleased the children.—E. M. Freiberger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BULLDOZING THE BULL: Popeye Cartoon—O.K. Running time, 10 minutes.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

EASY ON THE ICE: Headliner—Dandy. Play it. Your audience will like it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada. General patronage.

FROLICKING FROGS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very good one reeler on training frogs.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOONLAND: Popeye the Sailor—You will like one. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. A. Moore, State Theatre, Clarence, Iowa. Rural patronage.

HOUSE BUILDER-UPPER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—Good Popeye short. Created lots of laughs. Running time, eight minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BLUE GRASS: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Splendid sport reel with some beautiful shots of the turf's outstanding horseflesh. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CAFE RENDEZVOUS: Nu-Atlas Productions—Just another short. Nothing much to recommend it. Neither bad nor good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

CLEAN SWEEP, A: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—One long laugh from start to finish. Better than average comedy. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GANDY THE GOOSE IN DOOMSDAY; Terry-Toons—Quite an improvement over other 20th Century-Fox short subjects. Running time, eight minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

GOOSE FLIES HIGH, THE: Terry-Toons—Not so hot! Running time, eight minutes.—Mrs. Ann Stone, Star Theatre, Unity, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

ONE GUN GARY IN THE NICK OF TIME: Terry-Toons—Good enough black and white cartoon.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CAMPUS CINDERELLA: Johnnie Davis—Good two-reel musical in color with basketball background. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CLEANING UP: Cross and Dunn—A fair comedy with excellent vaudeville acts that pleased all. Do not be afraid of this one. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLD RUSH DAZE: Merrie Melodies—An excellent cartoon. Enjoyed by all. Lots of laughs. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HAPPY FELTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—When a big, fat man tries to dance and his trousers are too short when in full dress the reaction to such a reel is bad no matter how good the music is. The eye reaction spoilt the entire reel due to these two faults. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NATURE'S MIMICS: Color Parade—The animals are good but the color bad. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NOW THAT SUMMER IS GONE: Merrie Melodies—Average colored cartoon—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TREACHEROUS WATERS: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—The first poor Gibbons we have ever played. Nothing thrilling about it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serial

Columbia

FLYING G-MEN: No. 3—James Craig, Lorna Gray—A good serial with a number of good tie-ups that is well worth the time you spend on them. And audiences seem to enjoy this serial very much. If you play serials try this one.—Pearce Parkhurst, State Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

Neligh, Nebraska

To the Editor of the Herald:

A friend came around to the hotel today and took me for a ride up to O'Neill, where I had a nice visit with Georgia Racely, who operates the Royal theatre. There I learned two things that pleased me very much, one that she is likely soon to have a new theatre and the other that she is playing "Angels with Dirty Faces." But then, Georgia put O'Neill on the map a long time ago.

A few nights ago I saw the Jones family in "Down on the Farm," a picture that pleased me very much for two reasons, one being that it was a very pleasing comedy of farm life and the other that Louise Fazenda appeared in it, and when Louise appears in a picture one can always expect some funny comedy, and seeing her in this picture I was reminded of the two times I called at her home in Van Nuys, Cal., last winter to see her, and was advised she was not at home, which was not much comedy for me. If it were permissible for me to offer her a bit of advice I would suggest that she try and teach her cast husband, Cy, the difference between a jug of apple cider and a jug of corn licker, as Cy seemed to fail to appreciate the difference until it was too late. Then too, she should learn to hold a gun tight to her shoulder when she fired it, so it wouldn't kick her over. Mary Walthall could give her some valuable instructions.

Almost every mail brings me letters of greetings from the boys from all over the country, from Ohio to the Pacific, from Spokane, Wash., to Tombstone, Ariz. The regrettable thing about it is that I can't answer them personally, and all I can do is to say here, thank you, boys, thank you.

Refugee Benefit in St. Louis

Tent No. 4 of the Variety Club of St. Louis last week held a dinner-dance at the Coronado hotel at $5 a person and a benefit performance at the Fanchon and Marco Fox theatre, the entire proceeds being donated to aid German refugee children regardless of race or creed. More than 700 attended the dinner and the theatre attendance was recorded at 6,000. Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, Joan Edwards, Clark Dennis and the Modernaires appeared at both functions. General admission at the theatre was $1.

Patriotic Pictures Must Prove Their Value, Says Scully

William ("Bill") Scully, general sales manager for Universal Pictures, will have to have "proved" to him the efficacy of patriotic films at the boxoffice, he said after his arrival in New York Friday from the coast, where he was in conference with studio officials on 1939-40 product plans.

"We have no program set for any one definite type of product," he said, "patriotic films or any other." Stressing the flexibility of the new Universal product, in a press conference on Monday, Mr. Scully quoted a remark made last year by Nate Blumberg, president, to this effect, "What's the use of making doughnuts when they want ice cream?"

With his conversation implying a desire of the Universal management to avoid controversy on the screen, Mr. Scully emphasized his position by saying "We're in the show business." And further, "If they (the exhibitors) get good pictures, business will be good," and "This company has no 'trends.' The truth is, we are going to make what the public wants, or at least what we think the public wants. I'd like to meet the guy who can tell me what the public prefers in any given period."

With 18 sound stages now in Universal City, Mr. Scully said there would be an increase in the Universal budget over last year's. With results to date most heartening, he said, on four current films, Deanna Durbin's "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Crosby's "East Side of Heaven," "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," and "The Mikado," the company is trying to add new names. "The Mikado" will open at the New York Astor next month, following the run of "Pygmalion," and will be set on the same basis of a continuous run at popular prices.

Universal will hold regional sales meetings next month, with one in an as yet undesignated eastern city, and the other two probably in Chicago and San Francisco.

With 14 pictures to release in addition to the 26 already released on this year's schedule, Universal's new season program calls for 43 features, of which three will be made by producer Harry Edington; and 14 westerns, of which half will star Johnny Mack Brown and half Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. As for shorts: there will be 52 one-reel subjects, 13 two-reel musicals, which have been substituted for the Mentone subjects, and one three-reel "Americanism" subject, the "March of Freedom." Mr. Scully said that he believed there still was a market for "class shorts."

The Universal executive will remain in New York for several weeks, preparatory to a swing around the company's territories.

Alfred Hitchcock Wants Political Film Subjects

Alfred Hitchcock, British director of such pictures as "The Lady Vanishes," "The 39 Steps" and the recently completed "Jamaica Inn," said that Hollywood might well deal with political themes, considering the public importance of world politics today. Mr. Hitchcock, who arrived in New York last Thursday, will direct "Rebecca" for Selznick-International in Hollywood.

Last Friday Mr. Hitchcock lectured on "The Making of Melodrama and the Creation of Suspense" at the Yale School of Drama. He characterized the trend in films as "toward blending character into action melodrama," which he said was a difficult problem because "character is delineated through dialogue, which tends to slow up the pace."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

"Fair-minded" Showmanship Is Called For

Whether or not every Round Tabler realizes it, the "most colossal" showmanship jobs done this year are to be credited to the San Francisco and New York World's Fairs. Pick up most any newspaper or magazine and it's a poor publication indeed that has not beaten loudly and continuously in advance for the benefit of one or both expositions.

Nations the world over vie with fabulous exhibits. Advertisers and concessionaires are using every trick of unique construction and streamlined ballyhoo to bedazzle and beguile. On the widest scale ever attempted, the country's appetite for entertainment and edification is being sharpened by the promise of a gargantuan feast of fun, frolic and fable. From early reports, it appears that everyone from everywhere who can dig up the dough is set to visit at least one of the seaboards to satisfy that newly awakened hunger. And with the bargain travel rates established by railroad, bus and boat lines, plus the numerously inexpensive all-expense trips, that gnawing hunger is not going to be so difficult to appease.

All of which means what to theatres miles away from either spot? It means that both Fairs are setting a new high in showmanship that will profit theatremen who realize it and react adversely where the fact is not recognized.

Where there is no startling comparison with similar enterprises, the home town theatre and showmanship employed to exploit it may be tops in the opinion of the average patron. But whether the opinion remains after a World's Fair trip is something else again. It is entirely possible, back home and still bewildered by the Arabian Nights come to life, that Mr. and Mrs. Local will not be as impressed.

What, then, is the theatreman to do? Well, he just has to go "World's Fair" himself to keep his prestige intact. To invest his undertakings with as much Fair atmosphere as is called for, an immediate check-up of operation is in order. The theatreman must get in line with a physical brush-up for the house and a mental shake-up of his advertising procedure.

That does not mean a bankroll for decorative doodads and gingerbread, nor does it mean running hog-wild on advertising. It does point out the advantage of refurbishing the theatre colorfully. And, more important, the tone and quality of festive showmanship is to be adjusted in keeping if there is to be no letdown when the home folks return.

Theatre business being what it is, there is no point here in emphasizing any of the weaknesses in operation and presentation that may not appear too glaring in the ordinary routine of exhibition. But the theatreman with his ear to the ground will go about the business of strengthening these weaknesses by welcoming the higher standards created by the World's Fairs and adapting them to his own immediate uses.

AN OBVIOUS ADVANTAGE

While the procedure may not be general in every situation, there are managers who encourage with evident pleasure whatever budding talent is shown by lesser members of the staff. Only a few weeks back, the photo pages carried a shot of Harry Unterfort congratulating one of his ushers on the construction of a "Frankenstein" plaster head used by the theatreman for lobby display at Keith's, Syracuse. And in this section is reproduced a life-size figure of Charlie McCarthy, the work of an usher at the Murphy, Wilmington, Ohio, and accepted for exploitation by Manager Bill Nasses, who tells the story.

The participation of the house personnel in advertising conferences and campaigns is an advantage that more managers should enjoy. Exploitation ideas of merit have often come from these unexpected sources and the staff goodwill to be obtained from such cooperation is hardly to be discounted.

It's an oft-repeated truism that a captain builds up his own reputation while building up those of his lieutenants.

Discovering that one of his ushers was talented in wood modeling, Manager Bill Nasses, Murphy, Wilmington, Ohio, had the youth turn out an image of Charlie McCarthy large enough for a boy to be planted inside, the dummy then placed out front to plug "Huckleberry Finn". As passersby would stop to gaze, the hidden youngster would say, "I'll mow you down if you don't fall in love with Mickey Rooney in 'Huckleberry Finn'."

Hear ye! Hear ye! Thus called the Town Crier sent out on the streets of Evansville, Ind., to exploit pictures put over by Jack Mercer, manager of the Majestic Theatre. Lad stopped passersby and handed them pink cards with copy reading "Don't let the season pass without seeing—", etc., etc., this as part of City Manager Bob Suits' campaign to sell the theatre's forthcoming attractions.

For "Devil's Island" engagement at the Paramount Theatre, Salem, Mass., Manager James A. Field forwards photo shown above, left, of lobby display constructed by theatre artist, Leo Auger, and posted one week in advance of playdate. Additional miniature silhouette cutout figures were placed on title letters to highlight the action.

Peanuts, popcorn and pink lemonade were made available to patrons of the Princess Theatre, Nashville, Tenn., according to Assistant Ben F. Sweeney, during run of "Peck's Bad Boy with the Circus". Stationed under Big Top, clown dispensed the free drinks while amplified phonograph played "The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down"

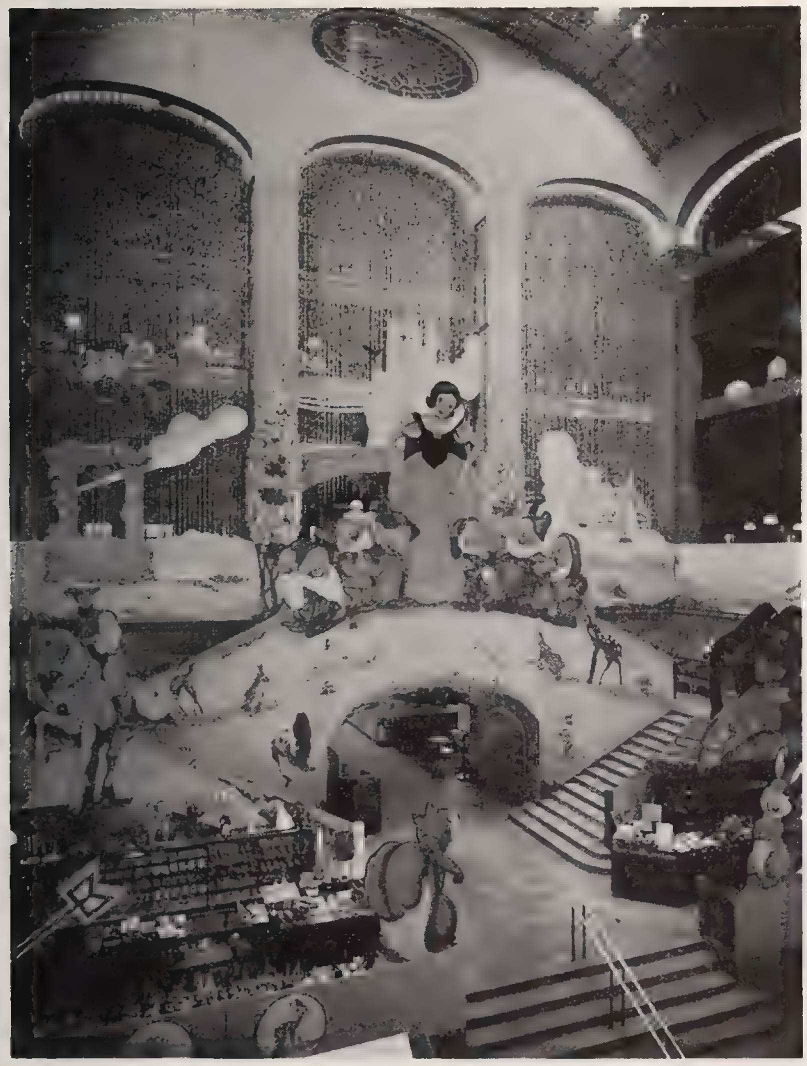
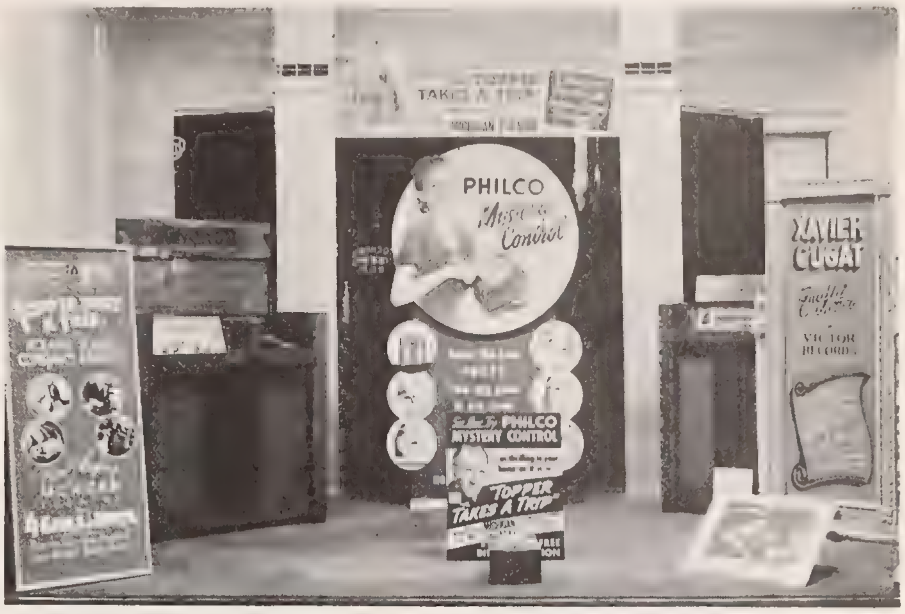
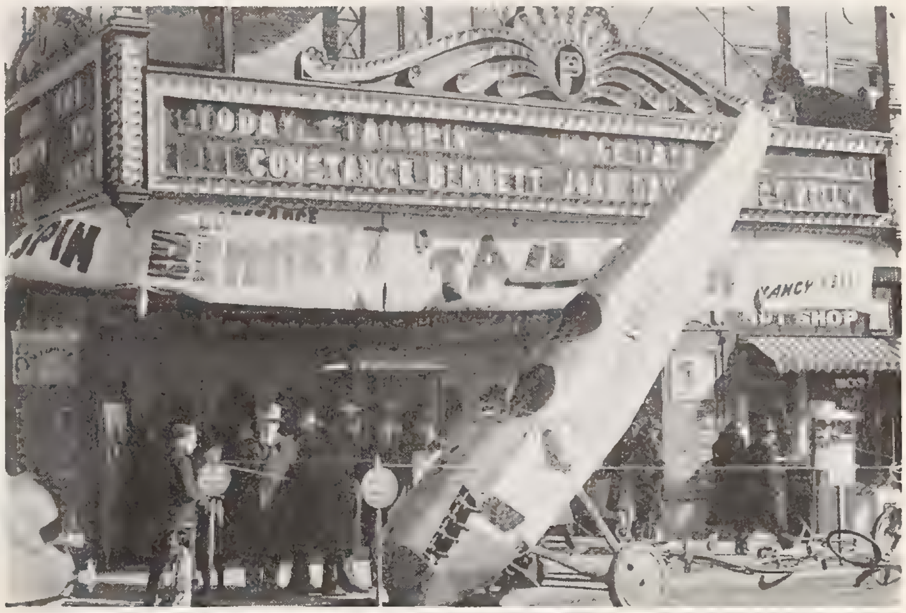
Spectacular animated displays advertising Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific" have been completed for showing in ten key cities where they will be placed in downtown ticket offices of the Union Pacific. They are the work of Duke Wellington, formerly of the art staff of the Paramount Theatre in New York City, working under direction of Cliff Lewis, head of Paramount's West Coast ad forces.

Carl Wallman, RKO Radio general manager for the Scandinavian countries, forwards photo below as sample of the type of exploitation given "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs". Shown is main floor of Nordiska Kompaniet, largest department store in Stockholm, which featured a giant display. All the figures revolved and various colored lights were centered upon their movements. "Snow White" measures approximately 15 feet in height, while the other figures are about 8 feet high.

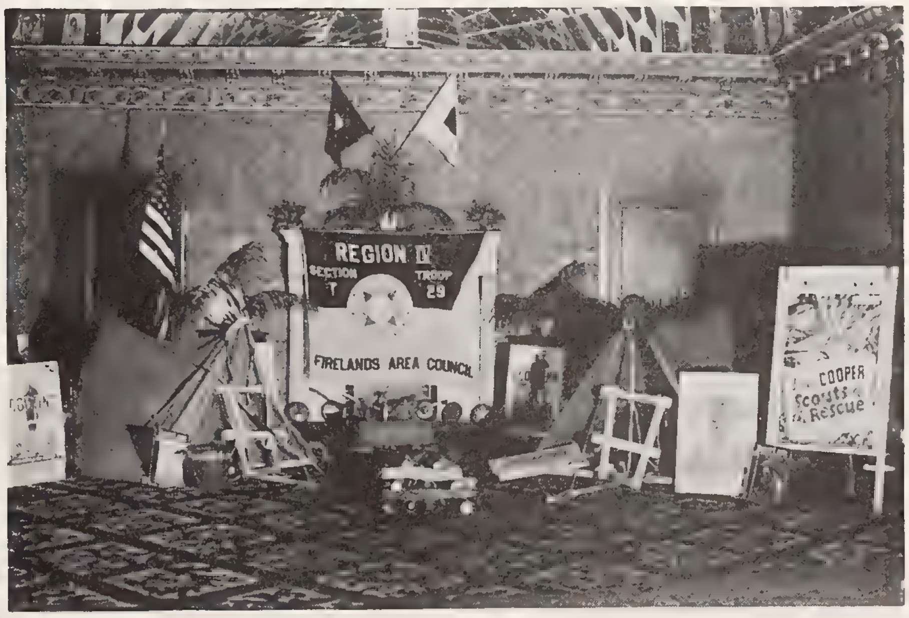




For "Topper Takes a Trip" at the Michigan, Detroit, Manager Robert Corbin and Art Catlin, United Artists exploiteer, landed a display in downtown music store window rarely given over for outside exploitation, according to Earl J. Hudson, United Detroit Theatres ad head.



Week ahead and during run of "Tail Spin" at the Paramount Theatre, Anderson, Ind., Manager Harry Van Noy planted plane shown on photo above in front of his theatre. Playdates and cost were printed on banners placed on either side of ship. That's Van Noy, himself, standing at left of plane.



Reported in local dailies as one of the best Scout displays put on locally in connection with recent Boy Scout week in Lorain, Ohio, was Louie Lamm's lobby at Warner's Palace Theatre. Promoted from the Scouts' organization was paraphernalia shown.

"Fortnighter" Appointments Reach New High in Awards

The third Preliminary period of the 1939 Quigley Awards marks the highest number of Fortnighters yet appointed as 12 theatremen are selected for their effective handling of the various single promotions briefly described below under names and situations of winners. Details of the exploitations selected in addition to any described in this issue will be published next week. Then entries of all those holding Fortnighter Appointments voted during the initial Quarter will be judged for the Quarterly Plaques and other distinctions. Previous winners of Fortnight Appointments are invited to compete in the final two-week Preliminary for further honors.

Official Welcome Arranged by Gooch for Local Starlet

The "local girl makes good" angle was used effectively by Manager Francis J. Gooch, at the Uptown, Bath, Maine, on the recent visit to her home town of Iva Stewart, former "Chesterfield girl" now under contract to 20th Century-Fox. Learning of the visit from the starlet's family, Gooch planted sufficient advance publicity to bring a crowd to the station where the Round Tabler was on hand with newspaper reporters to supervise the arrival.

First public appearance arranged by Francis was meeting with the Mayor who presented the key to the city. At this time Miss Stewart was interviewed by representatives of out-of-town newspapers, following which she visited local five and ten cent store to meet former fellow-workers. Highlight of trip was reception on stage of the Uptown where representative of the Governor officially welcomed the starlet. This was followed by a personal interview conducted by Gooch in which 20th Century-Fox and coming attractions were adequately mentioned. Gooch also found the interview slant effective the following day during a visit to the high school where as guests of the drama club, a question and answer program was conducted with Francis as master of ceremonies.

Starlet Meets Governor

Later in the week the theatreman presented Miss Stewart to the Governor at the State Capitol where pictures for the press were posed and presentation arranged to meet leading legislators. Special luncheon was given in honor of the visitor. The various wire services carried details of the ceremonies run by leading dailies in Portland, Maine and Boston in addition to other papers in leading Maine cities. Visit finished with shopping tour arranged by Gooch on a Saturday night, stops being made at leading stores in Bath, with much publicity accruing. In all of her public appearances Miss Stewart wore the costume in which she appeared on her cross-country tour with the other starlets exploiting the 20th Century picture "Tail Spin." In addition, Gooch reports the low-cost campaign effective in building up much interest in her coming attractions.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Flies "Dawn Patrol" Print to Airport

Played up in local papers as a tribute to a fine aviation film, City Manager Seymour L. Morris for the date of "Dawn Patrol" at the State, Cortland, N. Y., arranged to have the film flown from the Buffalo Exchange to the local airport. To safeguard the prompt delivery of the print, a $50,000 insurance policy was taken out with local insurance firm, who took a large ad in paper announcing their pride in being chosen for the policy. Local Texaco distributor also came through with sizeable ad, stressing fact that their gas was used in flying the plane. City officials, including Chamber of Commerce, were on hand to greet the flyer on arrival at the airport.

THEATREMEN MARK SPRING SEASON WITH PROMOTIONS FOR EASTERTIDE

Style Shows, Egg Hunts and Contests Among Campaigns Planned by Theatremen to Tiein with Local Merchants

On the threshold of Spring, theatremen everywhere are prepared to launch their seasonal activities marking the Easter time as the official stepping-off point. With this in mind a listing of the most effective exploitations used last year are here set down. Egg hunts and coloring contests, spring fashion shows, bunny displays and giveaways, special Easter kid shows, lobby displays and other angles were all given attention. Many of these campaigns will be repeated or adapted for further use in the coming weeks.

The always reliable egg coloring contest is an annual tiein made by Johnny Newkirk, at Loew's Granada, Cleveland, tiein made with his local community paper, which breaks page one for the event. Cash and ticket prizes are offered and entries placed on display in lobby week ahead. At the Fox Carmel, in Hollywood, Dick Moss introduced a new serial at his Easter Saturday matinee that included a special seasonal revue staged by well-known neighborhood dancing school and so advertised. Paul Kleinerman's Easter Saturday show was a Charlie McCarthy party made up of a two-hour cartoon and comedy show plus gifts of dummy dolls, eggs baskets and plush bunnies.

Egg Rolling Found Popular

Downtown Cleveland Loew theatres also tiein the egg contest with the Cleveland Press with egg entries sent to the paper's promotion departments and later displayed in windows of leading department store. The Loewmen also go for the annual egg hunt put on with one of the dailies in city park. Prizes are promoted from participating merchants. And another egg stunt that stands up is the one put on by the Boston Loew theatres. Joe Di Pesa reports last year's egg rolling contest for promoted prizes, from the steps of the State House to the bandstand in the Commons, the city park. Papers go for this in a big way.

In Cleburne, Texas, last year, George Limerick, now in Enid, Okla., put on his annual live bunny Saturday morning matinee with 30 of the bunnies given away on a lucky number idea. In addition every child attending received candy, toys or other prizes. Show was widely advertised with the rabbits displayed out front a week ahead.

Live Bunnies Dress Lobby

Ed McBride had a lot of success in Syracuse with the egg rolling and coloring contests and no doubt will work something as effective in Providence, for Loew's, his present situation. McBride also created a distinctive lobby attraction with a live bunny house on a platform with fence around. The house was centered with entrances for the rabbits. Easter flowers, cutout bunnies and eggs heightened the display.

MGM "SHORTS" CONTEST EXTENDED TO MARCH 15

To give late-comers a chance to get in on the contest sponsored by MGM's "Shortstory", the deadline previously announced as of March 1 has now been extended to March 15, according to an announcement in the February issue. Entries, plus the usual "evidence", must be received by "Shortstory", at 1540 Broadway, no later than that time.

Prizes, for the best execution of any single idea that has appeared in any issue of the magazine on any given short, are American Airlines all-expense trip to the studios or to the New York World's Fair and, second, all-expense trip to Bermuda.

Spring style shows of course will not be neglected and different ideas are being planned. In Boston, Jack Granara, RKO theatres' ad head, tied in with local furrier for newsreel pictures of the latest styles. Society debs and other models were used with the merchant sponsoring the cost in addition to store displays and newspaper ads.

In Cleveland, a section of the spacious State theatre lobby was used for a twice-daily fashion show, presented at three and at nine, models and all apparel to be shown furnished by cooperating store and the roped-off section colorfully lighted and decorated. On a tieup with local florist association, last year Easter roses and lilies were distributed at the State and other Loew houses to women patrons.

Bonnet Contest Attracts

An old-fashioned Easter bonnet contest has always proved a winner in the Cleveland Warner theatre district, according to Dick Wright. Tiein is made with local stores where contestants bring their entries to be registered. About a week ahead, a committee selects the 12 best entries, which are given display in prominent window. Public is invited to select the funniest, selections to be accompanied with a short statement giving their reasons why. Few days ahead of Easter prizes are presented from the stage. Stores advertise the tiein in various ways and awards prizes of new Easter clothes.

Another bonnet idea suggested by Wright is presentation of drawing of some prominent woman star in coming attraction, with entrants asked to design a hat most fitting to the star. Contest of this nature is tied in with newspapers as well as participating store.

The Boston Loew houses also find the style show a decided draw. Style parade is held on stage with audience invited to choose the individual model they favor. Extensive drive to put this over is aided by newspaper tiein plus merchant buildup.

Style show on Easter Sunday put on at matinee and night works out well for Louie Charninsky, at the Capitol, Dallas. Last year, Louie invited men as well as women to parade in their Easter ensembles with prizes promoted from the stores. Unique showing obtained generous newspaper support, as did a Spring wedding for the same theatreman. Young couple married on the stage were given complete housekeeping equipment, all of which was promoted.

In Hot Springs, Ark., Clyde Smith used the male-and female style show slant by rounding up local socialites of both sexes to model. Smith leaves nothing uncovered to make this an important event from the tieins with leading stores, promotion of orchestra, wide newspaper publicity, co-op ads, etc.

Flower Shows Favored

Horticultural lobby exhibit in conjunction with local Garden Club also works well for Smith, as does children's Easter revue put on with leading dancing schools. This last also obtains support of costumers, florists and other interested merchants who advertise the showing.

Egg hunts are stand-out events for Matt Saunders, at the Poli, Bridgeport, Conn., and for Les Pollock, at Loew's, Rochester. One of Saunders' most effective tieins included burying of papier mâché eggs in city park, each egg containing guest ticket. Other eggs hold new pennies and much is made of the event with the local press.

In Rochester, Pollock requires children to fill out coupon in cooperating paper to be brought to the scene of the hunt. Entrants are given official hunt tag which must be worn in order to receive consideration for prizes, the first of which is given to youngster locating the "golden egg."

Colorful setpieces for lobby display are included in most every Easter campaign and in New Orleans, Rodney Toups, at Loew's State, created a giant egg, constructed of plaster, highlighted and spotted with metallics. Center of egg was opened to show a number of small chicks emerging carrying cards plugging the Easter attraction and wishing patrons compliments of the season.

At the Erie, in Hugo, Okla., J. Galy Varnell also used the giant cutout egg idea which carried plugs for the current attractions as well as Easter greetings. Alongside, holding egg, was giant cutout bunny, dressed in holiday attire.

"Go to Church" Drive Clicks

Found highly acceptable last year in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was Al Cox's campaign for a "go to church on Easter Sunday" which received the full cooperation of community heads and leading merchants who ran the line in all newspaper ads, the theatre carrying out the same thought in a brief trailer. Parking lots extended free courtesies during the time of service and street cars offered special fares to those attending church. Participation of leading church choirs in festivities in the Public Square was also listed to tie in with the

"April Fool's Prevue" Found Boxoffice Draw

Limerick Reports Ideas Planned for Annual Event

In Texas and Oklahoma the Griffith theatremen have exploited with considerable success an annual "April Fool's Prevue" which takes place midnight March 31, details of which have been done in former years have been carried in these pages. Usually, name of feature attraction is not revealed. Now George Limerick, City manager, End, Okla., sets down some ideas he has used before with great success and intends incorporating again in his campaign this year.

For instance, two weeks in advance doormen were dressed in girl's clothes and girl employees as boys. Limerick reports this a natural for laughs among patrons in similar towns, since the theatre personnel is well known to all. In addition each employee carried small cards plugging the event.

Gag Novelties Offered

Newspaper and lobby advertising copy plugged free novelty coat hanger and cigarette lighter to be given everyone attending the Prevue. The novelties proved to be nothing more than the old-time gag of a nail and a match which were prepared in advance in imprinted coin envelopes. Copy for newspaper ads and novelty handbills a week in advance ran as follows:

"Yes, it's true, the entire staff of the Aztec Theatre is going nuts April Fool's Eve at the annual Prevue just to show you a good time. Anything is liable to happen and probably will happen. The manager may even try to buy a ticket from you. The usher will probably ask you to show him a seat. There will be a big special stage attraction. Fun for all, all for fun. The picture—well, that's the secret. The stars—well, that's our secret, too, but we promise you that you'll have the time of your life when you attend this big April Fool's Eve Prevue."

Copy was ilustrated with cut of monkey in reverse followed by manager's signature cut at the bottom. All lettering on the changeable sign and marquee was upside down, leaving patrons to guess as to what the feature picture would be.

Silly copy of all kinds was stressed in window cards using a large border of nuts and screws broken with "Foo and Goo" dialect as has recently become popular in the comic strip "Smoky Stover." In addition to the newspaper and outdoor advertising, George also found profitable, buildup on classified page.

Street Stunts Attract

Special stage attraction was advertised for the "Prevue" which took the form of an old-fashioned victrola on a chair placed in center of stage, victrola being started when the grand drape was raised.

Street stunts were numerous including bally with man in reversed clothing selling nuts, bolts and screws with back banner to the effect that he was in town to catch the Prevue. Old bill folds and purses that had accumulated around the theatres in the past year were purposely "lost" at random on city streets. Heralds inserted offered free admission to finders.

One week in advance, doorman, cashiers and ushers were equipped with breast bands, large papier mache ears and artificial hands with hand-shake buzzers.

For added excitement, night of the show, Limerick purchased large punch board, with everyone entitled to a punch. All punch numbers ending in the letter "o" entitled holders to free admissions. All paper in frames for the coming attractions was turned upside down, and the water fountain adjusted for a surprise spray.

Manager Sells Peanuts

Ushers used lanterns to show people to their seats, manager and assistant sold peanuts and popcorn up and down the aisles and manager was equipped with a small baby lace cap tied under his chin and completed the picture by smoking a huge black cigar. For added laughs during the show the help rode bicycles up and down the aisles.

Before the feature, cartoon was run upside down with the dialogue in reverse. While this was going in one machine, a newsreel was run off on the other and to add to the confusion, slide was run to the effect that the operator was calling his wife. The follow up on this was that the public address system was set so that audience could hear the conversation.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchants Aid Egan On "Kentucky" Date

Innumerable window tieups were effected by Pete Egan, Palace Theatre, Calgary, as buildup for opening of "Kentucky," which included riding togs, florist display stressing the technicolor and showing the natural beauty of flowers as compared with the beauty of natural colored technicolor. Drug store also featured a display of cameras and kodachrome film for taking natural color prints, tiein cards were used in all windows. All ads week ahead carried line calling attention to the fact that Smoky Saunders, Calgary born jockey, appeared in picture.

For "Brother Rat," Egan, through cooperation of leading cafe formed a club, and every person sitting at a certain table had to wear a "Brother Rat" hat during his meal. All shoe shiners at store also wore these hats, as did newsboys and entire theatre staff, which greeted patrons by title.

Local hockey stars went in parade for a group of Calgary sportsmen, when a special screening of "Duke of West Point" was presented at the Film Exchange building. With the story built around the annual hockey game between Royal Military College and West Point, much publicity was garnered for the date in local papers.

Stage Style Shows Feature Campaigns For Easter Tieins

usual fashion parade. Newsreel shots were taken of prominent residents arriving at the churches and strolling in the Easter parade, the reel shown at the theatre during the next week.

Going further back in the Easter files discloses details of the annual Cotton Fashion Show put on by George Limerick, in Texas, showing bathing suit styles and beach apparel. Also noteworthy was Dave Dallas' fashion show at the Grand, Holdenville, Okla., each model carrying cards advertising a coming attraction.

Merchants Tied to Opening

A Formal Spring Opening was contributed by Herb Grove, at the Fort, Rock Island, Ill., wherein merchants cooperated on a window-shopping contest the night previous to the opening. All the new fashions were displayed at one time, each window containing a star photo or scene still from some coming attraction. The public was invited to list names of stars and picture in which they appeared, were to appear and to name the picture from which the scene stills were taken. Answers were brought to the theatre and prizes were contributed by the merchants.

Mike Guttman put on a style show at the Colonial, Watertown, S. D., for which he created a unique and inexpensive idea. In building a runway, he used a turntable in the center made of an old truck wheel covered with flooring and run by small motor. As each model stepped upon and posed on the turntable, the wheel revolved slowly for a smart effect.

In Washington, D. C., Warner ad head Frank La Falce, created an attractive stage setting for an Easter style show with a huge book, the pages turning as each model stepped out from the book. Covers duplicating the fashion magazines were used for a closer tiein.

Exton Plugs March Dates

Out in Kenosha, Wis., Bill Exton officially announced the Spring season with a "March Parade of March Hits." Campaign started with trailers selling March as an outstanding month of hit pictures, the various attractions booked also included. Entire house, interior and outside, was decorated in keeping with the personnel wearing imprinted label ribbons as a follow-up. Merchants were tied in to plug the month, ads carrying "we join hands with the Kenosha," copy.

An Easter organ novelty that clicked for Guy Martin, in South Bend, Ind., had the instrument decorated with artificial flowers tied together with small branches gathered from the fields and silvered. Atop the console was placed a coop with baby chicks. First slide announced Easter greetings from the "company" and the second read, "Meet the Company" as amber spot was thrown upon the chicks. Slides were projected through Brenkert effect of huge church window for the community sing that followed.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

started at the State Theatre in Spartanburg, S. C. in 1934, as an usher. He went the straight path working his way up from doorman and chief of service to that of assistant manager, next realizing the job of manager at the Criterion in Spartanburg. He also acted as relief manager of the Center in Mount Airy, N. C. and Paramount in Concord, N. C. Upon arriving back to the post at the Criterion he learned of his next transfer to the State in Hendersonville, where he now is holding forth the managerial reins.

JOSEPH D. NEVISON entered the picture industry about seven years ago, working at the Fox Theatre in Philadelphia, Penna. When he left this house he took down the position of treasurer at the Locust Street Theatre, operated by A. R. Boyd for roadshow pictures. Joe also held the treasurer's job at the Fox until Warners stepped in, at which time he became assistant manager. His present job is at the Grange Theatre in Philly, doing a good managerial job.

JOE F. WRIGHT
began his career in show business in 1935 when he obtained a job at the Princess Theatre in Cedartown, Georgia, to act as relief doorman. A year later he became the regular doorman at this house and a while after was transferred to this same duty at the Cedar Theatre. It didn't take him long to learn the ins and outs of a house and in 1937 was promoted to manage both the Cedar and Princess Theatres, from where he now communicates.

TED SHANK
acts as the assistant manager of the Strand Theatre in Van Wert, Ohio, which belongs to Schine's circuit. We invite you to report to us, and at not too infrequent intervals, on what you are doing to push the grosses up at the box office of the Strand, Ted, for undoubtedly much of what you can inform us would be of interest to our other members.

JEROME GREENEBAUM
hails from Clinton, Iowa, where he manages the Rialto Theatre, one of the houses belonging to Central States Theatres Corporation. At the time Jerry joined our Round Table he was also temporarily engaged in managing the Rialto in Fort Dodge, Iowa, while the regular manager was ill. Please keep us informed of your activities, and the more often the better.

JOHNNY CUMMINS
started with Paramount in 1930 as shipper, then assistant booker and finally booking manager. He resigned in 1935 to accept a booking job with RKO and a year later was made salesman. In 1937 he came on to Beaumont, Texas, and secured a managerial position at the Peoples Theatre, one of the theatres of the Jefferson Amusement Company circuit. Let's hear from you, Johnny.

What members do in their spare time, if any, or during those few moments snatched from the daily grind, is here depicted by Round Tabler Robert Marhenke, Broadway, Baltimore, enjoying what he reports as one of his weekly highlights.

GEORGE ROLAND CARTER
manages E. M. Loew's Winchester Theatre in Winchester, Mass. He started in picture business at the distributing end and was office manager of World Film. Among his following jobs we find he acted as branch manager of First National Pictures, New York Exchange and was salesman for MGM. Blue Bird Pictures of Newark, N. J., was managed by him, as was the Strand Theatre in Rochester, N. Y. He joined E. M. Loew's circuit in a managerial post at the Embassy in Rochester and then switched to his present job.

EDMUND HARRISON
is the assistant manager and projectionist of the Strand Theatre in Clarksville, Arkansas, belonging to the Malco Circuit. He began working at this theatre in 1935 and for two years served in the projectionist's booth. Malco changed managers and Edmund was made assistant manager, intermittently doing duty as manager while the manager is away.

MARION B. STOUT started as projectionist in the Coliseum Theatre, Petersburg, Alaska, in 1934, and three years later became projectionist and then assistant manager of the Variety Theatre in the same location. He returned to the Coliseum as projectionist and assistant manager and during the absence of the manager takes over. We are interested in showmanship from far-away places, Marion, so be sure to keep us informed of your activities.

HOWARD HILDERBRANDT
is the assistant manager of the Crescent Theatre in Astoria, Long Island, New York, which is one of the houses of Skouras Circuit. About five years ago he secured his first position in the movie field when he got an usher's job at the Broadway Theatre, also in Astoria. His present spot is just over the river from Round Table headquarters and we look forward to an early visit.

CECIL A. SMITH
is the manager of the Patricia Theatre, one of the houses of Hanson Theatres Corp., Ltd., and is situated in London, Ontario, Canada. In 1929, coming down east from Medicine Hat in Alberta, Cecil drove a delivery truck in the daytime and apprenticed himself in the evening for a projectionist's license. Previous studies in optics and electricity at Alberta University aided him to get through in a short time. He worked as a relief operator for three years, then secured a steady job for a couple of years until the opportunity of managing a theatre came his way.

ARLO R. CLAUSEN
began his career in show business with the Adler Circuit as an operator at the Waupaca Theatre, Waupaca, Wisconsin. He held this job for three years when the circuit took over the Palace house, in the same town. Arlo was made head operator of both houses and was then promoted to manage them. We anticipate hearing from you often, Arlo, so keep 'em coming.

IN COURTS

Actress Awarded $17,500 Against MGM British

Elizabeth Allan has been awarded damages of $17,500 against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British. She had claimed breach of contract, contending she had been engaged originally to star in "The Citadel." The damages were sought for alleged loss of salary and opportunities.

MGM British is expected to appeal the verdict. A stay of execution already has been granted the company.

Appeal Allowed on Fox Theatres Plan

An appeal from the decision of former Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton which approved Milton C. Weisman's play for liquidation of Fox Theatres Corporation, has been allowed by William Bondy, federal judge, to the Trust Company of Georgia, $400,000 creditors of Fox Theatres.

The Trust Company is appealing because, the notice of appeal stated, the plan failed to treat their claim, which is based on theatre rentals, as a priority.

Appoint Steuer, Pomerantz RCA Stockholder Counsel

Max D. Steuer has been appointed special trial counsel and Abraham L. Pomerantz general counsel for stockholders by Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, who granted the application of Radio Corporation of America to consolidate five separate suits brought against it. Other defendants are General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, American Telephone and Telegraph Company and some 30 directors and individuals.

The suit charges waste and mismanagement by directors, the transfer of a large block of RCA stock to General Electric and Westinghouse, and the loss of over $7,000,000 in allegedly underwriting an $11,600,000 RKO bond floture. An accounting, damages, return of the stock and the appointment of a receiver for RCA are asked.

Two Indicted in Chicago

Indictments have been returned by a Chicago grand jury against R. R. Gregg and Barney Gold on charges of making "dupe" prints and selling them abroad. The indictments charge violation of the copyright laws and conspiracy. One of the films reported copied was "The Cat's Canary," a Van Beuren production. United States Attorney Martin Ward obtained the indictments.

Dismiss Phelan Suit

The suit of H. W. Phelan for $25,625 damages against Famous Players Canadian Corporation has been dismissed by Justice Urquhart in the Ontario supreme court, with costs. The court declared there were no grounds for a charge of misrepresentation in the 1930 exchange of Famous Players common stock for that of Paramount Publix.

Sues Over House Lease

Charging fraud, deceit and misrepresentation, Frank Ford, Evanston, Ill., exhibitor, has filed suit against Leo Solomon and the Lemar Building Corporation for $150,000 damages. Mr. Ford leased the Stadium theatre in Evanston from Mr. Solomon some months ago.

Order Universal Testimony

Universal Pictures Company, Inc., has been ordered by Charles B. McLaughlin, New York supreme court justice, to testify before trial in the suit of Boris Demitroff, who charges infection of the neck caused in a newsreel scene.

Philadelphia motion picture theatre operators have encountered additional competition from legitimate theatres, two of which recently have adopted a $1 top policy all over the house, selling the seats on a first come, first served basis.

Orders Plant Inspection

Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, this week directed Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation to open its film storage plant at Little Ferry, N. J., for an inspection for Anna Greeve and George Greeve, in connection with a $60,000 damage suit against Twentieth Century-Fox on a claim that the defendant had negligently caused a fire in the plant on July 9, 1937.

OBITUARIES

Frank V. Storrs Dies; Founded Theatre Circuit

Frank Vance Storrs, 76, wellknown in the field of theatrical advertising and at one time owner of a theatre circuit, died March 8th at the Good Samaritan Hospital in West Palm Beach, Fla. He was born Frank Vance Strauss but changed his surname in the World War.

When he was 18 Mr. Storrs founded the theatre program business now known as the New York Theatre Program Corporation, which supplies programs to many of New York theatres. With the rise of the motion picture industry Mr. Storrs began building theatres in New Jersey and upper New York State and at one time owned or controlled 25 theatres. After the turn of the century he also became active in the poster advertising business.

Mr. Storrs made charitable bequests totaling $41,500 in his will.

Harry Weber Dead; Agent and Showman

Harry Weber, actors' agent and showman, died March 8th at his home in Hollywood after an illness of two years. He was 59.

Mr. Weber, who operated one of New York's largest agencies before going to Hollywood in 1926, started many well known screen stars to fame, among them Marjorie Rambeau, Mickey Rooney and Clara Kimball Young.

Charles Porter Dies

Charles William Porter, long identified with Detroit theatres, died March 8th in Grace Hospital there. He was 71. In 1929 he became owner-manager of the Majestic and Forest theatres, and last year was associated with the United Detroit Theatres.

Gerald Marshall

Gerald F. Marshall, 46, a member of the business staffs of Radio Guide and Screen Guide, died March 5th at his home in Manhasset, Long Island. A native of New York, Mr. Marshall formerly was a reporter for the New York Times.

Victor Baravalle

Victor Baravalle, 53, who had conducted orchestras for many Dillingham, Ziegfeld and Shubert productions, and in recent years had been a musical director for RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, died March 11th in Los Angeles.

George Payette

Dr. George N. Payette, 79, father of John J. Payette, Warner Brothers Theatres general zone manager, died March 9th at Garfield Hospital in Washington.

Mrs. Fred Hall

Mrs. Fred M. Hall, wife of Fred M. Hall, vice-president of Bell and Howell, died March 14th at her home in Port Washington, Long Island.

Gladys Frazin Banks

Gladys Frazin Banks, actress and former wife of Monty Banks, died March 9th in New York when she leaped from her sixth floor apartment. She appeared on the New York stage in many plays and was with the Comedie Francaise in Paris about 15 years ago. She also made a series of motion pictures in France.

Albert Goldman

Albert Goldman, 57, salesman for Imperial Film Exchange, Chicago, died in Cincinnati March 9th from heart disease.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

Following the title is information regarding the classification of the subject matter of the feature. A comedy is denoted by the abbreviation Com.; Melodrama by Mel.; Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel.; Musical by Mus.; Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com.; Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parentheses after the classification. Thus: Col-Mel (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

SOUTH AMERICA CALLS

THE storm clouds over the Old World are making that part of the New World the other side of the equator look fairer, more alluring, more important than ever before, to all of American business, and most especially the motion picture.

The lavish endeavor which once so conspicuously colored American production in its seeking and serving of European markets may soon be paralleled by a like address at the Latin-Americas and all the box offices between the Isthmus and Punta Arenas.

That, too, it would seem, can be a serving of American interests vastly broader than those of the screen industry alone.

Mr. Robert E. Sherwood, playwright, is just home from a "cruise to summer," and has been a-telling The New York Times of a conversation with a U. S. diplomatic representative in Buenos Aires, where much was to be heard of Nazi propaganda, in politics and trade.

"I asked," relates Mr. Sherwood, "what we Americans are doing about this: have we no means of countering the hostile propaganda?"

The representative pointed to a motion picture theatre.

"That's our greatest weapon," he told Mr. Sherwood. "The best thing that has happened for us lately was the announcement that Mussolini had banned all American films from Italy. People here who read about that were shocked. They figured if Fascism would deny them the right to commune with Carole Lombard, Clark Gable and Shirley Temple, they want no part of such a system. There are three Americans who have accomplished wonders by coming down here and talking and acting in a genuinely friendly manner. I refer to President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Tyrone Power."

It is well enough known that the motion picture has been America's best salesman for decades. That is one of the reasons the national barriers overseas rise higher and higher. They are barriers of trade as much as of propaganda.

OF interest in this connection is another expression from the Times, a letter from Mr. Wilfred J. Funk, New York writer and publisher, who, returning from a South American tour, offers a ten point program of South American relations. Number one of this program is:

"We should subsidize our movies in South America if necessary. This one industry has been our most persuasive ambassador. It has fired the imagination of the youth of the Southern Hemisphere and turned their minds, for the first time, away from Europe to our own country."

In view of the coloration of imported themes and personalities which in the last two decades gave the Hollywood picture stages so many European names, we may presently be finding film intercourse with the South American lands giving us Bolivars instead of Napoleons, Lee Christmases instead of Robin Hoods. There's gold down there that the Incas never saw.

CUSTOMER'S DOLLARS

IN a crystal clear and incisive booklet entitled "Human—Handle with Care", the advertising concern of Ruthrauff & Ryan makes observations concerning the mass market, speaking, of course, about radio approaches, but none-the-less also about those persons who constitute the largest component of the motion picture's audience:

> To sell this public you must know them—know them in their millions and keep them always in your mind's eye when you think of any kind of advertising.
> You cannot rate them by yourself or your own familiar circle. Their very homes are different: not one in ten thousand is comfortable by your exacting standards. Their average income is about $20 a week. Two-thirds of them live within $1,500 a year. 80% of them would consider $40 a week important money.
> This means at the very outset a tremendous competition for their dollars—yes, for their nickels and dimes. It is a competition between the bare needs of life and a thousand-and-one unsatisfied longings. The very article you regard as a commonplace minor comfort is often their coveted, unattainable heart's desire.
> Their tastes are fundamental and intuitive to a surprising degree. They are shrewd, but not reflective; hardened but not sophisticated. Their likes and dislikes are hearty, direct and positive. You may not agree with their preferences. You may deplore them. But you cannot change them, and if you are an advertiser you will disregard them at your peril. For they inevitably establish the human wave-length to which any successful campaign must be tuned, radio or otherwise.

This is, mind you, a viewpoint of experts in the art of trying to give away entertainment, with a selling hook embedded in it. The motion picture is trying to sell entertainment to the same people.

MAKER OF LAWS

THE publicly acknowledged surprise with which Mr. Robert J. Crews, assemblyman from Brooklyn, has discovered that his bill, introduced at Albany, to require a licensed operator for every 16 mm. and other subcalibre projector would fall heavily on the amateur, is a testimony to about how much study he gave to the measure he would have made into law. Now he says he had no such intent. It is apparently probable that he not only did not write the measure but never read it.

It seems not exactly unrelated to the movement which would put a licensed operator over every 16 mm. picture display at the New York World's Fair.

The situation is just a shade difficult. If a licensed operator is necessary on the Fair grounds he is necessary in the home, too. If, however, the amateur is to be permitted to project his home made movies of "Junior and the Pup" it will not be so logical to demand a certified projectionist to show, on the same sort of film, how Pepfood makes Junior a healthy boy.

This Week

MGM's Own Program

Plans for extension of its selling policies in the direction indicated by the recent and often interrupted trade practice negotiations between exhibitors and distributors were discussed this week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at its convention in Chicago.

These and other developments at the convention, where 52 features and 79 short subjects were announced for next season, are noted in detail in the article starting on page 13.

Criticises ASCAP

The National Association of Broadcasters, through its copyright committee, branded its present agreement with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as inequitable at the conclusion of its two day meeting in New York Tuesday. The main point of contention is that the NAB claims it is compelled to pay fees on programs not using ASCAP music; and a resolution was passed to enter new negotiations on the basis of royalty payments only on programs using the ASCAP catalogue. The present agreement expires at the end of 1940.

E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee of ASCAP recently said that unless the NAB ceased its campaign of "vilification and abuse on ASCAP" the song writers of America "will refuse to license the use of their work by any broadcasting station" in 1940. He also said that the anti-ASCAP legislation passed recently by a number of states was inspired by the lobbying tactics of the NAB.

ASCAP continues to be the subject of state legislative attacks. See page 000.

Threat in France

The comprehensive bill for control of the importation and distribution of foreign pictures in France, introduced by Jean Zay, Minister of Education, is expected to come up for debate within two weeks after the French Parliament convenes on March 28th. American film representatives in Paris claim the measure, which would confer dictatorial powers on the Ministry of Education, would cut imports of American films by 50 per cent and that it would violate the Franco-American reciprocal treaty which stipulates the French Government will enact no measures which would place American films in a less favorable position than they now enjoy. Two provisions in particular are considered threatening to American trade, one providing for the imposition of a dubbing tax and the second limiting the length of programs which would act to eliminate double features for which American distributors at present contribute half the films.

Television

The beginning of regular television broadcasting on April 30th, according to O. B. Hanson, National Broadcasting Company vice-president and chief engineer, means that thereafter new devices must be perfected before they are tried out in actual telecasting.

The Columbia Broadcasting System also will put its television facilities into operation in April. Both companies held previews of their programs this week.

Fortune magazine points out that no large group of the public is going to buy sets without receiving entertainment, despite the first novelty.

See page 50 for other television developments.

Paramount Note

Supervision of Paramount's British production has resulted in "much favorable publicity, a sharpening of sales effort, and announcement of British production plans," John Hicks, Jr., in charge of foreign sales, reported from abroad this week to Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures.

Said Mr. Balaban this week: "Mr. Zukor's visit to South America is directly in line with President Roosevelt's policy to build up our 'friendly neighbor relations.' "

United Artists Plans

United Artists this week was given until April 21 to file an answer to Samuel Goldwyn's suit against it and officers for substitution of a non-exclusive releasing contract for the present exclusive agreement, as the result of an order signed by Judge Charles McLaughlin, authorizing transfer of the suit from New York Supreme Court to the Federal District Court in New York, on the grounds of the "diversity of citizenship" of the parties involved.

News of United Artists product plans for the 1939-40 season are in the story on page 59.

For Latin-America

The Pan-American Fellowship, a national organization to consolidate the 250,000,000 inhabitants of the Latin-American republics and the United States for a closer international cooperation and resistance to subversive propaganda, was formed in Los Angeles Wednesday.

The organization, of which Albert Brown is executive director, held its first session in the office of Cecil B. DeMille, Paramount producer. Mr. Brown declared that the "motion picture is now the greatest medium the republics of the western hemisphere have to carry America's message of freedom, tolerance and progress to the rest of the world."

Mr. DeMille explained that "the immediate object of the organization is to have some appropriate celebration on April 14th, which has been designated as Pan-American Day, by special proclamation of President Roosevelt."

Film Exposition

A plan for an all-industry Golden Jubilee Exposition, to be held in New York's Grand Central Palace, has been submitted to the Hays office by the Publishers Service Corporation, which is headed by Ralph Neusitz, president.

Publishers Service has handled the New York Post and Old Gold contests, in addition to others. The plan as submitted would call for participation by individual film companies, and is designed both to stimulate the box office and build industry good will.

Doubles Again

The newly formed Philadelphia Allied unit met Tuesday at the Broadwood hotel, in that city, to discuss the implied threat that Warner circuit may adopt a double bill policy. Sidney Samuelson, organization head, warned members that if they "must double "they should not do so on "A" pictures.

"Ecstasy" "Codified"

Announcement in Hollywood of a sequel to "Ecstasy" that would rate a Production Code seal of approval, according to its sponsors, caused a stir on the coast in view of the many censorings here of the original Czechoslovakian subject of nudity. Some observers viewed the announcement as pertaining more to "strategy" than production.

The announcement came from Fred Stanley, a Hollywood press agent for and in behalf of Gustav Machaty, who had been brought to this country two years ago by MGM on the basis of his having directed "Ecstasy," with Hedy Kiesler, who likewise eventually arrived in Hollywood, and is continuing there, as Hedy Lamarr.

After a full two years at the MGM studio, Mr. Machaty finally completed one picture, "Within the Law," and last week he was released, while Miss Lamarr was continued on MGM's payroll. Immediately Mr. Machaty announced the "Ecstasy" sequel, through press-agent Stanley, who stressed that "it will conform to the Hays code" and "Hedy Lamarr will not be in it."

Mr. Machaty said "The Girl of Ecstasy" will be the title of the sequel, and that he had concluded arrangements with Julius Aussenberg, London banker, for financial support, explaining further that it will be made either in Hollywood or London and will introduce an "unknown" star—Mr. Machaty taking credit for introducing Hedy Kiesler-Lamarr in the original.

The locale would be Vienna before and after Nazi domination.

Newsreel's South American Tour To Aid U. S. "Good Neighbor" Plan

THE FIVE AMERICAN NEWSREELS, pooling their interests for a common cause, have concluded an expedition through virtually all of South America, by rail, plane and boat, filming 60,000 feet of Latin-American scenes, customs and people, its officials, institutions and places of historical importance.

The expedition and anticipated film results were prompted by two basic reasons: (1) U. S. newsreels' requirements for South American film library material in view of the growing importance of South America in the news, and the growing relationship, economically, militaristically and otherwise, between those countries and the United States, and (2) of more direct importance to the American motion picture industry, the increasing interest of U. S. major distributors in South America as a market for their films, in view of narrowing markets in Europe, and the desire of the majors to present South America "properly" in U. S. newsreels for purposes of good will in this connection.

In addition, it appears that the "proper" presentation of South America in U. S. newsreels cannot but aid the United States Government in its plans to build stronger "neighborly" relations with the Latin-American countries, first undertaken in the open when Secretary of State Cordell Hull conducted last winter's Pan-American goodwill conferences at Lima, Peru.

American newsreels, having cooperatively covered the Lima Conference, designed by the State Department as an All-American "call to arms" against the European "aggressor" nations, discovered a growing interest generally in the United States in affairs below the Rio Grande. Accordingly, they agreed to assign the newsreel crew of Twentieth Century-Fox, already in Lima as a joint filming project at the conference, to visit all of the Latin-American countries and make films for later use, with the two basic thoughts previously mentioned in mind.

Panacea

As widely divergent interests as foreign producers and distributors in England and Lords Bridgman and Strabolgi are now favoring Government assistance in the financing of production as a panacea for Britain's problem, now that it is considered certain that no increase in the established quota schedules for either renters or exhibitors is in prospect. However, the Government, speaking through Lord Templemore, pats itself on the back and points to some of the top pictures of the year as evidence that the Films Act in its first year was successful. All of which, writes Aubrey Flanagan, means that it will not be precisely like walking across a rug of violets to persuade the City, still smarting from the sting of vanished millions, to provide new moneys.

The London article is on page 69.

Publicity

U. S. Congressman J. Parnell Thomas of New Jersey demanded in a resolution to Congress this week that the House investigate the publicity activities of the Administration. His resolution contended that a 1913 law provided "no money appropriated shall be used for the compensation of any publicity experts unless specifically appropriated for that purpose" and that the act "has been grossly violated." "Millions of dollars of the Tax-payers' funds are being squandered each year through this pernicious use of propaganda to further the existence of our costly bureaucratic agencies," Mr. Thomas said.

The Government's expenditures on films for the "alphabetical" and other New Deal agencies frequently have been attacked in and out of Congress.

MGM ANNOUNCES ITS OWN TRADE PRACTICE PROGRAM

New Policies on Percentage-Guarantee Playing; Arbitration Promised; Percentage To Be Set by Box-Office Value

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on Tuesday announced a trade practice program of its own, embracing many of the concessions asked of the organized industry by exhibitors.

This abrupt move by a single company to take at least a part of the industry plan out of the hands of the lawyers and place it in actual operation came Tuesday afternoon at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's 15th annual sales convention in Chicago, as the company's 250 field sales staff assembled to hear of 1939-40 plans and product. Three of the country's organized exhibition leaders had just delivered, on MGM's invitation, an insight into theatre owners' problems of the day. Speaking for the exhibitors were Col. H. A. Cole, Allied States Association; Ed Kuykendall, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Harry Brandt, for nine independent groups.

Ready for Self-Regulation

Most of the majors repeatedly have said during the negotiations with exhibitors for a general industry program that they stand ready to adopt self-regulation when enacted.

The announcement was made by William Frazier Rodgers, MGM's general sales manager, who for eight months has been leading distributor committeemen in negotiations with exhibitor committeemen on a program for self-regulating distributor-exhibitor relations.

The "industry program" still reposes in the hands of the lawyers, to whom it has been referred intermittently since last August. In view of some rather pessimistic observations of late from several quarters on the fate of the industry document, it appears that Mr. Rodgers and his Metro-Goldwyn company have decided not to wait any longer for general enactment.

Fifty-two features and 79 shorts are promised for 1939-40.

Applying the trade practice program immediately to 1939-40 contracts about to be negotiated, the company will make the new deals retroactive to embrace any additional concessions granted in a general industry program—"if and when such a program is adopted nationally," declared Mr. Rodgers.

A Surprise Move

MGM's action was received with much surprise by the company's field staff assembled in the Red Lacquer Room of Chicago's Palmer House. Mr. Rodgers' competitors in sales and in trade practice negotiation apparently did not expect it either.

The announcement and the disclosure of additional policies governing the company's selling relations with exhibitors were the most revealing insight into company selling plans disclosed publicly in years, the general custom on such matters being to confine the information to the convention meeting room for company knowledge only, giving them individual application later in the individual bargaining with customers.

William F. Rodgers, sales manager, and Arthur Loew, guest of honor at the 15th annual convention.

Taking as a basis the MPTOA "ten-point" trade program, the company says it will no longer require preferred playing time on percentage pictures carrying a guarantee, nor require exhibitors to buy either short subjects, trailers or the newsreel in order to obtain its features.

Contractual differences with the customers will be arbitrated, under a system yet to be determined.

The company will give clearance on a basis it thinks will be "fair," and any arguments arising thereover, of charges of "unfair" clearance, will be arbitrated.

"The right to grant clearance is in our hands," said Mr. Rodgers.

Charges by one MGM client that a competitor is "over-buying" on the company's product also will be dealt with by arbitration.

Arbitration, Not Conciliation

"We desire and solicit arbitration," explained Mr. Rodgers. This would seem to mean that arbitration and not conciliation will be provided in association with the industry program—if and when adopted.

Score charges will be eliminated on all percentage pictures. On flat rental pictures they are included in the flat price.

The company also agrees that there will be "no coercion of exhibitors by threats to build or acquire theatres in opposition." Exhibitors had asked that this point be included in any industry program.

The company's plans in 1939-40 for cancellation were not disclosed.

Stressing that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer 1939-40 contracts for both circuit and independent "will be made in accordance with the best interests of all concerned," Mr. Rodgers announced that a sales policy more flexible than any in the company's history will prevail.

Both Mr. Rodgers and Al Lichtman discussed a plan to extend, on a national basis, a policy of testing each production in several key theatres and then establishing the percentage to be charged based on those tests. Details of the plan have not been completed.

Mr. Rodgers later disclosed that MGM has been "testing pictures for the past two years before classifying them," adding, "We will continue to do this, but will expand various forms of testing the box office drawing power."

MGM will sell 36 "A" pictures, four in the top bracket, ten each in the second and third and 12 in the fourth, all on percentage; the remaining 16 are classified as the "Balanced" group, to be sold on flat rental or percentage.

Mr. Lichtman disclosed that last year the company spent $42,500,000 on 52 pictures and $10,000,000 for prints and advertising. Rentals from the United States and Canada, he continued, totaled $49,000,000, "so the difference had to be made up in the revenue from the foreign market. With this situation developments in the foreign countries will have a great bearing on the future of the company," he declared.

The company sold 10,566 accounts in 1938-39 according to Mr. Lichtman.

Rather than erect any new obstacles, "what we want most is a market for the pictures we make," declared Mr. Rodgers, who at this point disclosed still another MGM plan, this one contemplating the production of several "extra super productions," in addition to the 52 to which the company is basically committed. If these are made, he said, the company's national sales force will go out in mid-year to exhibitors to sell these extras as a brand new group, in the same manner that they approach buyers at the beginning of a new season with the usual yearly program.

Rodgers Opens Convention With News on Product

One month short of 15 years ago, the Loew's, Inc., of the late Marcus Loew, Richard A. Rowland's Metro Pictures and the producing company headed by Louis Burt Mayer, pooled their interests in one of the biggest mergers of those big-merger days and formed Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Louis Mayer is the only one of the three founders still carrying on in the company.

On Monday, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives of today assembled in Chicago, at the Palmer House, to report to their 250 home office, studio and field forces called for the 15th annual sales convention, that the company had established its greatest sales record.

52 Features, 79 Shorts

Preparation for the coming season, of course, was the basic business of the meeting, which ran on through Wednesday, and out of those preparations came the explanation that 52 features will again constitute the year's program and there will also be 79 short subjects and 102 issues of News of the Day newsreel for 1939-40.

Attracting most attention in the product announcement was the disclosure that Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here" will finally be produced, after having been shelved for three years, due, according to the general understanding in 1936, when it was bought, that there were fears it would "antagonize" Germany and Italy.

Metro disclosed also that it is reducing its

WILKES-BARRE THEATRES CARRY ON; HALF YEAR NEWSPAPER STRIKE ENDS

Showmen Put Out "Movie Guide", Tabloid and Handbills; Ran Local Trailers in All Downtown Houses

by JOSEPH POLLEY
in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

How are exhibitors to present their theatre announcements to the public when their community's newspapers cease publishing, thereby eliminating what is generally conceded to be the advertising-publicity medium upon which exhibitors depend most?

That problem was posed before the exhibitors and theatre managers of the 11 motion picture houses in the Wilkes-Barre area when all of the city's newspapers were shut down by an all-embracing strike fostered by the American Newspaper Guild. Wilkes-Barre is a coal-mining and silk-weaving city whose retail stores and theatres serve about 400,000 persons.

Five Months Without Newspapers

The strike began last October 3rd. For five months Wilkes-Barre's four newspapers did not publish a single edition. A month ago the Sunday Independent, which publishes on Sundays only, negotiated a contract with the Guild and resumed publication Sunday only. The three daily newspapers—the Record, morning, and Times-Leader and Evening News, both evenings, were at odds with the Guild up to last Tuesday, when the strike was settled.

For the first several weeks of the strike department stores and theatres suffered sharp business curtailment. When merchants and theatre managers saw no truce ahead in the strike they took matters in their own hands to present their offerings to the public.

The merchants banded and issued shopping guides. The theatres, chiefly owned and operated by Comerford interests, published a "movie guide," and stores and theatres alike claimed to be doing business on a par with immediate pre-strike days.

Only a Substitute

Does that mean that merchants and theatre operators no longer require newspapers to convey announcements to the public? The consensus here is that the handbills distributed by them merely serve as a substitute; that once newspapers begin publishing again, the handbills will be abandoned.

A close observer of the Wilkes-Barre advertising scene drew this analogy between the strike-bound newspapers and the tabloids issued by the theatres and the handbills by the stores:

"When you can't get heat from the central heating plant the best thing to do is to resurrect the old kitchen stove and try to be comfortable that way. The old kitchen stove isn't as convenient and doesn't radiate heat like the central system but you must keep warm some way and so you make the best of it."

Posters and Trailers

The Wilkes-Barre theatres made the best of a journalistically unprecedented situation in the United States. Besides their tabloid they increased their poster billing and added local trailers in all of Wilkes-Barre's six downtown houses. The trailers listed the current productions at all the other theatres.

It is significant that the theatres did not increase their radio time. Their air programs were, as usual, confined to the titles of the current features, announcement of the leading players and a terse catchline.

WPA PULLS ADS AFTER "PANNING"

The United States Government's WPA Theatre in Seattle has withdrawn its advertising patronage from the Seattle Star, evening daily newspaper, because of its review on the WPA play, "Spirochete," by Gilbert Brown, dramatic critic, who declared that the play was "important propaganda on an exciting and socially important theme, but infernally dull, rather sloppily acted, and a washout except for fine settings by Blanche Morgan."

In commenting upon orders received from Edwin G. O'Connor, state director of the Federal Theatre, canceling all ads in the Star, Mr. Brown said: "Although Mr. O'Connor is a government official, he cannot directly censor the dramatic pages or any other part of an American newspaper. If he thinks he can censor the opinions of this newspaper by withholding advertising for Federal stage shows, he ought to know better. He can get better reviews by presenting better entertainment."

The cardboard announcement handouts presented to patrons leaving the various theatres admittedly had their drawbacks. Distributed in weekly batches of 30,000, they warned patrons that "it is advisable to confirm playdates indicated herein by telephone as attractions scheduled are occasionally subject to change due to conditions beyond our control"—the "conditions" apparently referring to postponed openings due to holdovers of current attractions, "Miss-outs" on prints and the like.

The Comerford theatres listed in the theatre handouts included the new Comerford, the Capitol, Penn, Irving and Orpheum. Current attractions and the following week's bookings were mentioned.

Theatres listed in the weekly tabloid were the Capitol, Comerford, Irving, Penn, Orpheum, Kingston, Shawnee, Hart, Strand, Forty-Fort, Luzerne, Parson, Institute, America and Sterling.

The tabloids resembled the average newspaper of that size, with "news" photos of stars, both informal and from scenes in pictures, covering the entire front page, and a diversification of pictorial, advertising and type matter running through the remaining 7 pages.

80,000 Tabloids Placed

The tabloid during the emergency was the theatre's main advertising medium. The operation was like that of any other house-to-house distribution system. Crews of young men, supervised by crew leaders, covered Wilkes-Barre and neighboring communities. Approximately eighty distributors placed about 80,000 of the tabloids in as many houses, offices and stores. The distribution required two full days and took place on Wednesdays and Thursdays, the two days preceding the weekly opening days.

The theatre tabloids varied in size running from six to eight pages, and carried articles and art pertaining to the coming attractions. They were union printed.

Pocket and handbag folders listing the titles and stars of the current and forthcoming attractions at the Wilkes-Barre theatres also were distributed to individuals as they left each theatre. The folders were made convenient for carrying.

New Theatre and Improvement

Two important factors kept theatre receipts up. One was the new Comerford theatre, named after the late M. E. Comerford, founder of the Comerford chain of 100 houses. The Comerford, in the heart of Wilkes-Barre, has 2,000 seats, is considered one of the finest houses in Pennsylvania, including Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton. The theatre is still considered "a new place to go and see."

The other important factor was a general improvement in industrial conditions. Business generally here is far better than a year ago. This naturally aids the merchants, too.

The Sunday Independent after it resumed operations published the most voluminous editions in its history. The last four Sundays of the strike saw the Independent set an all-time record for advertising lineage and paid circulation for Wilkes-Barre newspapers.

The Stores' Bulletin

Likewise deprived of their No. 1 daily advertising medium, the five biggest Wilkes-Barre department stores had distributed a weekly "Shoppers' Bulletin" to 73,000 homes during the strike. (Total circulation of the dormant evening News, Times-Leader and morning Record: 73,000.) Smaller stores had combined to publish a 24-page tabloid "Buyers' Guide" with about 53,000 circulation, which also took paid classified ads.

By agreement, no local merchant was advertising in Scranton and other out-of-town newspapers sold in Wilkes-Barre. One store had tried radio bingo and quizzes to bring in business.

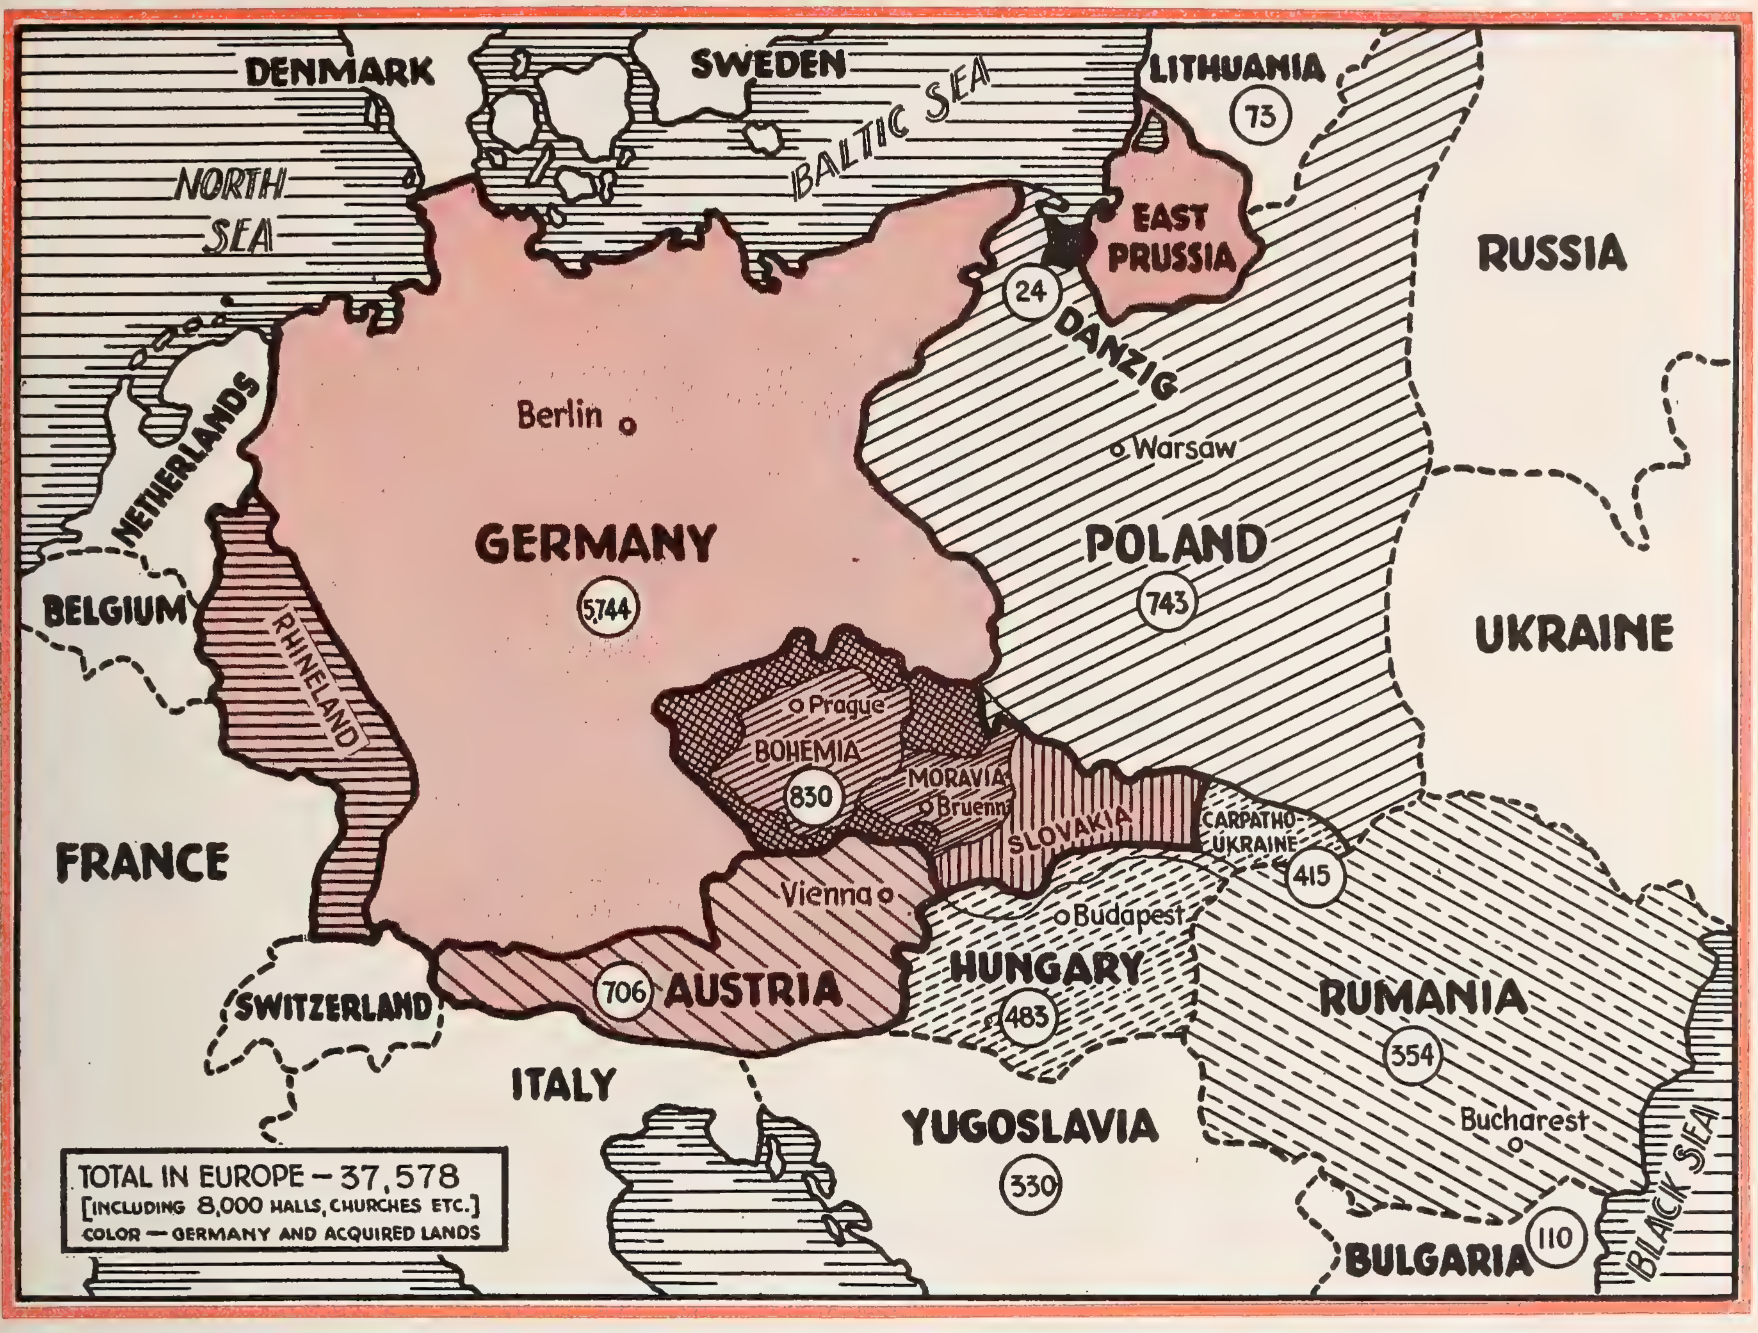
Time magazine, reporting on the strike and merchandising conditions resulting therefrom, observed that the strike had set up "a perfect laboratory in which to test the most cherished and vital belief of all U. S. newspaper publishers: that local business cannot get along without them. Alarming result," adds Time: "it has gotten along quite well. In December, for instance, the bigger stores reported business up six per cent over 1937; in January and February it was down seven per cent to nine per cent from 1938, about the same as in big-advertising New York City. At the same time merchants have saved up to 50 per cent on their promotion and advertising budgets.

"Part of this rosy picture," Time continued, "has been due to a midwinter anthracite boom, and in Scranton, 19 miles away, retail trade has been a little better than in Wilkes-Barre. But this was pretty cold comfort to U. S. newspaper publishers, whose associations remained discreetly silent on the matter."

Harry Warner Gets Plaque

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, received a bronze plaque Wednesday at the Warner theatre in Hollywood from the All-American Women's Organization, in recognition of his contribution to American patriotism through the production of historically significant films. The Organization comprises more than 3,000 members of women's clubs in California.

HITLER—CHAIN OPERATOR



This map is as of 4:22 p.m. (E.S.T.), March 22.

ADOLF HITLER, besides being Aggrandizer of the Reich as his associates recently have nominated him, is now the operator of the second largest motion picture theatre circuit in the world, controlling directly 7,280 wired houses, almost one quarter of the total in Europe excluding Russia. His only rival, but in no sense competitor, is Stalin's Soviet Government with direct control of 30,000 theatres or places of exhibition, of which only 8,000, however, are equipped for sound. Many of these are traveling units.

The Nazi Government in Germany when it first recruited the motion picture industry and its exhibition outlets as one of its propaganda weapons controlled 5,744 houses, the total number in Germany territory as it was constituted at that time. Within the last twelve months, with the Brownshirt legions on the march, it has added, as shown in red on the map above, 706 theatres in what was once Austria and 830 in the dismembered republic of Czechoslovakia.

In the United States, where the film industry is considered generally to have flourished and expanded to a degree unparalleled in any other country of the world, five circuits affiliated with distributors own or control between 2,500 and 3,000 theatres. The largest of these, Paramount, controls 1,200 houses through partnership agreements.

In the path of Der Fuehrer's heralded line of conquest to the east lie nearly 1,000 additional sound equipped theatres which tomorrow or next week may become integrated with the mammoth circuit he now controls. Along the line of drang nach osten are Hungary with 483 houses, Rumania with 354 and Bulgaria with 110. Hungary, in addition, now includes the 415 theatres in Carpatho-Ukraine which it seized during the fall of Czechoslovakia. The Rumanian theatres already are under the economic influence of the Reich through the trade treaty just signed.

Exhibition in these countries even now, through the dependence of the various governments on German economic influence, follows in some degree the restrictions and prohibitions laid down for the industry in the Reich. In addition the influence of Dr. Goebbels' Ministry of Propaganda and Enlightenment and of German trade practices are felt in Yugoslavia and Lithuania. Trade treaties which deal specifically with motion pictures also are in force with the axis partners, Italy and Japan.

More immediately within the sphere of the Reich are the 24 theatres in the Free City of Danzig and, since the acquisition of Memel by Hitler on Wednesday, 73 in Lithuania of which several large first-runs are in the newly occupied seaport.

Figures on the map shown above were taken from the latest compilations of United States Department of Commerce. The outlines were accurate as of last week but are subject to the problems which are afflicting all commercial cartographers most of whom had just completed revised maps of Europe following the crises of last fall when Hitler marched again. Chief among their troubles is determination of a difference in colors discernible to the eye which will differentiate German territory and Hitler's "protectorates."

BILL WOULD TAX HOME OPERATORS; AUTHOR FINDS HE, TOO, IS LIABLE

New York Assemblyman Adds Amendment Exempting Amateurs After Protests Led by Roy W. Winton, League Head

A bill in the New York State legislature, pending for weeks and requiring the licensing of all projectionists in cities having 1,000,000 inhabitants or more, caused an uproar this week when it was discovered accidentally that the bill contains a "joker" that would prohibit any unlicensed person from operating any kind of motion picture projector, either 35mm or 16mm, not only in theatres but in schools, churches and even in private homes.

The author of the bill, Assemblyman Robert Crews, would be compelled to take out a projectionist's license under the law he proposes, for he runs a 16mm projector in his own home.

Would License Teachers

The loud protests following discovery of the "joker" first called attention of Assemblyman Crews to his all-embracing regulations. Immediately he disaffirmed any intention of having his bill (No. 1915) apply to home or certain other non-theatrical operations. He did, nevertheless, insist that at least school teachers in classrooms operating 16mm or even 8mm machines should be licensed.

The protests resulted late Tuesday in Mr. Crews filing an amendment to his bill exempting operators of miniature motion picture machines from the law. A vote on the measure was set for next Monday.

The attack against the measure in its potential application to homes and non-theatrical places was started over the weekend by Roy W. Winton (picture in Pictorial Section), managing director of the Amateur Cinema League, as spokesman for the estimated 100,000 amateur 16mm projectionists in New York City. Immediately he was joined by YMCA's, clubs and education groups which also would be affected.

What the Bill Says

That part of the bill to which the amateurs took offense provides:

"It shall be unlawful in cities of one million inhabitants or over for any person to operate or thread up for operation any motion picture projecting apparatus or any connection thereof in or upon the premises of any place of public assemblage or in or upon the premises of any public or private building whether used for shows or amusements or otherwise, unless he shall have been duly licensed as provided in this section—"

The bill further provides:

"Unlicensed operators. It shall be unlawful to employ any person, not licensed as provided in this section, or to permit such person to operate any motion picture apparatus, or any connections thereof, in any motion picture theatre, open air motion picture theatre or other place where motion pictures are exhibited, to which the public is admitted with or without charge for admission."

Legislative observers had construed these provisions and Mr. Crews' intent generally as an attempt to prevent the use of unlicensed operators by service organizations, clubs, and churches. The employment of two licensed operators in a booth is the general rule in theatres of New York City, to which the bill would also apply.

QUEER IDEAS BEFORE FILMS

Because of the subject matter of American films shown in Australia a speaker before the English-Speaking Union in Melbourne recently said that "it was little wonder if the Australians failed to understand that the majority of Americans were honest, hard-working people like themselves."

The New York Times commented this week that the speech is subject "to the proviso that queer ideas about America do circulate in foreign countries, but the thing long antedates the motion picture. In the dime novel era the Red Indians were chasing the buffalo right on the steps of the New York Public Library."

Winton Protests

The Motion Picture Bureau, a division of the National Council of the YMCA, last week sent letters of protest to the Albany legislators. The opposition grew this week as Mr. Winton, with the backing of not only his organization but many others, sent letters to legislators, members of his league, and photographic dealers, and issued statements to the press.

Said Mr. Winton in his letters to the legislators: "This is presumably a measure intended to protect public safety. It is apparently written under the belief that motion pictures are used only by the theatrical motion picture industry, and that no other portion of the public has any rights in the premises. . . . Films used in home movies, 16 millimetre and eight millimetre wide—since there are these two widths in common use, is manufactured on a base of acetate of cellulose which is no more inflammable than the family Bible. . . . I know of no recorded case of accident from the use of home movies. . . . I would urge you to investigate most carefully the reasons behind its (the bill's) introduction and to bring into the light of day the special benefits it would confer on a small group. . . ."

To the photographic dealers of the city, Mr. Winton issued a warning, thus: "If this bill can pass, the next step may very well be to license every camera, still or movie, and to forbid home darkrooms."

Cites Injustice

To amateur motion picture enthusiasts, Mr. Winton's letter read in part:

"I need not point out to you the injustice of this bill, as it affects movie amateurs. It serves no useful purpose, because amateur movie film and equipment have been approved for home use, time after time, by insurance and other authorities. Obviously, the bill is designed to serve some ulterior purpose beyond that of public safety."

He added: "This bill would sell a city wide hobby 'down the river' to benefit the 'white haired boys' in the theatrical projection business. . . ."

To the press Mr. Winton, speaking for all those opposed to the Crews bill, said, in part: "You don't expect Hitler to understand liberty, but you ought to expect legislators to understand the rights of the citizen, in any American state. . . . Movies made and projected with 16mm and 8mm films are used by doctors, scientists, churches, civic workers, and schools. . . . Will Mr. Crews want to license microscopes, text books, research workers, and teachers?

Informed of the protests, Mr. Crews told the press that "this certainly must be changed and fixed up" and that he would delay the bill's third reading so that the changes could be made. He pointed out that he was a 16mm operator, and could have been fined if his own law had been in effect. He declared he "certainly" had not meant the bill to read the way it did, and that he "had not read it" in its entirety.

"The real purpose of the bill," Assemblyman Crews said, "is to protect the public when inflammable films are being used, and to make sure that professional operators, who have to make a living by their work, are hired to operate machines when a profit is being made from the showing of pictures."

Mr. Crews added that he did not believe that school teachers should be allowed to operate 16mm films in their classrooms, unless qualified.

Joseph D. Basson, president of Local 306, Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands and Employees, said the organization never had intended the bill to apply to home operation of 16mm.

Mr. Basson declared that Mr. Crews would amend the bill to read thus:

"Nothing contained in this section shall be considered to apply to any socalled miniature motion picture apparatus which uses only an enclosed incandescent lamp, an approved acetate of cellulose or slow burning films, and is of such construction that films ordinarily used on full size commercial picture apparatus cannot be used therewith."

Still Skeptical

Despite these statements, skepticism was still apparent among those making the protest. Mr. Winton said:

"I am glad to see that Mr. Crews' hind sight is a great deal better than his foresight. If I were one of his constituents in the Sixth Assembly District in Brooklyn I should have a rather large question in my mind. If Mr. Crews is an amateur movie maker and shower, which he says he is in an interview given out today, and if he is familiar with the English language, which I am quite sure he is, why did he have to wait until the Amateur Cinema League discovered the great mistake in his bill? . . .

"I note that Mr. Crews is afraid that the teachers of the City of New York are not as competent to show movies as he is because he is quoted as doubting whether they should operate motion picture projectors. He is inclined to think that the school system should have its own professional operators. . . . The schools of this city are just as much entitled to show motion pictures without silly license fees as is Mr. Crews or I or anybody else. . . . Mr. Crews ought to bring his thinking up to date. Such leaders in the theatrical motion picture industry as Martin Quigley, Terry Ramsaye, Jack Alicoate and Maurice Kann have been saying for years that motion pictures are not the exclusive property of the theatrical movie industry and that schools, churches, science and the home are at perfect liberty to use them. . . . Since Mr. Crews admits that his bill was originally suggested by the State Federation of Labor, one wonders whether the labor interests in the field of motion pictures should not bring their thinking up to date also."

ARNOLD DENIED ADDITIONAL FUNDS TO PROSECUTE "TEN MOVIE CASES"

Selection of Oklahoma as Locale of One Case Revealed, with Investigators to Hear Complaints Against Pool

Intimations in February by the Department of Justice at Washington that the Government was contemplating a series of anti-trust suits against the motion picture business, in addition to those already pending in New York and Chicago, became factual on Wednesday, when Thurman Wesley Arnold, assistant United States attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, appeared before the House Appropriations Deficiency subcommittee, asking for additional funds to prosecute cases in the newsprint, fertilizer, shoe machinery, tobacco, building materials, and motion picture industries.

Hints at "10 Movie Cases"

Asked by the committee whether he could not operate his division without more money, Mr. Arnold replied:

"I would hate to drop the fertilizer case, and we should start, even now, ten movie cases."

The United Press reported that Mr. Arnold, at the hearing, said anti-trust action should not prove a deterrent to business; that he believed the breaking of monopolies was essential if the economic system was to function satisfactorily.

The House committee refused to grant the deficiency funds requested by Mr. Arnold.

Oklahoma One Center

The Department did not outline the "ten additional" film cases. But the selection of Oklahoma as one point was revealed in Oklahoma City, where federal sources indicated that Washington investigators were ready to hear complaints from independents against a "film product and equipment buying pool" being formed in that area.

Oklahoma City has been the scene for the past few years of hearings on the $5,000,000 Federal anti-trust suit of A. B. Momand, Shawnee, Okla., theatre operator, against the Griffith Amusement and Twentieth Century-Fox, and other major and distributing companies doing business in Oklahoma.

The Momand complainants on Monday complied with an order of Federal Judge A. P. Murrah to file a bill of particulars. To substantiate charges that the defendants maintained illegal protection-and-clearance schedules, the Momand bill listed 142 independent producers "who were unable to procure exhibition of their films in producer-controlled theatres."

Exhibit "C" submitted by Mr. Momand listed independent producers reputedly obliged to convey assets to the majors or to merge with them.

The Momand bill insisted that "agreements" on clearance still exist, citing 14 "master" contracts.

In New England, the major company defendants in the $100,000 anti-trust suit begun by George S. Ryan, attorney for Edmund G. Pollard, an exhibitor of Rumford, Maine, this week asked in United States district court, in Boston, for dismissal of the complaint, for its elision in part, for a bill of particulars, and for 20 days after decision on motion is made, to file answers to the suit.

Defendants are the eight majors and Paramount affiliated Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Company. In addition to the above requests, they also ask for a deposition from Mr. Pollard.

"DIVORCEMENT" MOVES GET THREE SETBACKS

Theatre divorcement this week received three pronounced setbacks:

The Nix-Causey divorcement proposal in Georgia's Senate was withdrawn.

Missouri's legislative bill revision committee recommended that no further consideration be given to House Bill 252 theatre divorcement proposal presented by Representatives Turner and Smart.

Allied States of New York will not sponsor any state divorcement measure. Such bills in most places have the backing of either national Allied or its state affiliates.

Changes Asked

The Department of Justice has asked the New York federal district court to make a number of changes in the individual defendants in the Government's suit against the majors.

The name of James Roosevelt, son of the President, was brought into the case by the Government as it moved to substitute current officers in United Artists, Loew's and Paramount for individuals originally named. Mr. Roosevelt became a vice president of Samuel Goldwyn (United Artists) last January 1.

In making shifts in United Artists, the department will ask for the exclusion of Samuel Goldwyn, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin as defendants.

The changes to be made were itemized by the Department as follows:

United Artists defendants: Charles Schwartz, Emanuel Silverstone, James Roosevelt and Theodore Caruso to be substituted in place of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Samuel Goldwyn, and action to be dismissed as to Attilio H. Giannini, George Schaefer and Lloyd Wright, no longer with the company.

Loew's: Henry Rogers Winthrop to be substituted in place of William A. Phillips.

Paramount: Edwin L. Weisl to be substituted for Charles A. McCullough, resigned; George L. Bagnall to be substituted in place of Henry Herzbrun; and action to be dismissed as to Harold Fortington and Harry O. King, no longer with the company.

The Government has served notice upon O'Brien, Driscoll and Raftery, United Artists' attorneys, that it will examine Harry Muller, as treasurer, and Edward Raftery, as secretary, of United Artists, on March 27th at the Federal Court House before W. J. Briggs, notary, the Department has revealed. The examinations will be the first to be held under Judge Bondy's order empowering the Government to examine all United Artists defendants on five days' notice.

At the same time it was revealed that United Artists has submitted to Judge Bondy a formal order incorporating the terms of his decision on the applications of majors for bills of particulars from the Government. The order, which the Government will not oppose, provides for service of a bill within 60 days, and the filing of answers by United Artists defendants 20 days after the receipt of the bill.

Lawyers Study Relation of Conversations with Myers to Trade Practice Program; MGM Effecting Six Proposals

The organized industry's trade practice program is still in the hands of the lawyers, who this week were studying the relation thereto of conversations held last Thursday and Friday in New York with Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States Association. Mr. Myers was to return for further discussions.

Out of all the eight months of negotiations and conversations between the majors and exhibitors for a program of self-regulation, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM and head of the majors' negotiating committee, announced Tuesday that his company, acting independently, would immediately effect six of the trade proposals. Mr. Rodgers made known his company's position at its 15th sales convention, in Chicago. (See page 13.)

Neely Charges 'Neglect' of Bill

Senator Matthew Neely on Tuesday in Washington asked that the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee be discharged from further consideration of his anti-block selling and blind buying measure.

Mr. Neely hoped to bring his bill to the regular Senate calendar, charging "neglect" by a subcommittee headed by Senators Ellison D. Smith and Alben Barkley.

Wanger and Paramount Settle Differences

Coincident with the dropping of the suit by Walter Wanger Productions against Paramount Pictures, Paramount has purchased all interest which Mr. Wanger and Wanger Productions had in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and other pictures made by Wanger for Paramount.

Keith Reports Net of $996,996 for Year

Report of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, RKO Circuit subsidiary, for year ended Dec. 31, 1938 shows net profit of $996,996 after depreciation, amortization, interest, federal income taxes, provision for losses of affiliated companies, etc., equal after annual dividend requirements on 64,304 shares of seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock (on which unpaid dividend accumulations amount to $19.25 per share) to 45 cents a share (par one cent) on 1,206,381 shares of common stock.

This compares with net profit of $1,300,888 or 70 cents a share on common stock in 1937.

Net profit of B. F. Keith Corporation, also an RKO subsidiary, for year ended Dec. 31, 1938, was $752,011 after charges and federal income taxes, comparing with $1,042,628 in 1937.

The soundness of their belief attracted Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Edward Small and Hal Roach in the years that followed.

Great pictures emerged, year in and year out, setting a high standard for the industry . . . splendid achievements that represented a steadfast purpose . . . welcomed by the exhibitors of the world.

Now, we are about to celebrate twenty years of those achievements . . . twenty years of service . . twenty years of a standard faithfully maintained . . twenty years in which our success has been linked with the success of the exhibitor in the kind of showmanship which today brings him $10,000,000 worth of outstanding entertainment when he needs it most.

MGM PLANS 52 FEATURES, 79 SHORTS

shorts program by 13, from the 92 of this year, due to the "growing interest in short subjects, plus the battle of women's clubs and motion picture councils against the double feature evil." Warners, first of the majors to hold a sales convention this season, two weeks ago, struck a similar note toward doubles for the new year.

Also in line with the times, MGM will include documentary and patriotic shorts next season.

$2,500,000 Ad Budget

Announced by Howard Dietz, national director of Loew-MGM advertising, publicity and exploitation, was a $2,500,000 advertising budget for 1939-40, with newspapers receiving greater emphasis in media going to the public. The appropriation will be the largest in the company's history.

For the first time in more than a decade, national exhibitor leaders attended a sales convention to present to a major, its officers and field forces assembled a first-hand report on exhibitor problems of the day.

"The bitter pill" of readjustments in the relations of the majors with independents must be taken, "since the doctor has ordered it," Col. H. A. Cole told the convention, speaking as president of Allied States Association.

"Whatever comes out of the trade practice parleys, whatever becomes effective, much will still depend upon you out in the field as to its effectiveness," Ed Kuykendall declared, addressing this remark to the salesmen and branch managers, as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, and invited by Metro to speak for nine independent exhibitor units, said: "If the industry is not careful the 'politicians' will be running it.

"One of our major problems is to stop the many legislative plans which only tend to put our business into the hands of others," he added. "We are fully capable of attending to our own affairs. I am for block booking and against blind buying."

Rodgers Acclaimed

The convention's opening session Monday morning was marked by a display of pageantry in showmanship, arranged by William R. Ferguson, exploitation general, which resulted in the acclaiming of William R. Rodgers, general sales manager, for his leadership. A proclamation was read by John J. Maloney, and listened to by Mr. Rodgers, as he sat on the dais under a one-ton 18-feet-high image of Leo the Lion and a 22-foot wide enlargement of a photo of MGM's "Hardy Family." Nearby was a birthday cake standing 15 feet high, revolving with a multitude of lights.

CENSOR IS NAMED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Mrs. Edna R. Caroll, vice-chairman of the Republican City Committee, Philadelphia, has been appointed chairman of the Pennsylvania censor board by Governor Arthur H. James. The state had been without a censor board for about a week. The chairman's salary is $4,800 annually.

Governor James said the other members will be named later, one about May 1st and the third about June 1st. In explanation, he said the retiring board left a financial deficiency, and there is not sufficient money to name all three immediately.

Mr. Rodgers welcomed the delegates, Tom Connors, eastern sales manager, read the telegrams from studio and elsewhere, and Al Lichtman, vice-president, discussed some of the 52 pictures promised for 1939-40.

Mr. Connors told the salesmen:

"Do not underestimate your sales control and expectancy sheets. I found in some situations where our percentage pictures have played for fewer days than our flat rental pictures.

New Foreign Markets

Arthur Loew, foreign department chief, explained to the delegates the situation abroad as it concerns the company and some plans held by MGM for developing new markets to replace those lost by the restrictions imposed by foreign countries elsewhere.

Mr. Loew was followed by Joe Vogel, Loew theatre executive, who described at length the manner and method of distribution-theatre department cooperation.

Fred Quimby told of MGM's plans for new short subjects, also introducing James A. FitzPatrick, shorts producer.

Sam Eckmann, Jr., managing director in England, reported on his territory, and was followed by Morton Spring, Pete Smith, Edward Saunders, western sales manager, and Mr. Connors.

Describing MGM's 1939-40 advertising budget as the largest ever, Howard Dietz gave highlights of how and where the $2,500,000 new year's appropriation will be spent, emphasizing that it will reach into "every sizeable city in the United States," and, "regardless of whether the theatres are affiliated or independent," all of the company's customers will benefit.

This year's $1,000,000 expenditure in newspapers will be increased, he announced. There will also be campaigns through magazines, direct-by-mail and trade journals.

Some 30,000,000 copies of a special publication entitled "The Screen Forecast" will be distributed to the public through theatres.

"We have inaugurated," said Mr. Dietz, "a series of cross-question surveys to determine the proper appeals based on public sentiment.

An Appetite and a Service

"The day of wildcat publicity ballyhoo is over and nothing designed to cheapen motion pictures or to vulgarize aspects of American life should be encouraged. Selling entertainment is a mattre of providing a good information service to satisfy the already existing appetite for motion picture news.

Other members of the MGM promotional staff to address the convention were Silas F. Seadler, William Ferguson, Herbert Morgan, of New York, and Howard Strickling, Frank Whitbeck and Barrett Kiesling of Los Angeles.

Newsreel plans and policy were discussed by Ed Hatrick, of News of the Day.

Nicholas Schenck Entertains

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of the Loew-MGM companies, attended the convention, and with the sales executives entertained about 350 theatre owners and managers of the midwest at a luncheon Wednesday. Tuesday evening, at the Palmer House, virtually all the company executives were on the dais at the concluding event, a "15th Anniversary" banquet, attended by the entire 250 delegates.

"Double and triple features will ruin the film industry if they are not stopped soon," Mr. Lichtman declared at the luncheon. "Both exhibitors and distributors must contribute to rid the industry of this evil."

Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, an honor guest at the luncheon, announced that

95 per cent of his 170 theatre members were "ready and anxious to go back to singles if the circuits would do likewise."

"It Can't Happen Here," by Sinclair Lewis, will be one of the highlights for 1939-40, Mr. Rodgers told the convention Tuesday in opening the annual product announcement.

Budget Increased

The company, he said, will continue its policy of making "only large-scale productions." New plans for "big-budget" pictures "will necessitate an even further increase in the total studio budget to produce the 52 features," said a company announcement.

Mr. Rodgers claimed MGM had spent $2,000,000 of $3,500,000 which Hollywood invested in stories last year.

"Emphasis on star presentations is again indicated," said MGM, by the addition of Hedy Lamarr and the elevation of Mickey Rooney and Lew Ayres to starring roles. They will continue the "Judge Hardy Family" and the "Dr. Kildare" series. Acquisition of other personalities to the MGM star roster brings the number to 24, with an additional other 62 featured players under contract, a total of 86 in contract acting personnel. There are 24 directors on MGM's list and 83 writers under contract.

Among those scheduled for starring roles thus far in MGM's new schedule are Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Greta Garbo, Spencer Tracy, Joan Crawford, Myrna Loy, Nelson Eddy, William Powell, Jeanette MacDonald, Margaret Sullavan, the Marx Brothers, Hedy Lamarr, Robert Donat, Eddie Cantor, Mickey Rooney, Robert Montgomery, Judy Garland, Wallace Beery, Lew Ayres, Rosalind Russell, Eleanor Powell, Lionel Barrymore and Freddie Bartholomew.

The shorts lineup will also include documentary and patriotic subjects, a type of picture which Metro says it pioneered in the "Servant of the People."

Fred C. Quimby, short subject manager, announced this program at the convention.

He said there will be six in the Crime Does Not Pay series, with the single-reel classification being led by 13 Pete Smith specialties on subjects ranging from sports to science.

Carey Wilson will deliver nine miniatures. The presently Passing Parade series will be continued with eight releases narrated by John Nesbitt.

Robert Benchley will be represented with four one-reelers, the Our Gang Kids, will deliver eight.

James A. FitzPatrick will offer 12 Traveltalks, in color, all of which will be devoted to the Americas, North and South.

There will also be a series of 18 cartoons produced in color by Hugh Harman and Rudolph Ising.

Barrett Kiesling, MGM "ambassador-of-good-will," started another tour around the country from Chicago following the convention. He will visit 80 cities and will not finish the tour before August 22nd.

MORE DEVELOPMENTS IN LATIN MARKET

The Metropolitan Motion Picture Council, an autonomous group in New York devoted to information about motion pictures, and affiliated with the National Board of Review, disclosed this week that a survey it is conducting of documentary films made in South America or pertaining to the Republics, is proceeding through the "cooperation of the diplomatic contacts of the Council."

Pointing up other developments on films and South America, the Council said that Dr. Abraham Goldfeld, chairman of the New York Welfare Council's Housing Section, reports that motion pictures have great possibilities for developing friendly relations between South America and the United States, Dr. Goldfeld making this observation following a visit to the Republics.

Also cited is the project "to study the practical problems involved in the interchange of motion pictures between the United States and South America to promote friendship through mutual understanding," as financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, and embracing a study of film interchange problems.

Paramount Profits For 1st Quarter

Paramount earnings for the first quarter, this year, are expected to run well over $1,000,000, despite losses on certain high cost pictures.

By arrangement with subsidiaries in Florida, Minnesota, New England and with banks, Paramount authorized the redemption of another $2,750,000 of its outstanding six per cent debentures, due in 1935. These are being called at par plus accrued interest on April 17th. On February 20th, $5,000,000 of the debentures were redeemed by arrangement with Balaban and Katz and Chicago banks and also use of the company's cash reserves.

The balance of Paramount's outstanding six per cent debentures after the April redemption will amount to $1,750,000. Indications are that retirement of the balance will be authorized in the near future. Redemptions already authorized this year represent annual interest savings to the company of approximately $250,000.

LEGALITY OF IATSE'S DEMANDS CHALLENGED

Deadline Extended at Meeting of Union's Counsel and Executives with Majors' Attorneys

Demands on the majors by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (AFL) to effect complete IATSE unionization in exhibition and for the majors to refuse film delivery service to theatres not employing IATSE members, with the alternative of a strike, were aired formally for the first time Wednesday at a meeting in New York between George Z. Medalie, IATSE counsel, executives of the labor organization and attorneys for the majors.

Deadline Extended

The majors had been given until Wednesday to decide whether they would submit to the demands of the union to forbid their New York exchanges from delivering prints to non-IATSE operated theatres. Hurriedly called conferences, held "somewhere in downtown New York," and lasting some hours, resulted in the decision of the IATSE to extend the deadline to some undetermined date.

Moving in the IATSE's long contemplated campaign for control of all film workers, IATSE's Local 306, New York, two weeks ago voted authorization to their officers to call a strike if the large companies refused to accede to the demands set forth.

Discussed mainly at Wednesday's meeting were the legal aspects of a situation which would find distributors refusing to service exhibitor customers to whom they had contractual commitments.

The general inference previously had been gathered that if Local 306 did not accomplish an agreement with the companies, national support of the IATSE may be enlisted, which easily might result in a national strike call in all IATSE-controlled theatres and exchanges, and would possibly be extended even to the thousands of IATSE members in the California studios.

Empire State Members Used

In New York, the beginning wedge of the IATSE's national move to unionize the entire industry, the independent Century circuit, the Cocalis circuit, several Rugoff and Becker theatres, and some independent Brooklyn houses, employ members of the Empire State union, which Local 306 terms "a company union."

George E. Browne, national IATSE president, was to arrive in New York Thursday, to participate in further discussions.

At the Wednesday meeting, Mr. Medalie, the union's counsel, is understood to have heard from the majors' attorneys that the distributing companies would render themselves liable to damage suits, if they refused to deliver films to exhibitors with whom they have contracts, on the grounds suggested by the union. Also, the attorneys claimed that, if they should accede to the union's demands they would, in effect, be acting as labor organizers; they would be using coercive methods, and be subject to charges against them before the National Labor Relations Board, and by various federal agencies.

"Complete Unionization" Step

Heads of the independent New York circuits precipitating the situation—those not employing Local 306 members—were non-committal generally, but all agreed on the "illegality" of the idea, all thought it somewhat "fantastic," to use one official's term; and most mentioned their contracts with the distributors, with an air of finality.

"We have those contracts, and we expect the distributors to live up to them, to give us the films we signed for," was the consensus.

The local 306 strike threat, and the IATSE stand, generally, is the result of the IATSE's decision made at the mid-winter national convention in Miami, emphasized since 1936, and last summer put into concrete phrases by President Browne, for "complete unionization of the industry." Mr. Browne, at the time, said:

"Anything connected with the making, or showing, of motion pictures is in the jurisdiction of the IATSE."

While no actual strike action has been set by Local 306, it can be taken by the union's officials at any time in view of the members' authorization.

Attorneys for the majors are said to have hopes of achieving an amicable settlement of what is considered potentially one of the most serious union situations to confront the industry in years.

Local 37 Loses, Wins in Moves Against IATSE

An action brought by officers of Studio Technicians' Local 37 in which an injunction was sought to prevent interference in the affairs of the local by officers of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees was dismissed Monday in Federal court in Los Angeles by Judge Paul J. McCormick, who ruled that the federal courts did not have jurisdiction in labor disputes.

In spite of a California superior court injunction obtained by officers of the International to prevent Local officers from "calling, arranging or holding any gathering, conference or meeting of all or any part of the members of Local 37 for the purpose of conducting all or any part of the business or affairs of the said Local or for the purpose of soliciting or collecting dues, fines, assessments or contributions from members of the Local," a mass meeting of the members last Sunday at the American Legion Stadium was addressed by Joseph Carpenter, president of Local 37 who was suspended by the International. Fifteen fights, some approaching riot proportions marked the meeting.

Contempt of court charges were brought against Mr. Carpenter and other suspended officers as a result of the meeting by Frank Stickling and John Gatelee, International representatives who ordered the suspensions of Local 37 officers over a week ago and abrogated local autonomy for the union.

The local officers on Tuesday obtained a retaliatory restraining order prohibiting the International from acting for the local, from calling a meeting of members, from representing the local in business matters and from ousting officials.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Mrs. Hays returned to New York Tuesday from a ten days' West Indies cruise.

Sees "Hollywood Wall" Protection Against Chaos

Placation and adjustment, a proclamation of a policy of sweet reasonableness, were dominant notes in the first really formal address of Henderson M. Richey, "exhibitor relations counsel" for Radio Keith Orpheum, delivered Friday to the Syracuse, New York, unit meting of Allied Theatre Owners. Also, for the first time in motion picture annals, Mr. Richey found provocations for and value in the isolation that is Hollywood.

"If the time comes," he said, "when the cancer of chaos, which seems to be eating at each other department of the industry, finally touches Hollywood and the production branch, exhibitors, whether independent or not, will face a situation that will make problems of 'what is proper clearance,' 'how many can be sold in a block', 'who is going to do it to who', etc., look like a harmless skin rash.

"There have been times when Hollywood has been referred to as having a wall around it, separately removed from the rest of the world. This is one time I hope the wall stays up for a while.

"The most encouraging note for many months are the announcements of the various producing companies that 'disregarding government suits, supreme court decisions and the internal squabbles of inter-industry departments', 'The show must go on', and with every company announcing increased production budgets, better stories, new combinations of stars, and more money to be spent on advertising, the exhibitor, who feels his main job is to buy and show to his public good pictures, will not be let down.

"The speedy establishment of boards of arbitration, through which speedy disposition of justified complaints can be accomplished and where unjustified squawks will be exposed at once before they become snow ball rumors, which create nothing more than ill feeling, will do much to get the industry back to its normal function—selling good motion pictures to the public."

Livingstone Joins Brandt

Beulah Livingstone, for three years in charge of publicity at Universal and later associated with the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign, has been appointed publicity director of Film Alliance, organized this week to combine the interests of Harry Brandt of the Brandt Circuit, and Nat Wachsberger, associated with Synimex of Paris and Les Films Triomphe of Brussels, which plans to release annually in the United States a minimum of 12 British and French productions. Offices have been installed on the 21st floor of the RKO Building, New York.

Burhorn Honored

A testimonial dinner for John Burhorn, winner of the Quigley Silver Grand Award for 1938, will be given next Wednesday, March 29th, at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. More than 75 important theatre and civic leaders will attend. Mr. Burhorn is manager of the Gayety in South Chicago.

"Nazi Spy" To Open At Strand in April

"Because of the nature of world events, currently in the headlines," Warner Brothers this week announced that it will place "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" in the New York Strand immediately on its arrival in April.

"Since it is expected that the film will play a number of weeks at the Broadway house," the company says it has decided to sell its other current product to outside Broadway theatres, so that subsequent runs will not be delayed in playing the other important product which Warner Brothers has scheduled for release during the next few months.

"Dark Victory," therefore, will have its world premiere at the Radio City Music Hall, in New York City, on April 20; and "Juarez," goes into the Hollywood Theatre, same city, on a two-a-day basis, in May.

$40,000 for Deanna

"Three Smart Girls Grow Up," fifth consecutive Deanna Durbin box office performer for Universal in two years, established a three-year Broadway Rivoli record this week on a gross of $42,000. Rivoli grosses for the past 11 weeks ranged all the way from $11,000 for "The Son of Frankenstein," also Universal's, to the $37,000 taken in by Paramount's "Beachcomber" in its first week.

Ample Supply of Financing in Sight: Hammons

E. W. Hammons, president of Grand National-Educational, returned to New York Wednesday, from the coast, where he admittedly had faced a threatening financial situation and where he had been lining up new support and new product for 1939-40.

Mr. Hammons declared that the company "would continue," that new financing "ample to supply the needs for the coming season" was "in prospect;" and that papers were being drawn up to include a new coast producer in the company—"a well known producer" whose name he refused to disclose, "but who has produced many pictures, and will produce about 16 for us, and who will not only use our capital but his own for production."

Studio Creditors Paid

Mr. Hammons talked mostly on the financial situation which resulted last week in the paring of the home office and country sales staffs.

The studio creditors in California have been paid off, Mr. Hammons said. "We don't owe a five cent piece in California." The California financial laws, he said, "are the damndest ever; they make no allowances."

Mr. Hammons said he had come to terms with Eugene Frenke, with whom Grand National had an agreement for release of Mr. Frenke's picture, "Exile Express," starring Anna Sten. Frenke had claimed $25,000 was due him immediately, and had started to withdraw his picture. Mr. Hammons said he deposited $25,000 in a Hollywood bank, to be paid to Mr. Frenke when the latter delivers his picture.

Arcadia, according to Mr. Hammons, should deliver 12 pictures on the new schedule.

Claims of other creditors, due on August 11, amount to $200,000 and more. Of these Mr. Hammons said:

"We have ample resources, not only to pay these debts, but to assure financing of all the new product."

He would neither deny or affirm that the "sources" were British. He said that Jeffrey Bernerd and Maurice Wilson, of the Grand National British company, were to sail from England on March 31, for conferences with Mr. Hammons in New York.

The company has about five pictures on the present schedule, four of them completed and enough money to distribute them, Mr. Hammons declared. The four pictures completed are "Everything Happens to Anne," "Panama Patrol," two "Renfrew" pictures, untitled; and "Exile Express." Starting is "Miracle on Main Street."

The company also expects to produce 26 one-reelers and 18 two-reelers for 1939-40. They will be made on the east and west coasts and will be sold under the "Educational" brand name, separately from Grand National features. Eleven scripts are in readiness, he said.

$713,783 Lost in 1938 By "U" Parent Company

Universal Corporation and its domestic subsidiaries report a net loss of $713,783 for the fiscal year, ended Oct. 29, 1938. After including $27,537 equity in profits of foreign subsidiaries, and after $141,152 provision for cumulative dividends for the year, on the eight per cent first preferred stock of Universal Pictures, there was a loss of $827,398 carried to the deficit account.

A LETTER TO EXHIBITORS

This picture is going to make more money for you than any other we have ever produced. Magazines and newspapers the country over are going to call it the "Picture of the Year." Critics will drum their desks trying to beat out new adjectives of superdelight. Theatre operators will call each other up and cry with envy or chirp with joy (depending whether they have it coming or not). People will talk about it—especially women, who will double-talk, in their enthusiasm. It will definitely be held over indefinitely—and give you the most prolonged date with profit you have ever had!

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Product Trends

First revelations of the quality of pictures that will feature the 1939-40 program crop up in the list of those started in the week of St. Patrick's Day. Seven went into work. Four of them, the efforts of three studios, are subjects which all concerned are sure will captivate public and exhibitor fancy and give rival outfits something to shoot at.

Darryl F. Zanuck's 20th Century-Fox organization wasted no time in stepping out on its best foot. "Young Mr. Lincoln," a biography of the Great Emancipator's early life, will feature Henry Fonda, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan, Richard Cromwell, Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore and Eddie Quillan. A companion top-notcher, "Second Fiddle," will star Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee and feature Lyle Talbot, Mary Healy, Edna Mae Oliver and Spencer Charters.

Bette Davis Starts

Fresh from winning the Academy Award for the best feminine performance and after a personal triumph in "Dark Victory," Bette Davis started in "The Old Maid," in which Miriam Hopkins, Humphrey Bogart, Jerome Cowan and Donald Crisp will be seen. Warner's second starting feature is "Enemy Agent," a vehicle for Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay and Bruce Lester.

"The Sun Never Sets" started at Universal. Leading players are Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone and Barbara O'Neill. Many more will be added.

Columbia's contribution to the new work is "Mandrake, The Magician." It will present Warren Hull, Doris Weston, Forbes Murray, Don Beddoe and John Tyrell.

Monogram began work on "Wolf Call," in which John Carroll and Movita are the principals.

Seven Completed

Seven productions were finished. Two of them are credited to Universal. Hugh Herbert, Ruth Donnelly, Joy Hodges, Eddie Quillan, Juanita Quigley and Bennie Bartlett will be seen in "The Family Next Door." "Big Town Czar" will present Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Ed Sullivan, Frank Jenks, Clyde Dilson, Oscar Polk and Jack LaRue.

For United Artists distribution, Samuel Goldwyn finished "Wuthering Heights," announced for press preview March 24th. The all-English cast is made up of Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Flora Robson, Donald Crisp, Hugh Williams, Cecil Humphries, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Leo G. Carroll.

"Waterfront" was finished at Warners. It will present Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson, Marie Wilson, Sheila Bromley, Arthur Gardner and Ward Bond.

"Man of Conquest," costliest production ever made by Republic, was finished. The large cast will feature Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Joan Fontaine, Edward Ellis, Robert Armstrong, Victor Jory, Robert Barrat, Ralph Morgan, Janet Beecher, George Hayes and C. Henry Gordon.

Bearing the tentative title "A Hundred to One," MGM's finished picture will feature Melvyn Douglas with Louise Platt, Douglass Dumbrille, Gene Lockhart, Tom Collins, Jean Fenwick, Halliwell Hobbes, Florence George and Hobart Cavanaugh.

A Jane Withers picture, "Boy Friend," was completed at 20th Century-Fox. She will be supported by Arleen Whelan, Robert Kellard, Richard Bond, Warren Hymer and Robert Shaw.

HOLLYWOOD EXTRAS IN GREAT DEMAND

Hollywood's army of extras, approximately 10,000, is enjoying unprecedented activity.

The situation prevailing on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot is typical of almost every other major studio. For "Rose of Washington Square", 2,500 dress extras were employed. "Stanley and Livingstone" is using about 1,000. Although only 150 Indians are on the Central Casting Bureau call list, "Susannah of the Mounties" required over 300 red men, so a whole tribe of Montana Blackfeet was imported. "Return of the Cisco Kid" needed 500 Indian, Mexican and cowboy extras. "Boy Friend" gave employment to more than 100 extras of various types.

Meanwhile the daily quota of extras in Paramount, MGM, Republic, Warner Brothers and Universal is averaging better than one thousand.

"Gateway"

Jesse Lasky's "Gateway to Hollywood" is just another Sunday radio program if considered only as one more item in the warfare between broadcasts and picture exhibition. But when one pries into its purposes, one sees an effort to encourage a hectic courtship of the two arts. Mr. Lasky says radio can be the motion picture industry's "greatest ally—if it is used constructively."

A Paradox

A paradox in the picture business is that everybody wants new faces, but nobody has much enthusiasm for films that do not feature established stars.

"The purpose of 'Gateway to Hollywood' is to create names while developing talent," says Mr. Lasky. "For ten weeks now, a growing listening audience has been hearing the names 'Alice Eden' and 'John Archer.' No such persons exist unless by coincidence. They will come into being on the night of the 13th broadcast when the two choices of our talent search surrender the names they have borne and officially become Alice Eden and John Archer. The next day, under twenty-week contracts they will go to work as the featured players in 'Career,' an RKO-Radio picture (our co-partners in the talent search), which Robert Sisk will produce.

"For years, I, as well as every other producer, have been signing picture talent. With comparatively few exceptions our prospects immediately went into the stock companies. A few rose from the companies, but generally this expensive, inefficient process has been a failure. Prospects who had talent didn't get a break because they didn't have a name. I wracked my brain endeavoring to devise a method of eliminating this situation, until, out of a clear sky, the thought of talent searches via radio struck me. I used to think radio was pictures' greatest menace, just as I used to think pictures were the worst enemy of vaudeville and the legitimate stage until I found out otherwise. I came to realize that, if used properly, radio would be the best friend pictures ever had. I had no difficulty in selling my idea to RKO-Radio executives. P. K. Wrigley was eager to sponsor it."

How It Operates

In the Lasky "Gateway to Hollywood Talent Search," boys and girls who aspire to be picture actors don't have to come to Hollywood; Hollywood comes to them. They submit applications and photographs. Those who look as if they might have something on the ball are notified that they will be interviewed either by Bryant Washburn or Hobart Bosworth (until he became ill) scouts conducting the regional talent searches. Their choices have been given an all-expenses-paid trip to the coast where they appear and will continue to appear on "Gateway" programs until the day of the final choice. They are coached and trained and have the thrill and benefit of being supported by top name stars on their broadcasts. Every fourth week, however, the candidates appear on their own in competition with the selections of the three previous weeks.

Is the plan working? Yes, in Mr. Lasky's opinion as well as that of RKO-Radio executives. In the first month's broadcasts, one girl who was eliminated was signed up by RKO-Radio regardless. Later, a boy who lost out was amazed to find that Columbia wanted to test him for the lead role in "Golden Boy." Samuel Goldwyn already is angling for another young woman candidate. Four other potentialities are being considered by other studios. All the candidates are being pestered by agents who want to guide them to fame and fortune.

Following the conclusion of this thirteen week radio broadcast talent search, another series will be launched. In that the search will be for juveniles who can sing.

This series, which Mr. Lasky will direct, will also be under the auspices of the same sponsors and with the same contacts. It will be broadcast over CBS each Sunday afternoon.

Raise Coast Paralysis Fund

Southern California raised a total of $126,504.97 for the 1939 infantile paralysis drive in which the motion picture industry took an active part, Joseph M. Schenck, campaign chairman for California, said this week. Mr. Schenck lauded, among other organizations, the Fox West Coast Theatres and the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California for their cooperation.

Three Smart Girls Grow Up

(Universal)

All-Purpose Musical Romance

The picture is tangible proof of the widely accented truism that "There is nothing the matter with the motion picture business that a good motion picture can't cure." Adolf Hitler was acquiring the remainder and residue of Czechoslovakia and downtown Los Angeles was visibly ablaze off there to the left, both matters of moment to the great of Hollywood who turned out to witness the official preview, but within the Pantages theatre these great and the great unwashed who had paid their way in forgot these and other irksome realities completely for 83 magnificent minutes of 100% "escapist" entertainment.

It is far and away the best of the Joseph Pasternak-Henry Koster-Deanna Durbin pictures, a triumph for each of these fortuitously affiliated artists, for Universal and, in a large and important sense, for the motion picture art-industry.

Your reporter is not forgetting "Three Smart Girls" when he mentions this picture as the Pasternak-Koster-Durbin best. On the contrary, he has but now thumbed back through the files of MOTION PICTURE HERALD and re-examined, in the January 30, 1937 edition, his own references to that then untested box office quantity, to wit:

"This is the picture that Eddie Cantor and others have been telling their radio audiences not to miss, and exhibitors who underwrite all of the good things said about it by air and in print will still be guilty of understatement, if this and six or seven thousand other witnesses to its unreeling at the New York Roxy are not unanimously mistaken. The film has been called different and it is emphatically that. It has been called human, thrilling, masterly, even inspired, and these indicate but do not describe the nature of it. It is rich in the intangibles that make up memorable entertainment and these are not readily expressed in adjectives. . . . It is at once a mass picture, a class picture, a family picture, an adult picture, a children's picture, a small town picture, an artistic picture in the meaning of that Art which erases all evidences of itself."

What was true of "Three Smart Girls" then, as box office records across the nation proved, is true—plus—of "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." Miss Durbin has grown up, artistically as well as by two important adolescent years, and the Messrs. Pasternak and Koster have grown up, professionally, from venturesome novices eager to test their talents in fast company, to matured masters in sure perfection of their especial skill. "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" is in full fact "Three Smart Girls" grown up, and the glad news about it is that it's a full three years better.

The new picture is as all-purpose as the old one was, somewhat more so on two minor counts. Miss Durbin's singing, in the first picture, was regarded as remarkable considering her age; her singing in the new picture is remarkable without regard to her years. Charles Winninger's un-fatherly infatuation with a blonde of dubious intent, in the first film, was ever so slightly inimical to juvenile sympathy; this time he plays a father any kid can love.

This time the eldest of the three sisters again is played by Nan Grey, Helen Parrish substitutes for Barbara Read as the in-between sister, and again Nella Walker plays the mother, this time with more opportunity to display her ability. Ernest Cossart is again the helpful family butler, but Robert Cummings, as the principal young man, is a newcomer to the picture and to Universal, which gave him a long term contract the morning after the preview in acknowledgment of a commanding performance.

Mr. Winninger's portrayal of the rich, absent-minded but well-meaning father of the three smart girls is something for posterity to look back at. Almost nobody in modern show business can remember back to a time when Mr. Winninger wasn't making audiences laugh, whether in pictures, A and B, in musical comedy, in vaudeville, or 'way back of that, as one of the trouping Winninger Brothers who arrived in small-town mid-America every year to lead a frock-coated parade down the Main Street with the troupe doubling in brass and the local Opry House sold out a week in advance. But nobody remembers Charlie Winninger for any performance as fine as he gives in this picture. The laughs he gets are worth double the price of admission.

The story, an original screen play by Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson, is a pleasant, plausible account of the youngest sister's attempts to find a man to quench the grief in the second sister's heart caused by announcement of the eldest sister's engagement to the family's most favored young man. The candidate brought in confounds the young plotter by falling in love with the engaged sister instead of the heartbroken one. There are divers complications, mostly amusing but now and again of a kind that brings audience tears, before the forces of nature and a measure of tardy but effectual paternal intervention combine to straighten matters.

Miss Durbin's four song numbers appear not as staged interludes but as incidents in the story, one of them a most amusing incident in which, unannounced, Charles Previn, musical director of this and the other Durbin pictures, plays the part of a musical director. That would be an extra item to tell the customers about.

There are no theatres where "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" is not a natural. There are no kinds of audiences—mass, class, bucolic, sophisticated, old, young, musically-, romantically-, dramatically-, or otherwise-inclined—for which this picture is not perfectly suitable and soundly satisfying entertainment. There is no type, technique or medium of exploitation for which the film does not provide material and there is no ceiling limiting showmanship promises to be made in its behalf.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where it entertained a professional, press and public audience utterly—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

I'm from Missouri

(Paramount)

Comedy

Bing Crosby has given this picture considerable national publicity on his radio program, continuing the while, naturally, his affable sponsorship of his protege, bazooka-blowing Bob Burns, who plays the lead in the picture. The production also has had a notable world premiere at Kansas City, Mo., under the personal direction of Robert Gillham, Paramount director of advertising and publicity. With these and correlated enterprises functioning in behalf of the national box office, showmen contracted to exhibit the picture may be said to have had a large part of their exploitation job attended to in advance.

The picture was produced by Paul Jones on an expensive scale. It was directed by Theodore Reed. John C. Moffitt and Duke Atterberry constructed the screen play from unnamed stories by Homer Croy and Julian Street. It is about a Missouri banker who goes to London to sell Missouri mules to the British government.

Mr. Burns is somewhat less impressive in the leading role than he was in his last appearance, in and as "The Arkansas Traveler." He clicks with some of the better gaglines given him to speak but gives a hurried performance, as a whole, in unprofitable contrast to the leisurely, Will Rogers-ish manner he wore in the successful "Arkansas Traveler." It may be as well for showmen to forego linking the two pictures too closely in ad copy.

A part of Mr. Burns' difficulty in the present venture may have been due to story points in common with not one but two Will Rogers pictures. "I'm from Missouri" has Mr. Burns exhibiting a prize mule at a stock show much as Mr. Rogers exhibited a prize pig at a state fair in "State Fair." It also has Mr. Burns crossing the Atlantic to try his grass-root wit on British ears a la "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." For even so earnest a disciple of the late Mr. Rogers as Mr. Burns to invite such direct comparison is, of course, venturesome.

A good many other persons contribute bright bits to the picture, all sharply subordinated to the principal. E. E. Clive has some excellent moments, Melville Cooper and Gene Lockhart make sound capital of their opportunities, and Gladys George makes what she can of a wifely role shaded down in the star's behalf.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, where it followed another Paramount comedy, "Cafe Society," on the program. Audience reaction was spotty, ranging from hearty laughter at high points in the dialogue to restlessness during the intervals between them.—W. R. W.

Rough Riders Round-Up

(Republic)

Western

Considerable action, a good story and a competent cast make this western entertaining. It is located on the Mexican border just after the Spanish-American War and the story derives from the experiences of returning Rough Riders as members of the border patrol. There is a goodly share of fist fights and gun battles.

The picture stars the up and coming Roy Rogers. He has a good voice and the songs are introduced logically. In support are several able character actors including Raymond Hatton, Eddie Acuff, William Pawley, George Meeker and Jack Rockwell. Then there are Mary Hart, the ingenue, and the experienced Dorothy Sebastian as a feminine "heavy."

"Roy" and two other Rough Riders, "Rusty" and "Tommy," join the border patrol. Their first assignment is to protect a shipment of gold. Outlaws under "Arizona Jack" start a fight with the patrolmen in a cantina and "Tommy" is killed. The bandits then seize the gold. "Roy" and "Rusty" set out to find the outlaws' hideout, are captured.

"Dorothy," also held prisoner, is purposely freed when "Arizona Jack" learns she is affianced to "Lanning," who operates her father's mines across the border. "Lanning" is in cahoots with the outlaws. "Dorothy" helps "Roy" and "Rusty" to escape. "Arizona Jack" finds he has no more use for "Lanning." He kills him, and with the outlaws sets out to take the gold hidden in the mines. Meanwhile "Roy" has rounded up some Rough Riders and in a fight at the mines the outlaws are captured.

On Trial

(Warner Brothers)

Melodrama

The picture is an adaptation of Elmer Rice's play, "On Trial," a sensational melodrama in the days when the legitimate stage was enjoying a golden era, and a pretty good melodrama today. The way it comes up on the screen, flashback technique having been utilized to make for clarity and add wallop to the basic plot and its ramifications, fully justifies the anticipation of its producers that it will prove acceptable entertainment in 1939.

Today's version of "On Trial" retains all the elements that made the original a talked-about attraction. Action and dialogue are intelligently balanced. Suspense and surprise seem to have been emphasized to a greater degree than in the original or any of the previous pictures based on it. The theme concerns a young business man, "Robert Strickland," who, on trial for a murder of which he is apparently guilty, makes no effort to defend himself or collaborate with counsel, "Arbuckle." With the accused on his way to the electric chair, "Arbuckle" summons his client's daughter, "Doris," to testify in her father's behalf. The evidence the child gives forces her mother to take the stand. Confessing her own romantic indiscretions, she also gives testimony that absolves her husband and incriminates "Glover."

The picture is uniformly well acted. Convincing performances are contributed by John Litel, Margaret Lindsay, Edward Norris, Larry Williams and especially little Janet Chapman. While not a big picture, this "On Trial" is a soundly entertaining one.

Previewed at the Forum theatre, Los Angeles. The Sunday evening audience, which had been watching "Idiot's Delight," seemed to regard the special attraction as a neat contrast to the ultra modern piece.—G. M.

They Made Her a Spy

(RKO Radio)

Spy Melodrama

The title keys the story content, and as all spy stories follow a general pattern, their significance as matters of public interest rests, in a large measure, on how well they are produced and how convincingly the story is acted and directed.

"They made Her a Spy" was produced by Robert Sisk and directed by Jack Hively from a screen play prepared by Michael Kanin and Jo Pagano based on an original story by George Blicker. Sally Eilers, Allan Lane and Fritz Leiber are featured and Frank M. Thomas, Theodor Von Eltz, Addison Richards, Larry Blake, Spencer Charters and Leona Roberts are the principal support. It is topical melodrama as timely as a radio news broadcast and containing ingenious love interest.

There is little artificial or fanciful. All that takes place is believable stuff. Recent news stories, which by montage become a part of the show, give it actual and credible substance. To avenge her brother's death, as well as to serve her country, "Irene" joins the Military Intelligence in Washington, D. C., and quickly becomes a trusted operative for the master spy, "Dr. Krull." Simultaneously she becomes romantically involved with "Huntley," who thinks she is just as much a spy, bent on wrecking the U. S. as she believes him to be. Together they go through adventures, danger bringing them closer to each other and leading to incontrovertible evidence on "Krull." In the rapidly developed climax, which leads to "Krull's" apprehension by government officers, both are arrested as spies. Then they follow a trail that leads directly into the Military Intelligence offices to bare a trusted attache as a traitor.

Up-to-the-minute entertainment, rich in story, production detail, the manner in which spy and counter spy methods are exposed, the show lends itself to topical exploitation. Digests of the half dozen or more similar circumstances of recent vintage of course can be used to quicken interest.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Cal. The audience's interest, undoubtedly influenced by the news events of the day, was legitimate.—G. M.

The Puritan

(Lenauer International)

Psychopathic Portrait

In seconding the rejection of this French made film by Irwin Esmond, chief censor, the New York Board of Regents found the picture to be "indecent," "immoral," "inhuman" and tending "to corrupt morals." Specific counts voiced against the production were that "the film depicts solicitation on the streets, lewd dance halls, indecent acts of prostitution" and other objections. Despite the censorial reprisals from the Empire State, Jean Lenauer, president of Lenauer International, which is the American sponsor of the Gallic case history of a psychopathic personality, is negotiating booking engagements in states where it may be passed or in those localities where no board of censorship exists.

Even if the picture were given state sanction, there is little possibility of the film offering widespread and general audience entertainment. The advanced maturity of the theme and its grim and realistic treatment may seem to be too adult for some adult gatherings. Picture patrons whose interest in cinema consumption is more psychological than pictorial may be able to derive a bit of scholastic value from the study of the title rolist's diseased mental condition. Accordingly, the showing of the work is directed to those select centers which specialize in the merchandising of cerebral screen entertainment for the intelligentsia. Of course, the newspaper reading exhibitor may be able to capitalize on the checkered career of the foreign importation by sounding to the tabloid and pulp magazine literati that the plot of the piece could have appeared on the front pages of their favorite confessional journals.

Despite the moral stigma attached to the immoral implications of the narration, the work has been dressed in expert technical tailoring. Jean-Louis Barrault in the name part offers a study of a sex slayer that connoisseurs of the art of acting might consider superb. Pierre Fesnay, noted French mime, plays the gendarme nemesis splendidly, an assignment made doubly effective from the dramatic contrast between the cool, calculating character of the police personality and the hysterical makeup of his murderous prey. The supporting players lend superlative support, although with their patently Gallic looks and mannerisms they hardly give the impression of Hibernians. Director Jeff Musso works upon his material with a concentration that is intense and knowing. Musical scoring and lighting backgrounds heighten effectively the morbid mood of the murder piece. English titles translate the French dialogue in a high, literary style.

Taken from the Celtic novel by Liam O'Flaherty, which subsequently was banned from publication in the Irish Free State and met with an equally unfavorable reception when it appeared in play form for a run of four performances on the New York stage in 1936, the film was made in Paris in 1937. From the opening sequences wherein the "Puritan" or "Ferriter" kills a young woman after she in skimpy garments has said goodby to her illicit lover, the story follows the unbalanced individual on his crazed way with a doggedness symptomatic almost of monomania. Before the final downfall there are speeches and sequences that may be construed by some as being tinted with the tones of anti-clericalism and sacrilege. For almost half the pictorial proceedings, the title rolist with a perverted sense of confession consorts with personages that are euphemistically called "ladies of the evening." The explanation of the psychosis that ranges from a split personality to a messianic complex and delusions of persecution may be within the knowledge and interest of the students of the subject, although for the completeness of the case history and the understanding of the general public more factual data of the background and beginnings of the psychopathic patient would be necessary.

Sudden Money

(Paramount)

Domestic Comedy

What use is money, after all, if it can't be made to let one do all the things he has dreamed of doing? Such is the entertainment philosophy of "Sudden Money." Wealth that comes as the result of winning a sweepstakes prize is an old theatrical subject, but the way producer William C. Thomas chose to serve it up in this instance endows the topic with refreshingly new touches for the all-family audiences.

Visions of happier days dawn for the always-financially-embarrassed "Patterson" family when father "Sweeney" and brother "Doc" win a capital prize. Trap-drummer "Sweeney" reorganizes his old college ragtime band. "Doc" bankrolls his own horse-betting system. Modern art claims mother Elsie. Daughter Mary goes to finishing school in hopes some super-rich lad will marry her. "Junior" is shipped off to military school. "Grandpa Casey," who kids' ball club, can only think that the whole shebang has gone crazy. Each loses when smarter folk make suckers of them. Still, they have sense enough to be happy when they are broke and to resume their old way of living.

Charles Ruggles, Marjorie Rambeau, Charley Grapewin, Broderick Crawford, Billy Lee and Evelyn Keyes are the players who occupy the spotlight most of the time. They are supported by almost a score of bit and character players who contribute much to the picture's entertainment quality. There are a few spots where the show gets balled up a bit, but these, instead of detracting from the amusement, seemed to add to it.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Calif. If all audiences enjoy the show as much as the crowd in this house appeared to, exhibitors who book it will not have occasion for regret.—G. M.

Crisis

(Mayer-Burstyn)

Propaganda Film

Concurrent with the latest Nazi putsch into Czechoslovakia, Mayer-Burstyn has released "Crisis," a documentary film dealing with the betrayal, desertion and events leading to the destruction of the democratic country.

The picture, produced and directed by Herbert Kline, who also collaborated on other propaganda pictures including "Heart of Spain" and "Return to Life," depicts the life of the Czechs under the menace of Hitlerism. It shows how the crippled, aged and blind were forced from their homes and institutions to vote for Nazi candidates, and two days later were made to attend a funeral parade for two Storm Troopers killed on the Czech border. The persecution does not stop there. There are scenes of the beating and slaying of Czech citizenry in a Nazi uprising in the Sudeten territory. The film also shows how Czechoslovakia prepared for the war, sending troops to the frontiers and equipping recruits.

The commentary was written by Vincent Sheean, foreign correspondent, who offered his services after seeing the picture, and was spoken by Leif Erickson, stage and screen star.

The picture, playing to a capacity anti-Nazi audience in the 55th Street Playhouse in New York, was applauded at the finish.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced and directed by Herbert Kline. Distributed by Mayer-Burstyn. Commentary written by Vincent Sheean and narrated by Leif Erickson. Co-directors Hans Burger and A. Hackenschmied. Photographed by Alexander Hackenschmied. Musical score by H. W. Susskind and Jaroslav Harvan. Filmed in central Europe, chiefly in the Henlein-dominated Sudeten regions bordering on Czechoslovakia during the months of crisis from "Anschluss" to the "Peace of Munich." Release date, March 13, 1939. Running time, 96 minutes.

Almost a Gentleman

(RKO-Radio)

Dog Story

This is a picture about a dog. The dog's name is Ace. It is a German shepherd or police dog, and a fine specimen. Few questions in show business are so easy to answer as the one about whether audiences are going to like a dog picture. Those who like dogs like dog pictures, unless the dog dies—this one doesn't—and those who don't like dogs don't like dog pictures.

Harold Shumate wrote the story and Leslie Goodwins directed for Cliff Reid, producer. None of these gentlemen sought to make it more than a dog picture, but they did seek to make it an honest one. Therefore, Picardy Max, which is Ace's name in the picture, performs no canine miracles. He does do the things a competent and well trained dog can do, and does them extremely well. He is an extremely satisfactory dog.

James Ellison has the best of the two-legged moments in the picture. It comes when he pleads the case of the mongrel dog to a jury of his—Ellison's, not the dog's—peers. This had a preview audience weeping.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where a so-known average audience like it averagely well.—W. R. W.

Money To Loan

(MGM)

Crime-Doesn't-Pay Sermon

A sobering and suggestive sermon on the evils of loan sharks and their usurious practices is offered in this latest issue of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series. Examining the procedure of a particular finance company, the short subject sleuths of this series show how the "rats" behind the project exploit the financial straits of persons to feather their own nests. Among the practices displayed are the leveling of exorbitant rates of interest, forcing a feminine patron, who is negligent in her payments, to become a taxi hall dancer, selling property of clients illegally, and intimidating with physical force people from assisting the police in their campaign against such lecherous actions. The death of an elderly man is traced to the tactics of the loan organization and results in the dissolution of the company and the jailing of the culprits. A sane word of warning is voiced to the audience to patronize only those financial assistance groups that have been carefully examined and found to be working within the limits of the law. As has been the custom of this category, this special selection offers first rate entertainment as well as some good common sense advice in the way of education.—Running time, 20 minutes.

FROM READERS

CALLS EXHIBITOR "WORST ENEMY" OF PICTURES

To the Editor of the Herald:

What's the matter with the show business?

I am just a movie operator, but from what I can see and hear the trouble with the show business seems to be with the theatre owners themselves. They are organized, but there is no cooperation between them.

They have no business code of ethics whatever.

What good is organization without cooperation?

The theatre owners in Chicago are organized, but for what?

One theatre will run double features, and not to be outdone some other theatre will run three features. I know two theatres in Chicago that run three features right now.

No theatre anywhere should run double features or three features, nor should they give away premiums such as dishes, stockings, or anything else.

There seems to be a bunch of people in the show business that shouldn't be in it. They are round pegs in square holes. They just don't fit.

When a theatre owner runs two or three features or gives dishes away, as an inducement, then he is cheapening the business and giving the public the impression that the show business is going begging; and they are dragging the show business in the gutter. The theatre owner should remember that he is in a high brow business and not a piker's business.

The worst enemy a motion picture has between Hollywood and the projection room is—the theatre owner.—Joe Dunn, 6143 Fletcher St., Chicago, Ill. Member local 110.

CALLS STORIES CHIEF TARGET

To the Editor of the Herald:

An analysis from hundreds of exhibitors' reports (on "What the Picture Did for Me") indicates that the chief adverse criticism is on the story content. This is undoubtedly a true situation. Weak stories! Dumb stories! Meaningless stories! The reaction to this probably suggests in the minds of many exhibitors stories that really have exceptional merit.

For my own part, every time I watch a poor story unfold on the screen I swell up with ideas that should make good screen fare. Certainly there must be more good material in the minds of 10,000 fault-finding exhibitors than is being brought out by the hundred-odd self-satisfied, well paid writers employed by the various producers. Isn't it about time that the buyer (exhibitor) had some voice in determining the goods he buys?—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis.

being initiated into the freedom-loving group known as the "Sons of Liberty." Arrested for aiding the rebels, he is imprisoned, released, arrested again and thrown into jail, where he meets in a dramatic manner Nathan Hale on his way to his death. Escaping, Salomon moves to Philadelphia. While attending a religious ceremony, Salomon receives a plea from General Washington to help raise $400,000 for the Continental army. An inspiring sequence shows a Hebrew congregation responding to his appeal for financial assistance. At the end of the war, Salomon dies, repeating the words from the preamble of the Declaration of Independence that "all men are created free and equal."

Claude Rains gives a sincere and moving performance in the role of Salomon and is assisted by a cast of feature length stature, including Gale Sondergaard, Donald Crisp, Montagu Love, Henry O'Neill and James Stephenson. The script from Crane Wilbur and the direction by Michael Curtiz, together with some fine set mounting and color application, are of the first order in excellence. The trade press reviewers applauded the effort spontaneously and sincerely.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Jitterbug Follies

(MGM)

Cartoon

A cartoon caricature of the jitterbug dance craze is drawn with effects that may amuse or annoy the spectator according to his personal stand on this particular form of tripping the light fantastic. Count Screwloose and his Wonder Dog, pen portraits from the screwball imagination of Milt Gross, exploit a dance contest. A sour note in this musical program is the entrance of two tough characters from the Citizens Fair Play Committee to see that the exhibition is run on the "up and up." The contestants include Lizzy Swish, bovine swing songstress, a vocal harmony team of two penguins and several characters from nursery rhyme fiction. An ostrich doing a fan dance wins the house's applause. The contest holders, who have been planning to take it on the "lam" with the box office receipts, do an exit without the money bags. Except for the fan dance sequence, which would seem to be hardly appropriate material for a children's cartoon program, the pen strip is a mild and at times fairly amusing drawing board travesty.—Running time, nine minutes.

Tiny Troubles

(MGM)

Our Gang and the Underworld

In this adventure, the Our Gang kiddies are entangled with a shady character from the underworld, all because of adult presumption on the good nature of the young innocents. Alfalfa's baby brother is a persistent squaller and the big brother takes little Junior back to the tree in the park where mother is supposed to have found the l'enfant terrible. While on his mission, Alfalfa and his pals spy a racketeering midget disguised as a baby and take him home as a substitute. Of course, the kids are a bit surprised by the precocious habits of their new ward, especially when he begins to smoke a cigar, guzzle some beer and brandish a gun. The minions of the law arrive and take the children in hand as confederates of the tiny gangster. Of course, the young ones work their wiles on the soft heart of the desk sergeant and are set free in time to beat it back to the park to reclaim the real baby. The situations are amusing and the kids are still their copyright selves so that any audience should find a chuckle or two in seeing the juvenile adventures.—Running time, 10 minutes.

BOOK REVIEW

PROFITABLE SHOWMANSHIP, by Kenneth Goode and Zenn Kaufman. Published by Prentice-Hall, Inc. 180 pp., including text. $2.75

Cooperative campaigns, national and local, have done much to make the term showmanship increasingly familiar outside the motion picture industry. This familiarity, however, has yet to change opinion in many advertising minds that showmanship stems from dubious antecedents and as such is not to be counted seriously in promoting sales. Thus, any book that aims to establish a better understanding of the subject obviously is worthy of consideration. In "Profitable Showmanship," which follows their first volume, published in 1937, Kenneth Goode and Zenn Kaufman explore the field further and offer new evidence pointed to present the matter in a more favorable light.

Still pioneering in a laudable endeavor to hew a showmanship path through difficult advertising terrain, the authors have delved further into the whys and whereofs and set down their findings on behalf of business in general. These findings are based upon a 12-point formula of procedure aimed to prove that the principles of theatre showmanship can be applied to the job of moving goods to dealers' shelves or to the home of the consumer. In support are detailed promotional ideas found successful by various advertisers and reasons why they clicked.

The text, written in a light vein that makes easy reading without loss of effectiveness, covers many approaches of tested sales appeal. Chapter headings such as "Carry Your Theatre with You," "Shoot for the Heart" and "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star" indicate the general tone of the book.

Although it is not aimed directly at the attention of the experienced theatreman, "Profitable Showmanship" has its values, despite the authors' assumption that the volume will turn the average reader into a talented showman. Showmen still continue to be born that way and all the "how" books ever written will not help if the spark isn't there, but, for the uninformed who want to know more about the subject and for the knowing whose minds may be refreshed by careful reading, the book is recommended.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

LOEW'S Theatre Circuit, through the medium of its daily bulletin The Loewdown, features a number of "clubs"—Page One, Full Page, Dollar Club, etc. Important club that has built up a huge membership is the Diogenes Club. It is a "club" aimed to give recognition to those employees who perform some outstanding "feat" of honesty—especially the returning of lost valuables to patrons of Loew's Theatres. A nice idea—in this world of broken treaties, stolen nations, robbed minorities.

Most of the members of the Diogenes Club are cashiers, porters and ushers. Cashiers gain membership by returning change to absent-minded "Walk-aways." Porters, ushers and other Loew theatre workers appear almost daily in the Loew house-organ which lists new members. Instead of Diogenes finding his honest man and woman with a lantern, in these instances it is usually an electric flash-light that serves as a Diogenes beacon. In the dark auditoriums the flash-light reveals the lost articles.

A few days ago usher Lewis Stanley, Loew's-Poli Theatre, Waterbury, recovered a wallet containing $150 in cash.

Usherette Lillian Weinstein of Loew's Warwick, New York City, has an eye for diamonds. Her eagle-eye located the lost stone out of a diamond engagement ring a few evenings ago.

In Pittsburgh, at Loew's Penn Theatre, William Koester, maintenance man, found a bill-fold containing $340 in $20 bills and two fully endorsed, negotiable checks totaling $2,150. The wallet was wedged in a ventilating duct and overlooked by the cleaners. The small fortune was returned to the owner—and Diogenes Koester received as a reward—a crisp, new one dollar bill!

Rewards are seldom given. In one year's time, throughout the Loew circuit, valuables found and returned, will total over $50,000. There are now over 450 members in the Loew Diogenes Club!

NEW YORK'S GRAND CENTRAL STATION red-capped porters have been called upon to perform many an unusual duty. Now they can add publicity to the list, giving no little assistance to Universal Pictures last week in the official welcoming of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy to New York.

Lou Pollock, Universal's eastern publicity chief, arrived at the station to find hordes of photographers and reporters swarming about Dorothy Lamour (Paramount) and Don Ameche (20th Century-Fox), who arrived with Bergen for two Sunday night broadcasts of their coffee programs. Here were competitive companies getting all the glory. There was no Bergen, nor McCarthy, for that matter, in evidence. A quick search of the sleeping car and Pollock found Bergen ill, and Charlie holding his head.

Taking the situation in his stride, Pollock raced to change a handful of bills into a hatful of silver, and lavished shiny fifty-cent pieces upon every available porter, with instructions for the red-caps to yell loudly, "Charlie McCarthy is here"—but loudly. In response, the immediate result was a massing of additional hundreds who filled the station shouting greetings to Charlie, all of which was duly noted by the press assembled and duly recorded in their respective columns, and, no doubt, noted later by the newspaper-reading exhibitors of the Metropolitan area who were about to play Mr. Bergen's and Mr. McCarthy's Universal production of "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man."

THE motion picture business has a customer's interest in the observance this month by the Railway Express Agency of the 100th anniversary of express service in the United States. Many thousands of the 140,000,000 express shipments made annually are cans of films riding from exchange to exhibitor, from exhibitor to exchange.

The foundation for national expressage as it is constituted today was laid in March, 1839, when William F. Harnden, the nation's "first expressman" began carrying packages between Boston and New York in a carpetbag.

This slender, determined young man, only 26 years old, was not deterred by limited facilities for travel, making the journey four times a week, by train, stage coach and steamboat, until his "package express" gained acceptance. Establishing the first express company in this country, he soon had many competitors. Even before he died in 1845, when only 33, he saw two of his former employes—Henry Wells and Alvin Adams—inaugurate their own expresses and push them rapidly to the west and south on early railroads. At Buffalo, Wells joined with William F. Fargo, to form one of the most famous partnerships in transportation history, organizing several companies which endured for three-quarters of a century, eventually leading, in March, 1919, to a unification of express service throughout the country, and in 1929, to their absorption by the Class I railroads of the country as Railway Express Agency.

With the badge of a Deputy Commissioner, Adler started at once to give some color and attention to the drabness of the street cleaners.

Right off the bat he got the Sanitation division no little page one publicity by a "Curb Your Dog" campaign, borrowing a hundred policemen from the Police Department to enforce it. He had a dozen Park Avenue ladies hailed into court with their pet Pekinese and fancy poodle pooches. He had corner waste baskets painted bright orange and silver, turned the Sanitation trucks from a drab olive shade to the same orange-silver, brushed up and dressed up the city's other street-cleaning equipment. They look very "World's Fair-ish."

THE FRIENDLY COMPANY

Magazine Article Takes Pessimistic Television View

Operation of television sets by the public will be beset by a dozen difficulties; the images will be susceptible to countless external electrical and other conditions.

Images will be small, contrasty, and will tire the eyes.

One "new five-pound piece of television apparatus" might easily upset the whole field and "spill millions of dollars worth of apples."

Television is so complex that no one person can be called a television "expert."

Besides the technical troubles, broadcasters have to meet the problems of expense, lack of a market, lack of commercial support.

Television cannot be profitable until it is a volume business; few sponsors will pay for broadcasts until the public has sets—few sets can be sold until programs are made worthwhile and become more numerous.

These, and many other difficulties are seen for television by the publishers of Fortune Magazine which, in the April issue of that "class" affiliate of Time and Life, presents the first of two typically-Fortune articles on the "new art," on the eve of the first regular daily public telecasts, which will start April 30th at, and coincident with, the opening of the New York World's Fair.

Financial and Technical Aspects

The first article, titled "Television I: A $13,000,000 'If'," studies the financial and technical assets-and-liabilities of television, with the ledger leaning heavily on the liability side; the second article, appearing in May, will discuss television as an entertainment medium.

Touching only briefly on the relation of the motion picture industry to television, inasmuch as the second article will discuss this angle more fully, the current article does by implication criticize Hollywood's lack of attention to a possible market, and certainly, to a potential competitor. Says the article, on this subject:

"Next to the radio industry, the movie business logically should be most interested in the development of television. Both as a market for program material, talent, and technicians, and as a potential rival for audiences, television shouts for the industry's attention."

Besides the immediately technical difficulties which face television, a few of which were outlined above, the article, in summarizing television's immediate future, termed the most important—and depressing problem—that of selling enough sets.

Additional Problems

There are two more problems, unpredictable both, the article continues. These are the ability of the industry to set up enough stations to give worthwhile coverage, in view of the well known difficulties facing television network broadcasting; and the willingness of the Federal Communications Commission to issue commercial licenses, of which not one has been issued thus far.

This pessimistic view is tempered somewhat by the prediction that "while a large number of viewers is necessary to give an advertiser value for the money he has spent on his program, the operator of the station has one immediate hope. He can be tolerably certain of selling some of his air time—at some price or other—as soon as the FCC will let him. Both NBC and CBS have had a steady flow of prospects for the time they cannot sell. Unquestionably the prospective sponsors don't give half a hoot for television circulation at the moment. The prestige and publicity they would get would be worth a good many times what the broadcast itself cost."

MEXICAN LABOR FOR MEXICAN FILMS

Mexicans exclusively must be employed by all who would make pictures in Mexico on Mexican themes, the Cinematographic Artists and Employees Union has ruled.

New Television Company Formed

Developments in television this week included the following:

The Wald Radio and Television Corporation, new company, announced in New York that it had "revolutionary" television patents;

Allen B. DuMont Laboratories of Passaic, N. J., filed applications with the Federal Communitions Commission for more power, and for permission to change the location and broadcast time of their station;

The FCC had before it also applications for permits to construct and maintain a television service to the public, from the Don Lee and Crosley Corporations;

Republic Pictures, in Hollywood, announced plans to make "The Tidal Wave," the principal character of which will be a television "spot-news" reporter.

The Wald announcement said that the officers of the new corporation, chartered at Albany last week, are George Wald, president; Robert Robins, secretary and treasurer; Ralph Vatner, vice-president and general counsel; that it is a closed corporation and will not make any public issue of stock; that it will engage in non-commercial television programs; that Mr. Wald, besides holding many patents which make present radio possible, holds patents which "prevent the present radio receivers now in homes from becoming obsolete, and makes possible the rapid conversion of the present radio audience into a television audience"; that he holds another patent which would permit the "sending of programs over hundreds of miles without any necessity for costly relay stations."

Anent the recent telecasting of championship prizefights to three of Gaumont British's London theatres, the British Broadcasting Corporation indicated last week that it had no objections to such practices, a departure from its previously indicated policy.

This week, the Columbia Broadcasting System announced the signing of Donald Hunter Munro to serve as television consultant to Gilbert Seldes, CBS director of television. Mr. Munro has been television production director of the BBC.

2 MPTO Units Elect; Allied To Meet May 24

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland and the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois reelected officers this week, and in New York Allied called a state convention for May 24th to 26th.

Meeting in Baltimore

The Maryland MPTO officers and board of directors were reelected at a meeting in Baltimore. They are: Frank A. Hornig, president; Arthur B. Price, vice-president, and Herman A. Blum, treasurer. Directors: Walter Pacy, Samuel Stoltz, J. Louis Rome, Jacob Levin, L. Garman, Max Cluster, William Hicks and J. L. Whittle.

Fred Wehrenberg was unanimously reelected president of the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at a meeting Monday in St. Louis. Other officers elected are: S. F. Pertle, I. W. Rodgers, Robert Cluster and Sam Konn, vice-presidents; L. C. Hehl, secretary and treasurer, and Walter Thimmig, sergeant-at-arms.

Members of the board of directors are Harold W. Evans, Maury Davis, Victor Thein, D. M. Pappas, Frank Speros, Lou Menges, L. A. Mercier, Harry Miller, Noah Bloomer and Jake Siepker.

Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, in an address at the St. Louis meeting said that the industry today is in one of the most uncertain stages of its entire history, warned against the menace of governmental regulations through professional meddlers and self-appointed reformers that have descended on the industry since the passing of national prohibition.

Forewarned of Suit

In this connection he said that the industry was well on the way toward the elimination of various trade evils through self-regulation before the Department of Justice suits were ever aimed. He said that 65 per cent of the Government's suggestions for trade practice reform were included in the MPTOA 10-point program four years ago.

He said the recent supreme court decision in the Dallas case would have very little effect on the industry.

Allied of New York will hold its next annual convention at the Astor Hotel in New York City May 24th to 26th. The Allied national convention is scheduled for Minneapolis about the middle of June.

Colonel H. A. Cole, national president, conferred with the New York officers and directors this week. The meeting was held in the office of Max A. Cohen, president, who is head of the Cinema Circuit.

The Buffalo unit of the Allied organization held its monthly meeting last week with Albert Francis, regional vice-president, presiding.

Ross Managers Meet

Executive district managers of Ross Federal Research held a meeting at the New York home office, beginning Wednesday. Attending were district managers Harold Lund, Walter I. Brown, Walter Anderson, J. A. Kraker, F. X. Miske, E. Wall, D. A. Ross, C. B. Ross, R. E. Ross of the executive office. Harry A. Ross, president, was in charge.

RESTRAINT CHARGED IN $10,000,000 THEATRE CANDY VENDING BUSINESS

Federal Trade Commission Charges Exclusive Distribution Deals with Candy Bar Makers; Hearing Date To Be Set

The ten million dollar vending machine business as at present constituted in the motion picture industry this week felt the force of governmental movement against large operations, currently paralleled in several court actions, when the Federal Trade Commission held that the three largest vending machine operators, two of the largest chocolate candy bar manufacturers and a sales corporation had violated the Federal Trade Commission Act through agreements in restraint of trade.

O'Reilly's Company Named

Vending machine companies named in the order, announced last Thursday, were Charles O'Reilly's Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation, of New York; Jack Beresin's Berlo Vending Machine Company, of Philadelphia, and the Confection Cabinet Company, of Newark, which is prominently active in the middlewestern states. These concerns not only supply the candy and the machines to theatres but also the men to operate them.

Mr. O'Reilly in his offices in New York, told his operator to say that he was in but could not be disturbed, when inquiries were made.

The candy concerns accused in the Commission's action were the Hershey Chocolate Corporation, of Hershey, Pa.; the Peter Cailler Kohler Swiss Chocolates Company, Inc., of Fulton, N. Y., and the Chocolate Sales Corporation. Also named was Lamont, Corliss & Company, selling agent for the Kohler corporation.

Exclusive Distribution

The Commission found that the Hershey and Kohler (Nestle) companies had entered into exclusive distribution arrangements for the sale of their candy bars with the Sanitary Automatic, Berlo and Confection Cabinet companies. Furthermore, according to the findings, the candy bars were manufactured especially for use in theatre vending machines and the arrangements "resulted in closing the sources of supply of those products to the vending machine trade other than the Sanitary, Berlo and Cabinet companies."

The three vending machine concerns were directed under the restraining order, the Commission said, to desist from entering into any agreement among themselves to influence the chocolate manufacturers or the selling agent to refuse to sell to any other member of the vending machine trade, or to refuse to sell to other members in terms and conditions as favorable as those granted the three operators.

The vending machine companies also were ordered to cease from entering into agreements to prevent the purchase of candy bars by other machine operators from any manufacturer or seller, or to prevent such purchases upon terms as favorable as those received by themselves.

The Commission directed the chocolate manufacturers and the selling agent to cease furthering the vending machine operators' agreements.

The Commission dismissed its complaint as to Chocolate Sales Corporation of Hershey, former sole Hershey distributing agent, now dissolved.

LOEW'S HOUSES ON FAIR MAP

The official map of the New York World's Fair, designed by Tony Sarg and now being published, lists Loew's theatres in the New York metropolitan area as "stopovers" for tourists visiting the Fair. A total of 3,000,000 map books will be printed.

The Federal Trade Commission, in its newspaper release regarding the findings, in which it said there are 25 or more vending machine operators in the country, declared that "during the tenure of the restrictive arrangements, vending machine operators competing with the Sanitary, Berlo and Cabinet companies had difficulty in negotiating for and actually lost theatre locations for their machines because of inability to obtain Hershey and Nestle bars at a price insuring enough profit to grant the theatre managements sufficient percentage of the gross 'take' to obtain the locations."

4,400,000 Candy Bars

In the actual citation notice, docket No. 3134, is given a sidelight on the extent of the business when notation is made that "in the period between September 1, 1934, and May 1, 1935, respondent Lamont sold 4,400,000 bars of Items No. 635 (a light solid chocolate bar) and No. 637 (an almond bar) to 22 different vending machine operators, of which approximately 1,200,000 were purchased by parties other than respondents Sanitary, Berlo, and Cabinet."

The citation also referred to conferences held between Sanitary, Berlo and Cabinet "with the view of pooling their requirements in order to comply with the condition of agreeing to purchase 10,000,000 bars per year in consideration of the exclusive distributor arrangement." The citation added that Berlo and Cabinet "each committed itself to purchase 2,500,000 bars per year."

Commission Procedure

The Commission will set a hearing date at which its charges under the citation will be presented. If the charges are substantiated and the companies refuse to desist from the practices charged, the Commission procedure is to refer the complaint to the Department of Justice for court action under the monopoly laws. Should the respondents agree to desist from the practices cited in the complaint, the case would be closed without prosecution.

In an article in Motion Picture Herald of July 24, 1937, which presented a detailed study of the concession business as a whole, attention was called to an estimate by the United States Treasury Department that the annual gross from the sale of candy and other confections in 15,000 theatres reached a total of $12,500,000, but circuit operators and concession executives in New York placed the figure at ten millions. With the average profit for the theatres set by concessionaires at 40 per cent, that meant a net intake of $4,000,000 by the exhibitors.

90% in Confections

Ninety per cent of the business consists of the sale of confections, particularly in the metropolitan centers where candy sales were far above those for cigarets and chewing gum.

Popcorn is the more popular merchandise in smaller towns and rural theatres.

An article in the March, 1939, issue of Better Theatres noted that in the Glen W. Dickinson circuit of 35 theatres concessions are being profitably operated in eighteen houses. They are titled Lobby Shops and have standardized design and operation. Locations that formerly brought in $6 and $7 a week now are showing net profits between $38 and $40 weekly. A new development is the construction of Snack Shops adjoining the theatres, from the profits of the concession sales.

$1,000,000 in New York a Year

At the time of the general study of the vending machine business it was estimated that the gross in Chicago averaged $9,500 a week, in New York $10,000 from affiliated houses and $4,000 from independent theatres in Manhattan alone. Over a year it was figured that it was a million dollar business in New York, that the annual gross in Chicago approximated $675,000.

Circuit and independent operators were divided as to the comparative benefits of operating the candy machines and counters directly or leasing the space in the theatre on a concession basis. Most circuit officials favored leasing the concession on the basis that the concessionaires were best equipped to service the machines, to buy the candy at low cost and to know the preferences of the public. Paramount theatre partners, however, notably Mullin and Pinanski in New England and Balaban and Katz in Chicago, were handling the sales directly.

10% Use Counters

Only ten per cent of the theatres, and these the larger houses, used counters in the lobbies or lounges. Attendants to operate them were paid an average of $15 a week.

Sanitary Automatic Candy Corporation had contracts for all the concession business in the Warner and RKO circuits as well as many independent circuits and individual theatres.

The Peoples Candy Corporation, not a party to the suit, had stands in the Loew and Skouras houses and in 400 independent theatres in New England and other eastern states. This corporation was operated by George Smith.

Comparatively few theatre concessions are operated in the South, these as a convenience for patrons and with small profit. In California and the far Northwest the same condition held true, though West Coast Automatic Candy Corporation was building up a clientele out of offices in San Francisco.

Rodner on Coast For Rogers Fund

Harold Rodner of Warner Brothers, administrator of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, is in Hollywood to discuss with the west coast committee on matters concerning that institution. While there he will also study the preparation of the forthcoming all-star short subject to be produced in conjunction with the Will Rogers National Theatre Week, which begins April 20th.

Support of the National Theatre Week was urged on members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America by Ed Kuykendall, president. In an organization bulletin he stressed the necessity by cooperation of theatres throughout the country.

Instead of taking up collections during the Rogers' week, it is expected that Balaban and Katz will make a lump donation for the circuit's theatres.

Jack Ellis, president of the Motion Picture Associates, New York, has appointed a committee to seek financial aid from the Will Rogers Memorial Fund.

Rose of Washington Square

(20th Century-Fox)

Old-Time Songfest

"Rose of Washington Square" is being produced on an elaborate and picturesque scale. Two of the "Alexander's Ragtime Band" trio of stars, box office leaders for 1938, Tyrone Power and Alice Faye, will be the stars of "Rose of Washington Square." Their name values will be supplemented by that of Al Jolson, who, because several sections of the basic melodramatic story parallel his personal and professional career, becomes a more than ordinary asset to the production. Other names available are William Frawley, Joyce Compton, Hobart Cavanaugh, Moroni Olsen, E. E. Clive and Louis Prima and his band. Almost a score more players will be seen in incidental roles.

The popular music of a bygone era, beginning with the time of the World War and continued through the early '30's, will be featured. A few of them are "Mammy," "My Man," "The Vamp," "Rose of Washington Square," "April Showers," "Avalon" and "California Here I Come."

The time and locale coincide with the period when Jolson was winning the title of "King of Entertainers." The romance which involves Power and Miss Faye, the girl whom he (Jolson) made a star, is, of course, pure fiction. Power will be seen as a shady, luxury-loving Broadwayite who lives by his wits, a no good who causes a fine girl to fall in love with him and finally redeems himself.

The production is based on a story by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin for which Nunnally Johnson, whose screen story credits include such films as "The House of Rothschild," "Cardinal Richelieu" and "Thanks a Million," did the screen play. Gregory Ratoff, the director, just delivered "Wife, Husband and Friend." The only new song is a Mack Gordon and Harry Revel composition.

Release date: May 15, 1939.

The Man in the Iron Mask

(U.A.-Edward Small)

Historical Romance

This will be the first complete presentation of Alexander Dumas' classic. Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., essayed a version of the novel about ten years ago, from the viewpoint of "D'Artagnan" and the "Three Musketeers." Now the complete and detailed substance of the work will serve as background.

Twin boy heirs are born to the throne of France. Court and political intrigue makes one a king and exiles the other. (Louis Hayward will be seen in a dual role). "Louis XIV" is a despotic and selfish ruler, a libertine and pawn of "Fouguet." "Phillipe" is a man's man, a woman's idol, companion of the "Three Musketeers." "Phillipe," made to serve as "Louis'" double, amazes the king's betrothed, "Maria Theresa." Patriotic efforts to save the honor of France bring about the swashbuckling melodrama. The "Musketeers" and "Phillipe" are captured. "Louis" locks "Phillipe" in an iron mask, but he is rescued by "Maria." In a battle, the "Musketeers" are slain, "Louis" dies trying to escape and "Phillipe" ascends the French throne with "Maria" as his queen.

A high budget picture, the production will feature scores of authentically duplicated settings. The dozen or so principals will be supported by hundreds of extras and character actors.

The star, Louis Hayward, was seen last in "Duke of West Point." The leading woman, Joan Bennett, recently appeared in "Trade Winds." Warren William will be "D'Artagnan" and Alan Hale, Bert Roach and Miles Mander the "Three Musketeers." The disloyal "Fouquet" will be played by Joseph Schildkraut; his nemesis, "Colbert," will be Walter Kingsford. Other principals are Marin Martin, Montagu Love and William Royle.

The screen play was prepared by George Bruce, who wrote "Duke of West Point" and "Navy Blue and Gold." Director James Whale made "The Road Back," "The Great Garrick" and "Showboat."

Release date, June 15, 1939 (tentative).

East Side of Heaven

(Universal)

Comedy-Romance with Music

Every once in a while Bing Crosby makes a picture "outside" his Paramount contract. His recent excursions were to Columbia for "Pennies from Heaven" and Major Pictures for "Dr. Rhythm."

Crosby's four or five songs were composed by Johnny Burke and James Monaco. The story is a down to earth affair which leans heavily toward the comedy side. As it is told, Bing succeeds in reuniting a spatting married couple, cooling off a masher, returning a baby to its parents, making a human being out of an irascible old grandfather, and winning a wife for himself. All happens while the star is advancing from the status of a happy-go-lucky crooner of personal greetings for a telegraph company through the post of cruising troubadour for a taxi company to the rank of radio favorite.

Crosby has the type of role that fits him to a "t", and his support is composed of players who fit into their respective parts with glovelike snugness. The object of the star's affections in the picture will be Joan Blondell, long with Warners, and his principal pal is Mischa Auer. Irene Hervey and Robert Kent will be seen as the quarreling pair, while the person he convinces is not the lady's man he believes himself to be is Jerome Cowan. C. Aubrey Smith comes back to Hollywood activity to be seen as the domineering grandfather.

The picture is being directed by David Butler, who collaborated on the screen play with Herbert Polesie. William Conselman wrote the original story.

Release date: April 7, 1939.

Everything Happens to Ann

(Grand National-Arcadia)

Comedy-Melodrama

"Everything Happens to Ann" will tell a picture story that savors very much of the innocents abroad idea. The premise is interesting. The manner in which it is being developed and amplified, making use of the standard theatrical properties, melodrama, comedy and romance, promises to result in gay and airy amusement.

With the title definitely lending itself to provocative exploitation ideas, there are further showmanship possibilities to be found in the name value of the cast. Heather Angel, the heroine, has recently been playing in Paramount's "Bulldog Drummond" series. John King was Robert Cummings' "Double" in "Honolulu." Last in "Zaza," Constance Collier will also be remembered for such films as "Stage Door," "Wee Willie Winkie" and "Damsel in Distress." As Clem Bevans, Henry Brandon and Tom Dugan will be seen as a trio of gangsters, Emma Dunn and Walter Catlett will be the principal sources of comedy. Robert Elliott is a detective and Wilbur Mack, Fred Kohler, Sr., Antonia Oland, Joe Devline and Fern Emmett round out the support.

Frederick Jackson's screen play is based on a story by Dalton Trumbo. Al Christie is directing.

Release date: Not determined.

The Family Next Door

(Universal)

Comedy

Name value will be represented by Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Eddie Quillan, Ruth Donnelly, Juanita Quigley, Bennie Bartlett and Tom Beck. None of them, even the youngest, is a newcomer.

The story is a family affair, with the accent on comedy. The poor but honest father is pestered by a wife who has social ambitions, an elder daughter who wants a career and a husband as well, a son who thinks he is a genius in every line but can't get a job, a couple of brats and the household dog. The family makes an unfortunate investment, air castles come tumbling down, but the investment turns out to be a gold mine.

The basis of the yarn is Mortimer Offner's original screen play. Joseph Santley, maker of "Spirit of Culver" and "Swing, Sister, Swing," is directing the Max Golden production.

Release date: March 31, 1939.

A Hundred to One

(MGM)

Comedy-Melodrama

In the days contemporary with the nickel "Nick Carters," this story would have borne the explanatory title, "or 'The Trail of the $100 Bill'." As a matter of fact, the $100 bill of the moment will have five trails and thus there will be five distinct stories in "A Hundred to One."

It will start out with a newspaper man getting the bill as part of a ransom payment, and continue the story backtracking along the trail of those through whose hands the bill has passed.

Sixty-five persons will be involved, but those most directly concerned will be Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt, Douglass Dumbrille, Gene Lockhart, Tom Collins, Jean Fenwich, Halliwell Hobbes, Florence George and Hobart Cavanaugh.

Edward Chodorov, the producer, numbers "Craig's Wife," "Rich Man, Poor Girl" and "Spring Madness." Leslie Fenton, character actor, will have his first opportunity as a director.

Release date: May 12, 1939.

UA'S PLANS NEARLY SET; NEW KORDA COMPANY; 9,000 ANNIVERSARY DATES

Chaplin Says He Never Has Wavered from Making Film on Dictators; Silverstone Discusses Deal with Wanger

Conclusion of Hollywood conferences this week between Murray Silverstone, executive head, and company owners and contributing producers, will bring announcement of arrangements for United Artists' feature program for 1939-40, and details of the company's plans for a sales convention, which will be held in Chicago.

New Korda Company

Formation of a new Alexander Korda $3,000,000 London-Hollywood producing company was announced Friday in London, for release through United Artists, of which Mr. Korda is a part owner. It was Alexander Korda's formation of producing companies in addition to his original London Films that caused, partially, the filing of a suit, by Samuel Goldwyn against U. A., for relief from his releasing contract with the company.

In New York, United Artists said that 9,000 theatres in the world will be showing its pictures on April 17th on the occasion of the company's 20th anniversary. U. A.'s home office quoting Mr. Silverstone, added that "plans are nearing completion for the most widespread showing of United Artists releases in the history of the company."

Feature releases set for the celebration period include Samuel Goldwyn's "Wuthering Heights," Alexander Korda's "Prison Without Bars," London made; David Selznick's "Made for Each Other"; Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach"; Edward Small's "King of the Turf" and Hal Roach's "Zenobia."

New product arrangements with Walter Wanger and one or two other UA producers are being discussed on the coast by Mr. Silverstone. Lynn Farnol, the company's director of advertising and publicity, arrived on the coast, to confer on campaigns for future releases.

Continuation of Selznick International's releasing deal with United Artists is being discussed. John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board, has arrived in Hollywood from New York, and with David O. Selznick is conferring with Mr. Silverstone.

Mr. Silverstone is talking with several other producers who may be added to the United Artists' fold. Ernst Lubitsch is one.

This week Mr. Silverstone declared he would not discuss with Samuel Goldwyn while in Hollywood, the suit by Mr. Goldwyn for declaratory relief from his UA contract. Mr. Silverstone asserted that he and Charles Schwartz, company attorney, who went West with him, would only hold new product discussions with United Artists producers, and with others negotiating to come under the UA banner.

"Success", Hitchcock's Next

Mr. Selznick this week named "Success" as the second of three pictures for direction by Alfred Hitchcock, under the new long term contract which the British producer will enter, following his holiday stay in Florida. "Rebecca" will be Mr. Hitchcock's first; "Titanic," his third.

In New York, Mr. Selznick's company this week leased space for its New York headquarters on the 34th floor of the International Building, in Rockefeller Center, for occupancy about May 1. The Selznick office had been for the past four years at 230 Park Avenue.

CHAPLIN GOING AHEAD ON DICTATOR FILM

Charlie Chaplin, UA producer, on Tuesday released the following statement:

"Owing to erroneous reports in the press that I have abandoned my production concerning dictators, I wish to state that I have never wavered from my original determination to produce this picture. Any report, past, present, or future, to the effect that I have given up the idea, is deliberately false. I am not worried about intimidation, censorship, or anything else. I am making a comedy picture on the lives of dictators, which I hope will create much healthy laughter throughout the world."

The Goldwyn staff is rushing preparations on "The Real Glory," starring Gary Cooper and Andrea Leeds, and an untitled picture, with Jascha Heifetz, for which Gene Reynolds was borrowed from MGM. Other pictures in preparation, actively, are "Seventh Heaven" with Gary Cooper; "Stranger at Home"; "The Story of Hans Christian Andersen"; "Raffles," with David Niven; "Colonel Rown of Scotland Yard"; and "Black Gold."

Productions made by the new Korda organization will be presented by London Films and distributed throughout the world by United Artists. Mr. Korda retains his position as chairman and managing director of London Films.

The new company has a loan and share capital of $2,600,000. Stars associated with Korda Productions will include Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Sabu, Ralph Richardson, Raymond Massey, Flora Robson, Leslie Banks, Corinne Luchaire, Rex Harrison and Edna Best, among others.

"Greater Grosses in Hands of Producers"

The future of greater grosses for motion pictures lies in the hands of the producers, Murray Silverstone said this week in Hollywood. On producers he placed the responsibilities for intelligent story, intelligent performance and intelligent direction values.

"Fine story and fine performance are more important than the so-called 'star system,'" he declared. "Excellent performances make stars out of newcomers."

Citing examples of production alertness, Mr. Silverstone pointed to "Dead End," with a cast of then virtual unknowns; the "Judge Hardy" family pictures, which catapulted Mickey Rooney to fame; "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," the "Jones Family" group, and "Stagecoach."

"The new United Artists plan of cutting distribution costs on a sliding scale so that the greatest grossers bring the greatest returns to their producers, I believe, will do much to encourage fine production" he said.

"It costs just as much to sell good pictures as it does ordinary ones."

Republic Sets Convention Date

Dates for the Republic regional conventions have been set. The decisions were made this week after conferences at the New York home office in which participated Herbert Yates, president of the Consolidated Film Industries, Republic's parent organization, and James R. Grainger, president of Republic and general manager for distribution. Mr. Yates arrived from the coast, and Mr. Grainger returned to New York after a swing around the exchange territories.

The New York regional will be on April 12-13; the Chicago, on April 20-21; the San Francisco, on April 25-26; the Dallas, on April 7-8.

Mr. Grainger's tour took him as far as the coast, where, after examining the studios and current production plans, he declared the 1939-40 program would be the "best in the company's history," aided by a million dollar budget increase.

In Hollywood, M. J. Siegel, head of the Republic studios, revealed that a deal was being completed, at a reputed $485,000, for purchase of 19½ acres of land that the studio now leases. Mr. Siegel declared a building program would soon start.

In the Philippines Acme Films, Inc., renewed its distribution deal with Republic for one year.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century Fox, is expected to attend the company's sales convention on April 3-5, in Chicago. Mr. Schenck has been on the coast with Sidney Kent, president, and Herman Wobber, distribution head. Darryl Zanuck, vice-president and production head, has indicated he may attend the Chicago convention.

Mr. Wobber this week was expected to remain for a while in Hollywood for 1939-40 program conferences, after a brief visit to San Francisco. Fox's "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" opens in that city on Wednesday.

Anticipated this week was the arrival in New York from England of R. Sutton Dawes, director of sales for Fox in England, and Sir Gordon Craig, general manager for British Movietone News. They are to confer with Walter Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, and to attend the Chicago convention.

On Thursday and Friday of this week, Columbia Pictures held its southern division branch manager meeting in New Orleans. Attending were A. Montague, general sales manager; Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; southern district manager Sam Moscow; Walter Anderson, Atlanta; Bob Ingram, Charlotte; Jack Underwood, Dallas; Jimmie Rogers, Memphis; Charles Gibbs, Oklahoma City; Houston Duvall, New Orleans.

Colbruck Productions, Inc., has filed incorporation papers with the New York Secretary of State at Albany. Belle Feldman, Jacob Soroka and Mignon Jauss are listed as directors.

James W. Seymour, former screen writer and motion picture executive, sailed last week for London where he will be an attache at the American Embassy.

"Independents" In Radio Fail To Hit Networks

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Invitations extended by the Federal Communications Commission to various organizations other than the large networks to express their views on broadcasting, this week brought surprisingly little criticism of either the commission or the broadcasters, with only two organizations ready to express their views. Many more had been expected.

That the pronouncements of the commission and its members regarding the undesirability of certain programs exerts a measure of "duress" upon station operators and is a form of "back-door" censorship was charged by Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, whose chief concern, however, was with the lifting of all restrictions on programs in order that the right of free speech might be protected.

With S. Howard Evans, secretary of the National Committee on Education, Mr. Baldwin criticized the present set-up for the discussion of controversial public issues over the air.

Both witnesses admitted that the networks and individual stations are at the present time devoting much attention to these matters and presenting both sides, but ponted out that this was a voluntary procedure and might cease at any moment when, since time cannot be bought by certain types of organizations, such discussions might become impossible.

It was strongly urged that stations be required to set aside a certain proportion of their time for public issues, education, etc., and that in the consideration of controversial subjects both sides be given equal opportunitiy to present their case.

Mr. Evans was particularly exercised over the alleged failure of the communications commission to make adequate provision for educational radio, although he admitted that with the high frequency channels assigned for educational stations and the cooperation afforded by the commercial broadcasters, education now has all the facilities it can use to advantage.

Asserting that RCA maintained a vigorous lobby in Washington to assure its retention of the favorable facilities now assigned to it, Mr. Evans admitted under cross-examination that he had no evidence to support that charge.

In the interests of free speech, Mr. Baldwin suggested, licenses should be made good for a three-year term, subject to revocation.

The restrictive contracts between the networks and their affiliated stations, he told the commission, is a suppression of competition and tends toward monopoly.

New NBC Policies to "Protect Children"

New broadcasting policies have been completed by NBC—the first to be issued since the winter of 1934, and copies have been mailed to agency and broadcasting executives, network clients, and members of Government bodies dealing with broadcasting, for "private" inspection and comment. Opinions expressed by these groups will be collated, and following revisions, the new policies will be issued publicly.

The document is basically the same as the present code of standards, excepting in children's programs, which will be more stringently supervised.

Children's programs, under the new provisions, will be presented in scripts that must at all times reflect respect for law and order and adult authority, and themes, by network compulsion, will stress good morals and clean living, fair play and honorable behavior. Other taboos in children's programs include no references to torture, horror, use of the supernatural, kidnapping, vulgarity. Most important provision, however, is the elimination of "cliff hanging" episodes, which is the technique used in most serials. Also, no effects will be permitted which give the effect of death or torture.

More Censor and Ascap Proposals

New Mexico and Indiana concluded their legislative sessions this week without leaving any scars on motion picture operations. Left in New Mexico's legislative "pigeon-hole" were an anti-American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers bill and a proposal to tax chance games. Elsewhere, however, the industry continued the subject of much legislative attention.

Additional censorship, anti-ASCAP and other forms of industry legislation appeared this week.

In Oklahoma, a bill that would create a three-man state board of film inspection to be appointed by the Governor has been introduced in the legislature and has been sent to committee. All films to be publicly exhibited and displayed for an admission fee would be inspected and approved by the board before the films would be distributed to the exhibitor for exhibition.

All films inspected would be provided with an inspection number, and all pictures shown would be required to display a three-foot leader or stamp of approval at the beginning of the film projecting the words "approved by the Oklahoma State Board of Film Inspection" and an outline map of the state and seal printed thereon and the number assigned to such films on the certificate of approval.

The bill provides that the board shall charge the distributor of any film $3 per reel of film to be censored which does not exceed 1,000 lineal feet and $3 for each 1,000 additional feet or fractional part thereof. All moneys collected would be put into a fund designated as "The State Visual Education Fund" to be used to pay salaries and operating expenses of the board.

The amended admission bill providing for the admission of children under 16 to theatres has passed the New York Assembly.

A measure requiring motion picture exchanges and theatre operators to pay for administration of the Quebec censor board has been approved by the legislative assembly there.

Governor John Moses of North Dakota this week signed the anti-ASCAP bill. It is believed ASCAP will sue to enjoin the state from enforcing the law on the grounds that it is unconstitutional. The Governor, before signing, said that no state money would be spent in its defense.

An anti-ASCAP bill, sponsored by Oklahoma radio station owners, has been introduced in the Oklahoma Senate and at present is in committee. The bill provides that it shall be unlawful for any person to collect copyright fees for the performing rights to any musical or dramatic-musical composition on any program which does not contain any such composition.

Oklahoma theatre owners will share in approximately $300,000 which will be paid to Oklahoma merchants for collecting state sales taxes under terms of a new sales tax bill. The bill provides that merchants may retain three per cent of the money collected for the state.

Sloans Eyeing Motion Pictures For Education

The Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, in Rockefeller Center, New York City, established by the automobile magnate to "make America a nation of economic literates," will employ motion pictures as one instrument towards that end. The first film, in three reels, and titled "The Challenge," is to be a test of the motion picture's value to education, and, if successful in "stimulating" the minds of those viewing it, the Foundation will issue grants to educational institutions to produce more such films.

Club Showing Held

The picture was made in 35 mm. at the Biograph Studios, in New York City, by Walter Niebuhr, who also directed. From this print, eight 16 mm. positives had been reduced, up to this week; these have had about 30 showings, to about 2,000 persons, at WPA forums, Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, high school and college classes in New York City, Schenectady, and several Westchester towns. Showings were under the sponsorship of the Department of Visual Education of the National Education Association, to which a $1,000 grant was made by the Foundation, for screenings and expressage of prints. The cost of the prints has been borne thus far by the Foundation. The expense of the original negative has not been calculated yet by Foundation officials, inasmuch as "re-makes" of certain scenes, dictated by reports of the educators sponsoring the film's showings, will probably be necessary.

The film itself, running 27½ minutes, depicts a factory worker thrown out of work by the installation of labor saving machinery. The increase in productiveness results for the employer in the glut of goods, impossible to move. The employer then reduces prices; the policy works; his goods move; and he reemploys the factory workers, who had gone back to the farm. The solution is not advanced as the only solution, but as one of many.

Thus another of America's great philanthropic trusts follows the Rockefeller Foundation in using motion pictures for educational and sociological purposes, the Rockefellers having already contributed to several such projects, as previously reported.

Radio Program Used

With a $10,000,000 fund, the Sloan Foundation has been using various media to reach the masses, in order to make them aware of the economic problems pertinent to them. It aids, financially, the "Round Table of the Air," broadcast nationally every Sunday from Chicago, and dealing with current problems; it finances the Public Affairs Committee, which publishes digests of economic research; it has opened the National Institute for Consumer Education, at the University of Missouri; and it has financed a "citizenship" project at the University of Denver. It has done the foregoing, and many other things; and the use of films represents merely the evaluation of this medium as a stimuli for economic discussion among students and laymen, according to the Foundation officials.

Foundation officers emphasize that "under no circumstances" will such films, if more are made, be used competitively to 35 mm. theatrical films. They will be used only in classrooms and public forums; will be 16 mm. In any event, they said, the project will depend on the success of the present films."

Officers of the Foundation are Harold S. Sloan, director; Mrs. Eunice Fuller Barnard, educational director.

Crooker, Former Warner Executive, Produces Film

The importance of advertising to the modern world will be told in a 40 minute film at the Macfadden exhibit in the New York World's Fair, which opens April 30th. This film, the announced purpose of which is to refute iconoclastic writings on advertising, was produced by Herb Crooker, former publicity member of Warner Brothers in New York, and now in charge of the Macfadden exhibit at the Fair. Its title: "I'll Tell the World."

Mr. Crooker wrote the scenario and virtually made the picture. In the cast are Warner Brothers' Mauch Twins, Jed Prouty and Patricia Murray. Portrayed by the film are an old fashioned business man and his family, awakening to the need of modern advertising and benefiting therefrom.

The film may be distributed to schools, colleges, and club groups after the Fair, Macfadden officials say; and it even may be tried in theatres, if that is considered practicable.

The theme is a series of articles on "The American Way of Life," by George Sokolsky, published in the Macfadden magazine, Liberty, last winter.

The Crowell Publishing company produced a film of similar import eight months ago, entitled, "Yankee Doodle Goes to Town." This film has had about 1,000 showings to about 300,000 business persons. There are now about 125 prints in circulation, and requests are reported to be increasing from clubs, prisons, chambers of commerce and advertisers. MGM is said to be considering production of a short subject which would be a revised version.

Hold Review of Cinecolor Plant

Cinecolor, Inc., this week held a preview of its $250,000 plant in Burbank, Cal., which gives the laboratory a capacity of 1,400,000 feet weekly. A. L. McCormick, president, was host to the press and executives. The reception included a tour of the plant and a dinner. The plant covers 45,000 square feet.

Mr. McCormick disclosed plans for Cinecolor's entry into the 16mm. field at low prices. He said the corporation would concentrate on commercials.

He also said that a deal for a feature is pending with a major studio.

Settle Burgess Suit

Stipulations settling at undisclosed terms and discontinuing a suit for patent infringement brought by C. F. Burgess Laboratories, Inc., and Burgess Battery Company against Jacobson and Company, and Knickerbocker Broadcasting Company, Inc., have been filed in U. S. district court in New York.

Standard Sues Du-Art

Standard Pictures Productions, Inc., has filed a $50,000 damage suit in U. S. district court in New York against Du-Art Film Laboratories, Inc., claiming wrongful detention of the negative, work print and accessories of its film, "The Headleys at Home."

Countess Dorothy Di Frasso has been ordered by Timothy A. Leary, New York supreme court justice, to appear for examination in Los Angeles on application of Constance Bennett, with reference to a suit brought by Miss Bennett against Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur and Charles Lederer for $62,500 charging breach of contract to write a scenario for the plaintiff.

Industry Going to Main Street To Ballyhoo Some Big Pictures

The motion picture industry is turning in unprecedented manner to Main Street to start public exhibition of outstanding productions, sending inland all of the machinery of ballyhoo and the "de luxe" trimmings usually set up for Hollywood Boulevard or Broadway "stuffed-shirt" premieres.

Attention is being directed from Main Street for such selected releases as Paramount's "Union Pacific," for which a "big show" is being prepared in Omaha, for April 28th; Warner Brothers' "Dodge City," set for Dodge City, Kansas, April 1st; Paramount's "I'm from Missouri," which opened last week in Kansas City, Mo.; and "Man of Conquest," described by Republic as "the most pretentious" in its history, costing $750,000, due April 6th, in Houston.

Kansas and Warners have prepared an old time "ruckus," "The Dodge City Roundup" to welcome "Dodge City" to Dodge City next Saturday night. All of the city's four theatres will be used for the "premiere."

Residents will sport pioneer-day beards for the event, on proclamation of Governor Payne Ratner—the best hirsute adornment getting a shaving mug from Warners.

Warners will send a special train from Hollywood, another from Broadway, each carrying stars, company executives and 150 trade, magazine and news writers.

Former Kansas Governor and ex-Presidential candidate Alf Landon, and Governor Ratner and Secretary of War Woodring, a Kansan, head the list of those invited.

Glenn Cunningham, noted athlete, will race the Sante Fe train carrying Warners' guests, over the last mile to Dodge City. A western roundup in the new 8,000-seat stadium will follow, with street parades, the stars stepping to 45 bands.

NBC will broadcast over both its "Red" (45 stations) and "Blue" (90 stations) networks.

Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific"

"The biggest costume party America has ever had" is promised by Paramount for Omaha on April 27th, for the "world premiere" of its "Union Pacific," Cecil De Mille-produced.

They have arranged for the Union Pacific Railroad's 5,000 workers in the area, from station porters to President William Jeffers to dress and behave as of 70 years ago. Besides, Omaha merchants are buying 20,000 costumes of 1860 from Sterling Clothes Company, Chicago, to sell to residents at $1.30 an outfit.

Union Pacific is spending $50,000 for advertising and ballyhoo, placing "Union Pacific" Paramount ads on station newsstands and in 11 national magazines. Paramount is spending $50,000 in Omaha, and the city is adding another $30,000.

Pennzoil is tied-in, too, with color spreads in magazines and 24-sheet billboards, and ad tieups have been made with Hamilton Watch, International Silver, Wonder Bread and the Tea Bureau, all on "Union Pacific" and 1860.

Paramount's premier will be held in three Omaha theatres at the same time, climaxing a special-train ballyhoo which Paramount is now sending around the country.

The Omaha Chamber of Commerce will conduct a "Golden Spike Days" at the city auditorium, including there in the complete historical museum of the U.P. Railroad.

Mr. DeMille will head-up tribes of Sioux and Cheyenne Indians at the premiere.

20th-Fox's "Graham Bell"

Twentieth Century-Fox is going to The Western World's Fair at Treasure Island to start off its "Alexander Graham Bell," March 29th, when an opening of quite some proportions will also be held at Washington. It will have its world premiere at the Roxy theatre, New York, March 31st.

Elsa Maxwell, Park Avenue party hostess, will be Fox's hostess on a special "Graham Bell" train taking Hollywood personalities and the press to the fair screening. Federal, state, San Francisco, Oakland and World's Fair officials have promised participation.

Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl Zanuck and a score of others will attend from Hollywood. Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justice, diplomats, Army and Navy officers and Congressional and other Governmental leaders will attend at Washington.

Fox will follow up with a newspaper campaign to reach 23,039,849 readers, in 82 cities, and a magazine campaign to reach 14,000,000. Fifteen pre-release showings will be staged following the two premieres.

Republic's Sam Houston Picture

Republic's biggest exploitation campaign for its costliest picture to date, "Man of Conquest," about Sam Houston of Texas, is being readied for the premiere set for Houston, April 6th. Some 360,000 actual stills have been sent to newspapers throughout the country—Republic claiming this to be a Hollywood record for stills on a single picture. They have serviced 799 newspapers and 675 various other sources of news dissemination, besides 8,500 theatres.

PATRIOTIC TRAILER SERIES IS EXTENDED

National Screen Service Subjects Going to Circuits, Clubs and Associations

National Screen Service is extending its patriotic trailer series, according to George Dembow, general sales manager.

The series was begun last year, by Herman Robbins, president. Mr. Robbins felt, first, that this country's system of government was best; secondly, that it needed defense in a "positive" manner; thirdly, that the screen, via trailers, was a powerful medium for this "positive defense"; fourthly, that the industry itself needed to convince the American people that it was a truly American institution; fifthly, that exhibitors who, however like-minded they might be, would balk at paying excessively to broadcast Americanism from their screens, would show the trailers if they were offered to them at virtual cost.

Circuits, Clubs, Associations

The idea has worked, according to Mr. Dembow; and the proof of National Screen's political prescience can be seen in the current "patriotic cycle" in which producers are putting into their pictures "patriotism," heretofore catalogued as much as non-entertainment as other "ism" messages. Furthermore, such organizations as the national Variety Clubs, the Interstate circuit, the Saenger theatres, and the Allied States Association have ordered patriotic trailers from National Screen.

"There isn't any doubt that we saw the trend, and that the trend is a good one," said Mr. Dembow this week. "Most people in this country do believe we are living in the world's greatest country and the world's greatest democracy. But we have not been so evident, until recently, with our honest convictions.

"It is good to let out a yell; to shout, 'I am an American!'"

Pay Only Print Costs

National Screen's first patriotic trailer was "The Star Spangled Banner" running 110 feet, and including 36 feet of color flag. The trailer contained the words and music of the national anthem, with symbolic animation. The second was on "The Constitution," running about the same length and including the color shots of the flag and the national anthem. A third probably will be made on "The Bill of Rights," and more are likely to follow, according to Mr. Dembow.

On the foregoing trailers, the exhibitors pay only the actual print costs; National Screen pays everything else.

The company, "happy to do the job, for anybody that wanted it, at simple print costs" (in Mr. Robbins' words), also has made trailers for E. V. Richards of the Saenger circuit in the Louisiana territory, and for Karl Hoblitzelle of the Interstate circuit. These were for the aid of German refugees. A trailer for similar purpose was made for W. A. (Al) Steffes, head of Allied of the Northwest; this subject was known as the "Variety Refugee Fund Trailer."

BY STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

GEORGE DEMBOW

National Screen's latest patriotic trailers have been for the Allied States Association. The first was on President Roosevelt. The others will be on current personalities. A series of trailers are also in preparation for National Theatres.

SMPE Hollywood Convention Plans

Plans are being completed for the 1939 Spring Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to be held April 17-21 at the Roosevelt hotel in Hollywood.

Besides the customary program of technical sessions and papers in discussion of the most recent motion picture advance, there will be conducted tours of the Paramount and Warner Brothers studios.

E. A. Williford, president of the SMPE, will preside at all sessions. All but two of the meetings will be held at the hotel. The others will be at the Filmarte theatre on consecutive evenings to permit attendance by many Hollywood technicians who are on duty during the day.

A highlight of the program will be a television symposium with some of the country's leading authorities participating. Emphasis will be placed on the relation of television to films and theatres.

The general program is in charge of Major Nathan Levinson, executive vice-president of the Society. Homer G. Tasker is chairman of the local arrangements committee. Other committee chairmen include: L. A. Aicholtz, Pacific Coast papers; W. C. Kunzmann, registration and information; G. A. Chambers, hotel and transportation; Herbert Griffin, convention projection; Mrs. Nathan Levinson, women's reception; Julius Haber, publicity, and J. G. Frayne, new equipment exhibit. The program of papers to be presented is under the direction of J. I. Crabtree, editorial vice-president, and Sylvan Harris.

The visit to the Paramount studio will be on April 18th, under the supervision of L. L. Ryder and Mr. Tasker. On April 20th the delegates will visit the Warner Brothers studio with Mr. Levinson in charge.

The semi-annual dinner will be held at the hotel April 20th. Addresses by prominent members of the industry will be followed by dancing and entertainment.

Acquire Murray Series

Walter O. Gutlohn, Inc., has acquired 16mm. distribution rights to a series of educational films and travelogues to be made by Captain R. IN COURTS

Loew Executives Are Ordered to Repay $542,554

Formal findings of fact covering the decision in the stockholders' suit against Loew's rendered last January were signed this week by Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice. The order requires Nicholas M. Schenck, David Bernstein, Louis B. Mayer, J. Robert Rubin, Arthur M. Loew and the estate of Irving Thalberg to repay a total of $542,554 to the company, and dismissed all other charges.

Under the provisions of the findings, the company will have judgment against Mr. Schenck for $69,447; Mr. Bernstein for $41,668; Mr. Mayer for $167,195; Mr. Rubin for $112,505; estate of Thalberg for $136,985, and Mr. Loew for $14,754. These sums will be debited against the profit-sharing acounts held by the defendants with Loew's.

In addition, attorneys and accountants for stockholders will be allowed "reasonable fees" for their services. Proposed findings were submitted by the attorneys for both sides, and the greater number of these submitted for the defendants were approved by Justice Valente, including findings dismissing all charges based on waste and neglect.

Repayments ordered are based on a ruling that overpayments were made because of erroneous computations in determining net profits of the company.

Eleven consolidated stockholders' suits in all were on trial the greater part of December, Emil K. Ellis, chief counsel for the stockholders, said this week that he would not appeal the decision. Several other stockholder attorneys, however, are considering appeals.

A suit charging Loew's and certain of its officers and directors with fraud and conspiracy in the formation of Twentieth Century-Fox at the expense of Loew's stockholders, and identical to the recent litigation filed in the court of chancery at Wilmington, Del., has been filed in the U. S. district court in the same city. Both bills were filed by Ivan Culbertson, Wilmington attorney, on behalf of Arnold Herrmann, of New York, a Loew's stockholder. The new bill was filed to cover both courts and contains the same cause of action and same recitals.

Ask $5,000,000 Damages In March of Time Suit

The Reverend Gerald L. K. Smith, an associate of the late Huey Long, filed a suit in New York supreme court this week asking $5,000,000 damages for libel and violation of the New York Civil Rights Law against March of Time, Inc., Time, Inc., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., RKO Film Corporation, RKO Distributing Corporation, The Newsreel Theatres, Inc., Rockefeller Center, Inc., Westbrook Van Voorhis (commentator), Roy E. Larsen and Jack Glenn (photographer).

He claims to have been libeled in a March of Time film subtitled "The Lunatic Fringe," in which he was ridiculed, depicted as an American Hitler and described as the leader of Fascist and anti-Semitic forces.

Goldberg Suit Dismissed

The $250,000 damage suit against Time, Inc., by Lou Goldberg, who claimed he had originated the idea for the March of Time on the screen was dismissed this week by Ferdinand Pecora, New York supreme court justice.

Carleton Dickinson Dies; Son of Circuit Operator

Carleton Dickinson, 20-year-old son of Glenn W. Dickinson, head of the Dickinson circuit in Kansas, was killed March 18th in an automobile accident on the outskirts of Lawrence, Kan. Two other occupants of the car, fellow students at the University of Kansas, also were killed.

Carleton Dickinson, who has done theatre managerial work for his father during school vacations for several years, was to have assumed an executive post with the circuit upon his graduation from the Kansas law school in June. Another son, Glen W. Dickinson, Jr., is manager of the two Dickinson theatres at Manhattan, Kan., the Dickinson and Carleton (the latter named for Carleton Dickinson).

Mrs. Edward Doherty Dead; Was Motion Picture Critic

Mrs. Mildred Frisbie Doherty, former picture critic of the New York Daily News under the name Mildred Spain, died in Beverly Hills, Cal., March 14th. Mrs. Doherty was the wife of Edward Doherty, film and magazine writer. Also surviving are two sons, Edward, Jr., 21, of Newark, N. J., and Jack, 19, a student at Washington and Lee University. The body was sent to Chicago, where funeral services were held.

S. H. Eller Dies

Stephen H. Eller, executive of H. E. R. Laboratories, Inc., New York, died March 15th. He was one of the founders of the corporation, established 15 years ago. Surviving are his widow and one brother and one sister. Funeral services and burial were held in Milwaukee.

F. York Elliott

F. York Elliott, president of the Elliott Film Company, Minneapolis, died there March 18th. Mr. Elliott held the Astor Pictures franchise in Minneapolis. He entered the industry in 1915 as a distributor of "The Birth of a Nation" in mid-west states.

John Spielman

John L. Spielman, father of J. Ward Spielman, manager of the Gem theatre, Baldwin, Kan., and the Rialto, Lyndon, Kan., died March 14th at Saint Francis Hospital, Topeka.

Elbert Thompson

Elbert Thompson, manager of the San Marco theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., died in an airplane crash at Oscala, Fla., March 19th.

Edward Paulton

Edward Antonio Paulton, 73, stage and screen writer, died March 20th in the Hollywood General Hospital after a brief illness. For the last eight years he had been a dialogue writer and scenarist.

Sues Twentieth Century-Fox

A suit charging plagiarism against Twentieth Century-Fox was filed this week in New York supreme court by Stephen Tamas, who asked an injunction, accounting of profits and judgment for damages. Mr. Tamas claims to have written a scenario, "Stowaway," for Shirley Temple on March 24, 1936, at the defendant's request which, the complaint said, was used in a film of the same name that credited authorship to Samuel Engel.

Cross-Complaint Filed

Skouras Theatres Corporation, defendant in a suit brought by Epoch Producing Corporation and Thomas Dixon, claiming unlicensed exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation," this week filed cross-complaint in New York supreme court against M. L. Mayer, stating that Mr. Mayer had claimed ownership of the film and had authorized exhibition in Skouras' Thalia theatre.

OBITUARIES

Maurice Goodman Dies in New York

Maurice Goodman, former vice-president and general counsel of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, died March 19th in New York (picture in Pictorial Section). In the last 10 years he had practiced law privately and had handled the business of many theatrical enterprises. He was 55.

A native of Seneca Falls, N. Y., Mr. Goodman was graduated from New York University in 1901 and was admitted to the New York bar in 1902. He became general counsel of the old B. F. Keith vaudeville circuit in 1906 and after its merger in 1928 he became vice-president and general counsel for Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit, later RKO.

In 1929 he resigned as vice-president and general counsel of the corporation, but remained on its board of directors until it was reorganized. In 1931 he was named chairman of the finance committee of Columbia Pictures Corporation, vacating the office a few years later. In 1933 he was selected as a member of the stockholders' protective committee in the RKO reorganization proceedings. He was counsel for the Trans-Lux Corporation at his death.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Temple Emanu-El. He is survived by his widow, Adele; a daughter, Susan; two sons, Maurice, Jr., and Walter, and a sister, Minnie.

Bert Adler Dies; Was Press Agent

Bert Adler, secretary to the Department of Public Works, New York, and former motion picture press representative, died March 18th at Mount Sinai Hospital there of pneumonia. He was 48.

Mr. Adler served as deputy sanitation commissioner from 1936 to 1938, leaving to join the Department of Public Works when this was established by the new city charter. He was in charge of public relations for both departments.

Born in Brooklyn, Mr. Adler was a reporter on newspapers in New York, Boston and Plainfield, N. J., while a young man. He became press representative of the old Thanhouser Company, a motion picture studio at New Rochelle, and then was exploitation director of the Realarts Pictures Corporation.

For many years Mr. Adler conducted his own publicity agency, serving such film companies as Warner Brothers, United Artists, Universal and Fox. He also was eastern representative of Fanchon and Marco.

He had served in the motion picture section of many Red Cross drives and was chairman of the Stars Committee of the Hoover Central Europe Relief Drive and was publicity chairman of the stage and screen division of the Democratic National Committee in the 1932 presidential campaign.

Funeral services were held Sunday at the Riverside Memorial Chapel with interment at the Riverside Cemetery, Rochelle Park, N. J.

Order Estate Distribution

Federal Judge Vincent Leibell this week ordered distribution of the estate of Theatre Trailer Corporation, with $2,547 going to general creditors whose claims total some $46,000, and payment of fees and disbursements in the amount of $1,018. The company went into voluntary bankruptcy some time ago.

Pitman to Issue Books on Films

"Foremost Films of 1938" is the title of the first volume of a new annual series of film reference books which the Pitman Publishing Company, New York, is to issue.

The first volume is described as condensing into 5,000 words each the ten "best" films of the year, surveys events and trends in the industry and summarizes the year's pictures. Frank Vreeland is the editor. Publication date of the first volume has not been determined.

Mr. Vreeland has prepared the first volume as a guide to students of the screen especially in high schools, colleges, and club organizations.

Mr. Vreeland began reviewing pictures on the old New York Morning Sun in the days of the silent movie when the late Harriette Underhill was the one film critic with a "byline." Successively he wrote for the Evening Sun, the Herald, Herald-Tribune, and World-Telegram. After serving as dramatic critic on the World-Telegram, he joined Fox Film and subsequently went to Paramount, where he was a member of the editorial board in Hollywood until a few months ago. He has contributed articles and reviews on stage and screen to Time Magazine, The Nation, Theatre Magazine, and other publications.

Milwaukee May Try Singles

Milwaukee theatre men on Sunday voted for the elimination of "early bird" admission prices and the return of their houses to a single feature policy. Those attending the meeting were from 63 of Milwaukee county's 73 theatres. They also approved a straight admission price for Sundays. There will be further meetings of the group. Named chairman was E. F. Maertz; secretary, Ray E. Tesch, of the Independent Theatres Protective Association.

Set Reorganization Hearing

Federal Judge William Bondy has directed a hearing on March 30th on the proposed plan of reorganization submitted by the French Motion Picture Corporation, which filed a petition for reorganization February 19, 1938. The plan provides for payment of priority claims in full, and 15 per cent to general creditors.

Congressman Wesley Disney of the First Oklahoma district is preparing a bill for introduction in Congress authorizing a Will Rogers memorial stamp issue. The bill will propose that the stamp be issued in connection with the world philatelists' convention to be held in Tulsa, May 17 to 21.

Griffith Amusement Company, Oklahoma City, has renewed its contract with Altec Service Corporation for servicing the sound equipment in more than 200 Griffith theatres in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico on a flat contract basis. Jack Zern and Jack Gregory of Altec closed the deal with circuit officials.

Tri-National Films, Inc., has increased its capitalization from 100 shares to 2,000 shares, no stated par value, according to papers filed with the New York Secretary of State.

Pete Smith Tackles Dragon Duals With Ad Lib Sword

When He Tells Women Doubles Broaden Hips, It's All Over

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

Seven hundred women and two men attended a St. Patrick's Day meeting in Hollywood of the Federated Women's Clubs at the Fox Wilshire theatre.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Pete Smith was up on the stage talking. Your correspondent was up in the far recesses of the balcony listening.

Pete's job was to tear the hide off the double feature.

Pete, whom everybody calls as smart a press agent as Hollywood ever had, became aware that all the logical and erudite arguments against the dual had left the beast's pelt unpunctured, whereupon he resorted to that old political trick of badinage and raillery to stab it full of holes.

Broadens the Hips, Too

"Double features are the eye-strain of a nation," said Peter, and the women sat up in their seats. "No wonder opticians chortle with glee whenever they see two features advertised. You'd chortle, too, for if all the eye glasses sold as a result of this practice were laid end to end, well, it would give a lot of work to the unemployed.

"Then, too, the habit of sitting through two features is bound to have its effect on one's, shall I say, anatomy. Yes, I shall say anatomy. Instead of broadening the mind, double features fatigue the mind and broaden the hips." Whereupon a lot of the more buxom delegates gave very good imitations of Claudette Colbert squidging into the easy chair in "Midnight."

When the laughter subsided, Pete tried to get serious. He read from his script, "On occasions, two heads are better than one." Then, tossing the paper aside, he reverted to type with, "But two features are usually a headache."

He took the audience into typical American homes when the family were making up their minds whether to go to a picture show. Both case histories wound up in brawls, with mother going back to her knitting, the old man trying to reduce his blood pressure and the youngsters sore at the world, sore with each other and sore at the movies. For no program nominated offered anything that would satisfy everyone.

On Candy and Tummyaches

Pete returned to his prepared script but his audience grew restive, whereupon Mr. Smith burst forth with this:

"A child will eat candy until it becomes sick, if you let it. Many movie fans will sit through hours of pictures until they get sick—sick of pictures—if you let them. The movie fan is getting an overdose of pictures."

Carrie Nation never sailed into a battle with Demon Rum with more vim and vigor than Pete sallied forth to joust with Demon Duals. "Like a patient, the movie fan doesn't always know what's good for him. He may think he wants double features, but he doesn't realize that subconsciously he is becoming satiated with pictures—because he gets too much at one sitting."

While the audience was applauding, we could see that Mr. Smith, a press agent at heart, was getting ready a word for himself. We didn't guess wrong. A sip of water downed, Pete continued, "One of the most vital factors in the movement now evident in many quarters, to bring back single features, is the short subject. They must not be poor shorts. Weak sisters will have no place in the short subject market. They will die on the vine." The speaker did not mention the "Pete Smith Shorts." He recited a long list of able men and women who were devoting themselves to short production but didn't mention himself.

By this time, Mr. Smith had his audience in the palm of his hand.

"You can become a very important ally in this battle. If you dislike double features, see that the manager of the theatre you patronize is made aware of the fact. If you dislike certain shorts, tell the theatre manager about it. In other words, don't hesitate to register your likes and dislikes with the theatre manager.

"In conclusion, I'd like to know just how you ladies stand on the double feature situation. I believe I know, but I'd like to make sure. All those in favor of the double feature practice, clap your hands. (Silence). Okey. Now all those in favor of the single feature and a program of shorts policy, clap your hands." (Terrific applause).

The ballot box already having been stuffed to bulging, the vote was no surprise.

Projectionist Convicted of Plot to Damage Machines

George Roop, projectionist at the Strand theatre, in Red Bank, N. J., was found guilty at Freehold, N. J., by a jury before Judge John C. Giordano in quarter sessions court of a charge of conspiracy to damage machines in the Liberty theatre at Freehold, in an effort to compel Max Snider, the proprietor, to unionize his playhouse. The jurors were out two and a half hours.

This was Roop's second trial on the charge; a jury last June was unable to reach a verdict.

Leading witnesses for the state in the second trial were William Howard Mericle, West Orange, and Frank Fleming, Long Branch, both of whom had pleaded guilty of the conspiracy and also of malicious mischief in damaging the projection machines at the Liberty on February 7th, a year ago. Mericle, who was sentenced to 18 months to three years in the state prison, was released December 27. Fleming received a suspended sentence.

The pair testified, as they did at the first trial, that Fred Remhurst of New Brunswick, also a motion picture projectionist and then business agent of the New Brunswick local, sent them to Red Bank to see Roop on Jan. 24, 1937. Roop, they said, told them he wanted them to do some slight damage to the Liberty machines. The pair was paid $75, according to the testimony.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

Production Plans

With the conclusion of work on "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," now reaching its final cutting stages, production is said to have been suspended by MGM-British until later this year. While no final statement has been forthcoming, it is believed that further active work at Denham is unlikely until December.

"Goodbye, Mr. Chips" was previewed recently at Wembley, a London suburb. Robert Donat leaves soon on a six months holiday.

At Denham, production on "Thief of Bagdad" which probably will be directed by Zoltan Korda, Marc Allegret having vacated the role of director, is to start in late spring, probably in May.

It is expected that Irving Asher will continue his production program for Columbia starting at the same time.

Meanwhile, production activity at Denham is centered exclusively at the moment under Paramount. "This Man in Paris," a Pinebrook production for Paramount release, has just started, following "The Silent Battle."

Charity Premiere

"The Four Feathers" is to have a charity premiere in London on April 17th.

To express his gratitude to North African friends who assisted him in filming on location in the Sudan, Zoltan Korda, director, has sent presents to the Dark Continent.

The Omda Samur Mohammed Ramli, Omda of Wad Ramli, confirmed tea drinker, chose a silver tea set, as did Sheikh Sulaiman, paramount chief of Northern Khut. Mamur Esseldin Effendi preferred a fountain pen and a propelling pencil.

Sequel

Mr. and Mrs. Drake, the newspaper reporter-hero and his wife, played by Barry K. Barnes and Valerie Hobson in "This Man is News," harassed news-editor Alistair Sim, Scotland Yard man Edward Lexy, and his stooge Garry Marsh, appear once again on the screen in a sequel to the original Paramount production already titled "This Man in Paris." The film has gone into production at the Denham Studios under producer Anthony Havelock-Allan, and is a Pinebrook production.

The success of the original story and persistent public demand are said to be the reasons for the sequel. Allan aims at a series in the same category as "The Thin Man," "Charlie Chan" and "Mr. Moto" films.

Work opened at Denham on a replica of "The Falstaff," noted Fleet Street hostelry and rendezvous of Britain's Fourth Estate.

Directing "This Man in Paris" is David Macdonald, director of the original film.

Fire for Rehearsal

Local ARP workers availed themselves of a studio fire—one of the sequences in the Will Hay comedy "Where's That Fire?"—at Sound City, Shepperton, recently, to rehearse themselves for the real thing.

They assisted the Barnet-on-Thames Salvage Corps in putting out the blaze of a petrol station fire created by Messrs. Hay, Marriott and Moffatt, who in the film mistakenly seek to put out the conflagration with the aid of fire pumps attached to a petrol tank.

FOUR LEADS IN FILM TOTAL 296 YEARS

Four leading players whose total ages reach 296, an average of 74 years, are playing important roles in "Young Man's Fancy", being directed by Robert Stevenson at the Ealing Studios, with Michael Balcon producing. The quartet — Morton Selten, 80, Allan Aynesworth, 75, Violet Vanbrugh, 73, and Sir Seymour Hicks, 68 — offer a telling contrast to the leading players, Anna Lee and Griffith Jones, whose ages are 23 and 28, respectively.

The youthful Pen Tennyson, director, has Jimmy Hanley, 20, as the lead of "There Ain't No Justice", also in work at Ealing. Hanley, for one of the fight highlights of the film, boxed recently against George Davis, British Southern Areas Middleweight Champion. Hanley was trained by ex-Heavyweight Champion Bombardier Billy Wells.

Itemized

Maurice Elvey, having completed work upon "Sword of Honour," is due to begin production of "Midnight Mail," comedy melodrama to be produced at the Wembley Studios by Admiral Films. GFD will distribute. Derrick de Marney, Cecil Parker, Frank Cellier, Jean Gillie and Edward Lexy have been signed to play.

Stanley Haynes, recently associated with Victor Saville on "The Citadel" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," has been appointed associate producer for Paramount British, by David Rose.

Selected to play the title role of William in the Richmal Crompton films of that name is ten-year-old Dick Lupino, member of the famous Lupino family of comedians and acrobats.

British "Quickie" Producer Gone, Says Budd Rogers

British exhibitors are complaining because the lack of native product makes it difficult for them to fulfill government requirements for screen time for English-made films, Budd Rogers, United States general manager for Mayflower Productions and vice-president of Alliance Films, said this week on his return from a six week trip to London and Paris. He said the "quickie" producer has been virtually eliminated from the English production scene by the quota laws.

Business in England is slightly ahead of 1938, he said.

Mr. Rogers brought with him a print of "St. Martin's Lane," which Paramount will release in this country.

"Maximilian" Deal Denied by Pascal

Gabriel Pascal, producer of "Pygmalion," in a cable to the New York Times from London this week denied Hollywood reports that he had commitments with Miguel Torres, Mexican film producer, to make German and Italian versions of 'Maximilian." The cable read:

"Authorize you give full and definite denial against Miguel Torres's false claims to deal between us. Five years ago we made a deal to make the picture in English and Italian versions in England or Italy. The deal was definitely canceled the same year. Since then I never saw or heard again from Miguel Torres. I authorize you to declare that for the time being I don't dream of making any of my pictures in Italian or German versions and my friendship with Jack Warner (Warner Brothers recently completed "Juarez," starring Paul Muni and dealing with the same subject) would forbid me to enter into such a silly idea as this Mexican producer suggests."

In Hollywood, Mr. Torres said he was "astonished" that Mr. Pascal should deny the existence of a contract between them. "The contract," a representative of Mr. Torres's said, "was signed two and a half years ago in Los Angeles. It was duly notarized and calls for the direction of two foreign versions of 'Maximilian.' No time limit for its execution is contained in the terms of the contract." Mr. Torres said that he will insist upon fulfillment of the agreement.

14 New Ontario Houses

Fourteen new theatres are under construction or about to be started in various sections of the Province of Ontario, Canada. Two theatres each are planned in the cities of Toronto, Cornwall and St. Catharines, while one new house is under way in each of the following centers: Port Colborne, Leamington, Tillsonburg, Sudbury, Glencoe, Oshawa, Kirkland Lake and Brantford. Five of the new theatres will be circuit units.

The annual meeting of Twentieth Century-Fox stockholders will be held at the company's home office in New York April 18th. The annual financial report will be issued in March.

The annual meeting of Balaban & Katz stockholders will be held at the Chicago headquarters of the circuit April 18th.

BRITONS LOOK TO GOVERNMENT NOW FOR PANACEA OF FINANCIAL HELP

Foreign Producers and Distributors and Lords Bridgman and Strabolgi Favor Idea; Stanley Stands Pat

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Students of the British scene, representative of every section of the industry, have started looking around for new panaceas, now that they are more or less agreed that matters have gone from bad to worse and the certainty of no increase of quota schedule for either renters or exhibitors.

Government Financing Sought

The latest restorative to be solicited from the industrial dispensaries is Government assisted finance. So far lacking in specific definition, the idea is favored by interests as divergent as the foreign producers and distributors here, and friends of the industry My Lords Bridgman and Strabolgi, both of whom placed the decline in British films before the House of Lords this month.

These affinities of judgment and viewpoint become increasingly marked as the industry takes a perspective view of the first year of the Act. Reference has been made to the agreement between representatives of the United States industry here, and certain exhibitor sections, that an increase of quotas would probably aggravate the present situation, that American renters have done their bit, that the decline in production is in voluntary British production, and that a mobilization of finance would ameliorate matters.

Exhibitors' Statement

An even more marked affinity is seen upon examination of the statement of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association to the Films Council, that it is in the exclusively British production field that the decline has taken place, and that the renters actually have produced quality films and offered them world distribution. There is hardly anything in the CEA memorandum with which American renter-producers would disagree. "It is the extra pictures made by independent British producers which are necessary in order to give exhibitors a freedom of choice. . . ." They foresee, too, a danger that an increase in the quota schedules would mean fewer films, for it would make it unprofitable for the renters to import many "B" films.

Similar judgment was pronounced by Lord Bridgman in speaking for his motion in the House of Lords. Mr. Bridgman, who has associations with the industry by his directorship in Denham Laboratories, will not accept increased quotas as an exclusive panacea. He recorded that of the year's ninety films only ten had been made under purely British auspices. Lord Strabolgi, high priest of the British Films Advancement Council, likewise warned of the dangers of a speedy increase in the quota schedules.

The Government, however, as represented on this occasion by Lord Templemore, speaking obviously as a mouthpiece of Mr. Oliver Stanley, pats itself on the back.

The Board of Trade, as witness Lord Templemore replying to the Bridgman-Strabolgi camp, sees "definite indications that cooperation between the American and British interests would show further advance in the coming year and in particular that more use would be made of the reciprocity provisions of the Act."

92 REGISTERED UNDER THE ACT

Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, told Commons on Wednesday that 92 features had been registered under the Films Act between January 4, 1938, and March 18, 1939. The average cost approximated three pounds sterling ($14.50).

Mr. Stanley said that he was satisfied with the improved quality of the product.

It is likely that Mr. Stanley and his men have been moved by the deal concluded between RKO Radio and Herbert Wilcox, under which the Bank of America is financing on exceptionally advantageous terms the production of films by the British company. While the great bulk of the industry welcome the deal as a victory for the British film, there is an emphatic body of opinion which believes financing of British production by foreign sources is at complete odds with a measure aimed to sustain a purely British industry.

Not lost, either, from the Government's view probably is the even more significant deal between Paramount and Mayflower, under which four of the Pommer-Laughton films made here and initiated with exceptional success on both sides of the Atlantic, are assured of world distribution under the reciprocity clauses of the new Act. Each of these films, to be distributed in the U. S. and elsewhere, acquired by Paramount, counts as two films in their British quota schedules. MGM acquired "Pygmalion" under similar terms.

A revival of the Film Bank idea is not unlikely, though Government interest would need to be more than verbal.

Such developments point prophetically to a growing conviction that the present slump cannot be laid justly to the discredit of Mr. Stanley's Act, though, admittedly, this last has done little to improve the situation.

Exactly how to persuade the City, still suffering from the sting of invested and vanished millions, is yet to be determined.

Service Charge Cut Indicated

Following a conference last Wednesday between representatives of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and Western Electric, it was indicated unofficially but authoritatively that the company would make concessions in the service charge rates, as demanded by the exhibitor organization.

It is believed probable that reductions will be agreed upon in the present service rates varying from five shillings to two shillings, six pence weekly. The basis for an agreement was arranged during the recent discussion here with T. Kennedy Stevenson, president of Electrical Research Products, Inc., before he returned to the United States.

The Films Council has considered the memoranda on cooperative booking as submitted by the CEA and the Kinematograph Renters' Society, and recorded an equal number of votes for and against the proposal.

It has been decided to appoint a subcommittee for further consideration.

A total of 676,158 feet of film were imported into Erie in January, 1939. This compares with a January, 1938, total of 637,088 feet.

Stirn Gets Delay On RKO Appeal

John Stover, attorney for Ernest W. Stirn, holder of 1,234 shares of Class A stock of RKO, has received an additional stay to April 20th to file his appeal from the order of Judge William Bondy approving the plan of reorganization.

The three appeals on Judge Bondy's decision will be consolidated and heard together by the circuit court of appeals, probably in the early part of October, Mr. Stover said. The other appeals were taken by H. Cassell and Company, debenture holder, and Copeia Realty Corporation, a contingent creditor.

Judge Bondy has ruled that the Irving Trust Company, as trustee of RKO, would not be compelled to forward notices to creditors and stockholders of RKO of objections to the approval of the plan of reorganization made by Mr. Stirn.

Ross Succeeds Bren

Frank Ross, story editor for the last two years at the Hal Roach studio, this week was made vice-president of the corporation and given the production post vacated by Milton Bren, who has joined Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as associate producer. Mr. Ross will have the status of assistant to Mr. Roach.

Ohio Censor Report

Ohio censors reviewed a total of 594 reels in February, from which 16 eliminations were ordered. There were no eliminations for the week ending February 17th. This compares with 621 reels reviewed and 51 eliminations ordered in January, 1938, and 553 reels with 18 eliminations in February, 1937.

Acquire "Katia" Rights

Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn have acquired the American rights to "Katia," produced by E. A. Algaxy in France and starring Danielle Darrieux. It is an adaptation of the novel "Katia the Blue Demon of the Tsar," by Princess Marthe Bibesco. It was directed by Maurice Tourneur.

Knight To Film Fair

Pattinson Knight, London commercial films producer, arrived in New York this week to make a one-reel subject of the New York World's Fair for Great Britain.

Azerier in New Post

Mitchell Azerier has been appointed head of the poster department at Republic's New York exchange.

Merit Pictures Corporation has taken larger quarters in the Film Center Building, 630 Ninth Avenue, New York City. Merit was formerly Mutual Motion Picture Distributors.

FRENCH PRODUCER INVADES U. S. FIELD

Heraut Films to Make Four in Studios on Long Island; Paramount Distribution Set

An invasion of the motion picture production field in this country, is promised by Robert Aisner, French producer and president of Heraut Films of France, who has formed an American producing company under the same name, and is to begin work soon, at the Eastern Service Studios, in Long Island, New York City, on the first of four pictures to be made this year.

Paramount will probably distribute the first throughout the world.

Sylvia Sidney Signed

These pictures will employ American actors, speaking the English language, Mr. Aisner said. A contract with Sylvia Sidney, for her appearance in the first picture to be made, "Bricks Without Straw," has been signed. Mr. Aisner also expects to use Marion Gering, former director for Paramount. In America for the arrangement of financial details and supervision of production, Mr. Aisner is busy interviewing talent and technicians for his forthcoming films.

Three of the scripts for the four productions are ready, he said. Apart from the title mentioned, the other two are "Made in France," a comedy; and "Marie," from a popular novel. These titles are tentative.

Executive Personnel

Mr. Aisner's American company was completed on February 22, and has been registered at Albany and with the Securities Exchange Commission. Wall Street, represented by Alfred Wolff, at Hirsch, Lillienthal, is largely represented in the American company, though it has no interest, Mr. Aisner declared, in the French company.

Officers of the American company are: president, Mr. Aisner; vice-president, Alfred Wolff; treasurer, E. Elliott, who has been associated with Mr. Aisner in French production, and is with him in New York, and S. David, a director. Mr. David is a French importer in New York. Mr. Aisner controls 51 per cent of the stock. The corporation, known as Heraut Films, is capitalized at $300,000.

Developed Plan Here

Mr. Aisner, a visitor to this country on several previous occasions, arrived here on the Ile de France, February 17; according to him, "with no thought of producing pictures—here only because things were what you call 'quiet,' in France." Noting the success of various French pictures here he hit upon his plan of producing films in America with "all that quality that American audiences like in French films."

Mr. Aisner noted with emphasis that French pictures, such as "Ballerina," "Mayerling," "Carnival in Flanders" were "not successes, at first," in France.

"And yet the Americans liked them," he said, "perhaps because it was the first time that French pictures appearing here had really good sets; perhaps because they were, for the first time, out of the ordinary, perhaps, also, because of the historical backgrounds.

"I do not know, definitely. I can only repeat the old saying that, 'one can not preach in one's own country.'"

Mr. Aisner's previous pictures, made by the French company, were for French consumption only, he said. None have been imported into this country. Some of their titles are, "Mr. Flow," "Balthazar," "Chaleur du Sein," and "Poisson Chinois," the latter, according to Aisner, has been acquired, and is being remade in English by Paramount, in London.

Heraut Films, in France, has been in existence about six years.

Derr Not Renewing Monogram Contract

E. B. Derr, head of Crescent Pictures, releasing through Monogram, said in Hollywood this week that he will not renew the present deal. Mr. Derr will produce the last two of the eight scheduled for Monogram release this year, "Prison Born" and "The Girl from Rio," a musical. Mr. Derr said he will concentrate on the preparation of the "Secret Service Smith" stories, for which no releasing deal has been concluded as yet.
